START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

August 1994

Camera Operator:
Kathy Wilder

MASTER NEGATIVE
NUMBER:
BSO-56-075

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library
(August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks (Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959

VOL	TITLE	DATES
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: IA IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 16:1

FILM STOCK:

REEL 75

Volumes 129-132

Tanglewood, BSO, Pops

1972-1974

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS

VOLUME 129

Tanglewood

1972

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

TANGLEWOOD 1972

Better Plan Now For Tanglewood

One of the Best

Tunes of Glory

TANGLEWOOD, an old estate now used for music performances and classes, is one of dozens of sights awaiting the visitor to the Berkshire mountain area of Massachusetts. The crowds have thinned and the leaves have begun to turn.

TANGLEWOOD-BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Lenox, Mass. 413-637-1600. Adm: $3.50-$8.50. Friday preludes at 7, concerts at 9, Saturday open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m., concerts at 8:30; Sunday concerts at 2:30; through August, all concerts by Boston Symphony Orchestra. In many ways, this is the template for all the great American music festivals; its record of quality and importance remains undimmed and unexcelled as it has been joined by others through the years. Just as the magnificent Berkshire mountains dominate the beautiful and rolling Tanglewood grounds, enhancing and enclosing the Music Shed, T/B dominates the American summer music scene. June 30 prelude—Tanglewood Festival Chorus; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; all-Bach program. July 1—Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, cond.; Claude Frank, pianist; works by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart. July 2—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale; Haydn's "The Seasons." July 7 prelude—Pianist Garrick Ohlsson; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist; Ann Hobson, harpist; Sherman Walt, bassoonist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; all-Mozart program. July 8—Bruno Maderna, cond.; works by Gabrieli/Maderna, Brown, Ives, Mozart. July 9—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; Garrick Ohlsson, pianist; works by Haydn, Beethoven, Ravel. July 14 prelude—Pianist Peter Serkin, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; concert—William Steinberg, cond.; all-Beethoven program. July 15—William Steinberg, cond.; soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale; Beethoven's First and Ninth Symphonies. July 16—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; pianist Peter Serkin, violinist Joseph Silverstein, cellist Jules Eskin; all-Beethoven program. July 21 prelude—pianist Earl Wild; concert—Bruno Maderna, cond.; Earl Wild, pianist; works by Gabrieli/Maderna, Stravinsky, Brahms. July 22—Leonard Bernstein, cond.; all-Brahms program. July 23—Karel Ancerl, cond.; Alicia de Larrocha, pianist; works by Gluck; Vejvanovsky, Schumann, Dvorak. July 28 prelude—to be announced; concert—Eugene Ormandy, cond.; works by Brahms, Sibelius, Bartok. July 29—Eugene Ormandy, cond.; works by Beethoven, Hindemith, Strauss. July 30—James Levine, cond.; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; works by Mozart, Mahler. August 4 prelude—Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin in Fromm Concert; concert—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; soprano Phyllis Curtin; violinist Paul Zukofsky; works by Ruggles, Copland, Wuorinen. August 5—Aldo Ceccato, cond.; John Browning, pianist; works by Mendelssohn, Prokofiev, Dvorak. August 6—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Ralph Gomberg, oboist; works by Haydn, Mahler. August 11 prelude—Pianist Gina Bachauer; concert—Colin Davis, cond.; Jessye Norman, soprano; works by Wagner, Verdi. August 12—Colin Davis, cond.; Gina Bachauer, pianist; works by Berlioz, Beethoven, Brahms. August 13—Colin Davis, cond.; Richard Lewis, tenor; works by Beethoven, Berlioz. August 18 prelude—Pianist Alexis Weissenberg, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; works by Ligeti, Chopin, Bartok. August 19—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Misha Dichter, pianist; works by Mozart, Messiaen, Brahms. August 20—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; soloists, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus; Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

Special Tuesday events, at 8:30: July 4, 11, 18, & 25—To be announced. August 1—Boston Pops; Arthur Fiedler, cond. August 8—Contemporary Festival of Music. August 15—Tanglewood on Parade.

Q—How many pianos are used at Tanglewood Music Festival every year?—J.N., Brockton.

A—A Boston Symphony spokesman says the Baldwin company lends 100 new pianos every summer to the Festival for use in concerts, classrooms and practice studios. The instruments range in size from concert grands to studio pianos and are sold every fall by Baldwin as slightly used "Festival" pianos.

Tanglewood Country Offers Music, Scenery, History

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS
D. 30,400

OCT 20 1971

Tanglewood Shed Getting New Roof

By JOHN A. SCHWEIZER

LENOX — The rhythm of hammers and the strains of saws have replaced their symphonic counterparts at Tanglewood as workmen rush to put new roofs on the main Shed and several other buildings before winter.

"It seems to be a year of roofs," observed Supt. James F. Kiley yesterday as he viewed the autumn foliage from atop the Shed. In addition to the Shed, new roofs are being put on the Hawthorne Cottage, the cafeteria and the stucco maintenance garage.

The Shed roof is the major project, Kiley explained. Cramer Construction Corp. of Pittsfield is tearing off the old roofing and laying down a new plywood base. D. J. Wooliver & Sons of Pittsfield then puts down felt roofing paper, asphalt and crushed stone.

"The way we're working it," Kiley said, "is that Cramer comes in in the morning and does a section, then Wooliver reroofs that section in the afternoon."

The cost of replacing the roof on the 30,400-square foot Shed will be about $36,000, Kiley said.

"We replaced the original in the mid-'40s," he noted. "This new one should last 25 to 30 years."

The other roofing projects are being handled by Kiley's own crew of workmen. The most exotic job is replacing the original cedar shingles on the Hawthorne Cottage with new ones. Kiley figured the present cottage roof dates from 1946.

All work is expected to be completed in another three weeks, he said.

CONSTRUCTION, LAYOUT AND DESIGN IN PART BY GEORGE S YOUNGERMAN DEC 1972

TANGLEWOOD 1972

Better Plan Now For Tanglewood

One of the Best

Tunes of Glory

TANGLEWOOD, an old estate now used for music performances and classes, is one of dozens of sights awaiting the visitor to the Berkshire mountain area of Massachusetts. The crowds have thinned and the leaves have begun to turn.

TANGLEWOOD-BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Lenox, Mass. 413-637-1600. Adm: $3.50-$8.50. Friday preludes at 7, concerts at 9, Saturday open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m., concerts at 8:30; Sunday concerts at 2:30; through August, all concerts by Boston Symphony Orchestra. In many ways, this is the template for all the great American music festivals; its record of quality and importance remains undimmed and unexcelled as it has been joined by others through the years. Just as the magnificent Berkshire mountains dominate the beautiful and rolling Tanglewood grounds, enhancing and enclosing the Music Shed, T/B dominates the American summer music scene. June 30 prelude—Tanglewood Festival Chorus; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; all-Bach program. July 1—Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, cond.; Claude Frank, pianist; works by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart. July 2—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale; Haydn's "The Seasons." July 7 prelude—Pianist Garrick Ohlsson; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist; Ann Hobson, harpist; Sherman Walt, bassoonist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; all-Mozart program. July 8—Bruno Maderna, cond.; works by Gabrieli/Maderna, Brown, Ives, Mozart. July 9—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; Garrick Ohlsson, pianist; works by Haydn, Beethoven, Ravel. July 14 prelude—Pianist Peter Serkin, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; concert—William Steinberg, cond.; all-Beethoven program. July 15—William Steinberg, cond.; soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale; Beethoven's First and Ninth Symphonies. July 16—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; pianist Peter Serkin, violinist Joseph Silverstein, cellist Jules Eskin; all-Beethoven program. July 21 prelude—pianist Earl Wild; concert—Bruno Maderna, cond.; Earl Wild, pianist; works by Gabrieli/Maderna, Stravinsky, Brahms. July 22—Leonard Bernstein, cond.; all-Brahms program. July 23—Karel Ancerl, cond.; Alicia de Larrocha, pianist; works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann, Dvorak. July 28 prelude—to be announced; concert—Eugene Ormandy, cond.; works by Brahms, Sibelius, Bartok. July 29—Eugene Ormandy, cond.; works by Beethoven, Hindemith, Strauss. July 30—James Levine, cond.; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; works by Mozart, Mahler. August 4 prelude—Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin in Fromm Concert; concert—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; soprano Phyllis Curtin; violinist Paul Zukofsky; works by Ruggles, Copland, Wuorinen. August 5—Aldo Ceccato, cond.; John Browning, pianist; works by Mendelssohn, Prokofiev, Dvorak. August 6—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Ralph Gomberg, oboist; works by Haydn, Mahler. August 11 prelude—Pianist Gina Bachauer; concert—Colin Davis, cond.; Jessye Norman, soprano; works by Wagner, Verdi. August 12—Colin Davis, cond.; Gina Bachauer, pianist; works by Berlioz, Beethoven, Brahms. August 13—Colin Davis, cond.; Richard Lewis, tenor; works by Beethoven, Berlioz. August 18 prelude—Pianist Alexis Weissenberg, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; works by Ligeti, Chopin, Bartok. August 19—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Misha Dichter, pianist; works by Mozart, Messiaen, Brahms. August 20—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; soloists, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus; Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

Special Tuesday events, at 8:30: July 4, 11, 18, & 25—To be announced. August 1—Boston Pops; Arthur Fiedler, cond. August 8—Contemporary Festival of Music. August 15—Tanglewood on Parade.

Q—How many pianos are used at Tanglewood Music Festival every year?—J.N., Brockton.

A—A Boston Symphony spokesman says the Baldwin company lends 100 new pianos every summer to the Festival for use in concerts, classrooms and practice studios. The instruments range in size from concert grands to studio pianos and are sold every fall by Baldwin as slightly used "Festival" pianos.

Tanglewood Country Offers Music, Scenery, History

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

OCT 20 1971

Tanglewood Shed Getting New Roof

By JOHN A. SCHWEIZER

LENOX — The rhythm of hammers and the strains of saws have replaced their symphonic counterparts at Tanglewood as workmen rush to put new roofs on the main Shed and several other buildings before winter.

"It seems to be a year of roofs," observed Supt. James F. Kiley yesterday as he viewed the autumn foliage from atop the Shed. In addition to the Shed, new roofs are being put on the Hawthorne Cottage, the cafeteria and the stucco maintenance garage.

The Shed roof is the major project, Kiley explained. Cramer Construction Corp. of Pittsfield is tearing off the old roofing and laying down a new plywood base. D. J. Wooliver & Sons of Pittsfield then puts down felt roofing paper, asphalt and crushed stone.

"The way we're working it," Kiley said, "is that Cramer comes in in the morning and does a section, then Wooliver reroofs that section in the afternoon."

The cost of replacing the roof on the 30,400-square foot Shed will be about $36,000, Kiley said.

"We replaced the original in the mid-'40s," he noted. "This new one should last 25 to 30 years."

The other roofing projects are being handled by Kiley's own crew of workmen. The most exotic job is replacing the original cedar shingles on the Hawthorne Cottage with new ones. Kiley figured the present cottage roof dates from 1946.

All work is expected to be completed in another three weeks, he said.

CONSTRUCTION, LAYOUT AND DESIGN IN PART BY GEORGE S. YOUNGERMAN DEC 1972

TANGLEWOOD 1972

Better Plan Now For Tanglewood

One of the Best

TANGLEWOOD, an old estate now used for music performances and classes, is one of dozens of sights awaiting the visitor to the Berkshire mountain area of Massachusetts. The crowds have thinned and the leaves have begun to turn.

Tunes of Glory

TANGLEWOOD-BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Lenox, Mass. 413-637-1600. Adm: $3.50-$8.50. Friday preludes at 7, concerts at 9, Saturday open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m., concerts at 8:30; Sunday concerts at 2:30; through August, all concerts by Boston Symphony Orchestra. In many ways, this is the template for all the great American music festivals; its record of quality and importance remains undimmed and unexcelled as it has been joined by others through the years. Just as the magnificent Berkshire mountains dominate the beautiful and rolling Tanglewood grounds, enhancing and enclosing the Music Shed, T/B dominates the American summer music scene. June 30 prelude—Tanglewood Festival Chorus; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; all-Bach program. July 1—Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, cond.; Claude Frank, pianist; works by Bach, Beethoven, Mozart. July 2—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale; Haydn's "The Seasons." July 7 prelude—Pianist Garrick Ohlsson; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist; Ann Hobson, harpist; Sherman Walt, bassoonist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; all-Mozart program. July 8—Bruno Maderna, cond.; works by Gabrieli/Maderna, Brown, Ives, Mozart. July 9—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; Garrick Ohlsson, pianist; works by Haydn, Beethoven, Ravel. July 14 prelude—Pianist Peter Serkin, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; concert—William Steinberg, cond.; all-Beethoven program. July 15—William Steinberg, cond.; soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale; Beethoven's First and Ninth Symphonies. July 16—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; pianist Peter Serkin, violinist Joseph Silverstein, cellist Jules Eskin; all-Beethoven program. July 21 prelude—pianist Earl Wild; concert—Bruno Maderna, cond.; Earl Wild, pianist; works by Gabrieli/Maderna, Stravinsky, Brahms. July 22—Leonard Bernstein, cond.; all-Brahms program. July 23—Karel Ancerl, cond.; Alicia de Larrocha, pianist; works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann, Dvorak. July 28 prelude—to be announced; concert—Eugene Ormandy, cond.; works by Brahms, Sibelius, Bartok. July 29—Eugene Ormandy, cond.; works by Beethoven, Hindemith, Strauss. July 30—James Levine, cond.; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; works by Mozart, Mahler. August 4 prelude—Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin in Fromm Concert; concert—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; soprano Phyllis Curtin; violinist Paul Zukofsky; works by Ruggles, Copland, Wuorinen. August 5—Aldo Ceccato, cond.; John Browning, pianist; works by Mendelssohn, Prokofiev, Dvorak. August 6—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Ralph Gomberg, oboist; works by Haydn, Mahler. August 11 prelude—Pianist Gina Bachauer; concert—Colin Davis, cond.; Jessye Norman, soprano; works by Wagner, Verdi. August 12—Colin Davis, cond.; Gina Bachauer, pianist; works by Berlioz, Beethoven, Brahms. August 13—Colin Davis, cond.; Richard Lewis, tenor; works by Beethoven, Berlioz. August 18 prelude—Pianist Alexis Weissenberg, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; concert—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; works by Ligeti, Chopin, Bartok. August 19—Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Misha Dichter, pianist; works by Mozart, Messiaen, Brahms. August 20—Seiji Ozawa, cond.; soloists, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus; Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

Special Tuesday events, at 8:30: July 4, 11, 18, & 25—To be announced. August 1—Boston Pops; Arthur Fiedler, cond. August 8—Contemporary Festival of Music. August 15—Tanglewood on Parade.

Tanglewood Shed Getting New Roof

By JOHN A. SCHWEIZER

LENOX — The rhythm of hammers and the strains of saws have replaced their symphonic counterparts at Tanglewood as workmen rush to put new roofs on the main Shed and several other buildings before winter.

"It seems to be a year of roofs," observed Supt. James F. Kiley yesterday as he viewed the autumn foliage from atop the Shed. In addition to the Shed, new roofs are being put on the Hawthorne Cottage, the cafeteria and the stucco maintenance garage.

The Shed roof is the major project, Kiley explained. Cramer Construction Corp. of Pittsfield is tearing off the old roofing and laying down a new plywood base. D. J. Woolver & Sons of Pittsfield then puts down felt roofing paper, asphalt and crushed stone.

"The way we're working it," Kiley said, "is that Cramer comes in in the morning and does a section, then Woolver reroofs that section in the afternoon."

The cost of replacing the roof on the 20,000-square foot Shed will be about $36,000, Kiley said.

"We replaced the original in the mid-'40s," he noted. "This new one should last 25 to 30 years."

The other roofing projects are being handled by Kiley's own crew of workmen. The most exotic job is replacing the original cedar shingles on the Hawthorne Cottage with new ones. Kiley figured the present cottage roof dates from 1946.

All work is expected to be completed in another three weeks, he said.

Q—How many pianos are used at Tanglewood Music Festival every year?—J.N., Brockton.

A—A Boston Symphony spokesman says the Baldwin company lends 100 new pianos every summer to the Festival for use in concerts, classrooms and practice studios. The instruments range in size from concert grands to studio pianos and are sold every fall by Baldwin as slightly used "Festival" pianos.

Tanglewood Country Offers Music, Scenery, History

4

DESTINATION SUMMER #1

FESTIVALS

By Florence Lemkowitz

Tanglewood

Berkshire Festival Concerts

WEEKEND PRELUDES at 7 pm each Friday, two hours before the Boston Symphony concert, present guest artists and members of the Orchestra in short recitals offered at no extra charge to Friday evening ticket holders.

Programs subject to change.

OPEN REHEARSALS in the Shed each Saturday morning at 10:30 am benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund. They offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing Berkshire Festival music. Seats are unreserved, $2.50 each, and available the morning of the Rehearsal.

	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
1	JUNE 30 7 pm 9 pm	JULY 1 10:30 am 8:30 pm	JULY 2 2:30 pm
2 SECOND WEEKEND	JULY 7 7 pm Weekend Prelude Music of Mozart 9 pm SEIJI OZAWA - MOZART PROGRAM Concerto for flute and harp Soloist Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson Sinfonia Concerta Sherman Walt Serenade	JULY 8 10:30 am Open Rehearsal 8:30 pm BRUNO MADERNA A. Dallapiccola/Maderna: "La Buffalda" Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road #1 and #3 Unanswered Question Over the Pavements Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony	JULY 9 2:30 pm SEIJI OZAWA Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Mother Goose"
3	JULY 14 7 pm 9 pm	JULY 15 10:30 am 8:30 pm	JULY 16 2:30 pm
4 FOURTH WEEKEND	JULY 21 7 pm Weekend Prelude Earl Wild 9 pm BRUNO MADERNA Dallapiccola/Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1	JULY 22 10:30 am Open Rehearsal 8:30 pm LEONARD BERNSTEIN BRAHMS PROGRAM Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2	JULY 23 2:30 pm KAREL ANCERL Bach: Overture to "Ignaces in Aquis" Vepravinsky: Symphony 7 Symphony 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia De Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8
5 FIFTH WEEKEND	JULY 28 7 pm 9 pm	JULY 29 10:30 am 8:30 pm	JULY 30 2:30 pm
6 SIXTH WEEKEND	AUGUST 4 FROMM SPECIAL CONCERT 7 pm Weekend Prelude Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin 9 pm MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson: Phyllis Curtin Wuorinen: Violin Concerto: Paul Zukofsky Stravinsky: Rite of Spring	AUGUST 5 10:30 am Open Rehearsal 8:30 pm ALDO CECCATO Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1 Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3 John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony	AUGUST 6 2:30 MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS Haydn: Oboe Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 5
7 SEVENTH WEEKEND	AUGUST 11 7 pm Weekend Prelude Music of Mozart 9 pm Mozart: Sinfonia Concertante Mozart: Piano Concerto No. 9 Mozart: Symphony No. 39	AUGUST 12 10:30 am Open Rehearsal 8:30 pm Mozart: Symphony No. 3	AUGUST 13 2:30 pm Mozart: Requiem
8 EIGHTH WEEKEND	AUGUST 18 7 pm Weekend Prelude Boston Symphony Chamber Players Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg 9 pm SEIJI OZAWA Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin	AUGUST 19 10:30 am Open Rehearsal 8:30 pm MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS Mozart: Paris Symphony Messiaen: Et expecto resurrectionem mortuorum Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter	AUGUST 20 2:30 pm SEIJI OZAWA Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Theodore Marier, Conductor, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director

TANGLEWOOD TUESDAY SPECIALS ...seven very special Tuesdays at Tanglewood...

JULY 4
JULY 11
JULY 18
JULY 25 — Popular Artist Series

AUGUST 1 — BOSTON POPS, with Arthur Fiedler, conducting.

AUGUST 8 — FESTIVAL OF CONTEMPORARY MUSIC, concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Music Foundation.

AUGUST 15 — TANGLEWOOD-ON-PARADE Berkshire Music Center concerts all afternoon Gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras, Michael Tilson Thomas conducting.

Tanglewood to open

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

BSO Announces '72 Prospectus For Tanglewood

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and continues through Sunday, Aug. 20, according to an announcement from the orchestra.

The season will begin with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director - designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons" and will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood, beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Symphony No. 5, and in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Symphony No. 3.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4. Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12, and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral Works

Choral works to be presented include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood will include Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists will be Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 4; John Browning, the Prokofieff No. 3; Misha Dichter, the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha, the Schumann Piano Concerto; Peter Serkin, in the Beethoven Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg, the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 1; Earl Wild, the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds, and Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops at Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 15, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood on Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
FEB 28 1972
New England Newsclip

1972

Tanglewood

Artistic Directors
Seiji Ozawa
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Gunther Schuller
BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER
Leonard Bernstein
ADVISER

DESTINATION SUMMER #1

FESTIVALS

By Florence Lemkowitz

Berkshire Festival Concerts

	Friday	Saturday	Sunday
FIRST WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director SEIJI OZAWA BACH PROGRAM Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 Suite No. 2 Cantata No. 191 Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director	Open Rehearsal STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI Bach: Suite No. 3 Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1 Claude Frank Mozart: Symphony No. 39	SEIJI OZAWA Haydn: The Seasons Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director
SECOND WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude piano music of Mozart SEIJI OZAWA • MOZART PROGRAM Concerto for flute and harp Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson Bassoon Concerto Sherman Walt Haffner Serenade	Open Rehearsal BRUNO MADERNA A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia" Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road #1 and #3 Unanswered Question Over the Pavements Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony	SEIJI OZAWA Haydn: Symphony No. 47 Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye"
THIRD WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin Chamber Music of Beethoven WILLIAM STEINBERG BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 6 Symphony No. 5	Open Rehearsal WILLIAM STEINBERG BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 1, Symphony No. 9 Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director	SEIJI OZAWA BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Triple Concerto Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin Symphony No. 4 Choral Fantasy: Peter Serkin Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director
FOURTH WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude Earl Wild BRUNO MADERNA Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1	Open Rehearsal LEONARD BERNSTEIN BRAHMS PROGRAM Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2	KAREL ANCERL Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7 Sonata a 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia De Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8
FIFTH WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude to be announced EUGENE ORMANDY Brahms: Tragic Overture Sibelius: Symphony No. 5 Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra	Open Rehearsal EUGENE ORMANDY Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3 Hindemith: Mathis der Maler Strauss: Ein Heldenleben	JAMES LEVINE Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4 Joseph Silverstein Mahler: Symphony No. 6
SIXTH WEEKEND	FROMM SPECIAL CONCERT Weekend Prelude Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson: Phyllis Curtin Wuorinen: Violin Concerto: Paul Zukofsky Stravinsky: Rite of Spring	Open Rehearsal ALDO CECCATO Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1 Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3 John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony	MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS Haydn: Oboe Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 5
SEVENTH WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude Gina Bachauer COLIN DAVIS Wagner: Wesendonck Songs Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" Jessye Norman Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director	Open Rehearsal COLIN DAVIS Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges" Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4 Gina Bachauer Brahms: Symphony No. 3	COLIN DAVIS Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" Berlioz: Te Deum Richard Lewis Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director
EIGHTH WEEKEND	Weekend Prelude Boston Symphony Chamber Players Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg SEIJI OZAWA Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin	Open Rehearsal MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS Mozart: Paris Symphony Messiaen: Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter	SEIJI OZAWA Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Theodore Marier, Conductor, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director

Popular Artist Series

BOSTON POPS, with Arthur Fiedler, conducting.

FESTIVAL OF CONTEMPORARY MUSIC, concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation.

TANGLEWOOD-ON-PARADE

Berkshire Music Center concerts all afternoon

Gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras, Michael Tilson Thomas conducting.

JULY 4
JULY 11
JULY 18
JULY 25
AUGUST 1
AUGUST 8
AUGUST 15

Tanglewood to open

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

BSO Announces '72 Prospectus For Tanglewood

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and continues through Sunday, Aug. 27, according to an announcement from the orchestra.

The season will begin with an all-Brahms concert conducted by the music director-designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons" and will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood, beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Symphony No. 5, and in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Symphony No. 3.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4. Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12, and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral Works

Choral works to be presented include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood will include Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists will be Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 1, John Browning, the Prokofieff No. 3, Misha Dichter, the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, Alicia De Larrocha, the Schumann Piano Concerto, Peter Serkin, in the Beethoven Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy, Alexis Weissenberg, the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 1, Earl Wild, the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds, and Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman; and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Donald Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops at Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 15, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood on Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

Tanglewood

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000

MAR 11 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Season Schedule

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All - Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All - Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On August 6, On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto, no.1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops - at - Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

As I Hear It

Tanglewood, 1972

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

THE COMING SUMMER at Tanglewood, according to the preliminary announcements of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, promises a series of programs full of interest and stimulation. The guest list of conductors is sparkling and the array of soloists seductive.

A superficial reaction cannot envisage the concentration such a schedule entails. To lay out 24 concerts and shuffle weighty dramas with lighter sketches becomes the duty of the musical director of the orchestra, but he must consult so many others. He must ask the librarian and the orchestra historian what has been played recently or, more important, what has not been played recently. He must find out when the guests, both conductors and soloists, are open to be engaged and what they choose to perform, so that the same work is not listed twice.

The director must devise programs much as meals, with a titillating hors d'oeuvre, a main course and a dessert. A program does not always serve its courses as at a meal, but there must be a considered and balanced number of musical calories and vitamins. An audience cannot consume two filets mignons in the same evening nor several Peach Melbas.

* * * *

THE SEASON will begin on the last weekend before July 4th and end the third weekend of August. There will be the usual special events and probably some unusual ones. Beethoven, Brahms and Mahler are to be the heavyweights. Some choral works will include one entry of Berlioz, the only French name observable on the preliminary announcement.

Nine piano soloists are named but, except for a first-chair man from the orchestra, only one outside string soloist. Three wind instrument players will appear in solo works. It is always a matter of conjecture why any one of the dozen or so brilliant members of the string sections is not asked to step up some fine evening to play any one of the whole library of concertos so many of them could execute with security and dash.

When a man joins the orchestra he takes his place in the last chair of his section and moves up as the seats ahead become vacant for one reason or another, but mainly by retirement of the front ranks. A musician's place in his section thus is by no means the measure of his ability but is purely one of seniority. Someone back of the first desks can well be capable of performing with all the style and eclat of some of the 'names' engaged for special programs.

* * * *

ONE DOESN'T ordinarily think of music as a matter of fads and fashions, long skirts, short skirts, alternating over the decades as do women's clothes. But a view from a vantage point would reveal that certain composers are eclipsed at times and then reappear over the horizon. For the moment the big name from this viewpoint is Gustav Mahler, three of whose grandiose symphonies will be heard.

The lists announced are not yet complete and thus a true appraisal cannot be made. The spices and bonbons are usually added later anyway and so for that we must wait. It is difficult to tabulate the programs or to take a poll for there will be exceptions to every such procedure, but Mahlers will be assigned, in general, to the younger phalanx of conductors and the Beethoven and Brahms to the elder statesmen, so-to-speak. This need not necessarily be of any significance.

There seem to be no opera in concert form nor acts or scenes from opera in this year's Tanglewood future. This could mean any one of several things—that it doesn't seem the moment for that type of music—but it could also mean, and this is pure speculation, there is no one who is capable of doing it who can give the time necessary to prepare it, although, heaven knows, the roster of conductors includes several to whom such a task would be routine.

* * * *

IT LOOKS from here as if an efficiency expert had been consulted with the purpose of eliminating unnecessary steps and to upgrade production with the same or even retrenched forces. There is no indication that any new music will be offered, but we must have patience.

There is every reason to believe that we shall hear some inspired performances. Prudence suggests that we wait to see if there is to be a dynamic force and drive in the hub of the whole season. It is unfair and incompetent to prejudge, but the essence of the orchestra's resident conductors' style tends to the flamboyant. Such leaders feel themselves hobbled in Bach and Mozart. You can't build up tremendous climaxes in the Brandenburgs or the Mozart symphonies. The simplest things sometimes require the greatest comprehension and taste.

TELEGRAPH
NASHUA, N. H.
D. 69,493

MAR 1 1972 New England Newsclip

'72 Berkshire Festival To Open June 20

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate, Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Soloists will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

Thomas' Role In Festival Set

Michael Tilson Thomas is one of the conductors who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) during the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Thomas is associate director of the Boston Symphony, and music director of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

Seiji Ozawa, who will become the BSO's music director in the 1973-74 season will open the summer music festival in Lenox, Mass., on June 20 with an all-Bach program and conclude it Aug. 20 with Mahler's Third Symphony.

Other conductors this summer at Tanglewood are William Steinberg, the present music director of the Boston Symphony; Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Courier EXPRESS
BUFFALO
Western New York's Greatest Newspaper
D. 154,165 SUN. 311,112

MAR 1 1972

BERKSHIRE COURIER
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
W. 3,650

MAR 9 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Announces Summer Concert Schedule

LENOX — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open June 30 and continue through Aug. 20. The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On July 2 Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." He will also open the second week end with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On July 22 Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis Aug. 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, July 14 and 15, and on July 16 Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum", Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral Fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other solosits for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539

MAR 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Festival Dates Announced

LENOX (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate, Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Solosits will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

Tanglewood Season Schedule

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All - Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All - Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On August 6. On August 6. Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no.1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops at Tanglewood: This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood.

As I Hear It

Tanglewood, 1972

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

THE COMING SUMMER at Tanglewood, according to the preliminary announcements of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, promises a series of programs full of interest and stimulation. The guest list of conductors is sparkling and the array of soloists seductive.

A superficial reaction cannot envisage the concentration such a schedule entails. To lay out 24 concerts and shuffle weighty dramas with lighter sketches becomes the duty of the musical director of the orchestra, but he must consult so many others. He must ask the librarian and the orchestra historian what has been played recently or, more important, what has not been played recently. He must find out when the guests, both conductors and soloists, are open to be engaged and what they choose to perform, so that the same work is not listed twice.

The director must devise programs much as meals, with a titillating hors d'oeuvre, a main course and a dessert. A program does not always serve its courses as at a meal, but there must be a considered and balanced number of musical calories and vitamins. An audience cannot consume two filets mignons in the same evening nor several Peach Melbas.

* * * *

THE SEASON will begin on the last weekend before July 4th and end the third weekend of August. There will be the usual special events and probably some unusual ones. Beethoven, Brahms and Mahler are to be the heavyweights. Some choral works will include one entry of Berlioz, the only French name observable on the preliminary announcement.

Nine piano soloists are named but, except for a first-chair man from the orchestra, only one outside string soloist. Three wind instrument players will appear in solo works. It is always a matter of conjecture why any one of the dozen or so brilliant members of the string sections is not asked to step up some fine evening to play any one of the whole library of concertos so many of them could execute with security and dash.

When a man joins the orchestra he takes his place in the last chair of his section and moves up as the seats ahead become vacant for one reason or another, but mainly by retirement of the front ranks. A musician's place in his section thus is by no means the measure of his ability but is purely one of seniority. Someone back of the first desks can well be capable of performing with all the style and eclat of some of the 'names' engaged for special programs.

* * * *

ONE DOESN'T ordinarily think of music as a matter of fads and fashions, long skirts, short skirts, alternating over the decades as do women's clothes. But a view from a vantage point would reveal that certain composers are eclipsed at times and then reappear over the horizon. For the moment the big name from this viewpoint is Gustav Mahler, three of whose grandiose symphonies will be heard.

The lists announced are not yet complete and thus a true appraisal cannot be made. The spices and bonbons are usually added later anyway and so far that we must wait. It is difficult to tabulate the programs or to take a poll for there will be exceptions to every such procedure, but Mahlers will be assigned, in general, to the younger phalanx of conductors and the Beethoven and Brahms to the elder statesmen, so-to-speak. This need not necessarily be of any significance.

There seem to be no opera in concert form nor acts or scenes from opera in this year's Tanglewood future. This could mean any one of several things—that it doesn't seem the moment for that type of music—but it could also mean, and this is pure speculation, there is no one who is capable of doing it who can give the time necessary to prepare it, although, heaven knows, the roster of conductors includes several to whom such a task would be routine.

* * * *

IT LOOKS from here as if an efficiency expert had been consulted with the purpose of eliminating unnecessary steps and to upgrade production with the same or even retrenched forces. There is no indication that any new music will be offered, but we must have patience.

There is every reason to believe that we shall hear some inspired performances. Prudence suggests that we wait to see if there is to be a dynamic force and drive in the hub of the whole season. It is unfair and incompetent to prejudge, but the essence of the orchestra's resident conductors' style tends to the flamboyant. Such leaders feel themselves hobbled in Bach and Mozart. You can't build up tremendous climaxes in the Brandenburgs or the Mozart symphonies. The simplest things sometimes require the greatest comprehension and taste.

'72 Berkshire Festival To Open June 20

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 30 and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Soloists will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

Thomas' Role In Festival Set

Michael Tilson Thomas is one of the conductors who will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) during the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Thomas is associate director of the Boston Symphony, and music director of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra.

Seiji Ozawa, who will become the BSO's music director in the 1973-74 season will open the summer music festival in Lenox, Mass., on June 26 with an all-Bach program and conclude it Aug. 20 with Mahler's Third Symphony.

Other conductors this summer at Tanglewood are William Steinberg, the present music director of the Boston Symphony; Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Tanglewood Announces Summer Concert Schedule

LENOX — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open June 30 and continue through Aug. 20. The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On July 2 Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." He will also open the second week end with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On July 22 Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis Aug. 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, July 14 and 15, and on July 16 Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum", Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral Fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other solosits for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Tanglewood Festival Dates Announced

LENOX (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Soloists will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.
SARATOGIAN
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
D. 11,000

MAR 26 1972

Tanglewood posts Berkshire Festival schedule

#6

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's The Seasons. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday , July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Singers performing at the festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Programs for the Summer are:

FIRST WEEKEND

Friday, June 30 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director, 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa Bach Program Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 Suite No. 2 Solo Cantata (tba) Cantata No. 191 Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director.

Saturday, July 1 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal 8:30 p.m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski Bach: Suite No. 3 Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1 Claude Frank Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

Sunday, July 2 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa Haydn: The Seasons Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

SECOND WEEKEND

Friday, July 7 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude, piano music of Mozart 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa Mozart program, Concerto for flute and harp Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson Bassoon Concerto, Sherman Walt Haffner Serenade.

Saturday, July 8 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal 8:30 p.m. Bruno Maderna A. Gabrieli-Maderna: "La Battaglia" E. Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road No. 1 and No. 3 Unanswered Question Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony.

Sunday, July 9 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa Haydn: Symphony No. 47 Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye".

THIRD WEEKEND

Friday, July 14 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude Chamber music of Beethoven Boston Symphony Chamber, Players Peter Serkin, piano, 9 p.m. William Steinberg.

Beethoven Program Symphony No. 6 Symphony No. 5.

Saturday, July 15 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal, 8:30 p.m. William Steinberg Beethoven Program, Symphony No. 1 Symphony No. 9 Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

Sunday, July 16 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa Beethoven Program. Triple Concerto Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin, Beethoven: Symphony No. 4 Choral Fantasy Peter Serkin, piano. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

FOURTH WEEKEND

Friday, July 21 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude, works of Chopin Earl Wild 9 p.m. Bruno Maderna Gabrieli-Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1.

Saturday, July 22 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal 8:30 p.m. Leonard Bernstein Brahms Program Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2.

Sunday, July 23 — 2:30 p.m. Karel Ancerl Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" Vejvanovsky: Sonata 7, Sonata a 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia De Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8.

FIFTH WEEKEND

Friday, July 28 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude 9 p.m. Eugene Ormandy Brahms: Tragic Overture Sibelius: Symphony No. 5, Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday, July 29 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal 8:30 p.m. Eugene Ormandy Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3 Hindemith: Mathis der Maler, Strauss: Ein Heldenleben

Sunday, July 30 — 2:30 p.m. Jame Levine Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4 Joseph Silverstein Mahler: Symphony No. 6

SIXTH WEEKEND

Friday, Aug. 4 — Fromm special concert 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude Copland: 12 poems of Emily Dickinson Copland: Vitebsk Phyllis Curtin, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin Aaron Copland, piano 9 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas Copland: 8 poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin. Wuorinen: Violin Concerto Paul Zukofsky. Stravinsky: Rite of Spring.

Saturday, Aug. 5 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal 8:30 p.m. Aldo Ceccato Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1, Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3, John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony.

Sunday, Aug. 6 — 2:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas Haydn: Oboe Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 5.

SEVENTH WEEKEND

Friday, Aug. 11 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude Gina Bachauer, piano 9 p.m. Colin Davis Wagner: Wesendonck Songs Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" Jessye Norman Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Saturday, Aug. 12 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal 8:30 p.m. Colin Davis Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges" Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4 Gina Bachauer, Brahms: Symphony No. 3.

Sunday, Aug. 13 — 2:30 p.m. Colin Davis, Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" Berlioz: Te Deum Richard Lewis, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

EIGHTH WEEKEND

Friday, Aug. 18 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude, Moussorgsky: Pictures at an Exhibition, Alexis Weissenberg, piano 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa Mozart: Symphony (tba) Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin.

Saturday, Aug. 19. — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal, 8:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas, Bach: Suite No. 3 (or) Mozart: Paris Symphony Ravel: La Valse Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter.

Sunday, Aug. 20 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa, Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

SUN
WESTERLY, R. I.
D. 9,000

MAR 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Will Open on June 20

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate, Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Soloists will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
D. 149,649

MAR 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Berkshire Music Festival Scheduled

Lenox, Mass. — (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate, Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program. He will conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony, one of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

NEWS
SOUTHBRIDGE, MASS.
D. 5,627

MAR 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Berkshire Fest

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berksire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

NEWS
NAUGATUCK, CONN.
D. 4.750

MAR 3 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000

MAR 6 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

MAR 6 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

MAR 14 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced.

ENTERPRISE
BROCKTON, MASS.
D. 54,587

MAR 3 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30, and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

UNION LEADER
MANCHESTER, N. H.
D. 21,008

MAR 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Berkshire Fest Starts in June

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

NEWS ADVERTISER
WESTFIELD, MASS.
W. 5,050

MAR 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opens Season June 30 With Bach Concert

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no.4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano Concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano Concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano Concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano Concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for Piano and Winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

MAR 7 1972

Berkshire Festival Will Open With Bach

An all-Bach concert conducted by Seiji Ozawa, music director designate of the Boston Symphony, will open the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on June 30.

Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons" on July 2 and will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program. The festival continues through Aug. 20.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Symphony No. 6. Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Symphony No. 5 Aug. 6 and Ozawa will conduct Symphony No. 8 in the closing concert of the season.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the season. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies No. 2 and 4 on July 22, Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Aug. 12 and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Madzerna on July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, July 14 and 15. On July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

* * *

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces" and the Berlioz "Te Deum," both conducted by Davis, Haydn's "The seasons;" Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony."

Other conductors appearing will be Karel Ancerl, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists, and the works they will perform, include Gina Bachauer, Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 4; John Browning, Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter, Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2; Alicia DeLarrocha, Schumann Piano Concerto; Peter Serkin, Beethoven Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg, Chopin Piano Concerto No. 1; Earl Wild, Stravinsky Concerto for Piano and Winds, and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman, and Boston Symphony members Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

* * *

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood Concert Aug. 15 as part of the special "Tuesdays at Tanglewood" series consisting of seven evening events, including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, in which the Boston Symphony will be represented for the first time.

A brochure on the season will be available in early April.

REPUBLICAN
WATERBURY, CONN.
S. 56,837

MAR 19 1972 New England Newsclip

1972 Programs Listed For Boston Symphony

BOSTON, Mass.—The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens June 30, and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6 Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis Aug. 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Lorrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

TIMES REPORTER
BELLOWS FALLS, VT.
D. 6,320

MAR 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Bach opens Tanglewood

LENOX Mass. (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate, Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Soloists will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

MAR 4 1972

Tanglewood to Open on June 30

LENOX, MASS. — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open this year on June 30 and will continue through Aug. 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Aug. 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

FOUR BEETHOVEN SYMPHONIES (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces", the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

OTHER SOLOSISTS for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

MAR 1 1 1972

Impressive Concert Roster Looms For SPAC, Tanglewood Devotees

By BOB MOTTLEY

Schedules and concert programs were announced this week for the 1972 summer festivals at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center (SPAC) and the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. The concert roster is impressive for both watering holes, but as an old handicapper used to say, announcing a horse is one thing. How it runs can be something else.

The New York City Ballet will begin its SPAC season on July 5 with a performance of Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker." A proven favorite with children and adults, the troupe will dance this warhorse through Saturday evening, July 8th, with a matinee on the final day.

THEN, THERE will be six Stravinsky programs, intended as a memorial to the late composer. Of Stravinsky's colorful full-length ballets from his early period, the company will dance only "The Firebird." The absence of "Petrouchka" and "The Rite of Spring" is remarkable, since room has been found to choreograph lesser works. The Capitol Hill Choral Society of Albany, conducted by Judson Rand, will sing with the ballet on July 26 in Stravinsky's "Requiem Canticles" and the "Symphony for Psalms."

From the New York City Ballet's routine hopper, there will be offerings of "The Goldberg Variations," "The Concert," "Chopiniana," "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," a cut-down version of the second act of "Swan Lake," "Stars and Stripes" and the Saratoga premiere of Jerome Robbins' hour-long "Watermill," which stirred a controversy at Lincoln Center a few weeks ago.

AT TANGLEWOOD, the Boston Symphony Berkshire Festival will be under the guidance of Seiji Ozawa, the Japanese maestro who was recently named music director for the Boston Symphony in the 1973-74 season. Mr. Ozawa will keep his post at the helm of the San Francisco Symphony, and relinquish the rest of his conducting in North America after next year.

At the first Tanglewood concert on June 30, Mr. Ozawa will lead an all-Bach program. The first Sunday concert, July 2, will be the same maestro with Haydn's "The Seasons."

THE BULK OF the Tanglewood programs offer first-rate symphonic fare. Leonard Bernstein will guest conduct Brahms' Symphonies 2 and 4, (July 22). William Steinberg will offer Beethoven's 6th and 9th Symphonies (July 15). There is a heavy dose of Mahler — his 6th Symphony, led by James Levine (July 30), the 5th, conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas (Aug. 6), and the 8th, to be conducted by Seiji Ozawa on the closing day of the festival, Aug. 30. The last event promises to be spectacular — Mahler's Eighth calls for a full symphny orchestra, two choirs of almost 700 vocalists, a children's chorus, eight operatic soloists, brass bands, tympani and organ.

Eugene Ormandy, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will also be conducting the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. Arthur Fiedler will have one "Pops" concert on Tuesday, Aug. 15. Among the featured soloists are Gina Bachauer (in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4), John Browning (in Prokofiev's Piano Concerto No. 3), Misha Dichter (in Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2) and Alicia De Larrocha (in Schumann's Piano Concerto). (Miss Larrocha gave a splendid concert in Schenectady two months ago.)

SEIJI OZAWA

Tanglewood Lists Highlights of '72

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday Aug. 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops - at - Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

MAY 1 4 1972

Tanglewood Repertory Tips Toward Traditional

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

The Berkshire Festival, or Tanglewood, will open on June 30 and although there are some tasty nuggets or more specifically, some new works programmed, it would seem that the traditionalists on the program commitee have won out again.

For the confirmed and sophisticated concert-goer, there are names like Ruggles (his "Sun Treader" was done last season) Maderna, Ligeti, Messaien, Vejvanosky, Earl Brown, plus what must now be considered at the very least, old timers, Stravinsky, Hindemith, Ives and Bartok.

THE BULK of the programming is loaded with old and dear firends, Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Berlioz, Mozart, Mendelssohn, Prokofieff, Wagner, Verdi, Schumann, Dvorak, Haydn, Ravel and so on.

Now there is nothing wrong with the meat and potatoes of the traditonal repertory. It is for the most part the glory of the musical word. But last year Tanglewood was really adventurous.

IT IS PROBABLY a bore to flog the program committees every year for their reliance on the traditional repertory almost to the exclusion of anything else. The day has passed when they could point with some justification to "The Rites of Spring," or "Mathis der Maler" or Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," and claim progressive programming. There is no question that these committees are firm in their belief that essentially modern programming would be financially disastrous and quite possibly they are right.

Further, it would be sheer nonsense to cite Beethoven's Ninth Symphony or Brahms Fourth as obstructive to good programming or as music without value.

But, darn it, those of us who go year in and year out to concerts can get their fill of anything, regardless of its value if it is heard time and time again, played by an orchestra which is well-nigh flawless in musical terms but which is as unenthusiastic about playing it as we are about listening to it.

SO IT IS apparent that the big Festival with the Boston Symphony is continuing with popular programming and that they have determined that nothing else is going to work.

So be it. But at Tanglewood at least, there is a silver lining in terms of modern music and really inventive programming.

Most of it comes from the Festival of Contemporary Music which this year is celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and is sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in cooperation with the Fromm Foundation.

It is claimed that at that moment Tanglewood will become the "contemporary music capital of the world." I believe that this claim is certainly true.

THERE WILL BE the newest and most contemporary works extant, some of them commissioned for this festival, and this is certain to satisfy even the most jaded musical palate. It is with this Contemporary Festival that Tanglewood gets itself off the hook when the main shed programs are demeaned by critics and other non-productive exegetes.

The Contemporary Festival really is what they say it is. That, of course makes its short performing life of major importance. Of course, everything one hears will not necessarily be to taste, most listening experience are initially highly subjective. So, in effect anyone can be a critic, and what is more, can be right.

THE CONDUCTORS this year are much the same as before, and it is particularly pleasing to see that Colin Davis and James Levine will be there. In my opinion these two men, (Davis is the best choral conductor I have heard in years) are first class in most respects. If all goes well and luck is with them, they should soon rank with the best and the most famous, which is not at all the same thing.

Eugene Ormandy, our Saratoga neighbor, will conduct two programs, William Steinberg, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas, (another young and upwardly mobile young man); Seigi Ozawa, (who is the music director of Boston and San Francisco Symphony Orchestras at the same time),

Continued on Page F-4

SEIJI OZAWA

Tanglewood Programs Lack Inventiveness

Continued from Page F-1

Karl Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski are this year's conductors.

DO NOT FORGET the Friday Prelude Concerts, very often some of the most rewarding music making is found at these pre-concert Preludes at 7 p.m. Fridays.

Well, no matter what carperies and nit pickeries have come before, the whole concept of another season at Tanglewood (that glorious place) is still capable of stirring the blood and tightening the viscera. Three cheers, I say, three cheers, for Tanglewood.!

NEWS
NEWBURYPORT, MASS.
D. 7,358

MAR 8 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

BEE
NEWTOWN, CONN.
W. 12,559

MAR 10 1972 New England Newsclip

1972 Tanglewood Season Highlights

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21. Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

NEWS
NEWBURYPORT, MASS.
D. 7,358

MAR 24 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, open June 30 through August 20. The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate, Seija Ozawa. All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard this season. Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Second and Fourth July 22. Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops at Tanglewood August 15.

WESTPORT NEWS
WESTPORT, CONN.
SEMI-WEEKLY 10,000

MAR 29 1972 New England Newsclip

Berkshire Festival

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20.

AUGUSTA, GA.
CHRONICLE
D. 49,000 S. 64,500

MAR 8 1972

JESSYE NORMAN, YOUNG WOMAN GOING PLACES
Native Augustan has worldwide audience appeal

Augusta singer's career 'soaring'

By HENRY GREENE

It has been said of Jessye Norman that she is "a young woman who's going places in a hurry."

This prophecy seems to have come true, and there's no end in sight for her soaring career.

Miss Norman, who is called "Augusta's own," does not belong to Augusta alone. She belongs to a world of music and this cannot be contained in the boundaries of a city. Much of the world has heard Jessye Norman; many more will soon have that pleasure.

In Berlin, where she makes her home, Miss Norman has just finished a performance of the well-known Verdi opera "Aida," which is marking its 100th birthday. It will be in this opera that she will make her debut at La Scala, the world-famous opera house in Milan.

The La Scala event is to take place in April. Appearing with her will be Metropolitan Opera tenor Placido Domingo, who will portray Radames.

But this is only the beginning —

The British Empire shall see her debut at Covent Garden in a new production of Berlioz's "Les Troyens."

In July, the 50th anniversary of the Hollywood Bowl will take place. To honor the occasion, Miss Norman will appear in a concert version of "Aida" conducted by Zubin Mehta.

Fortunately, Augustans will not have to wait for concert to hear her sing. She has signed contracts with Phillips and Deutsche Grammophon and already has two records out under the Phillips label. One of these is "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart.

She has also recorded the songs of Schubert and Mahler, which should be appearing soon.

Jessye Norman's career is filled with awards and honors. In 1968, she was the winner of the International Artists Competition in Munich, and among other achievements, she was the winner of the Great Lakes regional Metropolitan Opera auditions which led to a grant won when she was a semi-finalist in the National Metropolitan Opera auditions in New York. She has also won many scholarships which helped pave the way in her musical training.

Although she does not presently have any Augusta concerts planned, she will appear across the country in different events such as the Tanglewood Festival, where she will sing with the Boston Symphony, and at the Summer Festival in Washington, D.C., where she will be the only opera singer present. She will also appear in foreign festivals such as the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland and the Vienna Festival.

Asked if she preferred American opera companies to European opera companies, she observed, "There are more opera companies in Europe than there are in America, therefore I have a better opportunity to sing more often. The chance of making it in opera is greater in Europe than in America."

As most singers know, this is very true; but it must be remembered that Jessye Norman came from a town of modest size in Georgia.

It seems to prove that if you have enough talent, you make the whole world hear about you.

And this is what Jessye Norman is doing.

POST GAZETTE
(ANGLO-ITALIAN)
BOSTON, MASS.
14,900

MAR 31 1972 New England Newsclip

1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
S. 106,767

MAR 19 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

A predominance of standard repetory has been selected for the Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood from June 30 through Aug. 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate, Seiju Ozawa. Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons," and will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30, when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brhams symphonies will be played. July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

Beethoven

Four Beethoven symphonies (Nos. 1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15. July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Fourth.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this summer are Karel Ancerl, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists will be Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Mischa Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists are violinist Paul Zukofsky, singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis, Jessye Norman, and Boston Symphony members Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will be August 15.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Music Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

MAR 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia DeLarrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood - on- Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 416,003

MAR 14 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Season Starts June 30

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will begin June 30.

The season, which will begin with an all-Bach concert conducted by BSO Music Director-Designate Seiji Ozawa, will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood, beginning July 30; four Brahms symphonies, and four Beethoven symphonies will also be given on weekends. Guest conductors will include Leonard Bernstein, Colin Davis and Michael Tilson Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood concert Tuesday, Aug. 15.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

MAR 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Major Tanglewood Programs Scheduled

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION
AMUSEMENTS

6 + Springfield, Mass., Monday, March 6, 1972

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Friday June 30 and continue through Sunday August 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa.

On Sunday July 2 Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15. On Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4, John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2, Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto, Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy, Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1, Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds, and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin, singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops - at - Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood - on - Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April, officials said.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser
SUN. 413,988

MAY 14 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Brochure Available

The Tanglewood borchure containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox is now available.

The brochure lists the Tanglewood Tuesday specials the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops, and a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert all in addition to mention of the weekend concerts.

Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston, the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, and at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox.

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN.
D. 11,891

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

BSO's Tanglewood programs to host guest conductors

LENOX, Mass. — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30 and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis Saturday, Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (one, five, six and nine) will be conducted by the orchestra's Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15; and Sunday July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be Tuesday, Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood '72

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced preliminary plans for the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood, with Mahler, Brahms, and Beethoven getting the biggest play.

The season will open Friday, June 30, with an all-Bach concert conducted by the new music director, Seiji Ozawa. Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons" on Sunday, July 2, and then lead an all-Mozart program the next weekend.

Three Mahler symphonies wil be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood. James Levine will conduct Symphony no. 6 on July 30; Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Symphony no. 5 on Aug. 6; and, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8 in the closing concert of the season on Sunday, Aug. 20.

All four Brahms symphonies will be heard, beginning with Leonard Bernstein conducting Symphonies nos. 2 and 4 on Saturday, July 22; Colin Davis will conduct Symphony no. 3 on Saturday, Aug. 12, and Bruno Maderna will conduct Symphony no. 1 on Friday, July 21.

The Orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, will conduct four Beethoven symphonies, nos. 1, 5, 6 and 9, on July 14 and 15, and Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4 on Sunday, July 16.

Choral works will include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces and Berlioz' Te Deum, both conducted by Colin Davis on still unannounced dates, and Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Among piano soloists are Gina Bachauer, performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4, John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia de Larrocha, the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin, the Beethoven Triple concerto and choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg, the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild, the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson in still unannounced programs.

Final information on the concerts will be available in brochure form in early April.

REDUCTION RATIO 18x

RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.

MAR 14 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Season Starts June 30

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will begin June 30.

The season, which will begin with an all-Bach concert conducted by BSO Music Director-Designate Seiji Ozawa, will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood, beginning July 30; four Brahms symphonies, and four Beethoven symphonies will also be given on weekends. Guest conductors will include Leonard Bernstein, Colin Davis and Michael Tilson Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood concert Tuesday, Aug. 15.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

MAR 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Major Tanglewood Programs Scheduled

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION
AMUSEMENTS

6 + Springfield, Mass., Monday, March 6, 1972

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open Friday June 30 and continue through Sunday August 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa.

On Sunday July 2 Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15. On Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4, John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2, Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto, Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy, Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1, Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds, and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin, singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops - at - Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood - on - Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April, officials said.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser
SUN. 413,988

MAY 14 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Brochure Available

The Tanglewood borchure containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox is now available.

The brochure lists the Tanglewood Tuesday specials, the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops, and a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert all in addition to mention of the weekend concerts.

Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston, the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, and at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox.

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN.
D. 11,891

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE FEST

BOSTON (UPI) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will begin June 30 and continue through August 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced Thursday.

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

BSO's Tanglewood programs to host guest conductors

LENOX, Mass. — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30 and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis Saturday, Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (one, five, six and nine) will be conducted by the orchestra's Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15; and Sunday July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be Tuesday, Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

MAR 4 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood '72

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced preliminary plans for the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood, with Mahler, Brahms, and Beethoven getting the biggest play.

The season will open Friday, June 30, with an all-Bach concert conducted by the new music director, Seiji Ozawa. Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons" on Sunday, July 2, and then lead an all-Mozart program the next weekend.

Three Mahler symphonies wil be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood. James Levine will conduct Symphony no. 6 on July 30; Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Symphony no. 5 on Aug. 6; and, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8 in the closing concert of the season on Sunday, Aug. 20.

All four Brahms symphonies will be heard, beginning with Leonard Bernstein conducting Symphonies nos. 2 and 4 on Saturday, July 22; Colin Davis will conduct Symphony no. 3 on Saturday, Aug. 12, and Bruno Maderna will conduct Symphony no. 1 on Friday, July 21.

The Orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, will conduct four Beethoven symphonies, nos. 1, 5, 6 and 9, on July 14 and 15, and Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4 on Sunday, July 16.

Choral works will include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces and Berlioz' Te Deum, both conducted by Colin Davis on still unannounced dates, and Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Among piano soloists are Gina Bachauer, performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4, John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia de Larrocha, the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin, the Beethoven Triple concerto and choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg, the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild, the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson in still unannounced programs.

Final information on the concerts will be available in brochure form in early April.

REDUCTION RATIO 18x

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 20,500

MAY 14 1972

LAWN CHAIRS AND BLANKETS TAKE OVER TANGLEWOOD GROUNDS EVERY WEEKEND

SCENIC BEAUTY IN A CENTURIES-OLD TREE AND A MODERN AMPHITHEATRE

Better Plan Now For Tanglewood

AERIAL VIEW SHOWS A LARGE SLICE OF TANGLEWOOD'S 210 ACRES

AARON COPLAND will conduct "Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson," as sung by Phyllis Curtin, in a special concert at Tanglewood on August 4 at 9 p. m.

KAREL ANCERL will be Tanglewood's guest conductor at a 2:30 p. m. concert on July 23. The Berkshires that day will resound to the music of Gluck's "Iphigenia in Aulis" Overture, and to the sonata, concerto and symphony compositions of Vejvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak.

Tanglewood, is, as the vast majority of TEMPO readers know, an estate of 210 acres in the Berkshire Hills, given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra some years ago and now world famous as the summer home of the Symphony, its Berkshire Festival and its unique Berkshire Music Center.

Steeped in histor, it can boast of the fact that famed early American novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne, lived on the Tanglewood grounds and wrote that he could barely work in the presence of such scenic beauty.

Today it is nearly unchanged, but such brilliant conductors as Seiji Ozawa, William Steinberg, Leonard Bernstein and Eugene Ormandy work there each summer with a dedicated will.

Approximately an hour's drive from the Kingston area via New York State Thruway or Taconic State Parkway to Lenox, Mass., Tanglewood is a picnicker's and music lover's paradise. But, mostly, it is an outdoor concert hall, and the Tanglewood season this summer begins Friday, June 30 to continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

Among the regular attractions are the Weekend Preludes at 7 p.m. each Friday, the Boston Symphony concerts with guest artists at 9 p.m. Fridays, the open rehearsals in the Shed each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m., the Sunday afternoon concerts at 2:30 p.m. (patterned on the late Friday night programs), and the Tanglewood Tuesday Specials to include the Popular Artist Series, the Boston Pops, a Festival of Contemporary Music, and Tanglewood-On-Parade.

The 1972 season begins June 30 with an All-Bach Concert conducted by Seiji Ozawa, who will also open the second weekend on July 2 with an All-Mozart program, and will return July 9 to conduct Haydn's The Seasons.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahams symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12; Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahams Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops at Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

All information regarding the Berkshire Fstival is now available in brochure form (with ticket order blank included). So, if Tanglewood is one of your favorite places, write for the brochure now until June 9 to: Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115. After June 9, write to: Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, Conductor Laureate of the New York Philharmonic, is also Advisor to Tanglewood. He made his first appearance there with the Boston Symphony under the baton of Serge Koussevitzky many years ago. In the summer of '72, he will return to conduct an open reheasal on July 22 at 10:30 a.m.; will direct an all Brahms program (Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2) that evening at 8:30 p.m. Tanglewood season programs, with ticket order form, are now available on request from: Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115 until June 9. After that, requests should be submitted to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

REDUCTION RATIO 16x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Music festivals dot summer —all over North America

Travelers on America's highways and byways this summer will never be very far from the sounds of music, thanks to the preponderance of festivals which have sprung up across the countryside. Here are some that have started or are about to:

Alaska

Anchorage: Alaska Festival of Music, Robert Shaw, director. (June 15-29)

Arizona

Flagstaff: Orchestral and chamber music concerts. (July 12-Aug. 6)

California

Aptos: Cabrillo Music Festival, Carlos Chavez, director. (Aug. 18-27)

Bear Valley: Festival Chamber Orchestra, John Gosling, conductor. Zara Nelsova, cello; Grant Johannesen, piano. (Aug. 11-20)

Carmel: Bach festival, Sandor Salgo, director, with orchestra, chorus, soloists. (July 21-30)

Claremont: Music festival and institute at Pomona College. (June 30-July 30)

Los Angeles: L.A. Philharmonic at Hollywood Bowl. (July 11-Sept. 16)

San Francisco: Stern Grove concerts. (June 11-Aug. 13)

Saratoga: Music at the Vineyards. (June 24-Aug. 27)

Colorado

Aspen: Music festival and institute. (June 19-Aug. 20)

Central City: Opera festival ("Figaro" and "Falstaff") with added special concert events. (July 1-Aug. 13)

Evergreen: Colorado Philharmonic, Walter Charles, conductor. (July 7-Aug. 21)

Connecticut

Falls Village: Music Mountain concerts with Berkshire Quartet and soloists. (July 1-Sept. 2)

Hartford: Hartt College chamber music series. (June 25-Aug. 20)

New Haven: Starlight chamber music concerts at Yale Law School (June 27-Aug. 1)

Norfolk: Yale summer opera, orchestra, and chamber music concerts. in Stoeckel estate Music Shed. (July 1-Aug. 25)

New Canaan: Silvermine Music Center chamber concerts. (July 16-Aug. 27)

District of Columbia

Washington: National Symphony Orchestra at Kennedy Center, with guest conductors and soloists (through Aug. 16).

Washington: Carter Barron Amphitheater, Rock Creek Park. Pop performers (July 10-Aug. 27)

Florida

Miami: Philharmonic concerts at Marine Stadium. (July 15-Aug. 26)

Sarasota: New College Summer Music Festival. (June 9-24)

Hawaii

Honolulu: Festival of the arts. (June 23-July 17)

Illinois

Chicago: Grant Park concerts. (June 28-Sept. 4)

Chicago: Ravinia Festival. Chicago Symphony, dance companies, chamber concerts, pop events, theater, art shows. (June 20-Sept. 17)

Edwardsville: Mississippi River Festival with St. Louis Symphony, Walter Susskind, director. Also pop, folk events. (July 8-Aug. 19)

Maine

Bar Harbor: Bar Harbor Festival, Francis Fortier, director. Chamber, opera, ballet events. (July 8-Aug. 19)

Blue Hill: Kneisel Hall chamber series. (June 26-Aug. 18)

Brunswick: Bowdoin College concerts by Aeolian Chamber Players and other groups. (July 2-Aug. 11)

Northeast Harbor: Mt. Desert Chamber Music Festival. (July 18-Aug. 8)

Waterville: Colby College Summer School of Music concerts with the Hungarian Quartet. (July 11-Aug. 15)

Maryland

Baltimore: Baltimore Symphony Promenade and Pops concerts. (June 14-July 12)

Bel Air: Harford Opera Theater season. (June 14-Sept. 3)

Columbia: Merriweather Post Pavilion folk and pop concerts. (July 3-Aug. 25)

Massachusetts

Beckett: Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. (June 22-Aug. 26)

Boston: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler, conductor. (Through June 24)

Boston: Charles River Esplanade concerts: "Bach in the Basin" (through June 16), Greater Boston Youth Symphony (June 24), Boston Symphony Pops Esplanade Orchestra (to July 8).

Charlemont: Mohawk Trail chamber concerts. (July 22-Aug. 26)

Lenox: Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with Boston Symphony Orchestra. Chamber concerts, Fromm contemporary series, music theater project, pop artists events. (June 30-Aug. 20)

Lenox: Lenox Arts Center. Music, film, folk events. (July 5-Aug. 18)

New Marlboro: Red Fox Music Barn chamber series. (July 8-Aug. 12)

Pittsfield: South Mountain Chamber Music Concerts. (July 15-Oct. 1)

Michigan

Interlochen: National Music Camp concerts. (June 25-Aug. 21)

Rochester: Meadow Brook Music Festival, with Detroit Symphony, ballet and pop events. (June 29-Aug. 27)

Minnesota

St. Paul: St. Paul Opera season. Four works in repertory include American premiere of Carl Nielsen's "Maskarade." (June 20-July 14)

New Hampshire

Hanover: "Music at Dartmouth." Chamber music concerts with soloists and ensembles. (July 18-Aug. 28)

Center Harbor: New Hampshire Music Festival, Thomas Nee, director. Orchestral concerts with soloists, semi-staged "Figaro," chamber music series. (July 9-Aug. 19)

Jaffrey: Monadnock Music, James Bolle, director. Free chamber music series in 11 country settings. (July 26-Sept. 4)

New Jersey

Holmdel: Garden State Arts Center. Symphony, ballet, pop performers, theater. (June 10-Sept. 10)

New Mexico

Santa Fe: Santa Fe Opera, John Crosby, director. Six-opera repertory includes American premiere of Aribert Reimann's "Melusine." (July 1-Aug. 26)

New York

Chautauqua: Chautauqua Institution's program of concerts, opera, theater, lectures. (June 29-Aug. 27)

Glens Falls: Lake George Opera, David Lloyd, director. Five operas in repertory include East Coast premieres of Thomas Pasatieri's "Black Widow" and Dominick Argento's "Postcard from Morocco." (Some performances also at State U., Albany.) (July 13-Aug. 26)

Katonah: Caramoor Festival, Julius Rudel, musical director. Orchestral, operatic, chamber music and solo perfomances. (June 17-July16)

Lake Placid: Adirondack-Champlain Festivals, Edna Michell, director. Orchestral, chamber music, dance, operatic events in four locations. (June 30-Oct. 1)

New York City: Among many events announced in daily press —N.Y. City Ballet's Stravinsky Festival, State Theater (June 18-25); N.Y. Philharmonic "Promenades" (to June 10); Metropolitan Opera's Verdi Festival (to June 24); Naumburg Symphony's Central Park Mall concerts (July 4-Sept. 4); Pop Music Festival, Wollman Rink, Central Park (June 15-Sept. 2); Goldman Band concerts in N.Y. parks (June 21-Aug. 13); Light Opera of Manhattan G & S Festival (through Sept. 3); Free noon concerts at St. Thomas Church by Orchestra of City of N.Y. (June 12, 19, 26); Met Opera in the parks (June 27-July 9); N.Y. Philharmonic in parks (July 25-Aug. 12); Newport Jazz Festival in N.Y. (July 1-9); International Bach Society Festival (July 11-20); Mostly Mozart Festival (July 24-Aug. 19).

Saratoga Springs: Saratoga Festival with N.Y. City Ballet (July 5-29); Philadelphia Orchestra (Aug. 2-26). Also Juilliard Acting Company, pop series, special events (to Sept. 10)

Woodstock: Maverick Hall Sunday chamber concerts. (July 2-Sept. 3)

North Carolina

Greensboro: Eastern Music Festival. Chamber music, recitals. (June 24-Aug. 5)

Ohio

Cincinnati: Summer Opera Festival, Styrk Orwoll, director. Six operas and a Verdi concert are scheduled in newly refurbished Music Hall. (June 24-July 22)

Cleveland: Blossom Music Center, Northampton Township. Cleveland Orchestra festival, pops, and family concerts with guest conductors and soloists. Joffrey and Harkness Ballets (June 20-Sept. 4)

Pennsylvania

Ambler: Temple University Music Festival and Institute. Concerts by Pittsburgh Symphony with guest conductors and soloists, ballet performances, chamber music evenings, and pop performers. (June 23-Aug. 6)

Philadelphia: Philadelphia Orchestra at Robin Hood Dell. (June 19-July 27)

Upper Salford Township: Philadelphia Folk Festival. Concerts, workshops, dance, crafts. (Aug. 25-27)

Rhode Island

Block Island: Spring House chamber concerts. (July 8-Aug.16)

Newport: Newport Music Festival. 19th-century chamber, orchestral, opera, and ballet music. Also special events. (July 27-Aug. 12)

Tennessee

Sewanee: Summer Music Center concerts.

Vermont

Johnson: Composers Conference and Chamber Center. (Aug. 13-26) Daniel Nagrin and the Workgroup. Modern dance. (June 26-Aug. 5)

Manchester: Southern Vermont Art Center music series. (July 1-23)

Marlboro: Marlboro Music Festival, Rudolf Serkin, director. Orchestral and chamber music concerts on weekends. (July 8-Aug. 13)

Virginia

Vienna: Wolf Trap Farm Park. Filene Center. Concerts by N.Y. Philharmonic, Philadelphia, and National Symphony Orchestras, operatic and ballet performances, pop performers, special events. (June 16-Sept. 10)

Wisconsin

Fish Creek: Peninsula Music Festival, Thor Johnson, conductor. (Aug. 5-19)

Wyoming

Teton Village: Grand Teton Music Festival, Ling Tung, director. Orchestral and chamber music concerts. (July 25-Aug. 26)

Ontario

Niagara-on-the-Lake: "Music Today '72." Shaw Festival's 10 chamber concerts of contemporary and traditional works. (Aug. 5-19)

Stratford: Stratford Festival music series includes guest soloists and chamber groups (July 1-Aug. 26) "Music for a Summer Day" (Aug. 25) includes Guarneri Quartet, Dorian Quintet, and N.Y. Philharmonic.

Puerto Rico

San Juan: Festival Casals, Pablo Casals, director. Orchestral and choral performances, with guest conductors and soloists. (through June 17).

L. Sn.

Tanglewood—one home for summer musicfests

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264
JUN 5 1972
New England Newsclip

Things are changing annually at Tanglewood where the Boston Symphony Orchestra holds sway during those pleasant August days and evenings.

A few years back the Tent Club was set up at Tanglewood where club members could purchase any kind of an alcoholic beverage. However, membership in the Tent Club required a contribution of $50 or more to the Friends of Tanglewood.

Now there will be other "friends" for there is going to be a beer and wine stand on the specious grounds—the location still undecided—this summer. The Stockbridge selectmen ha given a common victualers bee and wine license to the Orches tra for the new addition. W don't know how it'll do, for mos attendees, if they so desire th stuff, bring their own.

By Christian Steiner

Garrick Ohlsson

. . . plays Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto with Seiji Ozawa's conducting at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, July 9, to end second week of the Boston Symphony's festival there. Mr. Ohlsson appears in Boston in a solo recital next February in the BU Celebrity Series.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000
MAY 5 1972
New

Berkshire Festival opens June 30

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All - Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All - Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9; will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16. Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbiri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

TIMES
BEVERLY, MASS.
D. 9,514
MAY 24 1972
New England Newsclip

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043
MAY 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Berkshire Festival opens June 30

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All - Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All - Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9; will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16. Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbiri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Music festivals dot summer —all over North America

Travelers on America's highways and byways this summer will never be very far from the sounds of music, thanks to the preponderance of festivals which have sprung up across the countryside. Here are some that have started or are about to:

Alaska

Anchorage: Alaska Festival of Music, Robert Shaw, director. (June 15-29)

Arizona

Flagstaff: Orchestral and chamber music concerts. (July 12-Aug. 6)

California

Aptos: Cabrillo Music Festival, Carlos Chavez, director. (Aug. 18-27)

Bear Valley: Festival Chamber Orchestra, John Gosling, conductor. Zara Nelsova, cello; Grant Johannesen, piano. (Aug. 11-20)

Carmel: Bach festival, Sandor Salgo, director, with orchestra, chorus, soloists. (July 21-30)

Claremont: Music festival and institute at Pomona College. (June 30-July 30)

Los Angeles: L.A. Philharmonic at Hollywood Bowl. (July 11-Sept. 16)

San Francisco: Stern Grove concerts. (June 11-Aug. 13)

Saratoga: Music at the Vineyards. (June 24-Aug. 27)

Colorado

Aspen: Music festival and institute. (June 19-Aug. 20)

Central City: Opera festival ("Figaro" and "Falstaff") with added special concert events. (July 1-Aug. 13)

Evergreen: Colorado Philharmonic, Walter Charles, conductor. (July 7-Aug. 21)

Connecticut

Falls Village: Music Mountain concerts with Berkshire Quartet and soloists. (July 1-Sept. 2)

Hartford: Hartt College chamber music series. (June 25-Aug. 20)

New Haven: Starlight chamber music concerts at Yale Law School. (June 27-Aug. 1)

Norfolk: Yale summer opera, orchestra, and chamber music concerts. in Stoeckel estate Music Shed. (July 1-Aug. 25)

New Canaan: Silvermine Music Center chamber concerts. (July 16-Aug. 27)

District of Columbia

Washington: National Symphony Orchestra at Kennedy Center, with guest conductors and soloists (through Aug. 16).

Washington: Carter Barron Amphitheater, Rock Creek Park. Pop performers (July 10-Aug. 27)

Florida

Miami: Philharmonic concerts at Marine Stadium. (July 15-Aug. 26)

Sarasota: New College Summer Music Festival. (June 9-24)

Hawaii

Honolulu: Festival of the arts. (June 23-July 17)

Illinois

Chicago: Grant Park concerts. (June 28-Sept. 4)

Chicago: Ravinia Festival. Chicago Symphony, dance companies, chamber concerts, pop events, theater, art shows. (June 20-Sept. 17)

Edwardsville: Mississippi River Festival with St. Louis Symphony, Walter Susskind, director. Also pop, folk events. (July 8-Aug. 19)

Maine

Bar Harbor: Bar Harbor Festival, Francis Fortier, director. Chamber, opera, ballet events. (July 8-Aug. 19)

Blue Hill: Kneisel Hall chamber series. (June 26-Aug. 18)

Brunswick: Bowdoin College concerts by Aeolian Chamber Players and other groups. (July 2-Aug. 11)

Northeast Harbor: Mt. Desert Chamber Music Festival. (July 18-Aug. 8)

Waterville: Colby College Summer School of Music concerts with the Hungarian Quartet. (July 11-Aug. 15)

Maryland

Baltimore: Baltimore Symphony Promenade and Pops concerts. (June 14-July 12)

Bel Air: Harford Opera Theater season. (June 14-Sept. 3)

Columbia: Merriweather Post Pavilion folk and pop concerts. (July 3-Aug. 25)

Massachusetts

Beckett: Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. (June 22-Aug. 26)

Boston: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler, conductor. (Through June 24)

Boston: Charles River Esplanade concerts: "Bach in the Basin" (through June 16), Greater Boston Youth Symphony (June 24), Boston Symphony Pops Esplanade Orchestra (to July 8).

Charlemont: Mohawk Trail chamber concerts. (July 22-Aug. 26)

Lenox: Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with Boston Symphony Orchestra. Chamber concerts, Fromm contemporary series, music theater project, pop artists events. (June 30-Aug. 20)

Lenox: Lenox Arts Center. Music, film, folk events. (July 5-Aug. 18)

New Marlboro: Red Fox Music Barn chamber series. (July 8-Aug. 12)

Pittsfield: South Mountain Chamber Music Concerts. (July 15-Oct. 1)

Michigan

Interlochen: National Music Camp concerts. (June 25-Aug. 21)

Rochester: Meadow Brook Music Festival, with Detroit Symphony, ballet and pop events. (June 29-Aug. 27)

Minnesota

St. Paul: St. Paul Opera season. Four works in repertory include American premiere of Carl Nielsen's "Maskarade." (June 20-July 14)

New Hampshire

Hanover: "Music at Dartmouth." Chamber music concerts with soloists and ensembles. (July 18-Aug. 28)

Center Harbor: New Hampshire Music Festival, Thomas Nee, director. Orchestral concerts with soloists, semi-staged "Figaro," chamber music series. (July 9-Aug. 19)

Jaffrey: Monadnock Music, James Bolle, director. Free chamber music series in 11 country settings. (July 26-Sept. 4)

New Jersey

Holmdel: Garden State Arts Center. Symphony, ballet, pop performers, theater. (June 10-Sept. 10)

New Mexico

Santa Fe: Santa Fe Opera, John Crosby, director. Six-opera repertory includes American premiere of Aribert Reimann's "Melusine." (July 1-Aug. 26)

New York

Chautauqua: Chautauqua Institution's program of concerts, opera, theater, lectures. (June 29-Aug. 27)

Glens Falls: Lake George Opera, David Lloyd, director. Five operas in repertory include East Coast premieres of Thomas Pasatieri's "Black Widow" and Dominick Argento's "Postcard from Morocco." (Some performances also at State U., Albany.) (July 13-Aug. 26)

Katonah: Caramoor Festival, Julius Rudel, musical director. Orchestral, operatic, chamber music and solo performances. (June 17-July16)

Lake Placid: Adirondack-Champlain Festivals, Edna Michell, director. Orchestral, chamber music, dance, operatic events in four locations. (June 30-Oct. 1)

New York City: Among many events announced in daily press —N.Y. City Ballet's Stravinsky Festival, State Theater (June 18-25); N.Y. Philharmonic "Promenades" (to June 10); Metropolitan Opera's Verdi Festival (to June 24); Naumburg Symphony's Central Park Mall concerts (July 4-Sept. 4); Pop Music Festival, Wollman Rink, Central Park (June 15-Sept. 2); Goldman Band concerts in N.Y. parks (June 21-Aug. 13); Light Opera of Manhattan G & S Festival (through Sept. 3); Free noon concerts at St. Thomas Church by Orchestra of City of N.Y. (June 12, 19, 26); Met Opera in the parks (June 27-July 9); N.Y. Philharmonic in parks (July 25-Aug. 12); Newport Jazz Festival in N.Y. (July 1-9); International Bach Society Festival (July 11-20); Mostly Mozart Festival (July 24-Aug. 19).

Saratoga Springs: Saratoga Festival with N.Y. City Ballet (July 5-29); Philadelphia Orchestra (Aug. 2-26). Also Juilliard Acting Company, pop series, special events (to Sept. 10)

Woodstock: Maverick Hall Sunday chamber concerts. (July 2-Sept. 3)

North Carolina

Greensboro: Eastern Music Festival. Chamber music, recitals. (June 24-Aug. 5)

Ohio

Cincinnati: Summer Opera Festival, Styrk Orwoll, director. Six operas and a Verdi concert are scheduled in newly refurbished Music Hall. (June 24-July 22)

Cleveland: Blossom Music Center, Northampton Township. Cleveland Orchestra festival, pops, and family concerts with guest conductors and soloists. Joffrey and Harkness Ballets (June 20-Sept. 4)

Pennsylvania

Ambler: Temple University Music Festival and Institute. Concerts by Pittsburgh Symphony with guest conductors and soloists, ballet performances, chamber music evenings, and pop performers. (June 23-Aug. 6)

Philadelphia: Philadelphia Orchestra at Robin Hood Dell. (June 19-July 27)

Upper Salford Township: Philadelphia Folk Festival. Concerts, workshops, dance, crafts. (Aug. 25-27)

Rhode Island

Block Island: Spring House chamber concerts. (July 8-Aug.16)

Newport: Newport Music Festival. 19th-century chamber, orchestral, opera, and ballet music. Also special events. (July 27-Aug. 12)

Tennessee

Sewanee: Summer Music Center concerts.

Vermont

Johnson: Composers Conference and Chamber Center. (Aug. 13-26) Daniel Nagrin and the Workgroup. Modern dance. (June 26-Aug. 5)

Manchester: Southern Vermont Art Center music series. (July 1-23)

Marlboro: Marlboro Music Festival, Rudolf Serkin, director. Orchestral and chamber music concerts on weekends. (July 8-Aug. 13)

Virginia

Vienna: Wolf Trap Farm Park. Filene Center. Concerts by N.Y. Philharmonic, Philadelphia, and National Symphony Orchestras, operatic and ballet performances, pop performers, special events. (June 16-Sept. 10)

Wisconsin

Fish Creek: Peninsula Music Festival, Thor Johnson, conductor. (Aug. 5-19)

Wyoming

Teton Village: Grand Teton Music Festival, Ling Tung, director. Orchestral and chamber music concerts. (July 25-Aug. 26)

Ontario

Niagara-on-the-Lake: "Music Today '72." Shaw Festival's 10 chamber concerts of contemporary and traditional works. (Aug. 5-19)

Stratford: Stratford Festival music series includes guest soloists and chamber groups (July 1-Aug. 26) "Music for a Summer Day" (Aug. 25) includes Guarneri Quartet, Dorian Quintet, and N.Y. Philharmonic.

Puerto Rico

San Juan: Festival Casals, Pable Casals, director. Orchestral and choral performances, with guest conductors and soloists. (through June 17).

L. Sn.

By Christian Steiner

Garrick Ohlsson

. . . plays Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto with Seiji Ozawa's conducting at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, July 9, to end second week of the Boston Symphony's festival there. Mr. Ohlsson appears in Boston in a solo recital next February in the BU Celebrity Series.

Tanglewood—one home for summer musicfests

Things are changing annually at Tanglewood where the Boston Symphony Orchestra holds sway during those pleasant August days and evenings.

A few years back the Tent Club was set up at Tanglewood where club members could purchase any kind of an alcoholic beverage. However, membership in the Tent Club required a contribution of $50 or more to the Friends of Tanglewood.

Now there will be other "friends" for there is going to be a beer and wine stand on the specious grounds—the location still undecided—this summer. The Stockbridge selectmen ha given a common victualers bee and wine license to the Orches tra for the new addition. W don't know how it'll do, for mos attendees, if they so desire th stuff, bring their own.

✿ ✿

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264

JUN 5 1972

New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

MAY 5 1972

New

Berkshire Festival opens June 30

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All - Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All - Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9; will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16. Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbiri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

TIMES
BEVERLY, MASS.
D. 9,534

MAY 31 1972

New England Newsclip

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043

MAY 31 1972

New England Newsclip

Berkshire Festival opens June 30

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All - Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All - Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9; will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16. Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbiri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
S. 199,160

MAR 26 1972 New England Newsclip

T. H. Parker—

Tanglewood Time

As April approaches, some persons are dreaming of the upcoming baseball season. Others look forward to fishing and take "The Compleat Angler" off the shelf. And music fanciers begin to think of the greensward at Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra now requites their great expectations by announcing the 1972 summer concerts there.

Some of the highlights will include an all-Bach concert, followed by an all-Mozart event. Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays. All four Brahms symphonies will be given during the season, and four Beethoven symphonies.

Choral works will include Haydn's "The Seasons," Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz "Te Deum," Mahler's Eighth Symphony and the Beethoven Ninth.

In addition to Seiji Ozawa, rather fancifully called "the music director designate" of the Boston Symphony, Tanglewood concerts will be taken by Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy, Stanislaw Skrowaczeski, James Levine, Michael Thomas, Leonard Bernstein, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna and William Steinberg.

The complete programs, which you might cut out and attach to the mirror of your dresser, include:

June 30 — All-Bach, including Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, Suite No. 2, Cantata No. 191, and a solo cantata to be announced.

July 1 — Suite No. 3, Bach; Piano Concerto No. 1, Beethoven (Claude Frank); Symphony No. 39, Mozart.

July 2 — "The Seasons," Haydn.

July 7 — All-Mozart, including Concerto for Flute and Harp, Bassoon Concerto, and 'Haffner" Serenade.

July 9 — Symphony No. 47, Haydn; Piano Concerto No. 3, Beethoven (Garrick Ohlsson); "Ma Mere l'Oye," Ravel.

July 14 — All-Beethoven, including Symphonies No. 6 and 5.

July 15 — All-Beethoven, including Symphonies No. 1 and 9.

July 16 — All-Beethoven, including the Triple Concerto, Symphony No. 4, and Choral Fantasy (Peter Serkin).

July 21 — Motet, Gabriel/Maderna; Concerto for Winds and Piano, Stravinsky (Earl Wild).

July 22 — All-Brahms, including Symphonies No. 4 and 2.

July 23 — Overture, "Iphigenia in Aulis," Glueck; Sonata a 7, Sontata a 10, Vejvanovsky; Piano Concerto, Schumann (Alicia de Larrocha); Symphony No. 8, Dvorak.

July 28 — "Tragic" Overture, Brahms; Symphony No. 5, Sibelius; Concerto for Orchestra, Bartok.

July 29 — "Leonore" Overture No. 3, Beethoven; "Mathis der Maler," Hindemith; "Ein Heldenleben," Strauss.

July 30 — Violin Concerto No. 4, Mozart (Joseph Silverstein); Symphony No. 6, Mahler.

August 4 — Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson, Copland (Phyllis Curtin); Violin Concerto, Wuorinen (Paul Zukofsky); "Rite of Spring," Stravinsky.

August 5 — Symphony No. 1, Mendelssohn; Piano Concerto No. 3, Prokofiev (John Browning); "New World" Symphony, Dvorak.

August 6 — Oboe Concerto, Haydn; Symphony No. 5, Mahler.

August 11 — "Wesendonck" Songs, Wagner; Prelude and "Liebestod" ("Tristan und Isolde"), Wagner (Jessye Norman); Four Sacred Pieces, Verdi.

August 12 — "Les Franc-Juges," Berlioz; Piano Concerto No. 4, Beethoven (Gina Bachauer); Symphony No. 3, Brahms.

August 18 — Mozart Symphony, to be announced; Piano Concerto No. 1, Chopin (Alexis Weissenberg); "Miraculous Mandarin," Bartok.

August 19 — Suite No. 3, Bach (or Mozart's "Paris" Symphony); "La Valse," Ravel; Piano Concerto No. 2, Brahms (Misha Dichter).

August 20 — Symphony No. 8, Mahler (Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus).

SUN
LOWELL, MASS.
D. 49,250

APR 30 1972 New England Newsclip

THE 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox will open on Friday, June 30, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20. The season begins with an all Bach concert. Conducting will be Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons." He will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony

TELEGRAM
BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
D. 13,000

MAR 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Season Planned At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 20, and continue through Sunday, Aug. 20, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced.

The orchestra's music director-designate, Seiji Ozawa, will open the summer festival with an all-Bach program, and conclude it with a performance of Mahler's Third Symphony. One of three Mahler symphonies to be heard, along with all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies.

Conductors lined up include Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Michael Tilson Thomas, Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Soloists will include pianists Gina Bachauer, Misha Dichter, Peter Serkin, Alicia de Larrocha, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, Garrick Ohlsson and Alexis Weissenberg.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

MAR 8 1972 New England Newsclip

QUODLIBET

For Tanglewood, three by Mahler

By Ellen Pfeifer
Globe Staff

Three Mahler symphonies, the fifth, sixth and eighth, the four Brahms symphonies and performances of Berlioz' Te Deum and Haydn's "The Seasons" will highlight the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, June 30-August 20.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announcement of the season also named the conductors who will appear, including Seiji Ozawa, Michael Tilson Thomas, William Steinberg, James Levine, Leonard Bernstein Colin Davis, Bruno Maderna, Karel Ancerl, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank, and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists at the festival are Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman, and BSO players Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

EUGENE ORMANDY
. . . Berkshire guest

Tanglewood Concerts Set For June

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, M. Oz awa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when J ames Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

13

Tanglewood Announces Summer Concert Schedule

Lenox — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open Friday, June 30 and continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Magler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Among the soloists for this season's festival are Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomber; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Berbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

BERKSHIRE COURIER
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
W. 3,650

MAR 23 1972 New England Newsclip

AMENIA, N. Y.
HARLEM VALLEY
TIMES
W. 2,500

MAR 9 1972

TANGLEWOOD ANNOUNCES 1972 SEASON HIGHLIGHTS

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriat Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its con-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

JOURNAL
BROOKFIELD, CONN.
W. 2,500

MAR 23 1972 New England Newsc

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

APR 6 1972

New England Newsclip

Boston Symphony Ready For Tanglewood Season

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20. The season begins with an All–Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "THE SEASONS." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All–Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "FOUR SACRED PIECES," the Berlioz TE DEUM (both conducted by Colin Davis') Haydn's "THE SEASONS," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
S. 132,687

MAY 28 1972

New England Newsclip

Activity in Berkshires

Tanglewood and Jacob's Pillow

At Tanglewood the Berkshire Music Center swings into its 38th season at Lenox, Mass. as the country's oldest major festival of music plus an educational program for instrumentalists and vocalists. A highlight of this year is the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, which for one week turns Tanglewood into a contemporary music capital.

Fromm Week at Tanglewood each year premieres works by major contemporary composers.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN
. . . conducts July 22

Tanglewood is easily reached during a less than two-hour drive north on 91 to the Mass. Turnpike, then west to exit 1 or 2.

For information on Lenox and Lee accommodations or other events to see write the Berkshire Hills Conference, 107 South St., Pittsfield, Mass. 01210.

For Tanglewood tickets or a free brochure write the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115. After June 9, write Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

A program of concerts at Tanglewood follows below.

JUNE 30 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa - Bach Program. Brandenburg Concerto No. 2; Brandenburg Concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 7 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Piano music of Mozart. 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa - Mozart Program. Concerto for flute and harp. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson, Bassoon Concerto; Sherman Walt, Haffner Serenade.

JULY 14 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin. Chamber Music of Beethoven. 9 p.m. William Steinberg. Beethoven Program, Symphony No. 6; Symphony No. 5.

JULY 21 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Earl Wild. 9 p.m. Bruno Maderna. Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet; Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds. Earl Wild, Brahms: Symphony No. 1.

JULY 28 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. To be announced. 9 p.m. Eugene Ormandy. Brahms: Tragic Overture; Sibelius: Symphony No. 5; Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra.

AUGUST 4 — Fromm Special Concert, 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin. 9 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas. Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra; Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin; Vuorinen: Violin Concerto, Paul Zukofsky; Stravinsky: Rite of Spring.

AUGUST 11 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Gina Bachauer. 9 p.m. Colin Davis. Wagner: Wesendonck Songs; Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde". Jessye Norman, Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

AUGUST 18 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Boston Symphony Chamber Players. Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg. 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra; Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg, Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin.

JULY 1 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Stanislow Skrowaczewski. Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1. Claude Frank. Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

JULY 8 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Bruno Maderna. A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia"; Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1"; Ives: Tone Road No. 1 and No. 3; Unanswered Question, Over the Pavements; Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony.

JULY 15 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. William Steinberg. Beethoven Program. Symphony No. 1, Symphony No. 9. Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 22 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Leonard Bernstein. Brahms Program, Symphony No. 4; Symphony No. 2.

JULY 29 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Eugene Ormandy. Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3; Hindemith: Mathis der Maler; Strauss: Ein Heldenleben.

AUGUST 5 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Aldo Ceccato. Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1; Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3. John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony.

AUGUST 12 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Colin Davis. Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges"; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4. Gina Bachauer, Brahms: Symphony No. 3.

AUGUST 19 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas. Mozart: Paris Symphony; Messiaen: Et expecto resurrectionem mortuorum; Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2. Misha Dichter.

JULY 2 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Haydn: The Seasons. Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 9 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Haydn: Symphony No. 47; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3. Garrick Ohlsson. Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye."

JULY 16 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Beethoven Program, Triple Concerto. Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin, Symphony No. 4; Choral Fantasy. Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 23 — 2:30 p.m. Karel Ancerl. Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis"; Veivanovsky: Sonata a 7, Sonata a 10; Schumann: Piano Concerto. Alicia De Larrocha, DVorak: Symphony No. 8.

JULY 30 — 2:30 p.m. James Levine. Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4. Joseph Silverstein. Mahler: Symphony No. 6.

AUGUST 6 — 2:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas. Haydn: Oboe Concerto. Ralph Gomberg. Mahler: Symphony No. 5.

AUGUST 13 — 2:30 p.m. Colin Davis. Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica"; Berlioz: Te Deum. Richard Lewis. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

AUGUST 20 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Mahler: Symphony No. 8. Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Theodore Marier, Conductor, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

MAY 10 1972

New Engl. News

Tanglewood Redesigns Schedule

BOSTON — The newly designed three color 1972 Tanglewood brochure containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, is available.

Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston; the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, and at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Brochures are also available at many of the AAA Automobile Clubs in the eastern United States, as well as at many hotels and motels in the Tanglewood area. Copies may also be obtained by mail by telephoning Symphony Hall at area code 617 266-1492.

The brochure lists the 24 Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood on Friday evenings at 9.00 p.m., Saturday evenings at 8.30 p.m., and Sunday afternoons at 2.30 p.m., as well as the eight Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsals on Saturday mornings at 10.30 a.m.

The 1972 Berkshire Festival opens Friday evening, June 30 at 9.00 p.m. with Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program.

LATHAM, N. Y.
TOWNSMAN
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

MAY 25 1972

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens Friday June 30, will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons.

MONTACHUSETT REVIEW
FITCHBURG, MASS.
WEEKLY 53,000

MAY 31 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BOSTON, MASS.-ACHUSETTS -- The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12;

(Continued on Page 34)

TANGLEWOOD

(Continued from Page 33)

Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

THE SACRAMENTO BEE
SACRAMENTO, CALIF.
D. 172,411 SUN. 200,546

MAY 26 1972

Tanglewood '72

The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will run from June 30 and continue eight weekends until Aug. 20. Many major works and important soloists will be conducted by a variety of composers, including Seiji Ozawa (artistic director), Leonard Bernstein (adviser), Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Colin Davis and James Levine. For information, write the Festival Ticket office at Symphony Hall, Boston 02115 before June 9, and at Lenox 01240 after that.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

MAY 28 1972

Classical Programs

WFLY will present the world renowned Boston Symphony Orchestra in full stereo sound from 9-11 p.m. Sunday evenings beginning June 4.

The opening Boston Symphony concert will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor. William Steinberg, music director, will conduct future concerts by the symphony on WFLY.

Violin soloist for "A Stravinsky Retrospective" on the June 4 WFLY opener is the Boston Symphony's concert-master and assistant conductor, Joseph Silverstein. He became concert master in 1962 and assistant conductor in 1971. Silverstein is on the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

Also to be featured on WFLY's June 4 concert will be the New England Conservatory Chorus conducted by Lorna Cooke de Varon; soprano Joan Heller, and Michael Tilson Thomas at the piano.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

MAY 8 1972

New England Newsclip

Brochure From Tanglewood Lists Concerts, Specials

The newly designed, three-color 1972 Tanglewood brochure, containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, is available. Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston, the Berkshire Hills Conference office, and at the box office at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The brochure lists the 24 BSO concerts on Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m., and Sundays at 2:30 p.m., as well as the eight open rehearsals on Saturdays at 10:30 a.m.

Tuesday Specials

The 1972 Berkshire Festival opens Friday, June 30, at 9 with Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program.

The brochure also lists the Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, a series of seven programs. They are four concerts on the Popular Artists Series, July 4, 18, and 25; the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops, Aug. 1; a Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, Aug. 8; and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by Berkshire Music Center students in the afternoon, and a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras, Aug. 15.

Tickets may be purchased by mail order only until June 9 from the Festival ticket office at Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115. After June 9, tickets may be purchased in person or by mail from the ticket office at Tanglewood, which will be open Monday through Saturday from 9 to 6 until the opening of the concert season.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

APR 6 1972

New England Newsclip

Boston Symphony Ready For Tanglewood Season

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20. The season begins with an All–Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "THE SEASONS." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All–Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "FOUR SACRED PIECES," the Berlioz TE DEUM (both conducted by Colin Davis') Haydn's "THE SEASONS," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto No. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto No. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

LATHAM, N. Y.
TOWNSMAN
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

MAY 25 1972

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which opens Friday June 30, will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons.

MONTACHUSETT REVIEW
FITCHBURG, MASS.
WEEKLY 53,000

MAY 31 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS -- The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach Concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony no. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies nos. 2 and 4; Symphony no. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday August 12;

(Continued on Page 34)

TANGLEWOOD

(Continued from Page 33)

Symphony no. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony no. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony no. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Beethoven Piano concerto no. 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev no. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahms Piano concerto no. 2; Alicia De Larrocha performing the Schumann Piano concerto; Peter Serkin performing in the Beethoven Triple concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano concerto no. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members, Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

Final information regarding the Berkshire Festival will be available in brochure form in early April.

THE SACRAMENTO BEE
SACRAMENTO, CALIF.
D. 172,411 SUN. 200,546

MAY 26 1972

Tanglewood '72

The annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will run from June 30 and continue eight weekends until Aug. 20. Many major works and important soloists will be conducted by a variety of composers, including Seiji Ozawa (artistic director), Leonard Bernstein (adviser), Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Colin Davis and James Levine. For information, write the Festival Ticket office at Symphony Hall, Boston 02115 before June 9, and at Lenox 01240 after that.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
S. 132,687

MAY 28 1972

New England Newsclip

Activity in Berkshires
Tanglewood and Jacob's Pillow

At Tanglewood the Berkshire Music Center swings into its 38th season at Lenox, Mass. as the country's oldest major festival of music plus an educational program for instrumentalists and vocalists. A highlight of this year is the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, which for one week turns Tanglewood into a contemporary music capital.

Fromm Week at Tanglewood each year premieres works by major contemporary composers.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN
. . . conducts July 22

Tanglewood is easily reached during a less than two-hour drive north on 91 to the Mass. Turnpike, then west to exit 1 or 2.

For information on Lenox and Lee accommodations or other events to see write the Berkshire Hills Conference, 107 South St., Pittsfield, Mass. 01210.

For Tanglewood tickets or a free brochure write the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115. After June 9, write Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

A program of concerts at Tanglewood follows below.

JUNE 30 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa - Bach Program. Brandenburg Concerto No. 2; Brandenburg Concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 7 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Piano music of Mozart. 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa - Mozart Program. Concerto for flute and harp. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson. Bassoon Concerto; Sherman Walt, Haffner Serenade.

JULY 14 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin. Chamber Music of Beethoven. 9 p.m. William Steinberg. Beethoven Program, Symphony No. 6; Symphony No. 5.

JULY 21 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Earl Wild. 9 p.m. Bruno Maderna. Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet; Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds. Earl Wild, Brahms: Symphony No. 1.

JULY 28 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. To be announced. 9 p.m. Eugene Ormandy. Brahms: Tragic Overture; Sibelius: Symphony No. 5; Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra.

AUGUST 4 — Fromm Special Concert, 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin. 9 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas. Ruggles; Evocations for Orchestra; Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin; Wuorinen: Violin Concerto, Paul Zukofsky; Stravinsky: Rite of Spring.

AUGUST 11 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Gina Bachauer. 9 p.m. Colin Davis. Wagner: Wesendonck Songs; Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde". Jessye Norman, Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

AUGUST 18 — 7 p.m. Weekend Prelude. Boston Symphony Chamber Players. Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg. 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra; Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg, Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin.

JULY 1 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Stanislow Skrowaczewski. Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1. Claude Frank. Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

JULY 8 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Bruno Maderna. A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia"; Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1"; Ives: Tone Road No. 1 and No. 3; Unanswered Question, Over the Pavements; Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony.

JULY 15 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. William Steinberg. Beethoven Program, Symphony No. 1, Symphony No. 9. Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 22 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Leonard Bernstein. Brahms Program, Symphony No. 4; Symphony No. 2.

JULY 29 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Eugene Ormandy. Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3; Hindemith: Mathis der Maler; Strauss: Ein Heldenleben.

AUGUST 5 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Aldo Ceccato. Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1; Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3. John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony.

AUGUST 12 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Colin Davis. Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges"; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4. Gina Bachauer, Brahms: Symphony No. 3.

AUGUST 19 — 10:30 a.m. Open Rehearsal. 8:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas. Mozart: Paris Symphony; Messiaen: Et expecto resurrectionem mortuorum; Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2. Misha Dichter.

JULY 2 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Haydn: The Seasons. Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 9 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Haydn: Symphony No. 47; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3. Garrick Ohlsson. Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye."

JULY 16 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Beethoven Program. Triple Concerto. Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin. Symphony No. 4; Choral Fantasy. Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

JULY 23 — 2:30 p.m. Karel Ancerl. Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis"; Velvanovsky: Sonata a 7. Sonata a 10; Schumann: Piano Concerto. Alicia De Larrocha. DVorak: Symphony No. 8.

JULY 30 — 2:30 p.m. James Levine. Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4. Joseph Silverstein. Mahler: Symphony No. 6.

AUGUST 6 — 2:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas. Haydn: Oboe Concerto. Ralph Gomberg. Mahler: Symphony No. 5.

AUGUST 13 — 2:30 p.m. Colin Davis. Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica"; Berlioz: Te Deum. Richard Lewis. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

AUGUST 20 — 2:30 p.m. Seiji Ozawa. Mahler: Symphony No. 8. Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Theodore Marier, Conductor, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

MAY 28 1972

Classical Programs

WFLY will present the world renowned Boston Symphony Orchestra in full stereo sound from 9-11 p.m. Sunday evenings beginning June 4.

The opening Boston Symphony concert will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor. William Steinberg, music director, will conduct future concerts by the symphony on WFLY.

Violin soloist for "A Stravinsky Retrospective" on the June 4 WFLY opener is the Boston Symphony's concertmaster and assistant conductor, Joseph Silverstein. He became concert master in 1962 and assistant conductor in 1971. Silverstein is on the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

Also to be featured on WFLY's June 4 concert will be the New England Conservatory Chorus conducted by Lorna Cooke de Varon; soprano Joan Heller, and Michael Tilson Thomas at the piano.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,393

MAY 10 1972

New Engl News

Tanglewood Redesigns Schedule

BOSTON — The newly designed three color 1972 Tanglewood brochure containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, is available.

Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston; the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, and at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Brochures are also available at many of the AAA Automobile Clubs in the eastern United States, as well as at many hotels and motels in the Tanglewood area. Copies may also be obtained by mail by telephoning Symphony Hall at area code 617 266-1492.

The brochure lists the 24 Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood on Friday evenings at 9.00 p.m., Saturday evenings at 8.30 p.m., and Sunday afternoons at 2.30 p.m., as well as the eight Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsals on Saturday mornings at 10.30 a.m.

The 1972 Berkshire Festival opens Friday evening, June 30 at 9.00 p.m. with Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

MAY 8 1972

New England Newsclip

Brochure From Tanglewood Lists Concerts, Specials

The newly designed, three-color 1972 Tanglewood brochure, containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, is available. Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston, the Berkshire Hills Conference office, and at the box office at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The brochure lists the 24 BSO concerts on Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m., and Sundays at 2:30 p.m., as well as the eight open rehearsals on Saturdays at 10:30 a.m.

Tuesday Specials

The 1972 Berkshire Festival opens Friday, June 30, at 9 with Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program.

The brochure also lists the Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, a series of seven programs. They are four concerts on the Popular Artists Series, July 4, 11, 18, and 25; the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops, Aug. 1; a Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, Aug. 8; and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by Berkshire Music Center students in the afternoon, and a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras, Aug. 15.

Tickets may be purchased by mail order only until June 9 from the Festival ticket office at Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass. 02115. After June 9, tickets may be purchased in person or by mail from the ticket office at Tanglewood, which will be open Monday through Saturday from 9 to 6 until the opening of the concert season.

REVIEW
DARIEN, CONN.
W. 4,162

JUN 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Has Festival Dates

The newly designed three color 1972 Tanglewood brochure containing a complete schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts is now available. Copies may be obtained from Symphony Hall in Boston, the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, and at the box office at Tanglewood in Lenox. Brochures are also available at many hotels and motels in the Tanglewood area. Copies may also be obtained by mail by telephoning Symphony Hall at area code 617, 266-1492.

The brochure lists the 24 Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts at Tanglewood on Friday evenings at 9 p.m., Saturday evenings at 8:30 p.m., and Sunday afternoons at 2:30 p.m., as well as the eight Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsals on Saturday mornings at 10:30 a.m. The 1972 Berkshire Festival opens Friday evening, June 30 at 9 p.m. with Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program.

The brochure also lists the new Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, a series of seven special concerts including four concerts on the Popular Artists Series (Tuesdays July 4, 11, 18, and 25), the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Bostop Pops (Tuesday, August 1), a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th Anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation (Tuesday, August 8), and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by the Berkshire Music Center students in the afternoon, and a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshir Music Center Orchestras (August 15).

After June 9, tickets may be purchased in person or by mail from the Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Ticket Office at Tanglewood will open Monday morning, June 12 at 9:00, and will remain open Monday through Saturday from 9 to 6 until the opening of the concert season.

---

and concertized extensively using the Moog Synthesizer.

This complex electronic instrument with thousands of tiny solid state circuits, controlled by a keyboard, was produced by an upstate New York engineer named Robert A. Moog. When Kingsley 'discovered' the instrument while visiting the engineer, he knew it was the music medium he wanted. Since then he has greatly extended public awareness of this electronic musical medium, has written radio and television commercials with Moog background, recorded two albums and performed with his Moog Quartet at Carnegie Hall.

When he appears with members of his quartet Saturday evening with Rosalyn Tureck at8:30 p.m. at Norwalk High School, he will be performing original works of his for the Moog, some of which he did two years ago with Arthur Fiedler during the Boston Pops Orchestra's 75th Birthday Season.

Tickets for the concert, sponsored by the Norwalk Symphony Women's Association, to benefit the Norwalk Symphony and the International Bach Society, may be obtained at the door or by telephoning Mrs. Alexander B. Hussey 846-0915 or Mrs. John G. Ryden 838-6714, and in Darien from Lucille Dressler 655-9626.

N.E. WIRE SERVICE
WARREN VERMONT

JUN 3 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD LISTS SCHEDULE

Pittsfield, Mass. -- The 1972 schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be held at Tanglewood in Lenox, is now available in a brochure which can be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, Symphony Hall in Boston or the Tanglewood box office in Lenox.

The 1972 season opens Friday, June 30 at 9:00 P.M. with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa. Regularly scheduled concerts are Fridays at 9:00 P.M., Saturdays at 8:30 P.M. and Sundays at 2:30 P.M. Open rehearsals are Saturdays at 10:30 A.M. Special dates are Tuesday, August 1 when Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops and August 15 when the Boston Symphony and and the Berkshire Music Center Orchestras combine to present an evening concert.

The Tanglewood ticket office opens June 12 and will remain open Monday through Saturday from 9:00 to 6:00. PRINCIPAL CONTACT: John V. Geary, P.O. Box 1170, 01201. 413-443-9186.

NEWARK, N. J.
JEWISH NEWS
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 21,000

JUN 8 1972

Much of Beauty

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. The grounds are as beautiful as ever, though the striking rows of giant firs have begun to die. The lawns aren't merely cut: they're honed. That ancient spreading cypress still twists its limbs to the earth.

Round about Lenox the delightful Berkshire nature preserve, the superb Clark Museum at Williamstown, the great old manors that now house prep schools and art studios and antique shops, the unpolluted clarity of the waters of Stockbridge Bowl, and of course the Restaurant that used to be Alices's in old Stockbridge.

And the Boston Symphony. Conducting: Bernstein, Ozawa, Ormandy, Skrowaczewski, Colin Davis, Michael Tilson Thomas, The music: complete evenings of Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms. And Gabriele, Bartok, Chopin, Dvorak, Hindemith, Mahler.

Write to the Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

THE BLADE
TOLEDO, OHIO
D. 176,688 SUN. 200,492

JUN 4 1972

Tanglewood in Massachusetts, starting off on June 30 and lasting until Aug. 20. will be as busy as ever with the Berkshire Festival, founded in 1934. The Boston Symphony, under the batons of Ozawa, Steinberg, Maderna, Ormandy, Thomas, Davis, Skrowaczewski, Bernstein, Ceccato, Ancerl, and Levine will perform with a host of soloists on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. There's also the summer school for the advanced study of music at the Berkshire Music Center, chamber music, choral and vocal concerts, music theater productions, composers' forums, and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Foundation which sponsors it.

Democrat and Chronicle
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
D. 144,697 SUN. 221,661

JUN 5 1972

Art Festivals a Celebration

The Arts

By LOUISA KREISBERG
Gannett News Service

A festival is a lot more than people milling about in a midway atmosphere. It's a great occasion, a celebration, and America is teeming with them from North Dakota to New York, California to Connecticut.

Summer is a rich season for the arts, a time when outdoor performances are presented on the outstretched palm of warm weather. In recent years, a new arts festival 'movement'' has developed as an alternative to existing entertainment.

The movement is one that merges mass arts with more esoteric classics. Rock'n roll, jazz and folk music are billed alongside Beethoven and Brahms at such traditional festivals as Tanglewood. Happily, the union has worked well, for management claims the increased gate has decreased the deficit.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., founded in 1934, is the country's oldest major festival of music. During eight weekends each summer, the Boston Symphony gives concerts in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

This year the season opens June 30 with an all-Bach program and continues through Aug. 20. The Boston orchestra will give 24 weekend concerts as well as eight open rehearsals with Seiji Ozawa, Leonard Bernstein and Eugene Ormandy, among others, sharing the podium.

Also scheduled are the Tangelwood Tuesday Specials, a series of seven special concerts including four on the popular artists series.

TANGLEWOOD'S DIRECTors refuse to make public who the pop artists will be — for fear of crowd inundation —but in the past such performers as Richie Havens and Sly and the Family Stone have found their way to the 210-acre estate in the Berkshire Hills.

Also scheduled is the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Aug. 1, a special Festival of Contemporary Music Aug. 8 and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras Aug. 15.

The Saratoga Performing Arts Center at Saratoga Springs, will open its annual N.Y. City Ballet season July 5 with "The Nutcracker." The company will give a total of 28 performances presenting 41 ballets of which 21 will be new to Saratoga before the season closes July 29.

The Philadelphia Orchestra will take up its annual residency on Aug. 2 through Aug. 26, giving a total of 16 performances Wednesday through Saturday evenings with a student matinee Aug. 15.

AMONG THE CONDUCtors sharing baton honors with Eugene Ormandy (who is scheduled for five concerts at Saratoga) will be Seiji Ozawa, Julius Rudel, Andres Kostelanetz, James Levine and Fruhbeck de Burgos.

Saratoga does a big job with popular artists, and this year will be no exception. Perhaps the most flamboyant entertainer will be Liberace who returns to the Center July 9 to make his only appearance in the area this summer.

Last summer's specials numbered 37 and the house record was set by "The Who" with 33,652 fans in attendance. In fact, popular arts events were responsible for the Center's setting a new attendance record in 1971. The three-month season, which ran from June 13 to Sept. 19, totaled 403,779, an increase of 19 per cent over 1970.

THE RAREST JEWEL, perhaps, in the necklace of summer festivals is Caramoor in Katonah.

Caramoor opens it 27th season June 17 with an all-Mozart program conducted by Julius Rudel, the festival's music director since 1964.

Monteverdi's "Coronation of Poppea," Benjamin Britten's "Prodigal Son," Donizetti's "Requiem for Bellini" and a concert performance of Handel's "Acis and Galatea" will highlight the season.

The August Sunday afternoon concert series inaugurated last summer will continue this year with Gina Bachauer, pianist, Aug. 6, the Guarneri String Quartet, Aug. 13, Rosalyn Tureck in an all-Bach program Aug. 20 and Canadian contralto Marueen Forrester, Aug. 27.

NEWS
NEWBURYPORT, MASS.
D. 7,358

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
D. 149,649

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

CONCERTS TO BEGIN

Lenox, Mass.—(UPI)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa, with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass.

June 30 — Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 1 — Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach's Suite No. 3; Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 1, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

July 2 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Hayden's "The Seasons." Soloists, Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 7 — Seiji Ozawa conducting a Mozart program. Soloists, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson and Sherman Walt.

July 8 — Bruno Maderna conducting works by A. Gabrieli, E. Brown, Ives and concluding with Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

July 9 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's Symphony No. 47; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3; and Ravel's "Ma mere l'Oye." Soloist: Garrick Ohlsson.

July 14 — William Steinberg conducting Beethoven's Symphonies No. 5 and 6.

July 15 — William Steinberg conducting Beethoven's Sumphonies No. 1 and 9. Soloists, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 16 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Beethoven's Triple Concerto Symphony No. 4 and Choral Fantasy. Soloists, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 21 — Bruno Maderna conducting the Gabrieli Maderna Motet; Stravinsky Concerto for Piano and winds and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. Soloist, Earl Wild.

July 22 — Leonard Bernstein conducting Brahms' Symphonies No. 2 and 4.

July 23 — Karel Ancerl conducting works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak. Soloist, Alicia de Larrocha.

July 28 — Eugene Ormandy conducting the Tragic Overture by Brahms; Symphony No. 5 by Sibelius; and Concerto for Orchestra by Bartok.

July 29 — Eugene Ormandy conducting the "Leonore" Overture No. 3 by Beethoven; "Mathis der Maler" by Hindemith; and "Ein Heldenleben" by Strauss.

July 30—James Levine conducting the Violin Concerto No. 4 by Mozart; and Symphony No. 6 by Mahler. Soloist, Joseph Smilverstein.

Aug. 4 — Michael Tilson Thomas conducting Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson by Copland; Violin Concerto by Wuorinen and "Rite of Spring" by Stravinsky. Soloists: Phyllis Curtin and Paul Zukofsky.

Aug. 5 — Aldo Ceccato conducting Symphony No. 1 by Mendelssohn; Piano Concerto No. 3 by Prokofiev; and "New World" Symphony by Dvorak. Soloist, John Browning.

Aug. 6 — Michael Tilson Thomas conducting Oboe Concerto by Haydn, and Symphony No. 5 by Mahler. Soloist, Ralph Gomberg.

Aug. 11—Colin Davis conducting works by Wagner and Verdi. Tanglewood Festival Chorus directed by John Oliver.

Aug. 12 — Colin Davis conducting Overture "Les Francs Juges" by Beribz; Piano Concerto No. 4 by Beethoven; and Symphony No. 3 by Brahms. Soloist, Gina Bachauer.

Aug. 13 — Colin Davis conducting "Eroica" Symphony by Beethoven; "Te Deum" by Berloiz. Soloist, Richard Lewis with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Aug. 18 — Seiji Ozawa conducting a Mozart Symphony (tba), Piano Concerto No. 1 by Chopin and "Miraculous Mandarin" by Bartok. Soloist, Alexis Weissenberg.

Aug. 19 — Michael Tilson Thomas conducting works by Bach, Mozart, Ravel and Brahms. Soloist, Misha Dichter.

Aug. 20 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Symphony No. 8 by Mahler. St. Paul's School Choir and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Performances are Fridays at 9 p.m. Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Ticket price range: $3.50 to 8:50. Festival Ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
S. 199,160

JUN 11 1972 New England Newsclip

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

ENTERPRISE
LEOMINSTER, MASS.
D. 5,003

JUN 12 1972 New England

HERALD NEWS
FALL RIVER, MASS.
D. 41,749

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
MILFORD, MASS.
D. 11,172

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

UNION LEADER
MANCHESTER, N. H.
D. 21,008

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

STANDARD TIMES
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
D. 72,971

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
MELROSE, MASS.
D. 2,800

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

MERCURY
MEDFORD, MASS.
D. 045

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

New England News Briefs

TANGLEWOOD

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

EAGLE
CLAREMONT, N. H.
D. 6,735

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

EXPRESS
PORTLAND, MAINE.
D. 29,772

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Concerts

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

THE BOSTON HERALD
Traveler
D. 210,540 S. 260,961

JUN 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Many Music Festivals In N.E. This Summer

By HARRY NEVILLE

For many people summer music in New England means Tanglewood, and Tanglewood certainly holds the promise of an unusually exciting season this year, as we noted in a recent Sunday column.

There will, however, be a great many other area events of interest to the music lovers. Details are not yet complete for all such festivals, but here are a few items on which we have rather full information.

Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H., has scheduled 17 events to be held July 18 through Aug. 28 in Hopkins Center. These include concerts by the Vermeer Quartet, New York Pro Musica, pianists Joshua Rifkin, Alfred Brendel and Gabriel Chodos, Hungarian Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio and Guarneri Quartet. Reservations and information may be obtained by calling 603-646-2422.

THE BAR HARBOR Festival (Bar Harbor, Me.) will be held this year July 8 through Aug. 19. The programs will include opera, ballet, chamber music, solo recitals and other events. Details of this festival are available from: Bar Harbor Festival, 516 Fifth Ave., New York 10036.

At Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., there will be a total of 13 summer concerts: starting July 2, a series of seven evening concerts by students of the summer music school, most of them on Sunday evenings.

And starting July 6, a series of six consecutive Thursday evening chamber music concerts, five of them by the resident Aeolian Chamber Players and one by the Bay Festival String Quartet. Details may be obtained from Bowdoin's press department.

The Federated Church in Charlemont, Mass., will begin its third season of Saturday evening chamber music performances beginning July 22 at 8:30 p.m.

Marion McPartland, noted jazz pianist, will be one of the featured performers at the concerts, which will continue on Saturdays for six weeks. Information is available by calling 413-625-2566.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Friends of Tanglewood Plan Picnic, Dance

A series of events planned by the Friends of Music at Tanglewood will highlight the eight-week season of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The Friends are sponsoring a group of "Tanglewood Walks and Talks" throughout the summer. The series will be a bring-your-own-picnic luncheon in the Tanglewood tent with a speaker, followed by a tour of the grounds with a member of the orchestra's staff. The walks and talks are free to Friends and will begin at 1 p.m. Speakers planned are soprano Phyllis Curtin on July 6; Harry Ellis Dickson, a member of the orchestra's first violin section and assistant conductor of the Boston Pops and Esplanade orchestras, on Aug. 3; Michael Tilson Thomas, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's associate conductor and principal guest conductor, on Aug. 17.

The organization is also planning a benefit dinner-dance for the Boston Symphony on June 24 on the stage of the Tanglewood Music Shed. The Ruby Newman orchestra will play from 7 to 1 a.m.

Dwight Speaker

The official opening of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer academy for the advanced study of music, will be Sunday, June 25, at 2:30 p.m. Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deliver the convocation address with music being provided by members of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players. The public is invited to the opening exercises and to the reception that follows in the formal gardens.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual day-long series of concerts by Berkshire Music Center students, will be Aug. 15. Thomas will conduct the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras for the evening concert. The Friends' office at Tanglewood will open Monday for regular business hours. During the season, the office will be open seven days a week.

The Berkshire Festival ticket office will also open Monday.

REGISTER
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
S. 137,000

JUN 11 1972 New England Newsclip

MASSACHUSETTS

Lenox

Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood

Fridays at 7 and 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. from June 30th to Aug. 20. Also, open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m. on Saturdays.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, Boston Symphony Chamber Players and various conductors and soloists including Ozawa, Tilson Thomas, Davis, Ormandy, Steinberg, Browning, Weissenberg and Bachauer.

Arthur Fiedler, and Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood, Tuesday, Aug. 1.

Write: Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240. Phone: (413) 637-1600.

NEWS
NEWBURYPORT, MASS.
D. 7,358

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

BULLETIN
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
D. 149,649

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

CONCERTS TO BEGIN

Lenox, Mass.—(UPI)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa, with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass.

June 30 — Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 1 — Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach's Suite No. 3; Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 1, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

July 2 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Hayden's "The Seasons." Soloists, Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 7 — Seiji Ozawa conducting a Mozart program. Soloists, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson and Sherman Walt.

July 8 — Bruno Maderna conducting works by A. Gabrieli, E. Brown, Ives and concluding with Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

July 9 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's Symphony No. 47; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3; and Ravel's "Ma mere l'Oye." Soloist: Garrick Ohlsson.

July 14 — William Steinberg conducting Beethoven's Symphonies No. 5 and 6.

July 15 — William Steinberg conducting Beethoven's Sumphonies No. 1 and 9. Soloists, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 16 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Beethoven's Triple Concerto Symphony No. 4 and Choral Fantasy. Soloists, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

July 21 — Bruno Maderna conducting the Gabrieli Maderna Motet; Stravinsky Concerto for Piano and winds and Brahms' Symphony No. 1. Soloist, Earl Wild.

July 22 — Leonard Bernstein conducting Brahms' Symphonies No. 2 and 4.

July 23 — Karel Ancerl conducting works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak. Soloist, Alicia de Larrocha.

July 28 — Eugene Ormandy conducting the Tragic Overture by Brahms; Symphony No. 5 by Sibelius; and Concerto for Orchestra by Bartok.

July 29 — Eugene Ormandy conducting the "Leonore" Overture No. 3 by Beethoven; "Mathis der Maler" by Hindemith; and "Ein Heldenleben" by Strauss.

July 30—James Levine conducting the Violin Concerto No. 4 by Mozart; and Symphony No. 6 by Mahler. Soloist, Joseph Smilverstein.

Aug. 4 — Michael Tilson Thomas conducting Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson by Copland; Violin Concerto by Wuorinen and "Rite of Spring" by Stravinsky. Soloists: Phyllis Curtin and Paul Zukofsky.

Aug. 5 — Aldo Ceccato conducting Symphony No. 1 by Mendelssohn; Piano Concerto No. 3 by Prokofiev; and "New World" Symphony by Dvorak Soloist, John Browning.

Aug. 6 — Michael Tilson Thomas conducting Oboe Concerto by Haydn; and Symphony No. 5 by Mahler. Soloist, Ralph Gomberg.

Aug. 11—Colin Davis conducting works by Wagner and Verdi. Tanglewood Festival Chorus directed by John Oliver.

Aug. 12 — Colin Davis conducting Overture "Les Francs Juges" by Beribz; Piano Concerto No. 4 by Beethoven; and Symphony No. 3 by Brahms. Soloist, Gina Bachauer.

Aug. 13 — Colin Davis conducting "Eroica" Symphony by Beethoven; "Te Deum" by Berloiz. Soloist, Richard Lewis with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Aug. 18 — Seiji Ozawa conducting a Mozart Symphony (tba), Piano Concerto No. 1 by Chopin and "Miraculous Mandarin" by Bartok. Soloist, Alexis Weissenberg.

Aug. 19 — Michael Tilson Thomas conducting works by Bach, Mozart, Ravel and Brahms. Soloist, Misha Dichter.

Aug. 20 — Seiji Ozawa conducting Symphony No. 8 by Mahler. St. Paul's School Choir and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Performances are Fridays at 9 p.m. Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Ticket price range: $3.50 to 8:50. Festival Ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

COURANT
HARTFORD, CONN.
S. 199,160

JUN 11 1972 New England Newsclip

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

ENTERPRISE
LEOMINSTER, MASS.
D. 5,003

JUN 12 1972 New England

HERALD NEWS
FALL RIVER, MASS.
D. 41,749

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
MILFORD, MASS.
D. 11,172

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

UNION LEADER
MANCHESTER, N. H.
D. 21,008

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 8 1972 New England Newsclip

STANDARD TIMES
NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
D. 72,971

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
MELROSE, MASS.
D. 2,800

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

MERCURY
MEDFORD, MASS.
D. 045

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

New England News Briefs

TANGLEWOOD

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

EAGLE
CLAREMONT, N. H.
D. 6,735

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

EXPRESS
PORTLAND, MAINE.
D. 29,772

JUN 7 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Concerts

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin its annual Tanglewood summer concerts June 30 with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa with concerts at 9 Friday night, Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m.

THE BOSTON HERALD
Traveler
D. 210,540 S. 260,961

JUN 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Many Music Festivals In N.E. This Summer

By HARRY NEVILLE

For many people summer music in New England means Tanglewood, and Tanglewood certainly holds the promise of an unusually exciting season this year, as we noted in a recent Sunday column.

There will, however, be a great many other area events of interest to the music lovers. Details are not yet complete for all such festivals, but here are a few items on which we have rather full information.

Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H., has scheduled 17 events to be held July 18 through Aug. 28 in Hopkins Center. These include concerts by the Vermeer Quartet, New York Pro Musica, pianists Joshua Rifkin, Alfred Brendel and Gabriel Chodos, Hungarian Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio and Guarneri Quartet. Reservations and information may be obtained by calling 603-646-2422.

THE BAR HARBOR Festival (Bar Harbor, Me.) will be held this year July 8 through Aug. 19. The programs will include opera, ballet, chamber music, solo recitals and other events. Details of this festival are available from: Bar Harbor Festival, 516 Fifth Ave., New York 10036.

At Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me., there will be a total of 13 summer concerts: starting July 2, a series of seven evening concerts by students of the summer music school, most of them on Sunday evenings.

And starting July 6, a series of six consecutive Thursday evening chamber music concerts, five of them by the resident Aeolian Chamber Players and one by the Bay Festival String Quartet. Details may be obtained from Bowdoin's press department.

The Federated Church in Charlemont, Mass., will begin its third season of Saturday evening chamber music performances beginning July 22 at 8:30 p.m.

Marion McPartland, noted jazz pianist, will be one of the featured performers at the concerts, which will continue on Saturdays for six weeks. Information is available by calling 413-625-2566.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Friends of Tanglewood Plan Picnic, Dance

A series of events planned by the Friends of Music at Tanglewood will highlight the eight-week season of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The Friends are sponsoring a group of "Tanglewood Walks and Talks" throughout the summer. The series will be a bring-your-own-picnic luncheon in the Tanglewood tent with a speaker, followed by a tour of the grounds with a member of the orchestra's staff. The walks and talks are free to Friends and will begin at 1 p.m. Speakers planned are soprano Phyllis Curtin on July 6; Harry Ellis Dickson, a member of the orchestra's first violin section and assistant conductor of the Boston Pops and Esplanade orchestras, on Aug. 3; Michael Tilson Thomas, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's associate conductor and principal guest conductor, on Aug. 17.

The organization is also planning a benefit dinner-dance for the Boston Symphony on June 24 on the stage of the Tanglewood Music Shed. The Ruby Newman orchestra will play from 7 to 1 a.m.

Dwight Speaker

The official opening of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer academy for the advanced study of music, will be Sunday, June 25, at 2:30 p.m. Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deliver the convocation address with music being provided by members of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players. The public is invited to the opening exercises and to the reception that follows in the formal gardens.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual day-long series of concerts by Berkshire Music Center students, will be Aug. 15. Thomas will conduct the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras for the evening concert. The Friends' office at Tanglewood will open Monday for regular business hours. During the season, the office will be open seven days a week.

The Berkshire Festival ticket office will also open Monday.

REGISTER
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
S. 137,000

JUN 11 1972 New England Newsclip

MASSACHUSETTS

Lenox

Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood

Fridays at 7 and 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. from June 30th to Aug. 20. Also, open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m. on Saturdays.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, Boston Symphony Chamber Players and various conductors and soloists including Ozawa, Tilson Thomas, Davis, Ormandy, Steinberg, Browning, Weissenberg and Bachauer.

Arthur Fiedler, and Boston Pops at Tanglewood, Tuesday, Aug. 1.

Write: Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240. Phone: (413) 637-1600.

Northeastern NEWS, June 2, 1972

the sound of the furies

The hills are alive with the BSO

The reasons why

By JEANNE RYDER

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is one of the few in the country which recognizes the need of its musicians to continue to make money after the formal subscription series is over. Early in this century, the BSO instituted the "Pops" to provide some of its musicians with an additional eight weeks of performance and income. However, from June to late September, the musicians were still essentially unemployed.

In 1934, the Boston Symphony was gifted with 210 acres of rolling lush farmland in the Berkshire Hills in western Massachusetts. Now, for eight weeks, from mid-July to mid-August, the Berkshire Festival gives the Boston Symphony members a chance, not only to be employed, but to present music in the atmosphere of the Shed, a bare steel girder structure with roof, stage, seats, and that's about all. The wide open feeling is extremely invigorating for music which simply can not expand and live in the closed environs of Symphony Hall.

There is no question that the open serenity, the lush beauty of the countryside, and the less formal atmosphere than that in Symphony Hall, make Tanglewood concerts an enjoyable excursion. A brief escape from the heat and noise of Boston is made even more enjoyable by the excellent music of the Boston Symphony. And there is plenty of that good music scheduled for this season.

Tanglewood: Promises of idyllic weekend

When the symphony comes to town it is impossible to get hotel accomodations in the immediate area surrounding Tanglewood unless you've planned a year in advance. There is, however, a Tourist Information center in the town of Lenox, near Tanglewood. At this booth it is possible to arrange to stay in a private home in the Lenox area, as many local residents open their houses to Tanglewood patrons. It is also possible to stay in one of the hotels or motels on the Mass. Turnpike not far from Tanglewood. Westfield, Auburn, Worcester, Springfield, all have decent places to stay and usually will have spaces open until a few days before any particular concert. The AAA can provide more information.

Tickets to Tanglewood concerts range from $8 in the center front of the Shed, down to $3 for admittance to the lawn (where, as at Esplanade concerts, one may eat and drink a picnic meal while the music plays. Of course the view of the stage is about the same as at the Esplanade — very limited).

On Friday nights at 7 there are "Weekend Prelude" concerts which are free toall who pay admission to the grounds ($3). These concerts feature smaller ensembles and more intimate chamber music, as well as other unusual pieces. The Preludes last about an hour, with the formal Symphony concerts beginning at nine.

On Saturdays the concerts begin at 8:30, since people have all afternoon to travel to Lenox. On Sundays the music begins at 2:30, leaving both ends of the afternoon free for sight-seeing, picnicking, or just enjoying the country.

The grounds at Tanglewood are expansive and well-groomed. There is a cafeteria on the grounds, and a store which sells music and scores, aside from the usual souvenir items. In short, depending on personal preference, one can either spend a week's pay on room, food, and memorabilia; or one can "rough it" with a blanket, picnic basket, and just enough money to get in the door. But a soft summer evening spent in the sumptuous beauty of the Berkshires is well worth whatever it costs. And if this idyll can be accompanied by great music performed by the Boston Symphony, isn't it worth experiencing just once? Go to Symphony Hall, pick up a Tanglewood brochure, and convince yourself that it is.

All-Bach program leads weekend

The first weekend, June 30-July 2, will begin with an all-Bach program and end with a performance of Haydn's immense work The Seasons, both programs under the direction of the BSO's new Music Advisor, Seiji Ozawa.

Friday, July 7 will feature an all-Mozart program with the entire following weekend being devoted to Beethoven. Last year's Beethoven weekend drew the largest crowds in the thirty-seven year history of Tanglewood.

This year's Beethoven weekend will begin with Friday's performance, conducted by William Steinberg, of Symphonies No. 5 and No. 6. Saturday's concert will be the main attraction with Mr. Steinberg conducting Symphonies No. 1 and No. 9 (The Choral). Some of the music of Beethoven which is less often performed will be featured on Sunday, when Seiji Ozawa conducts the Triple Concerto, Symphony No. 4, and the Choral Fantasy. Undoubtedly all three concerts will draw large crowds of Beethoven devotees, as well as those who wish to see Mr. Steinberg once more before he retires as Music Director of the BSO.

Saturday, July 22 will feature Leonard Bernstein conducting two symphonies of Brahms. Eugene Ormandy will conduct on July 28 and 29 and on July 30, James Levine, of the New York Metropolitan Opera, will conduct a Mozart violin concerto and Mahler's Sixth Symphony. Colin Davis, one of next year's two "Principal Guest Conductors" for the BSO, will conduct each of the three concerts the weekend of Aug. 11-13.

The final weekend, Aug 18-20 will feature Seiji Ozawa on Friday and Sunday; and Michael Tilson Thomas on Saturday. On Friday, Ozawa will include in his program Chopin's First Piano Concerto and the enticingly exotic Miraculous Mandarin of Bartok.

On Saturday night, Thomas will conduct Mozart's Paris Symphony, Messiaen's Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum, and the Brahms Second Piano concerto. What a program this promises to be! The Classical restraint and pure forms of Mozart, set off by the volume, ferocity, and jagged awesomeness of the Messiaen piece. And serving as the dessert, the most difficult, most gargantuan of piano concertos.

Finally the season will come to the largest close available with the performance of a single work on Sunday, Aug. 20, under the direction of Seiji Ozawa. Mahler's Symphony No. 8 has been dubbed the 'Symphony of a Thousand'' because that's how many performers are seemingly required, including an extremely expanded orchestra, a double chorus, eight soloists, and a boy's choir. This should prove quite a colossal finish to the 1972 Berkshire Festival.

1972 Tanglewood Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL JUNE 30-AUGUST 20

Artistic Directors
SEIJI OZAWA Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director
THOMAS D. PERRY, JR., MANAGER

WEEKEND	FRIDAYS AT 9:00 PM	SATURDAYS AT 8:30 PM	SUNDAYS AT 2:30 PM
1	JUNE 30 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm BACH PROGRAM Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 Suite No. 2 Cantata No. 191 Tanglewood Festival Chorus	JULY 1 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI 8:30 pm Bach: Suite No. 3 Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1 in C major Claude Frank Mozart: Symphony No. 39 in E flat	JULY 2 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: The Seasons Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director
2	JULY 7 Weekend Prelude 7 pm piano music of Mozart SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm MOZART PROGRAM Concerto for flute and harp Donat, Anthony Duryer, Ann Hobson Bassoon Concerto Sherman Walt Haffner Serenade Joseph Silverstein	JULY 8 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am BRUNO MADERNA 8:30 pm A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia" Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road # 1 and # 3 Unanswered Question Over the Pavements Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony	JULY 9 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: Symphony No. 47 Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye"
3	JULY 14 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Peter Serkin Boston Symphony Chamber Players WILLIAM STEINBERG 9 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 6 Symphony No. 5	JULY 15 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am WILLIAM STEINBERG 8:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 1 Symphony No. 9 Jo Ann Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director	JULY 16 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Triple Concerto Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin Symphony No. 4 Choral Fantasy Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus
4	JULY 21 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Earl Wild BRUNO MADERNA 9 pm Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1	JULY 22 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am LEONARD BERNSTEIN 8:30 pm BRAHMS PROGRAM Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2	JULY 23 KAREL ANCERL 2:30 pm Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7 Sonata a 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia de Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8
5	JULY 28 Weekend Prelude 7 pm to be announced EUGENE ORMANDY 9 pm Brahms: Tragic Overture Sibelius: Symphony No. 5 Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra	JULY 29 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am EUGENE ORMANDY 8:30 pm Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3 Hindemith: Mathis der Maler Strauss: Ein Heldenleben	JULY 30 JAMES LEVINE 2:30 pm Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major Joseph Silverstein Mahler: Symphony No. 6
6	AUGUST 4 FROMM SPECIAL CONCERT Weekend Prelude 7 pm Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 9 pm Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin Wuorinen: Violin Concerto Paul Zukofsky Stravinsky: Rite of Spring	AUGUST 5 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am ALDO CECCATO 8:30 pm Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1 Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3 John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony	AUGUST 6 MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 2:30 pm Haydn: Ohne Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 8
7	AUGUST 11 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Gino Bachauer COLIN DAVIS 9 pm Wagner: Wesendonck Songs Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" Jessye Norman Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces Tanglewood Festival Chorus	AUGUST 12 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am COLIN DAVIS 8:30 pm Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges" Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4 Gino Bachauer Brahms: Symphony No. 3	AUGUST 13 COLIN DAVIS 2:30 pm Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" Berlioz: Te Deum Richard Lewis, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director
8	AUGUST 18 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Boston Symphony Chamber Players Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin	AUGUST 19 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 8:30 pm Mozart: Paris Symphony Messiaen: Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter	AUGUST 20 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Chilcoat, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Severin Ispahier, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director

---

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539

JUN 2 1972

New England Newsclip

Kaleidoscope

By DAVID D. OSWELL

TANGLEWOOD concerts by the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox begin late this month.

The season's first concert with Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program begins at 9 p.m. June 30.

A brochure of the season's events is now available. Copies may be obtained by writing or telephoning Symphony Hall in Boston.

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y.
PRESS-REPUBLICAN
D. 15,000

JUN 2 1972

Berkshire Festival June 30-Aug. 20 hosts Boston Symphony Orchestra

#6

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place June 30 to Aug. 20 in Tanglewood.

Festival concerts are held each Friday, Saturday and Sunday. On Fridays, a "weekend prelude" concert starts at 7 p.m., followed by the orchestra concert at 9 p.m.

Saturdays, there are open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m. and orchestra programs at 8:30 p.m. Sunday afternoons, orchestra concerts begin at 2:30 p.m.

The schedule of concerts from June 30 to July 30 follows:

June 30: Weekend prelude featuring the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, 7 p.m. At 9 p.m., the orchestra, conducted by Seji Ozawa, will perform works by Bach.

July 1: Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts the orchestra in Bach Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 in C major, and Mozart Symphony No. 39 in E flat, 8:30 p.m.

July 2: Seji Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons," 2:30 p.m.

July 7: Weekend prelude, piano music of Mozart, 7 p.m. Orchestra, conducted by Ozawa, 9 p.m. in a Mozart program.

July 8: Bruno Maderna conducts A. Gabriel and Maderna's "LaBattaglia," and works by Earle Brown, Ives and Mozart, 8:30.

July 9: Ozawa condusts Hayden's Symphony No. 47 and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3, 2:30 p.m.

July 14: Weekend prelude, Peter Serking and Boston Symphony Chamber Players, 7 p.m. William Steinberg conducts the orchestra, 9 p.m. in Beethoven program, Symphonies No. 5 and 6.

July 15: Steinberg conducts Beethoven program, Symphony No. 1 and No. 9, 8:30 p.m.

July 16: Third in the series of Beethoven programs, Seji Ozawa, conductor, "Triple Concerto," Symphony No. 4, and "Choral Fantasy," 2:30 p.m.

July 21: Prelude, 7 p.m. Orchestra concert, 9 p.m. with Bruno Maderna conducting Gabrieli-Maderna "Motet" and Stravinsky Concerto for Piano and Winds, and Brahms Symphony No. 1.

July 22: Leonard Bernstein conducts the orchestra, 8:30 p.m. in Brahms program.

July 23: Karel Ancerl conducts orchestra, Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis," Vejvanovsky sonatas, Shumann Piano Concerto, and Dvorak Symphony No. 8.

July 28: Eugene Ormandy conducts the orchestra, 9 p.m. in Brahms "Tragic Overture," Sibelius Symphony No. 5 and Bartok Concerto for Orchestra.

July 29: Ormandy conducts Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3, Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Strauss "Ein Heldenleben," 8:30 p.m.

July 30: James Levine conductor, 2:30 p.m., Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, and Mahler Symphony No. 6.

Northeastern NEWS, June 2, 1972

the sound of the turles

The hills are alive with the BSO

The reasons why

By JEANNE RYDER

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is one of the few in the country which recognizes the need of its musicians to continue to make money after the formal subscription series is over. Early in this century, the BSO instituted the "Pops" to provide some of its musicians with an additional eight weeks of performance and income. However, from June to late September, the musicians were still essentially unemployed.

In 1934, the Boston Symphony was gifted with 210 acres of rolling lush farmland in the Berkshire Hills in western Massachusetts. Now, for eight weeks, from mid-July to mid-August, the Berkshire Festival gives the Boston Symphony members a chance, not only to be employed, but to present music in the atmosphere of the Shed, a bare steel girder structure with roof, stage, seats, and that's about all. The wide open feeling is extremely invigorating for music which simply can not expand and live in the closed environs of Symphony Hall.

There is no question that the open serenity, the lush beauty of the countryside, and the less formal atmosphere than that in Symphony Hall, make Tanglewood concerts an enjoyable excursion. A brief escape from the heat and noise of Boston is made even more enjoyable by the excellent music of the Boston Symphony. And there is plenty of that good music scheduled for this season.

Tanglewood: Promises of idyllic weekend

When the symphony comes to town it is impossible to get hotel accomodations in the immediate area surrounding Tanglewood unless you've planned a year in advance. There is, however, a Tourist Information center in the town of Lenox, near Tanglewood. At this booth it is possible to arrange to stay in a private home in the Lenox area, as many local residents open their houses to Tanglewood patrons. It is also possible to stay in one of the hotels or motels on the Mass. Turnpike not far from Tanglewood. Westfield, Auburn, Worcester, Springfield, all have decent places to stay and usually will have spaces open until a few days before any particular concert. The AAA can provide more information.

Tickets to Tanglewood concerts range from $8 in the center front of the Shed, down to $3 for admittance to the lawn (where, as at Esplanade concerts, one may eat and drink a picnic meal while the music plays. Of course the view of the stage is about the same as at the Esplanade — very limited).

On Friday nights at 7 there are "Weekend Prelude" concerts which are free toall who pay admission to the grounds ($3). These concerts feature smaller ensembles and more intimate chamber music, as well as other unusual pieces. The Preludes last about an hour, with the formal Symphony concerts beginning at nine.

On Saturdays the concerts begin at 8:30, since people have all afternoon to travel to Lenox. On Sundays the music begins at 2:30, leaving both ends of the afternoon free for sight-seeing, picnicking, or just enjoying the country.

The grounds at Tanglewood are expansive and well-groomed. There is a cafeteria on the grounds, and a store which sells music and scores, aside from the usual souvenir items. In short, depending on personal preference, one can either spend a week's pay on room, food, and memorabilia; or one can "rough it" with a blanket, picnic basket, and just enough money to get in the door. But a soft summer evening spent in the sumptuous beauty of the Berkshires is well worth whatever it costs. And if this idyll can be accompanied by great music performed by the Boston Symphony, isn't it worth experiencing just once? Go to Symphony Hall, pick up a Tanglewood brochure, and convince yourself that it is.

All-Bach program leads weekend

The first weekend, June 30-July 2, will begin with an all-Bach program and end with a performance of Haydn's immense work The Seasons, both programs under the direction of the BSO's new Music Advisor, Seiji Ozawa.

Friday, July 7 will feature an all-Mozart program with the entire following weekend being devoted to Beethoven. Last year's Beethoven weekend drew the largest crowds in the thirty-seven year history of Tanglewood.

This year's Beethoven weekend will begin with Friday's performance, conducted by William Steinberg, of Symphonies No. 5 and No. 6. Saturday's concert will be the main attraction with Mr. Steinberg conducting Symphonies No. 1 and No. 9 (The Choral). Some of the music of Beethoven which is less often performed will be featured on Sunday, when Seiji Ozawa conducts the Triple Concerto, Symphony No. 4, and the Choral Fantasy. Undoubtedly all three concerts will draw large crowds of Beethoven devotees, as well as those who wish to see Mr. Steinberg once more before he retires as Music Director of the BSO.

Saturday, July 22 will feature Leonard Bernstein conducting two symphonies of Brahms. Eugene Ormandy will conduct on July 28 and 29 and on July 30, James Levine, of the New York Metropolitan Opera, will conduct a Mozart violin concerto and Mahler's Sixth Symphony. Colin Davis, one of next year's two "Principal Guest Conductors" for the BSO, will conduct each of the three concerts the weekend of Aug. 11-13.

The final weekend, Aug 18-20 will feature Seiji Ozawa on Friday and Sunday; and Michael Tilson Thomas on Saturday. On Friday, Ozawa will include in his program Chopin's First Piano Concerto and the enticingly exotic Miraculous Mandarin of Bartok.

On Saturday night, Thomas will conduct Mozart's Paris Symphony, Messiaen's Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum, and the Brahms Second Piano concerto. What a program this promises to be! The Classical restraint and pure forms of Mozart, set off by the volume, ferocity, and jagged awesomeness of the Messiaen piece. And serving as the dessert, the most difficult, most gargantuan of piano concertos.

Finally the season will come to the largest close available with the performance of a single work on Sunday, Aug. 20, under the direction of Seiji Ozawa. Mahler's Symphony No. 8 has been dubbed the 'Symphony of a Thousand'' because that's how many performers are seemingly required, including an extremely expanded orchestra, a double chorus, eight soloists, and a boy's choir. This should prove quite a colossal finish to the 1972 Berkshire Festival.

1972 Tanglewood Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL JUNE 30-AUGUST 20

Artistic Directors
SEIJI OZAWA Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director
THOMAS D. PERRY, JR., MANAGER

WEEKEND	FRIDAYS AT 9:00 PM	SATURDAYS AT 8:30 PM	SUNDAYS AT 2:30 PM
1	JUNE 30 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm BACH PROGRAM Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 Suite No. 2 Cantata No. 101 Tanglewood Festival Chorus	JULY 1 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI 8:30 pm Bach: Suite No. 3 Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1 in C major Claude Frank Mozart: Symphony No. 39 in E flat	JULY 2 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: The Seasons Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director
2	JULY 7 Weekend Prelude 7 pm piano music of Mozart SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm MOZART PROGRAM Concerto for flute and harp Donat Anthony Duver, Ann Hobson Bassoon Concerto Sherman Walt Haffner Serenade Joseph Silverstein	JULY 8 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am BRUNO MADERNA 8:30 pm A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia" Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road #1 and #3 Unanswered Question Over the Pavements Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony	JULY 9 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: Symphony No. 47 Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye"
3	JULY 14 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Peter Serkin Boston Symphony Chamber Players WILLIAM STEINBERG 9 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 6 Symphony No. 5	JULY 15 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am WILLIAM STEINBERG 8:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 1 Symphony No. 9 Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director	JULY 16 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Triple Concerto Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin Symphony No. 4 Choral Fantasy Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus
4	JULY 21 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Earl Wild BRUNO MADERNA 9 pm Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1	JULY 22 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am LEONARD BERNSTEIN 8:30 pm BRAHMS PROGRAM Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2	JULY 23 KAREL ANCERL 2:30 pm Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7 Sonata a 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia de Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8
5	JULY 28 Weekend Prelude 7 pm to be announced EUGENE ORMANDY 9 pm Brahms: Tragic Overture Sibelius: Symphony No. 5 Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra	JULY 29 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am EUGENE ORMANDY 8:30 pm Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3 Hindemith: Mathis der Maler Strauss: Ein Heldenleben	JULY 30 JAMES LEVINE 2:30 pm Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major Joseph Silverstein Mahler: Symphony No. 6
6	AUGUST 4 FROMM SPECIAL CONCERT Weekend Prelude 7 pm Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 9 pm Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin Wuorinen: Violin Concerto Paul Zukofsky Stravinsky: Rite of Spring	AUGUST 5 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am ALDO CECCATO 8:30 pm Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1 Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3 John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony	AUGUST 6 MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 2:30 pm Haydn: Oboe Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 8
7	AUGUST 11 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Gina Bachauer COLIN DAVIS 9 pm Wagner: Wesendonck Songs Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" Jessye Norman Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces Tanglewood Festival Chorus	AUGUST 12 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am COLIN DAVIS 8:30 pm Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges" Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4 Gina Bachauer Brahms: Symphony No. 3	AUGUST 13 COLIN DAVIS 2:30 pm Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" Berlioz: Te Deum Richard Lewis, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director
8	AUGUST 18 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Boston Symphony Chamber Players Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin	AUGUST 19 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 8:30 pm Mozart: Paris Symphony Messiaen: Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter	AUGUST 20 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Chilener, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Severne Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539

JUN 2 1972

New England Newsclip

Kaleidoscope

By DAVID D. OSWELL

TANGLEWOOD concerts by the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox begin late this month.

The season's first concert with Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program begins at 9 p.m. June 30.

A brochure of the season's events is now available. Copies may be obtained by writing or telephoning Symphony Hall in Boston.

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y.
PRESS-REPUBLICAN
D. 15,000

JUN 2 1972

Berkshire Festival June 30-Aug. 20 hosts Boston Symphony Orchestra

#L

LENOX, Mass. — The Berkshire Festival, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will take place June 30 to Aug. 20 in Tanglewood.

Festival concerts are held each Friday, Saturday and Sunday. On Fridays, a "weekend prelude" concert starts at 7 p.m., followed by the orchestra concert at 9 p.m.

Saturdays, there are open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m. and orchestra programs at 8:30 p.m. Sunday afternoons, orchestra concerts begin at 2:30 p.m.

The schedule of concerts from June 30 to July 30 follows:

June 30: Weekend prelude featuring the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, 7 p.m. At 9 p.m., the orchestra, conducted by Seji Ozawa, will perform works by Bach.

July 1: Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts the orchestra in Bach Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 in C major, and Mozart Symphony No. 39 in E flat, 8:30 p.m.

July 2: Seji Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons," 2:30 p.m.

July 7: Weekend prelude, piano music of Mozart, 7 p.m. Orchestra, conducted by Ozawa, 9 p.m. in a Mozart program.

July 8: Bruno Maderna conducts A. Gabriel and Maderna's "LaBattaglia," and works by Earle Brown, Ives and Mozart, 8:30.

July 9: Ozawa condusts Hayden's Symphony No. 47 and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3, 2:30 p.m.

July 14: Weekend prelude, Peter Serking and Boston Symphony Chamber Players, 7 p.m. William Steinberg conducts the orchestra, 9 p.m. in Beethoven program, Symphonies No. 5 and 6.

July 15: Steinberg conducts Beethoven program, Symphony No. 1 and No. 9, 8:30 p.m.

July 16: Third in the series of Beethoven programs, Seji Ozawa, conductor, "Triple Concerto," Symphony No. 4, and "Choral Fantasy," 2:30 p.m.

July 21: Prelude, 7 p.m. Orchestra concert, 9 p.m. with Bruno Maderna conducting Gabrieli-Maderna "Motet" and Stravinsky Concerto for Piano and Winds, and Brahms Symphony No. 1.

July 22: Leonard Bernstein conducts the orchestra, 8:30 p.m. in Brahms program.

July 23: Karel Ancerl conducts orchestra, Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis," Vejvanovsky sonatas, Shumann Piano Concerto, and Dvorak Symphony No. 8.

July 28: Eugene Ormandy conducts the orchestra, 9 p.m. in Brahms "Tragic Overture," Sibelius Symphony No. 5 and Bartok Concerto for Orchestra.

July 29: Ormandy conducts Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3, Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Strauss "Ein Heldenleben," 8:30 p.m.

July 30: James Levine conductor, 2:30 p.m., Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, and Mahler Symphony No. 6.

18

Editorials

Sweet Summer

The winter was long, the spring (if one should wish to dignify it by calling it spring) has been wet, and now summer is just around the corner. Heaven knows, we Metrolanders are deserving of a salubrious one, a summer of blue skies, balmy temperatures, beneficient breezes and silken evenings.

Maybe the gods will be good . . .

We Metrolanders are blessed with so many things to do in summer. Lakes and hills and mountains are nearby. The horses run or trot or pace in Saratoga and at Green Mountain. Stock cars go even faster (but noisier) at several tracks. The wet spring, about which we complain, should keep golf courses green forever.

The summer theaters, including a new undertaking at State University in Albany and the even more impressive appearance of the Juilliard Acting Company at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, have enticing fare prepared.

At Tanglewood, in the Berkshires, the Boston Symphony soon will be tuning up for summer. Jacobs Pillow, also in the Berkshires (but sadly missing its late impresario the memorable Ted Shawn) will be presenting dance from around the world.

Come July, the ballerinas of the New York City Ballet will sparkle like fireflies most evenings in the lovely amphitheater of the Saratoga Performing Arts Center. A special Stravinsky festival is on their program. Come August, the Philadelphia Orchestra will be music to the ears of thousands. And already the one-night stands of the highly popular entertainers are under way in that amphitheater.

Everywhere one looks there is something to do, something to enjoy.

So have fun . . . and do what you would to propitiate the gods of the weather.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUN 10 1972

Rare Works to Be Performed

LENOX — The 1972 Music Theater Project at Tanglewood will present a world premiere and two rarely performed works in its second season as part of the training program of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer academy for young musicians.

Under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, newly appointed General Director of the Opera Society of Washington, D.C. the Music Theater Project has assembled ten of America's outstanding young operatic performers, both young professionals and advanced students, to explore the large, but little-known repertory of music theater.

The activity is supported in part by grants from the National Opera Institute, and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music.

On August 2, 3 and 6, a double bill will feature the world premiere of "Chocorua" by Robert Selig, and "The Yes Man" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill.

"Chocorua," a commission for the Berkshire Music Center's annual Festival of Contemporary Music, is based on a scenario by Leo Bonfanti with text by Boston poet Richard Moore.

"The Yes Man," a translation by J.M. Potts of the 1930 Brech-Weill Lehrstuck (or "instructional piece") "Der Jasager," will be presented in conjunction with the Boston University Choral Institute at the Berkshire Music Center.

The final presentation of the season will be a controversial production of Monteverdi's masterpiece "The Coronation of Poppea" on August 13, 14 and 16.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 14 1972

New England Newsclip

SOUTH MIDDLESEX DAILY NEWS
FRAMINGHAM, MA.
D. 24,000

JUN 11 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood—one home for summer musicfests

RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 410,003

JUN 14 1972

New England Newsclip

SHOPPERS NEWS
CONCORD, N. H.
W. 21,800

JUN 14 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Lists Season Schedule

The 1972 schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to be held at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. is now available in a brochure which can be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, Mass., Symphony Hall in Boston or the Tanglewood box office in Lenox.

The 1972 season opens Friday, June 30 at 9 p.m. with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa, Regularly scheduled concerts are Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Open rehearsals are Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. Special dates are Tuesday, Aug. 1 when Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops and Aug. 15 when the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra combines to present an evening concert.

Tanglewood, 1972, to open June 25

LENOX, Mass. — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday, June 25, with the 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight who will talk on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises.

Thompson's "Alleluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940. Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 Friday June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 with Boston Symphony Principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists.

Next follows a performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord. Following intermission, Ozawa conducts performances of the Suite No. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata No. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor: and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

The weekend prelude, Friday at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director, in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: "Lobet den Herrn," "alle Heiden," "Komm, Jesu, Komm," and "Jesu, meine Freude."

The summer's first Saturday morning open rehearsal takes place Saturday, July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert.

Open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10:30 and benefit the orchestra's pension fund. They offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each and are available the morning of the rehearsal.

Saturday, July 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert that includes Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E-flat.

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

JUN 20 1972

New England Newsclip

Rose Walsh

Music Will Waft Through the Air

There is always music in the air at Tanglewood — the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Lenox — but there will be more this year in connection with the many social activities planned by the Friends of Music at Tanglewood. Curtis Butterheim of Stockbridge and Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris of Lenox and Washington, D. C. are co-chairmen.

Grand opening event on Saturday, June 24, will be a gala benefit dinner dance ($60 per couple) on the stage of Tanglewood's Music Shed. Beginning at 7 p. m. Friends will dine and dance through the evening to the music of Ruby Newman's Orchestra. Proceeds of the party, chaired by Mrs. Butterheim, will benefit the BSO and its program at Tanglewood.

Boston Symphony Chamber Players are providing the music for the official opening of the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer academy for advanced study, on Sunday afternoon, June 25, at 2:30. Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deliver the principal address.

The public is cordially invited to these opening exercises in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and to the subsequent reception in the Formal Gardens.

"Tanglewood Walks and Talks," a new series, has its premiere on July 6 of informal bring-your-own picnic luncheons in the Tanglewood Tent at 1 p. m. The talks, given by members of the orchestra's staff, will be followed by a tour of the grounds.

Soprano Phyllis Curtin opens the series, free to Tanglewood Friends. Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein is scheduled for July 20; Harry Ellis Dickson, a BSO first violinist and assistant conductor of the Boston Pops and Esplanade Orchestras, will be the speaker on Aug. 3; and Michael Tilson Thomas, the BSO's associate conductor and principal guest conductor for the 1972-73 concert season in Boston, is to be guest speaker on Aug. 17.

The Friends office at Tanglewood opened Monday and will continue to have regular business hours until the opening of the Berkshire Festival when it will remain open seven days a week thoroughout the concert season.

★

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539

JUN 16 1972

New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD'S Berkshire Festival Concerts begin June 30 for an eight-week series of the finest of music.

Space prohibits a complete listing of the 24 evenings of music which will be presented through Aug. 20, but the Sunday concerts are especially noteworthy.

The first, July 2, conducted by Seiji Ozawa, is Haydn's "The Seasons. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will be prepared by John Oliver, director.

On July 9, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's Symphony No. 47 and the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3. Soloist will be Garrick Ohlsson.

Beethoven's Triple Concerto, Symphony No. 4 and the Choral Fantasy, conducted again by Ozawa, are on the July 16 program. Solists that evening include Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin.

Karel Ancerl conducts July 23 and Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7 and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano Concerto and the Dvorak Symphony No. 8 will comprise the program. Soloist will be Alicia De Larrocha.

On July 30, James Levine conducts the Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4 with Joseph Silverstein, soloist. Mahler's Symphony No. 6 will also be heard.

Haydn's Oboe Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 5 will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas on Aug. 6. Ralph Gomberg is soloist.

The Aug. 13 concert will be conducted by Colin Davis. Beethoven's "Erocia," the Symphony No. 3, and Berlioz' Te Deum are on the program. Rchard Lewis is soloist.

The final Sunday concert will be conducted by Ozawa. Soloists are Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri. The St. Paul's School Boy Choir, directed by Theodore Marier, and the Tanglewood Festival Choir, directed by Oliver, will appear. The program is Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

Other concerts of particular interest include a Brahms program, conducted by Leonard Bernstein on July 22, a Beethoven program, conducted by William Steinberg on July 15, and the July 29 concert conducted by Eugene Ormandy.

Sunday concerts begin at 2:30 p.m. There are weekend preludes each Friday, beginning at 7 p.m., with concerts beginning at 9. The Saturday programs begin with open rehearsals at 10:30 a.m. and evening concerts starting at 8:30.

A complete list of programs, including ticket information, is available from the Festival Ticket Office, Lenox, or from Symphony Hall, Boston.

Tickets are available at all Ticketron Outlets.

SUMMER CONCERTS in Institute Park begin Sunday.

Harry Levenson will conduct the Worcester Orchestra in the series of three concerts that begin at 7:30 p.m.

Admission is free.

Sunday's program includes works by Mozart, Mendelssohn, Strauss and Massenet. Other selections include music from "Camelot," "Man of La Mancha," "Fiddler on the Roof" and "No, No, Nanette."

The concerts, including those on June 25 and July 2, are sponsored by The Heald Machine Co., Morgan Construction Co., Norton Co., The Paul Revere Life Insurance Co., Worcester County National Bank, State Mutual Life Assurance Company of America and Wyman-Gordon Co., all under the auspices of the Worcester County Music Association.

NYACK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-NEWS
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 29,000

JUN 18 1972

LOUISA KREISBERG

Summer festival as American as apple pie

It's an incredible feeling to be writing of things festive—what with the intensification of the Vietnam War threatening us as never before.

Words seem impotent when stacked against the realization that the whole earth could collapse at any moment, that some triggering could make ashes out of the habitations of men.

And yet, existential as it may seem, that's where I'm at this week. I had planned to write a column about summer festivals and I'm going to do just that . . . although it's like throwing sand against the wind to talk of dance and song when war is breeding.

You will pardon me please for still believing in human imagination even when our days on earth are shadowed. To quote Goethe: "One ought every day at least, to hear a little song, read a good poem, see a fine picture, and if it were possible, to speak a few reasonable words."

FESTIVALS. . .what is a festival? A festival is a lot more than people milling about in a midway atmosphere. It's a great occasion, a celebration, and America is teeming with them from North Dakota to New York, California to Connecticut.

Summer is a rich season for the arts, a time when outdoor performances are presented on the outstretched palm of warm weather. In recent years, a new arts festival "movement" has developed as an alternative to existing entertainment. Judging by the weight of the week's mail, the movement is quickening.

The movement is one that merges mass arts with more esoteric classics. Rock'n roll, jazz and folk music are billed alongside Beethoven and Brahms at such traditional festivals as Tanglewood. Happily, the union has worked well, for management claims the increased gate has decreased the deficit.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., founded in 1934, is the country's oldest major festival of music. During eight weekends each summer, the Boston Symphony gives concerts in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

This year the season opens June 30 with an all-Bach program and continues through Aug. 20. The Boston orchestra will give 24 weekend concerts as well as eight open rehearsals with Seiji Ozawa, Leonard Bernstein and Eugene Ormandy, among others, sharing the podium.

Also scheduled are the Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, a series of seven special concerts including four on the popular artists series.

TANGLEWOOD'S directors refuse to make public who the pop artists will be — for fear of crowd inundation — but in the past such performers as Richie Havens and Sly and the Family Stone have found their way to the 210-acre estate in the Berkshire Hills.

Also scheduled is the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Aug. 1, a special Festival of Contemporary Music Aug. 8 and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras Aug. 15.

The Saratoga Performing Arts Center at Saratoga Springs, will open its annual N.Y. City Ballet season July 5 with "The Nutcracker." The company will give a total of 28 performances presenting 41 ballets of which 21 will be new to Saratoga before the season closes July 29.

The Philadelphia Orchestra will take up its annual residency on Aug. 2 through Aug. 26, giving a total of 16 performances Wednesday through Saturday evenings with a student matinee Aug. 15.

AMONG the conductors sharing baton honors with Eugene Ormandy (who is scheduled for five concerts at Saratoga) will be Seiji Ozawa, Julius Rudel, Andre Kostelanetz, James Levine, and Fruhbeck de Burgos.

Saratoga does a big job with popular artists, and this year will be no exception. Perhaps the most flamboyant entertainer will be Liberace who returns to the center July 9 to make his only appearance in the area this summer.

Last summer's specials numbered 37 and the house record was set by "The Who" with 33,652 fans in attendance. In fact, popular arts events were responsible for the Center's setting a new attendance record in 1971. The three-month season, which ran from June 13 to Sept. 19, totaled 403,779, an increase of 19 per cent over 1970.

THE RAREST jewel, perhaps, in the necklace of summer festivals is Caramoor in Katonah.

Caramoor opens its 27th season June 17 with an all-Mozart program conducted by Julius Rudel, the festival's music director since 1964.

Monteverdi's "Coronation of Poppea," Benjamin Britten's "Prodigal Son," Donizetti's "Requiem for Bellini" and a concert performance of Handel's "Acis and Galatea" will highlight the season.

The August Sunday afternoon concert series inaugurated last summer will continue this year with Gina Bachauer, pianist, Aug. 6, the Guarneri String Quartet, Aug. 13, Rosalyn Tureck in an all-Bach program Aug. 20 and Canadian contralto Maureen Forrester, Aug. 27.

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D. 195,032

JUN 21 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens Sunday

The 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

The principal address by Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deal with government and the arts. It will be followed by Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" sung by over 400 students at the Center. The "Alleluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

After the program there will be a reception in the formal gardens to which the public is invited.

Tanglewood Friends Plan Many Events This Season

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION
AMUSEMENTS
34 Springfield, Mass., Thursday, June 15, 1972

LENOX — During the summer of 1972 the Friends of Music at Tanglewood have planned many new events during the eight week Berkshire Festival.

Co-chairmen of the Tanglewood Friends are Curtis Buttenheim of Stockbridge and Mrs. Stephen V. Morris of Lenox and Washington, D.C. The Friends' office at Tanglewood officially opened Monday and will remain open during regular business hours until the opening of the Berkshire Festival when the office will remain open seven days a week throughout the concert season.

The Friends' social activities begin June 24 with a gala benefit dinner dance on the stage of Tanglewood's Music Shed. From 7 p.m. until 1 a.m., Friends will dine and dance through the evening to the music of Ruby Newman's Orchestra. The dinner dance, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Curtis Buttenheim, is $60 per couple and is a benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its activities at Tanglewood.

The official opening of the Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer academy for the advanced study of music, takes place Sunday afternoon June 25 at 2.30 p.m.

Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deliver the principal address, to be followed by music performed by members of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players. The public is cordially invited to these Opening Exercises in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and to the reception in the Formal Gardens which follows the ceremonies, a spokesman said.

July 6 will be the premiere of the new series of "Tanglewood Walks and Talks" — informal bring-your-own picnic luncheons in the Tanglewood Tent at 1 p.m. with a guest speaker, followed by a tour of the Tanglewood grounds given by a member of the Orchestra's staff.

Soprano Phyllis Curtin will be the first guest speaker on July 6, followed by Boston Symphony Orchestra Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein on July 20, Harry Ellis Dickson, a member of the Orchestra's first violin section, and Assistant Conductor of the Boston Pops and Esplanade Orchestras on August 3 and Michael Tilson Thomas, the Orchestra's Associate Conductor and Principal Guest Conductor for the 1972-1973 concert season in Boston, on August 17. "Tanglewood Walks and Talks" are free to Tanglewood Friends.

Tanglewood - On - Parade, the annual day-long series of concerts by Berkshire Music Center students, takes place on the Tanglewood grounds Tuesday August 15.

Highlight of the day's activities is a concert that evening in the Shed by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras, Michael Tilson Thomas, conducting.

The Berkshire Festival Ticket Office opened at Tanglewood Monday morning The office will be open during regular business hours during the week and through concert intermissions during Berkshire Festival concerts.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 15 1972

New England Newsclip

TELEGRAPH
NASHUA, N. H.
D. 69,493

JUN 20 1972

New England Newsclip

Living '72

Tanglewood's Season Opens This Week-End

LENOX, Mass. — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday with the 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight who will talk on "Government and the Arts." Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises.

Public Invited

The public is invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berksire Festival concert of 1972 June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, in an all-Bach concert.

Rehearsal Series

The summer's first Saturday morning open rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30. Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert. Open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10:30 and benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund. They offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Offers Special Ticket Plan

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces a new ticket plans for Tanglewood, the "Grass Pass."

The "Grass Pass" admits the purchaser to the Tanglewood lawn for all 24 Berkshire Festival concerts at a price of only $24.

"Grass Passes" are now available at the Boston or Tanglewood Box Offices. They are good only for Berkshire Festival events, not for Tuesday "specials," Berkshire Music Center concerts, or Saturday morning Open Rehearsals. They are not convertible value for reserved tickets.

The Prelude concert at Tanglewood on Friday, July 28, is planned as a special salute to Berkshire artists, both past and present, creative and interpretive. Details will be announced shortly. The Orchestra will be conducted that evening at 9 p.m. by Eugene Ormandy, a resident of Monterey.

All Friday concerts include the one hour "prelude concert" at 7 p.m. in advance of the 9 p.m. Orchestra concert.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Budget ticket plans at Tanglewood

The Tanglewood box office is offering two new "budget" ticket plans for this season's concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The "grass pass" and the "Berkshire night coupon" will both allow admission at reduced rates.

$1 per concert

With the grass pass, the purchaser will be admitted to the Tanglewood lawn for all 24 Berkshire Festival concerts at a price of $24. This is exactly $1 per concert.

The passes are not convertible toward reserved tickets, nor may they be used for the special programs on Tuesdays, the Berkshire Music Center concerts or Saturday morning rehearsals. The passes are now available at the Tanglewood box office.

The Berkshire night coupons will entitle the holder to a $1 discount on Friday concerts. The coupon will be printed each week, beginning June 29, in the Thursday edition of The Berkshire Eagle. It will be in the shape and style of a dollar bill and should be presented at the box office with the balance of the ticket price.

No more than one coupon can be applied to the purchase of a single ticket, and the coupons are valid only for the Friday concert. The purchaser should sign his name and address on the coupon before presenting it.

The idea for the grass passes was suggested by Milton R. Bass, entertainment editor of The Eagle.

GLEN RIDGE, N. J.
PAPER
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUN 22 1972

Berkshire Festival Boston Symphony Orchestra Programs for 1972

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

All four of ths Brahms symphonies (1,5,6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

"COPPELIA" DATE CHANGED

The date of the "Coppelia" performance by the Montclair-North Essex Y.W.C.A. ballet students has been changed to Friday, June 23, at 8 p.m., in the Hillside Auditorium.

The first half of the evening— "Dimensions in Dance" — will show different types of dance movement including a ballet class barre, a western ballet, modern dance, interpretive dance, tap and a rock and roll dance, and be followed by the children's version of "Coppelia."

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUN 21 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens Sunday

The 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

The principal address by Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deal with government and the arts. It will be followed by Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" sung by over 400 students at the Center. The "Alleluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

After the program there will be a reception in the formal gardens to which the public is invited.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra presents its first Tanglewood concert June 30 at 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert including the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, the Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 with soloists Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy. The concert will be preceded by the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. during which the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will sing three Bach motets.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood season starts

Tanglewood's 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center are scheduled Sunday at 2:30 p.m. This is the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music, and the event takes place in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall.

State Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deliver the principal address, speaking on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by more than 400 students of the Music Center after the exercises. Following will be a reception in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens. The public is invited to the entire program.

Next Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m. the BSO gives its initial Berkshire Festival concert of the season in the Shed. Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert, starting with the Brandenberg concerto no. 2, and followed by Brandenberg concerto no. 5.

After intermission, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Suite No. 2, and concludes the evening with Cantata no. 191, with the Festival Chorus singing. The Weekend Prelude next Friday at 7 p.m. in the Shed, free to 9 p.m. concert ticket-holders, presents the Festival Chorus in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: "Lobet den herrn, alle Heiden," "Komm, Jesu, Komm," and "Jesu, meine Freude."

News Of Area Art Happenings

Work of students and teachers will be included in the annual student - member show at the Art Barn, Greenwich, opening Sunday from 4 to 6 p.m. and continuing through July 6. The new graphics studio will be open, teachers and members of the board of directors will be present and there will be an opportunity to register for classes beginning next weeek at Sunday's program. The barn is open to the public daily from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Darien Library.

On display through July 6 at the Darien Library is "The Four Faces of Watercolor," a display of flower paintings by Mrs. Laurie Kattelle, still lifes and portraits by Mrs. Julie S. Maddalene and landscapes by Mrs. Stafford Campbell.

Mrs. Kattelle at the age of 85 is currently fascinated by acrylics and working in that medium. She has done children's portraits and exhibited and sold widely. One of her paintings hangs in the Yonkers Art Museum. She is the mother of Alan Kattelle of Darien. Mrs. Maddalen, a former Darien resident, does water colors exclusively and has also shown in many exhibits. Mrs. Campbell's landscapes have been done on location or from sketches made while sailing. She has had many one-man shows in Connecticut, Westchester and Ontario.

Membership Exhibit.

Realistic works will be featured in the Connecticut Classic Arts annual Norwalk Green Membership Exhibit July 9 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Ribbon awards will be given in oils, watercolors, acrylics and graphics.

Connecticut artists over 18 may join and further information is available from George Haestner, 101 Maywood Rd., Darien or Robert F. Calrow, 29 Cricket Lane.

New York Cultural Center.

Shorter hours will be in effect at the New York Cultural Center, 2 Columbus Circle, New York, beginning Saturday. Tuesday through Sunday hours will be from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday the center will remain open until 9 p.m. Film screenings will be shown at 4 and 6 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.

Arts And Crafts.

In connection with the Darien Community Association's sixth antiques show and sale this weekend at Darien High School there will be an exhibit and sale of arts and crafts. Mrs. Walter R. Lownes and Mrs. Russell R. Voorhees are cochairmen of the show which opened at noon today and will continue Friday from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday until 6 p.m.

Budget Art.

Tomorrow and Saturday from 6 to 11 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Community Cooperative Nursery School, Old Trolley Way, Rowayton, there will be a showing and sale of Professional Art for the Budget Collector. New pictures will be hung daily and proceeds will benefit the scholarship fund.

Landscape Painting.

Jack Pellew of Norwalk, will instruct landscape painting in watercolor, oils or acrylics, starting July 10 at the Silvermine Guild School of the Arts in New Canaan, for three weeks Mondays from 9 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Each class will open with a brief demonstration and conclude with a critigue.

Registration for beginners or advanced students can be made by calling the school, 1037 Silvermine Rd., New Canaan.

Also available are day and night courses for children and adults in art, dance, crafts and photography.

Young Soloists Audition.

Musicians in Fairfield County under the age of 18, have been invited to participate in the third annual Norwalk Symphony Young Soloists Audition to be held in January. An early announcement is being made to give the young performers a chance to rehearse and prepare for audition the piece that he would like to perform with the orchestra at the March concert. Judges for the audition will be Dennis Russell Davies, music director of the orchestra, first chair players and a representative of the symphony board. Last year a pianist, flutist and clarinetist were selected as soloists.

Further information and applications are available from Mrs. George Castellion, Briar Brae Rd. and Mrs. Harold Glazer of Norwalk, cochairmen.

Tanglewood.

The 1972 Tanglewood season will open Sunday with opening excercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, and a reception. The first program by the orchestra will be June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert, opening with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2. At the 7 p.m. performance the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, will also present an all-Bach concert. Open rehearsals to benefit the orchestra's pension fund will be held Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. throughout the summer.

A call has been issued for area singers interested in participating in a festival of music at the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Sept. 24 at 4 p.m. The event will mark the 100th anniversary of the sanctuary and the program conducted by Bruce Angell will include "Hymn of the Immortals," David McK Williams and "Te Deum Laudamus," Anton Bruckner. Rehearsals will start July 5 at 8:15 p.m. in the church and continue on Wednesdays thereafter. Particiants are asked to attend four rehearsals prior to the final run-through Sept. 20.

Dance Festival.

The twenty-fifth Connecticut College American Dance Festival will open at 8 p.m. June 30 with the debut of a new professional repertory company dedicated to performing great classics of American modern dance. Friday's program will be repeated July 1 at 8 p.m. and July 2 at 2 p.m.

The opening weekend the company will perform Martha Graham's "El Penitente," Charles Weidman's "Flickers" and Doris Humphrey's "New Dance."

Tickest are available by writing to the Connecticut College American Dance Festival, Box 1546 New London.

LUMIA.

Moving paintings of light, music and imagery synthesized into a theatrical performance may be seen Saturdays at 8 p.m. at LUMIA, the Theatre of Light, Route 34 Sandy Hook, Conn., now open for its eighth season. Reservations are necessary since the theatre accommodates only 36 persons. Special performances for groups may be arranged on weekday evenings.

ADVOCATE
STAMFORD, CONN.
D. 32,000
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Boston Symphony Opens Concert Season June 30

The 1972 TAnglewood season opens Sunday, June 25 at 2:30 p.m. with the thirtieth annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre–Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight who will talk on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 Friday evening, June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all–Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2 with Boston Symphony Principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists. Next follows a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord. Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa conducts performances of the Suite No. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata no. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7 p.m. in the shed (free to ticket–holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director, in an all–Bach concert.

The Summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place Saturday morning, July 1, at 10:30 a.m.

-eggs---eggs-

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Offers Special Ticket Plan

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces a new ticket plans for Tanglewood, the "Grass Pass."

The "Grass Pass" admits the purchaser to the Tanglewood lawn for all 24 Berkshire Festival concerts at a price of only $24.

"Grass Passes" are now available at the Boston or Tanglewood Box Offices. They are good only for Berkshire Festival events, not for Tuesday "specials," Berkshire Music Center concerts, or Saturday morning Open Rehearsals. They are not convertible value for reserved tickets.

The Prelude concert at Tanglewood on Friday, July 28, is planned as a special salute to Berkshire artists, both past and present, creative and interpretive. Details will be announced shortly. The Orchestra will be conducted that evening at 9 p.m. by Eugene Ormandy, a resident of Monterey.

All Friday concerts include the one hour "prelude concert" at 7 p.m. in advance of the 9 p.m. Orchestra concert.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Budget ticket plans at Tanglewood

The Tanglewood box office is offering two new "budget" ticket plans for this season's concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The "grass pass" and the "Berkshire night coupon" will both allow admission at reduced rates.

$1 per concert

With the grass pass, the purchaser will be admitted to the Tanglewood lawn for all 24 Berkshire Festival concerts at a price of $24. This is exactly $1 per concert.

The passes are not convertible toward reserved tickets, nor may they be used for the special programs on Tuesdays, the Berkshire Music Center concerts or Saturday morning rehearsals. The passes are now available at the Tanglewood box office.

The Berkshire night coupons will entitle the holder to a $1 discount on Friday concerts. The coupon will be printed each week, beginning June 29, in the Thursday edition of The Berkshire Eagle. It will be in the shape and style of a dollar bill and should be presented at the box office with the balance of the ticket price.

No more than one coupon can be applied to the purchase of a single ticket, and the coupons are valid only for the Friday concert. The purchaser should sign his name and address on the coupon before presenting it.

The idea for the grass passes was suggested by Milton R. Bass, entertainment editor of The Eagle.

GLEN RIDGE, N. J.
PAPER
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUN 22 1972

Berkshire Festival Boston Symphony Orchestra Programs for 1972

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

All four of ths Brahms symphonies (1,5,6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's The Seasons, Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

"COPPELIA" DATE CHANGED

The date of the "Coppelia" performance by the Montclair-North Essex Y.W.C.A. ballet students has been changed to Friday, June 23, at 8 p.m., in the Hillside Auditorium.

The first half of the evening — "Dimensions in Dance" — will show different types of dance movement including a ballet class barre, a western ballet, modern dance, interpretive dance, tap and a rock and roll dance, and be followed by the children's version of "Coppelia."

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUN 21 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens Sunday

The 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

The principal address by Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deal with government and the arts. It will be followed by Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" sung by over 400 students at the Center. The "Alleluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

After the program there will be a reception in the formal gardens to which the public is invited.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra presents its first Tanglewood concert June 30 at 9 p.m. Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert including the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, the Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 with soloists Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy. The concert will be preceded by the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. during which the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will sing three Bach motets.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood season starts

Tanglewood's 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center are scheduled Sunday at 2:30 p.m. This is the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music, and the event takes place in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall.

State Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will deliver the principal address, speaking on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by more than 400 students of the Music Center after the exercises. Following will be a reception in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens. The public is invited to the entire program.

Next Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m. the BSO gives its initial Berkshire Festival concert of the season in the Shed. Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert, starting with the Brandenberg concerto no. 2, and followed by Brandenberg concerto no. 5.

After intermission, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Suite No. 2, and concludes the evening with Cantata no. 191, with the Festival Chorus singing. The Weekend Prelude next Friday at 7 p.m. in the Shed, free to 9 p.m. concert ticket-holders, presents the Festival Chorus in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: "Lobet den herrn, alle Heiden," "Komm, Jesu, Komm," and "Jesu, meine Freude."

News Of Area Art Happenings

Work of students and teachers will be included in the annual student - member show at the Art Barn, Greenwich, opening Sunday from 4 to 6 p.m. and continuing through July 6. The new graphics studio will be open, teachers and members of the board of directors will be present and there will be an opportunity to register for classes beginning next weeek at Sunday's program. The barn is open to the public daily from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Darien Library.

On display through July 6 at the Darien Library is "The Four Faces of Watercolor," a display of flower paintings by Mrs. Laurie Kattelle, still lifes and portraits by Mrs. Julie S. Maddalene and landscapes by Mrs. Stafford Campbell.

Mrs. Kattelle at the age of 85 is currently fascinated by acrylics and working in that medium. She has done children's portraits and exhibited and sold widely. One of her paintings hangs in the Yonkers Art Museum. She is the mother of Alan Kattelle of Darien. Mrs. Maddalen, a former Darien resident, does water colors exclusively and has also shown in many exhibits. Mrs. Campbell's landscapes have been done on location or from sketches made while sailing. She has had many one-man shows in Connecticut, Westchester and Ontario.

Membership Exhibit.

Realistic works will be featured in the Connecticut Classic Arts annual Norwalk Green Membership Exhibit July 9 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Ribbon awards will be given in oils, watercolors, acrylics and graphics.

Connecticut artists over 18 may join and further information is available from George Haestner, 101 Maywood Rd., Darien or Robert F. Calrow, 29 Cricket Lane.

New York Cultural Center.

Shorter hours will be in effect at the New York Cultural Center, 2 Columbus Circle, New York, beginning Saturday. Tuesday through Sunday hours will be from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday the center will remain open until 9 p.m. Film screenings will be shown at 4 and 6 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday.

Arts And Crafts.

In connection with the Darien Community Association's sixth antiques show and sale this weekend at Darien High School there will be an exhibit and sale of arts and crafts. Mrs. Walter R. Lownes and Mrs. Russell R. Voorhees are cochairmen of the show which opened at noon today and will continue Friday from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday until 6 p.m.

Budget Art.

Tomorrow and Saturday from 6 to 11 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Community Cooperative Nursery School, Old Trolley Way, Rowayton, there will be a showing and sale of Professional Art for the Budget Collector. New pictures will be hung daily and proceeds will benefit the scholarship fund.

Landscape Painting.

Jack Pellew of Norwalk, will instruct landscape painting in watercolor, oils or acrylics, starting July 10 at the Silvermine Guild School of the Arts in New Canaan, for three weeks Mondays from 9 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. Each class will open with a brief demonstration and conclude with a critigue.

Registration for beginners or advanced students can be made by calling the school, 1037 Silvermine Rd., New Canaan.

Also available are day and night courses for children and adults in art, dance, crafts and photography.

Young Soloists Audition.

Musicians in Fairfield County under the age of 18, have been invited to participate in the third annual Norwalk Symphony Young Soloists Audition to be held in January. An early announcement is being made to give the young performers a chance to rehearse and prepare for audition the piece that he would like to perform with the orchestra at the March concert. Judges for the audition will be Dennis Russell Davies, music director of the orchestra, first chair players and a representative of the symphony board. Last year a pianist, flutist and clarinetist were selected as soloists.

Further information and applications are available from Mrs. George Castellion, Briar Brae Rd. and Mrs. Harold Glazer of Norwalk, cochairmen.

Tanglewood.

The 1972 Tanglewood season will open Sunday with opening excercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, and a reception. The first program by the orchestra will be June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert, opening with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2. At the 7 p.m. performance the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, will also present an all-Bach concert. Open rehearsals to benefit the orchestra's pension fund will be held Saturdays at 10:30 a.m. throughout the summer.

A call has been issued for area singers interested in participating in a festival of music at the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Sept. 24 at 4 p.m. The event will mark the 100th anniversary of the sanctuary and the program conducted by Bruce Angell will include "Hymn of the Immortals," David McK Williams and "Te Deum Laudamus," Anton Bruckner. Rehearsals will start July 5 at 8:15 p.m. in the church and continue on Wednesdays thereafter. Particiants are asked to attend four rehearsals prior to the final run-through Sept. 20.

Dance Festival.

The twenty-fifth Connecticut College American Dance Festival will open at 8 p.m. June 30 with the debut of a new professional repertory company dedicated to performing great classics of American modern dance. Friday's program will be repeated July 1 at 8 p.m. and July 2 at 2 p.m.

The opening weekend the company will perform Martha Graham's "El Penitente," Charles Weidman's "Flickers" and Doris Humphrey's "New Dance."

Tickest are available by writing to the Connecticut College American Dance Festival, Box 1546 New London.

LUMIA.

Moving paintings of light, music and imagery synthesized into a theatrical performance may be seen Saturdays at 8 p.m. at LUMIA, the Theatre of Light, Route 34 Sandy Hook, Conn., now open for its eighth season. Reservations are necessary since the theatre accommodates only 36 persons. Special performances for groups may be arranged on weekday evenings.

ADVOCATE
STAMFORD, CONN.
D. 32,000
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Boston Symphony Opens Concert Season June 30

The 1972 TAnglewood season opens Sunday, June 25 at 2:30 p.m. with the thirtieth annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre–Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight who will talk on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 Friday evening, June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all–Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2 with Boston Symphony Principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists. Next follows a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord. Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa conducts performances of the Suite No. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata no. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7 p.m. in the shed (free to ticket–holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director, in an all–Bach concert.

The Summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place Saturday morning, July 1, at 10:30 a.m.

The 1972 Berkshire Festival Opens At Tanglewood, June 30

NEW YORK, N. Y.
EAST SIDE NEWS
W. - CIRC. N. AVAI
JUN 23 1972
PAGE ONE

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Betthoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the "Berlioz Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's "Symphony No. 8" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9."

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky,

(Continued on Page 12)

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from Page 1)

violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including: Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043
JUN 23 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood to open

LENOX — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday, June 25, 1972 with the thirtieth annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's theatre-concert hall. The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight who will speak on government and the Arts. Randall Thompson's 'Alleluia' will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. Thompson's 'Alleluia' was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940. Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 on Friday evening, June 30 at 9:00 p.m. in the shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2 with Boston Symphony Principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists. Next follows a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa conducts performances of the Suite no. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata no. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7:00 p.m. in the shed (free to ticket-holderrs of the 9:00 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: 'Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden' 'Komm, Jesu, Komm', and 'Jesu, meine Freude.'

The summer's first Saturday morning open rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert.

Open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. and benefit the orchestra's pension fund. They offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each and are available the morning of the rehearsal.

1972 Tanglewood Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL JUNE 30-AUGUST 20

Artistic Directors
SEIJI OZAWA
Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER
Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Adviser

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG
Music Director
THOMAS D. PERRY, JR., MANAGER

WEEKEND	FRIDAYS AT 9:00 PM	SATURDAYS AT 8:30 PM	SUNDAYS AT 2:30 PM
1	JUNE 30 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm BACH PROGRAM Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 Suite No. 2 Cantata No. 191 Tanglewood Festival Chorus	JULY 1 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI 8:30 pm Bach: Suite No. 3 Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1 in C major Claude Frank Mozart: Symphony No. 39 in E flat	JULY 2 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: The Seasons Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director
2	JULY 7 Weekend Prelude 7 pm piano music of Mozart SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm MOZART PROGRAM Concerto for flute and harp Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson Bassoon Concerto Sherman Walt Haffner Serenade Joseph Silverstein	JULY 8 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am BRUNO MADERNA 8:30 pm A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia" Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road #1 and #3 Unanswered Question Over the Pavements Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony	JULY 9 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: Symphony No. 47 Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye"
3	JULY 14 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Peter Serkin Boston Symphony Chamber Players WILLIAM STEINBERG 9 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 6 Symphony No. 5	JULY 15 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am WILLIAM STEINBERG 8:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 1 Symphony No. 9 Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director	JULY 16 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Triple Concerto Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin Symphony No. 4 Choral Fantasy Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus
4	JULY 21 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Earl Wild BRUNO MADERNA 9 pm Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1	JULY 22 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am LEONARD BERNSTEIN 8:30 pm BRAHMS PROGRAM Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2	JULY 23 KAREL ANCERL 2:30 pm Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7 Sonata a 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia de Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8
5	JULY 28 Weekend Prelude 7 pm to be announced EUGENE ORMANDY 9 pm Brahms: Tragic Overture Sibelius: Symphony No. 5 Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra	JULY 29 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am EUGENE ORMANDY 8:30 pm Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3 Hindemith: Mathis der Maler Strauss: Ein Heldenleben	JULY 30 JAMES LEVINE 2:30 pm Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major Joseph Silverstein Mahler: Symphony No. 6
6	AUGUST 4 FROMM SPECIAL CONCERT Weekend Prelude 7 pm Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 9 pm Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin Wuorinen: Violin Concerto Paul Zukofsky Stravinsky: Rite of Spring	AUGUST 5 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am ALDO CECCATO 8:30 pm Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1 Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3 John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony	AUGUST 6 MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 2:30 pm Haydn: Oboe Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 5
7	AUGUST 11 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Gina Bachauer COLIN DAVIS 9 pm Wagner: Wesendonck Songs Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" Jessye Norman Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces Tanglewood Festival Chorus	AUGUST 12 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am COLIN DAVIS 8:30 pm Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges" Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4 Gina Bachauer Brahms: Symphony No. 3	AUGUST 13 COLIN DAVIS 2:30 pm Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" Berlioz: Te Deum Richard Lewis, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director
8	AUGUST 18 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Boston Symphony Chamber Players Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin	AUGUST 19 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 8:30 pm Mozart: Paris Symphony Messiaen: Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter	AUGUST 20 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Saverio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director

TUESDAY AUGUST 1 ARTHUR FIEDLER and BOSTON POPS-AT-TANGLEWOOD
TICKETS: Same price as Berkshire Festival

MAIL ORDERS NOW
FOR ALL PERFORMANCES

BOX SEAT (Box contains 6 chairs)	$8.50
Sections 1, 4, 5	8.00
Sections 2, 3	7.50
Sections 6, 7	7.00
Sections 8, 9	6.00
Sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 (front)	6.00
Sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 (rear)	5.00
Sections 17, 18, 19, 20 (front)	4.50
Sections 17, 18, 19, 20 (rear)	3.50

Make checks payable to: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, INC.
Enclose check and self-addressed stamped envelope to:
FESTIVAL TICKET OFFICE, SYMPHONY HALL, BOSTON, MASS. 02115
Tickets also available through TICKETRON.

TANGLEWOOD MUSIC SHED SEATING PLAN

PROGRAMS SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
BALDWIN PIANO
DGG and RCA RECORDS

Tanglewood Lists Its Theatre Project

The 1972 Music Theatre Project at Tanglewood will present a world premiere and two rarely performed works in its second season as part of the training program of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer academy for young musicians.

Under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, newly appointed general director of the Opera Society of Washington, D. C., the Music Theatre Project has assembled 10 of America's outstanding young operatic performers, both young professionals and advanced students, to explore the large, but little known repertory of music theater. The activity is supported in part by grants from the National Opera Institute and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music.

On August 2, 3, and 6, a double bill will feature the world premiere of "Chocorua" by Robert Selig, and "The Yes Man" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill. "Chocorua," a commission for the Berkshire Music Center's annual Festival of Contemporary Music, is based on a scenario by Leo Bonfanti with text by the Boston poet Richard Moore.

"The Yes Man," a translation by J .M. Potts of the 1930 Brecht - Weill "Lehrstuck" (or "instructional piece") will be presented in conjunction with the Boston University Choral Institute at Monteverdi's masterpiece, the Berkshire Music Center.

The final presentation of the season will be a controversial production of Monteverdi's masterpiece, "The Coronation of Poppea," on August 13, 14 and 16. Bruno Maderna, the Italian composer - conductor who is serving as head of contemporary music activities at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct. Mr. Strasfogel has prepared a new version of this work that focuses exclusively on the social and political realities of the regieme of the demented Emperor Nero and his decadent court.

All productions will be designed by Douglas Schmidt, and Jeanne Button, resident designers of the Music Theatre Project, and well known for their work at the Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre, and the Juilliard School in New York City. Martin Smith, newly appointed chairman of the Opera Department at the New England Conservatory of Music, is head vocal coach for the music theater project.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUN 13 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood staff seeks young people for volunteer work

Tanglewood is seeking young people in the area over the age of 16 to do about 15 hours of various volunteer work each week. In return for such duties as helping visitors, performing office duties and working in the theatre during concerts and rehearsals, the volunteers will be given a gate pass. The pass grants free admission to the grounds and to all events.

Interested persons should contact Harvey Simon at Tanglewood during this week and next between 9 and 5 p.m.

TIME
GREENWICH, CONN.
D. 13,160
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Series Opens Sunday, Weekend's Programs Announced

The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday with the 13th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall. The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight, who will talk on Government and the Arts.

Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by more than 400 students of the Berksire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. The "Alluluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940. The public is invited to attend the exercises and the reception which follows in the formal gardens.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert on June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto No. 2, followed by Brandenburg concerto No. 5. Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Suite No. 2 and conclude the concert with the Cantata No. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy and the Tanglewood Festvial Chorus.

The summer's first Satruday morning open rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert that includes Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 1 with soloist Claude Frank and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E-flat.

Seiji Ozawa conducts a performance of Haydn's "The Seasons" Sunday afternoon, July 2, at 2 p.m. in the Shed. Soloists will be soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, base Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

In addition, the Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. free to ticket holders of that evening's concert, will hear the Tanglewood Chorus in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: Lobet den Herrn, alle

The 1972 Berkshire Festival Opens At Tanglewood, June 30

NEW YORK, N. Y.
EAST SIDE NEWS
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL

JUN 23 1972

PAGE ONE

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Betthoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the "Berlioz Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's "Symphony No. 8" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9."

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky,

(Continued on Page 12)

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from Page 1)

violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg, principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043

JUN 23 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood to open

LENOX — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday, June 25, 1972 with the thirtieth annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's theatre-concert hall. The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight who will speak on government and the Arts. Randall Thompson's 'Alleluia' will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. Thompson's 'Alleluia' was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940. Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 on Friday evening, June 30 at 9:00 p.m. in the shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2 with Boston Symphony Principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists. Next follows a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa conducts performances of the Suite no. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata no. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7:00 p.m. in the shed (free to ticket-holderrs of the 9:00 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: 'Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden' 'Komm, Jesu, Komm', and 'Jesu, meine Freude.'

The summer's first Saturday morning open rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert.

Open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. and benefit the orchestra's pension fund. They offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each and are available the morning of the rehearsal.

1972 Tanglewood
Lenox, Mass.
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL JUNE 30-AUGUST 20

Artistic Directors
SEIJI OZAWA
Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER
Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN
Adviser

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG
Music Director
THOMAS D. PERRY, JR., MANAGER

WEEKEND	FRIDAYS AT 9:00 PM	SATURDAYS AT 8:30 PM	SUNDAYS AT 2:30 PM
1	JUNE 30 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm BACH PROGRAM Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 Suite No. 2 Cantata No. 191 Tanglewood Festival Chorus	JULY 1 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI 8:30 pm Bach: Suite No. 3 Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1 in C major Claude Frank Mozart: Symphony No. 39 in E flat	JULY 2 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: The Seasons Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus John Oliver, Director
2	JULY 7 Weekend Prelude 7 pm piano music of Mozart SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm MOZART PROGRAM Concerto for flute and harp Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Ann Hobson Bassoon Concerto Sherman Walt Haffner Serenade Joseph Silverstein	JULY 8 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am BRUNO MADERNA 8:30 pm A. Gabrieli/Maderna: "La Battaglia" Earle Brown: "Available Forms No. 1" Ives: Tone Road #1 and #3 Unanswered Question Over the Pavements Mozart: "Jupiter" Symphony	JULY 9 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Haydn: Symphony No. 47 Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 Garrick Ohlsson Ravel: "Ma mere l'Oye"
3	JULY 14 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Peter Serkin Boston Symphony Chamber Players WILLIAM STEINBERG 9 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 6 Symphony No. 5	JULY 15 OPEN REHEARSAL 10 30 am WILLIAM STEINBERG 8:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Symphony No. 1 Symphony No. 9 Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director	JULY 16 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm BEETHOVEN PROGRAM Triple Concerto Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin Symphony No. 4 Choral Fantasy Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus
4	JULY 21 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Earl Wild BRUNO MADERNA 9 pm Gabrieli/Maderna: Motet Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and winds Earl Wild Brahms: Symphony No. 1	JULY 22 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am LEONARD BERNSTEIN 8:30 pm BRAHMS PROGRAM Symphony No. 4 Symphony No. 2	JULY 23 KAREL ANCERL 2:30 pm Gluck: Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7 Sonata a 10 Schumann: Piano Concerto Alicia de Larrocha Dvorak: Symphony No. 8
5	JULY 28 Weekend Prelude 7 pm to be announced EUGENE ORMANDY 9 pm Brahms: Tragic Overture Sibelius: Symphony No. 5 Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra	JULY 29 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am EUGENE ORMANDY 8:30 pm Beethoven: Leonore Overture No. 3 Hindemith: Mathis der Maler Strauss: Ein Heldenleben	JULY 30 JAMES LEVINE 2:30 pm Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major Joseph Silverstein Mahler: Symphony No. 6
6	AUGUST 4 FROMM SPECIAL CONCERT Weekend Prelude 7 pm Phyllis Curtin, Aaron Copland, Michael Tilson Thomas, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 9 pm Ruggles: Evocations for Orchestra Copland: 8 Poems of Emily Dickinson Phyllis Curtin Wuorinen: Violin Concerto Paul Zukofsky Stravinsky: Rite of Spring	AUGUST 5 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am ALDO CECCATO 8:30 pm Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 1 Prokofiev: Piano Concerto No. 3 John Browning Dvorak: "New World" Symphony	AUGUST 6 MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 2:30 pm Haydn: Oboe Concerto Ralph Gomberg Mahler: Symphony No. 5
7	AUGUST 11 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Gina Bachauer COLIN DAVIS 9 pm Wagner: Wesendonck Songs Prelude and Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde" Jessye Norman Verdi: Four Sacred Pieces Tanglewood Festival Chorus	AUGUST 12 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am COLIN DAVIS 8:30 pm Berlioz: Overture "Les Francs-Juges" Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 4 Gina Bachauer Brahms: Symphony No. 3	AUGUST 13 COLIN DAVIS 2:30 pm Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" Berlioz: Te Deum Richard Lewis, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director
8	AUGUST 18 Weekend Prelude 7 pm Boston Symphony Chamber Players Woodwind Quintet with Alexis Weissenberg SEIJI OZAWA 9 pm Ligeti: Melodien for Orchestra Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 Alexis Weissenberg Bartok: Miraculous Mandarin	AUGUST 19 OPEN REHEARSAL 10:30 am MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS 8:30 pm Mozart: Paris Symphony Messiaen: Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 Misha Dichter	AUGUST 20 SEIJI OZAWA 2:30 pm Mahler: Symphony No. 8 Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley, Severio Barbieri, St. Paul's School Boy Choir, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director

TUESDAY AUGUST 1 ARTHUR FIEDLER and BOSTON POPS-AT-TANGLEWOOD
TICKETS: Same price as Berkshire Festival

MAIL ORDERS NOW
FOR ALL PERFORMANCES

BOX SEAT (Box contains 6 chairs)	$8.50
Sections 1, 4, 5	8.00
Sections 2, 3	7.50
Sections 6, 7	7.00
Sections 8, 9	6.00
Sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 (front)	6.00
Sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 (rear)	5.00
Sections 17, 18, 19, 20 (front)	4.50
Sections 17, 18, 19, 20 (rear)	3.50

Make checks payable to: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, INC.
Enclose check and self-addressed stamped envelope to:
FESTIVAL TICKET OFFICE, SYMPHONY HALL, BOSTON, MASS. 02115
Tickets also available through TICKETRON.

TANGLEWOOD MUSIC SHED SEATING PLAN
Box Seats
Stage

PROGRAMS SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
BALDWIN PIANO
DGG and RCA RECORDS

Tanglewood Lists Its Theatre Project

The 1972 Music Theatre Project at Tanglewood will present a world premiere and two rarely performed works in its second season as part of the training program of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer academy for young musicians.

Under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, newly appointed general director of the Opera Society of Washington, D. C., the Music Theatre Project has assembled 10 of America's outstanding young operatic performers, both young professionals and advanced students, to explore the large, but little known repertory of music theater. The activity is supported in part by grants from the National Opera Institute and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music.

On August 2, 3, and 6, a double bill will feature the world premiere of "Chocorua" by Robert Selig, and "The Yes Man" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill. "Chocorua," a commission for the Berkshire Music Center's annual Festival of Contemporary Music, is based on a scenario by Leo Bonfanti with text by the Boston poet Richard Moore.

"The Yes Man," a translation by J .M. Potts of the 1930 Brecht - Weill "Lehrstuck" (or "instructional piece") will be presented in conjunction with the Boston University Choral Institute at Monteverdi's masterpiece, the Berkshire Music Center.

The final presentation of the season will be a controversial production of Monteverdi's masterpiece, "The Coronation of Poppea," on August 13, 14 and 16. Bruno Maderna, the Italian composer - conductor who is serving as head of contemporary music activities at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct. Mr. Strasfogel has prepared a new version of this work that focuses exclusively on the social and political realities of the regieme of the demented Emperor Nero and his decadent court.

All productions will be designed by Douglas Schmidt, and Jeanne Button, resident designers of the Music Theatre Project, and well known for their work at the Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre, and the Juilliard School in New York City. Martin Smith, newly appointed chairman of the Opera Department at the New England Conservatory of Music, is head vocal coach for the music theater project.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUN 13 1972

New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 22 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood staff seeks young people for volunteer work

Tanglewood is seeking young people in the area over the age of 16 to do about 15 hours of various volunteer work each week. In return for such duties as helping visitors, performing office duties and working in the theatre during concerts and rehearsals, the volunteers will be given a gate pass. The pass grants free admission to the grounds and to all events.

Interested persons should contact Harvey Simon at Tanglewood during this week and next between 9 and 5 p.m.

TIME
GREENWICH, CONN.
D. 13,160

JUN 22 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Series Opens Sunday, Weekend's Programs Announced

The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday with the 13th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall. The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight, who will talk on Government and the Arts.

Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by more than 400 students of the Berksire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. The "Alluluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940. The public is invited to attend the exercises and the reception which follows in the formal gardens.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert on June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto No. 2, followed by Brandenburg concerto No. 5. Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Suite No. 2 and conclude the concert with the Cantata No. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy and the Tanglewood Festvial Chorus.

The summer's first Saturday morning open rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert that includes Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 1 with soloist Claude Frank and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E-flat.

Seiji Ozawa conducts a performance of Haydn's "The Seasons" Sunday afternoon, July 2, at 2 p.m. in the Shed. Soloists will be soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, base Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

In addition, the Weekend Prelude on Friday at 7 p.m. free to ticket holders of that evening's concert, will hear the Tanglewood Chorus in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: Lobet den Herrn, alle

Koussevitsky's Nonelectric Whizbang Thrill

They always call Tanglewood the fulfillment of Serge Koussevitsky's dream and it's true that the most famous and fiery of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conductors had great visions for these summer concerts, which he began began in 1936, and for the Berkshire Music Center, opened four years later.

As for those visions now; frisbie is still outlawed on the main lawn, but nothing could keep the female tourists in skirts (not even handing out ugly green wraparounds with "Tanglewood" printed on them — they were carried gleefully back to New Rochelle for souvenirs) and even Koussevitsky could not have foretold what the portable radio would do to a Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood. Not to mention the box lunches whose prices increase in direct proportion to the sogginess of the bread and the age of the brownies. Not to mention the (precedent-shattering) sale of beer. Not to mention Judy Collins. Saddest and wisest item of all springs from the box-office, where they rapturously proclaim that despite world economic disaster the attendance figures at Tanglewood quite soared from 1970 to 1971. In mathematical fact the figures fell from 257,000 to 237,000 but there was an increase all right in (gasp) money.

Never mind, ticket prices are stable this season at Tanglewood, $3.50 to $8.50 for a seat in the Shed and $3.00 for the lawn, where you can hear some and see nothing (or a lot, depending on what you came to watch). Programming has stabilized as well; there are some dull weekends upcoming but in fairness it must be stated that, in the heart of the Tanglewood tradition, this is quality dullness. Every program will not provide a superelectric whizbang thrill but the BSO has not yet been sucked into the Philadelphia bog, wherein that excellent orchestra is serving up Lerner and Loewe Nights at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center in a concerted (get it?) effort to attract the American Legion Fun Fair crowd northwards.

Seiji Ozawa, acting director of the Berkshire Music Center and BSO Music Director-elect is greatly in evidence this summer with seven programs. He is, as I have long maintained, the world's most adorable conductor, a title to which there are no other visible contenders. Also a fine musician.

As it happens he's only doing Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Haydn and Beethoven until the last weekend, when he suddenly hauls in Legeti, Chopin, Bartok and Mahler, but the whole month of July seems to have been set up as an exercise in healthy, undaring programming. Bruno Maderna's evening, July 8, is a break; Earle Brown and Charles Ives get a chance there. We do get to hear several of the orchestra's own as soloists; Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Ann Hobson in the Mozart flute and harp concerto, with Sherman Walt playing the bassoon concerto on the same program (July 7); the Beethoven triple concerto, in whech Pter Serkin joins Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin (July 16); Joseph Silverstein in Mozart's fourth violin concerto (July 30); and a Haydn oboe concerto played by Ralph Gomberg (August 6).

Associate Conductor Michael Tilson Thomas continues to be the most sought-after guest conductor in East and West, so we don't catch a glimpse of him until August when he kicks off the week-long Festival of Contemporary Music (more of that in a minute) and then goes in for a repeat of one of this Spectrum killers, Messiaen's "Et Exspecto Resurrectionem Mortuorum."

He has competition from another boy wonder on July 30, when James Levine conducts Mahler's sixth symphony and Silverstein in the Mozart. Levine takes over as principal conductor of the Met beginning in the 1973-4 season. Thomas still walks away with the He's -Another-Lennie prize, though, since he takes over as conductor-raconteur for the Young People's Concerts that Bernstein made so famous on television.

Bernstein,, who acts as Adviser to Tanglewood, is only conducting once this summer; two Brahms symphonies on July 22. And William Steinberg, who acts as Music Director, is only appearing twice, on July 14 and 15 conducting four Beethoven symphonies. Colin Davis returns for the weekend of August 11 with some Beethoven and Berlioz, also Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces" with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, and Eugene Ormandy has two programs, July 28 and 29, featruing Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler."

This year's Festival of Contemporary Music, the week of August 4, celebrates the twentieth anniversary of the Fromm Foundation, which has helped to sponsorproductions and commission new works at the Berkshire Music Center for several years. For the first time the BSO joins the Festival, with Thomas' opening concert on the 4th. It begins with a 7:00 Weekend Prelude featuring music of Aaron Copland; his "Piano Variations," played by Thomas; "Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson," sung by Phyllis Curtin; and "Vitebsk," played by Copland, Silverstein and Eskin.

The main concert at 9:00 will repeat the Emily Dickinson poems, this time with the orchestral accompaniment, and the program includes memorials to Ruggles and Stravinsky; "Evocations for Orchestra" and "Rite of Spring." A new concerto for amplified violin by Charles Wuorinen, commissioned in honor of the 20th anniversary, completes the evening and will be played by Paul Zukofsky.

The rest of the Festivai week is devoted to BMC performers and lots more new commissions—Gunther Schuller (Artistic Director at Tanglewood), Bruno Maderna (head of Contemporary Music Activity), Celso Garrido-Lecca (Chilean composer) and Fred Lerdahl (former BMC student who made good) will all present new works. Jacob Druckman's Pulitzer prize piece "Windows" will be played as well; Druckman is composer-in residence this season. There's also a concert by Collage (August 7), the contemporary music ensemble made up of BSO members and Joan Heller.

(Continued on page 31)

Tanglewood

(Continued from page 30).

The Center throws a variety of musical events nearly every night of the week all summer, starring their usual crop of youthful and old prodigies, and these are interesting programs, well-performed, only $1.50, and a much more easy-going atmosphere than that of the circusy weekends.

One of their specials is the Music Theatre Project, set up under grants from the National Opera Institute and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music, and directed by Ian Strasfogel. The productions are small-scale but high-class oddities from the music theatre repertoire, and this year's selections will be "He Who Says Yes," by Brecht and Weill, and "Chocurua," a newly commissioned opera on a New England Indian legend by Robert Selig (both on August 2,3 and 6); and Monteverdi's "The Coronation of Poppea" (August 13,14and 16). These performances take place in the renovated barn which only holds 250 seats (intimate) and is sold out very quickly, so reservations are necessary although not for any of the other BMC events.

I mentioned Judy Collins a while back, she was to be one of what Tanglewood had finally decided to term "Popular Artists." They fidgeted around with "non-classical" and the like for a while. Someone like Ms. Collins represented a compromise between screaming rock groups that produce large revenues but keep the neighbors awake and destroy community relations and bring in a mass of drug-crazed hippie communist freaks to Serge Koussevitsky's dream. Anyway, half the series cancelled moments before we went to press, so that's all off.

Should neither the fabulous classical weekends nor the congenial. off-beat BMC concerts nor the desire not to see Judy Collins attract you to Tanglewood, and even the lakes and hills fail to lure, then by all menans show up on August 15 for Tanglewood on Parade. Everyone connected with the place who can whistle, blow, toot, pluck, saw, pedal or pound hangs in together for the 1812 Overture, complete with cannon.

Tanglewood lives between Lenox and Stockbridge, right off the Lee exit of the Mass. Pike.

—LS

PHOENIX
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 25,000
JUN 21 1972
New England Newsclip

HYDE PARK TRIBUNE
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 5,300
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

DORCHESTER ARGUS CITIZEN
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 9,800
JUN 22 1972
New Englar Newsc

MATTAPAN TRIBUNE
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 4,300
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

RECORD TRANSCRIPT
MILTON, MASS.
W. 5,735
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

JAMAICA PLAIN CITIZEN
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 5,400
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Youth symphony concert Saturday at Hatch Shell

The Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra will present a special concert at the MDC's Hatch Memorial Shell on the Charles River Esplanade this Saturday (June 24) at 8 p.m.--five days before leaving for a concert tour in England, Scotland and Wales.

And the following Monday (June 26) Arthur Fiedler, founder and music director of the Boston Symphony's Esplanade Orchestra, launches the 44th Esplanade Concert season in cooperation with the MDC. All concerts begin at 8:30 p.m.

The Youth Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Walter Eisenberg, has received high critical acclaim in the United States and abroad for its extraordinary calibre of musicianship and innovation.

Last year, following its appearance at the Hatch Shell, the orchestra toured Israel. In the event of rain, the concert will be held the next evening, Sunday, June 25.

The Boston Symphony's Esplanade Orchestra will present seven evening concerts and two morning children's concerts. Harry Ellis Dickson is assistant conductor. Following is the Esplanade Concert schedule:

June 26 - 8:30-10:30
June 27 - 8:30-10:30
June 28 - 10:15 a.m. Children's Concert
July 1 - 8:30-10:30
July 4 - 8:30-10:30
July 5 - 10:15 a.m. Children's Concert
July 7 - 8:30-10:30
July 8 - 8:30-10:30

Worcester Telegram June 19, 1972

B. Sym

Prudent Programs Rule Summer Music Festivals

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Three of the giant summer music festivals will offer "prudent" programs this summer in the interest of their financial welfares.

This is to mean that the famous 50 pieces are amply included on the programs of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Saratoga Performing Arts Center, Saratoga Springs, N.Y., and Blossom Music Center, summer home of the Cleveland Orchestra at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

Of the 61 works scheduled for the Berkshire Music Festival's 24 concerts (July 1 - Aug. 20), 18 are by 20th century composers.

Although the Philadelphia Orchestra — Eugene Ormandy and guest conductor programs are not complete, 12 contemporary works out of 57 will be performed at Saratoga, in 16 concerts.

Seven Weekends

Blossom Center has announced 35 works for its 14 concerts on seven weekends, of which 10 works are 20th century.

Therefore. about 25 per cent of the 150-odd works to be played at the three festivals is "contemporary." A substantial number of these by Prokofieff, Stravinsky, Richard Strauss, etc. have long since lost their contemporary status and are now considered traditional.

Blossom Center is the most conservative and has spread its 20th century repertory over eight of its 14 programs.

Saratoga will offer one complete modern program of works by American composers on Aug. 18. Ormandy will conduct the Philadelphia in Menotti's Triple Concerto, Harris' Third Symphony, Bernstein's "Chichester Psalms," and Samuel Barber's "The Lovers."

The only all-contemporary program at Tanglewood will be Aug. 4 when Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the Boston Symphony in Carl Ruggles' "Evocations for Orchestra," Copland's "Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson," sung by soprano Phyllis Curtin, Wuorinen's Violin Concerto with Paul Zukofsky as soloist, and Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring."

MUSIC

Raymond Morin

As usual, pianists remain the biggest solo attractions. There will be 16 at the three festivals.

Four of the pianists will each appear at two of the festivals in different repertory.

Brahms Concerto

John Browning will play Brahms' First Piano Concerto at Blossom, and Prokofieff's Third at Tanglewood.

Misha Dichter will be heard in Brahms' Second at Tanglewood, and the Bartok Third at Blossom. Earl Wild will solo in Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Strings at Tanglewood, and repeat it along with Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia at Blossom. Rudolf Firkusny will play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto at Blossom, and Stravinsky's Capriccio for Piano and Orchestra at Saratoga.

The Tanglewood pianists are Garrick Ohlsson, July 9; Peter Serkin, July 16; Wild, July 21; Alicia De Larrocha, July 23; Browning, Aug. 5; Gina Bachauer, Aug. 12; Alexis Weissenberg, Aug. 18; and Dichter, Aug. 19.

All of which means that the summer festivals are offering 75 percent standard repertory to offset the possible disenchantment of contemporary music, and are relying primarily on piano soloists to stimulate business.

NATIONAL BALLET of Canada with Rudolf Nureyev as guest artist will appear in Boston this fall in the course of a transcontinental tour of 28 U.S. and Canadian cities.

Four performances are

JOHN BROWNING

scheduled at the Music Hall on the nights of Sept. 19, 20, 21 and 22, all at 8 p.m.

The engagement will include two ballets produced by Erik Bruhn especially for the National Ballet of Canada. One is Bruhn's production of "La Sylphide" (apparently a revision of Fokine's "Les Sylphides"), and a new ballet by a major choreographer yet to be announced.

Last three nights, the company will present "Swan Lake," music by Tchaikovsky, choreography by Bruhn, and settings and costumes by Desmond Healey of the Rolay Ballet. Nureyev will dance the role of Prince Siegfried at all three performances of "Swan Lake."

For further information and a brochure, write to the office of Celebrity Series at 420 Boylston St., Boston 02116.

THE HUNGARIAN Quartet will again be in-residence this summer at Colby College, Waterville, Me. for master classes in chamber music and instruction in the techniques of ensemble playing.

Members are the same who performed on the Groton Music Association series in January, 1964 — Zoltan Szekely and Michael Kuttner, violins; Denes Koromzay, viola; and Gabriel Magyar, cello.

In a Worcester Art Museum program in 1956, the quartet's second violinist was Alexander Moskowsky, and the cellist, Vilmos Palotai.

Box Lunch, Jug Of Wine Music Equal Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for

TANGLEWOOD
Page 8

NEWS
ATHOL, MASS.
D. 5,281

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

Tanglewood To Open Sunday

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at o p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

SUN-CHRONICLE
ATTLEBORO, MASS.
D. 18,500

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

UTICA DAILY PRESS
UTICA, N. Y.
D. 28,782

JUN 24 1972

Tanglewood to Open 40th Season As U.S.' Oldest Festival

LINOX, Mass. (AP)—A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanlewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanlewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the rashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bow, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprieters of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Srege Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitsky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, inwhich there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by archetect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Back, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weeekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th ennual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randsall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the intiial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Berstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prioe to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorg, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert'goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

(Associated Press Wirephoto)

Tanglewood Open Sunday

The 1972 Tanglewood season in Lenox opens Sunday afternoon with ceremonies for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school for advanced music students. The Berkshire Festival concerts by the orchestra will begin Friday with an all-Bach program to be conducted by Seiji Ozawa. There will be 24 orchestra performances on eight weekends in July and August. The Union will publish a seven-part series on the Straw Hat Circuit in Western Massachusetts beginning in Sunday's Republican.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

AMERICAN
WATERBURY, CONN.
D. 40,675

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opening Set Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonmyous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitsky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificance that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attendthe concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Box Lunch, Jug Of Wine Music Equal Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for

TANGLEWOOD
Page 8

NEWS
ATHOL, MASS.
D. 5,281
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

Tanglewood To Open Sunday

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at o p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

SUN-CHRONICLE
ATTLEBORO, MASS.
D. 18,500
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

UTICA DAILY PRESS
UTICA, N. Y.
D. 28,782
JUN 24 1972

Tanglewood to Open 40th Season As U.S.' Oldest Festival

LINOX, Mass. (AP)—A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanlewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanlewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the rashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bow, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprieters of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Srege Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitsky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, inwhich there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by archetect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Back, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weeekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th ennual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randsall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the intiial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Berstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prioe to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorg, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert'goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

(Associated Press Wirephoto)

Tanglewood Open Sunday

The 1972 Tanglewood season in Lenox opens Sunday afternoon with ceremonies for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school for advanced music students. The Berkshire Festival concerts by the orchestra will begin Friday with an all-Bach program to be conducted by Seiji Ozawa. There will be 21 orchestra performances on eight weekends in July and August. The Union will publish a seven-part series on the Straw Hat Circuit in Western Massachusetts beginning in Sunday's Republican.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

AMERICAN
WATERBURY, CONN.
D. 40,675
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opening Set Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP)—Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonmyous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitsky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificance that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attendthe concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

24

Outdoor Music-Making

Tanglewood Opens 30th Season Tomorrow

Lenox, Mass. — (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

Tomorrow, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, owners of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930.

Despite war years during which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies to listen to their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Tomorrow marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia."

The Boston Symphony members will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
D. 67,117
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

NEWS TRIBUNE
WALTHAM, MASS.
D. 16,641
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Opening Sunday for Tanglewood

LENOX ,Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia,'' commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Starts Season Tomorrow

LENOX (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four deacdes, opens its 1972 season tomorrow.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

Tomorrow marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

All-Bach

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert Friday at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewod concert Aug. 15 and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

EAGLE TRIBUNE
LAWRENCE, MASS.
D. 43,000
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Music festival opening Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

PRESS-HERALD
PORTLAND, MAINE.
D. 54,974
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood, Music Lovers' Haven, To Open Sunday

By JEFF BRADLEY

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia,'' commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

The 1972 Berkshire restival Opens At Tanglewood, June 30

PAGE ONE

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Betthoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the "Berlioz Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's "Symphony No. 8" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9."

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky,

(Continued on Page 12)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
EAST SIDE NEWS
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUN 23 1972

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from Page 1)

violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER &
RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885

JUN 25 1972

New England Newsclip

SET FOR TANGLEWOOD — Japanese symphony conductor Seiji Ozawa, artistic director for this year's Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, rehearses orchestra for this Sunday's opening Back concert. Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Rochester Times-Union
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
D. 145,808

JUN 24 1972

Summer of Music Begins Tomorrow at Tanglewood

By JEFF BRADLEY

Lenox, Mass (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

Tomorrow the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tangewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the Boston Symphony. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as the Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fielder will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planed the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

38th Berkshire Festival gets underway Friday

By ALFRED W. BURKE
Sun Music Critic

Music

LOWELL — Gunther Schuller will again assume the position of artistic director of the Berkshire Music Center on the occasion of the world famous Festival's 38th anniversary.

The Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school for the advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which both students and faculty give frequent public performances.

A major feature of the Center is the full sized orchestra. Main interest in regards to performances is the orchestra. Many talented advanced students have gained position from being a part of this organization. Walter Targ of this city who was concert-master of the Conservatory Orchestra during his undergraduate days performed with this group. Later he became one of the best known of the younger set of violinists on the American scene. He has played with the Indianapolis Symphony, and also with the Minneapolis, of which he is associate.

Gunther Schuller who is president of the New England Conservatory of Music has done much to help the growth of the educational center. Today the Center offers many programs as well as study in chamber music, choral and vocal recitals. During each week of the Berkshire Festival season there are many and varied programs. Included are music theater productions in addition to the above mentioned. Also, there are Composers Forums.

This year will mark the 20th anniversary of the Forum Music Foundation, and in observance, the Festival will sponsor a Festival of Contemporary Music. Such an endeavor will literally turn the setting into a Festival-within-a-Festival.

Tanglewood will be turned into the contemporary music capital of the world through this endeavor. Plans call for an intersive and exciting presentation of new and challenging works, some commissioned especially for the Festival. Many of the pieces to be programmed will be premieres. This season, the Festival of Contemporary Music will include among other highlights, a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Among other outstanding special events will be the Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler on the podium in a program especially planned for Tanglewood. This event is always one of the most popular each year and today is regarded as the greatest individual pops concert given anywhere in the world.

GUNTHER SCHULLER
... Festival director

On Aug. 15 there will be the annual Tanglewood-On-Parade There will be concerts all during the afternoon at the Berkshire Music Center. In the evening there will be a Gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras. Michael Thomas Tilson will conduct.

The Music Festival will officially open on Friday evening of this coming week (June 30). At 7 p.m., there will be one of the popular weekend preludes. Featured will be the Tanglewood Festival Chorus under the direction of John Oliver.

At 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony's new music director, Seiji Ozawa, will conduct a Bach program. This event will close with the Cantata No. 191 with the Festival Chorus joining the Orchestra.

The following day at 10:30 a.m., there will be an open rehearsal of the orchestra. Conducting the evening concert at 8:30 p.m., will be Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, and the guest artist will be pianist Claude Frank.

The 1972 Berkshire Festival Opens At Tanglewood, June 30

PAGE ONE

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30, and will continue through Sunday, August 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On August 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Betthoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the "Berlioz Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's "Symphony No. 8" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9."

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky,

(Continued on Page 12)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
EAST SIDE NEWS
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUN 23 1972

Berkshire Festival

(Continued from Page 1)

violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, August 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER &
RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885

JUN 25 1972

New England Newsclip

SET FOR TANGLEWOOD — Japanese symphony conductor Seiji Ozawa, artistic director for this year's Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, rehearses orchestra for this Sunday's opening Back concert. Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Rochester Times-Union
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
D. 145,808

JUN 24 1972

Summer of Music Begins Tomorrow at Tanglewood

By JEFF BRADLEY

Lenox, Mass (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

Tomorrow the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tangewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the Boston Symphony. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as the Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fielder will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planed the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

38th Berkshire Festival gets underway Friday

By ALFRED W. BURKE
Sun Music Critic

Music

LOWELL — Gunther Schuller will again assume the position of artistic director of the Berkshire Music Center on the occasion of the world famous Festival's 38th anniversary.

The Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school for the advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which both students and faculty give frequent public performances.

A major feature of the Center is the full sized orchestra. Main interest in regards to performances is the orchestra. Many talented advanced students have gained position from being a part of this organization. Walter Targ of this city who was concert-master of the Conservatory Orchestra during his undergraduate days performed with this group. Later he became one of the best known of the younger set of violinists on the American scene. He has played with the Indianapolis Symphony, and also with the Minneapolis, of which he is associate.

Gunther Schuller who is president of the New England Conservatory of Music has done much to help the growth of the educational center. Today the Center offers many programs as well as study in chamber music, choral and vocal recitals. During each week of the Berkshire Festival season there are many and varied programs. Included are music theater productions in addition to the above mentioned. Also, there are Composers Forums.

This year will mark the 20th anniversary of the Forum Music Foundation, and in observance, the Festival will sponsor a Festival of Contemporary Music. Such an endeavor will literally turn the setting into a Festival-within-a-Festival.

Tanglewood will be turned into the contemporary music capital of the world through this endeavor. Plans call for an intersive and exciting presentation of new and challenging works, some commissioned especially for the Festival. Many of the pieces to be programmed will be premieres. This season, the Festival of Contemporary Music will include among other highlights, a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Among other outstanding special events will be the Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler on the podium in a program especially planned for Tanglewood. This event is always one of the most popular each year and today is regarded as the greatest individual pops concert given anywhere in the world.

GUNTHER SCHULLER
. . . Festival director

On Aug. 15 there will be the annual Tanglewood-On-Parade There will be concerts all during the afternoon at the Berkshire Music Center. In the evening there will be a Gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras. Michael Thomas Tilson will conduct.

The Music Festival will officially open on Friday evening of this coming week (June 30). At 7 p.m., there will be one of the popular weekend preludes. Featured will be the Tanglewood Festival Chorus under the direction of John Oliver.

At 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony's new music director, Seiji Ozawa, will conduct a Bach program. This event will close with the Cantata No. 191 with the Festival Chorus joining the Orchestra.

The following day at 10:30 a.m., there will be an open rehearsal of the orchestra. Conducting the evening concert at 8:30 p.m., will be Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, and the guest artist will be pianist Claude Frank.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUN 27 1972

Tanglewood Season To Start on Sunday

The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday with the thirtieth annual Opening Exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Governor Donald Dwight, who will talk on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises.

Thompson's "Alleluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940

Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 Friday evening, June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert opening with a performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 with Boston Symphony principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists.

Next will follow a performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord.

Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa will conduct performances of the Suite No. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata No 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The weekend prelude, Friday at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free t ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festiva Chorus, in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: 'Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden," 'Komm, Jesu Komm" and "Jesu, meine Freude."

THE SUMMER'S first Saturday morning open rehearsal will be on Saturday morning, July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in music for the following days concert. Open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. and benefit the Orchestra's pension fund

They offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each and are available the morning of the rehearsal.

Satuday evening, July 1, at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Sympjony in a concert that includes Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E-flat.

Mr. Ozawa conducts a performance of Haydn's "The Seasons" Sunday afternoon, July 2 at 2 p.m in the Shed. Soloists for this performance are soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, bass Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

Berkshire Music Center's second season includes two premieres

BOSTON, Mass. — The 1972 Music Theatre Project, at Tanglewood will present a world premiere and two rarely performed works in its second season as part of the training program of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer academy for young musicians.

Under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, newly appointed general director of the Opera Society of Washington, D.C., the Music Theatre Project has assembled 10 of America's outstanding young operatic performers, both young professionals and advanced students, to explore the large, but little-known repertory of music theatre. The activity is supported in part by grants from the National Opera Institute, and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music.

On Aug. 2, 3, and 6, a double bill will feature the world premiere of "CHOCORUA" by Robert Selig, and "THE YES MAN" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill.

"CHOCORUA," a commission for the Berkshire Music Center's annual Festival of Contemporary Music, is based on a scenario by Leo Bonfanti with text by the Boston poet Richard Moore.

Its story, derived from actual events of the eighteenth century, tells of Indian Chief Chocorua who stays behind in New Hampshire when his tribe emigrates northward, to mingle with the English settlers with tragic results. "CHOCORUA" was commissioned jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Music Foundation.

"The Yes Man," a translation by J.M. Potts of the 1930 Brecht — Weill "Lehrstuck" (or "instructional piece") "Der Jasager," will be presented in conjunction with the Boston University Choral Institute at the Berkshire Music Center.

The final presentation of the season will be a controversial production of Monteverdi's masterpiece, "The Coronation of Poppea" Aug. 13, 14 and 16. Bruno Maderna, the noted Italian composer-conductor who is serving as Head of Contemporary Music Activities at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct.

Strasfogel has prepared a new version of this work that focuses exclusively on the social and political realities of the regieme of the demented Emperor Nero and his decadent court.

All productions will be designed by Douglas Schmidt and Jeanne Button, resident designers of the Music Theatre Project, and well-known for their work at the Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre, and the Juilliard School in New York City.

Martin Smith, newly appointed chairman of the Opera Department at the New England Conservatory of Music, is head vocal coach for the Music Theatre Project.

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

JUN 14 1972

New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

30th season

'Alleluia' to open Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at o p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the rgular price.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUN 24 1972

Tanglewood Season To Begin Sunday

#6.

By JEFF BRADLEY

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the intial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at — p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

26

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUN 27 1972

Tanglewood Season To Start on Sunday

The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday with the thirtieth annual Opening Exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Governor Donald Dwight, who will talk on government and the arts. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises.

Thompson's "Alleluia" was commissioned by Serge Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940

Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

THE BOSTON Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 Friday evening, June 30 at 9 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Bach concert opening with a performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 with Boston Symphony principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists.

Next will follow a performance of the Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord.

Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa will conduct performances of the Suite No. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata No 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The weekend prelude, Friday at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free t ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festiva Chorus, in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets: 'Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden," 'Komm, Jesu Komm" and "Jesu, meine Freude."

THE SUMMER'S first Saturday morning open rehearsal will be on Saturday morning, July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in music for the following days concert. Open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. and benefit the Orchestra's pension fund

They offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each and are available the morning of the rehearsal.

Satuday evening, July 1, at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct the Boston Sympjony in a concert that includes Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E-flat.

Mr. Ozawa conducts a performance of Haydn's "The Seasons" Sunday afternoon, July 2 at 2 p.m in the Shed. Soloists for this performance are soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, bass Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

Berkshire Music Center's second season includes two premieres

BOSTON, Mass. — The 1972 Music Theatre Project, at Tanglewood will present a world premiere and two rarely performed works in its second season as part of the training program of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer academy for young musicians.

Under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, newly appointed general director of the Opera Society of Washington, D.C., the Music Theatre Project has assembled 10 of America's outstanding young operatic performers, both young professionals and advanced students, to explore the large, but little-known repertory of music theatre. The activity is supported in part by grants from the National Opera Institute, and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music.

On Aug. 2, 3, and 6, a double bill will feature the world premiere of "CHOCORUA" by Robert Selig, and "THE YES MAN" by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill.

"CHOCORUA," a commission for the Berkshire Music Center's annual Festival of Contemporary Music, is based on a scenario by Leo Bonfanti with text by the Boston poet Richard Moore.

Its story, derived from actual events of the eighteenth century, tells of Indian Chief Chocorua who stays behind in New Hampshire when his tribe emigrates northward, to mingle with the English settlers with tragic results. "CHOCORUA" was commissioned jointly by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Music Foundation.

"The Yes Man," a translation by J.M. Potts of the 1930 Brecht — Weill "Lehrstuck" (or "instructional piece") "Der Jasager," will be presented in conjunction with the Boston University Choral Institute at the Berkshire Music Center.

The final presentation of the season will be a controversial production of Monteverdi's masterpiece, "The Coronation of Poppea" Aug. 13, 14 and 16. Bruno Maderna, the noted Italian composer-conductor who is serving as Head of Contemporary Music Activities at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct.

Strasfogel has prepared a new version of this work that focuses exclusively on the social and political realities of the regieme of the demented Emperor Nero and his decadent court.

All productions will be designed by Douglas Schmidt and Jeanne Button, resident designers of the Music Theatre Project, and well-known for their work at the Lincoln Center Repertory Theatre, and the Juilliard School in New York City.

Martin Smith, newly appointed chairman of the Opera Department at the New England Conservatory of Music, is head vocal coach for the Music Theatre Project.

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

JUN 14 1972

New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

30th season

'Alleluia' to open Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at o p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the rgular price.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUN 24 1972

Tanglewood Season To Begin Sunday

#6

By JEFF BRADLEY

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the intial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at — p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

CITIZEN
WINSTED, CONN.
D. 4,600

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opening Season on Sunday

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home s nce 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m., in the Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the rgular price.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

TO CONDUCT AT TANGLEWOOD — Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert during the 1972 Tanglewood season which opens Sunday in Lenox. Tanglewood is on a spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934. (AP Wirephoto)

Tanglewood Opens For Summer Season Sunday

B Sym

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence f such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug 1t and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

NEWS
GARDNER, MASS.
D. 8,061

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
NEWPORT, R. I.
D. 15,205

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opens Sunday, Features Boston Symphony

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug. 1 and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opens Season On Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

SUN
LEWISTON, MAINE
D. 32,167

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood's 1972 Season Opens Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30 at 8 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

HERALD
RUTLAND, VT.
D. 22,553

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Summer Season Opens Sunday At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of week-end concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the

TANGLEWOOD OPENS SUNDAY — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday in Lenox on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934. The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. —AP Wirephoto

Summer Symphonies

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of week-end concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the itial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at o p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the rgular price.

RECORDER GAZETTE
GREENFIELD, MASS.
D. 14,698

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUN 24 1972

A Different Drummer

Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will send up the first notes of the Berkshire Festival at 7 p.m. Friday in Lenox, Mass. It continues every Friday, Saturday and Sunday through Aug. 20. Opening night includes a prelude and the festival chorus at 7 p.m., before colorful Conductor Seiji Ozawa takes over at 9 p.m. with a program including Bach's Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and No. 5. If you've overlooked Tanglewood because you think it's just like the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, you have a surprise coming. You drive through wooded lanes to get there, and it's an entirely different ambiance.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens season Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug. 1 and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

KENNEBEC JOURNAL
AUGUSTA, MAINE
D. 16,297

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood fans sprawl on blankets during last season's performance of the Boston Symphony. The 1972 season opens Sunday.

Tanglewood Opening Music to the Ears

Lenox, Mass, June 23 (AP)—A picnic lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed in 1934 by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned Tanglewood into an annual music festival.

Combination of Pleasures

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique, open-air concert hall, known as the Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open ski skies while absorbing Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

They Set a Record

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of week-end concerts was 237,000, a record.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the opening exercises in 1940.

DAILY NEWS
NEW YORK'S PICTURE NEWSPAPER
D. 2,129,901 SUN. 2,948,786

JUN 24 1972

Box lunch, wine, blanket are Tanglewood standbys

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch ,a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930 .The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of week-end concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia,'' commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

CITIZEN
WINSTED, CONN.
D. 4,600

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opening Season on Sunday

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home s nce 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m., in the Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the rgular price.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

TO CONDUCT AT TANGLEWOOD — Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert during the 1972 Tanglewood season which opens Sunday in Lenox. Tanglewood is on a spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934. (AP Wirephoto)

Tanglewood Opens For Summer Season Sunday

B Sym

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence f such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug 1t and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

NEWS
GARDNER, MASS.
D. 8,061

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
NEWPORT, R. I.
D. 15,205

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opens Sunday, Features Boston Symphony

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug. 1 and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opens Season On Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

SUN
LEWISTON, MAINE
D. 32,167

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood's 1972 Season Opens Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30 at 8 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

HERALD
RUTLAND, VT.
D. 22,553
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Summer Season Opens Sunday At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the

TANGLEWOOD OPENS SUNDAY — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens Sunday in Lenox on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934. The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. —AP Wirephoto

Summer Symphonies

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the itial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at o p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonie and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the rgular price.

RECORDER GAZETTE
GREENFIELD, MASS.
D. 14,698
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638
JUN 24 1972

A Different Drummer

Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will send up the first notes of the Berkshire Festival at 7 p.m. Friday in Lenox, Mass. It continues every Friday, Saturday and Sunday through Aug. 20. Opening night includes a prelude and the festival chorus at 7 p.m., before colorful Conductor Seiji Ozawa takes over at 9 p.m. with a program including Bach's Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and No. 5. If you've overlooked Tanglewood because you think it's just like the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, you have a surprise coming. You drive through wooded lanes to get there, and it's an entirely different ambiance.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens season Sunday

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades, opens its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnificence that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug. 1 and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

Tanglewood fans sprawl on blankets during last season's performance of the Boston Symphony. The 1972 season opens Sunday.

KENNEBEC JOURNAL
AUGUSTA, MAINE
D. 16,297
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

Box lunch, wine, blanket are Tanglewood standbys

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch ,a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930 .The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia,'' commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving next week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30, at 9 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conducts Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

Tanglewood Opening Music to the Ears

Lenox, Mass, June 23 (AP)—A picnic lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opens here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed in 1934 by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned Tanglewood into an annual music festival.

Combination of Pleasures

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and most continuous major music festival in the country.

The unique, open-air concert hall, known as the Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open ski skies while absorbing Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

They Set a Record

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of week-end concerts was 237,000, a record.

Sunday marks the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the opening exercises in 1940.

DAILY NEWS
NEW YORK'S PICTURE NEWSPAPER
D. 2,129,001 SUN. 2,948,786
JUN 24 1972

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUN 25 1972 New England Newsclip

STRAW HAT CIRCUIT

Here's a Sneak Preview Of What's in Store for You!

By PHYLLIS ANDREONI
Republican Staff

First of Seven Parts

Curtain up.

Light the lights.

On the Straw Hat Circuit they're shooting for the summer heights.

And hoping this season will be better than all those that came before.

Preparation for summer theater starts long before the "package" or local production appears on the summer scene.

Coordination, cooperation and a lot of hard work go into the season's entertainment.

Good theater hopefully provides moments of magic. Somehow, in summer theater the flaws are less traumatic — more easily laughed at.

For instance, there was the play "Roman Candle," with Jan Sterling, at the Falmouth Playhouse on Cape Cod. In a rocket launching scene, suitable sound effects were called for.

But somebody goofed, and the strains of "Tennessee Waltz" drifted across the stage. The cast carried off the mistake beautifully and built on it.

In a subsequent rocket launching scene, the actor playing the part of a general started the countdown and said, "And this time cut out the blasted 'Tennessee Waltz.'"

The summer audience, out to have a good time and not particularly interested in flawless performances, roared. They were having fun.

Then there was the time a ten - year - old actor literally "blew" a scene. The cause of the trouble was his proboscis.

The moment was a tender one between June Havoc and her lover in "Time of the Cuckoo." The ten - year - old (a confirmed scene stealer), standing in the wings, sneezed. Then gave his nose a hearty blow.

Miss Havoc wasn't amused, though the audience was.

"Who the hell blew his bugle?" Miss Havoc wanted to know.

The incident was never repeated.

There was an actress' pink - bowed, little - lady poodle, who developed a following of stage - door johnnies, though she turned up her aristocratic nose at all of them.

There was Henny Youngman, visiting a friend, doing his one-liners in a hallway.

Springfield Republican
SPOTLIGHT

Springfield, Mass., June 25, 1972 + 19

SECTION TWO

Local News Editorial

Summer relaxation is listening to the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the lawns of Tanglewood.

rings and candelabra) will dazzle the audience the week of Aug. 14, followed by the musical "1776" and "Man of LaMancha" which will close the season.

Berkshire Festival

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, opens its 35th season Friday with eight weeks of festival concerts slated.

Opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music are at 2:30 p.m. today in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall. Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight will talk on government and the arts, and 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center will sing "Alleluia," by Randall Thompson.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival Concert Friday at 9 p.m. in the Shed.

The Friends of Music at Tanglewood have planned many new events during the eight-week featival.

Jacob's Pillow Dances

The 40th year of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival opened June 22. It is the 31st year in the Ted Shawn Theater.

This week, the Dayton Ballet Company and the Morse Donaldson Dance Company are featured.

Ten weeks of performances will end Aug. 26 with the Ethnic Dance Arts Company and Jacob's Pillow Dancers.

Offerings during the ten week season range from classical ballet to Spanish and Flamenco repertoire.

Lenox Theater

The Lenox Arts Center Theater Festival opens Friday with the Gertrude Stein Opera "The Mother of Us All." Five varied presentations will be offered through August 20.

The Center's Poetry Series will be launched July 2 in the Apple Orchard. The Chamber music series begins at 11 a.m. July 2 in The Courtyard, with Veronica Jochum Von Moltke, pianist.

Both series run through August 20 also.

Up in Greenfield

In Greenfield, the Arena Civic Theater began the season Thursday with "Plaza Suite" which runs through Saturday. Other upcoming plays are "The Boy Friend," "Happy Birthday Wanda June," "The Importance of Being Earnest," and a double - bill to close the season: "A Memory of Two Mondays" and "Bea, Frank, Rickie and Joan."

Williamstown Theater

Williamstown Theater kicks off its 18th season Thursday with "Mary Stuart." Seven other summer productions following the opener are "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "The Resistible Rise of Arturo UI," "Once in a Lifetime," "Uncle Vanya," "The Country Girl," "A Return," and "The Musical."

On opening night, there will be a drive to enlist "Friends and Patrons of the Williamstown Theater." An after - show party is traditional.

Mt. Holyoke Program

Anticipating a third, big summer season, the Mount Holyoke Summer Theater in South Hadley has its festive green - and - white striped tent in place.

38th Berkshire Festival gets underway Friday

By ALFRED W. BURKE
Sun Music Critic

Music

LOWELL — Gunther Schuller will again assume the position of artistic director of the Berkshire Music Center on the occasion of the world famous Festival's 38th anniversary.

The Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school for the advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which both students and faculty give frequent public performances.

A major feature of the Center is the full sized orchestra. Main interest in regards to performances is the orchestra. Many talented advanced students have gained position from being a part of this organization. Walter Targ of this city who was concert-master of the Conservatory Orchestra during his undergraduate days performed with this group. Later he became one of the best known of the younger set of violinists on the American scene. He has played with the Indianapolis Symphony, and also with the Minneapolis, of which he is associate.

Gunther Schuller who is president of the New England Conservatory of Music has done much to help the growth of the educational center. Today the Center offers many programs as well as study in chamber music, choral and vocal recitals. During each week of the Berkshire Festival season there are many and varied programs. Included are music theater productions in addition to the above mentioned. Also, there are Composers Forums.

This year will mark the 20th anniversary of the Forum Music Foundation, and in observance, the Festival will sponsor a Festival of Contemporary Music. Such an endeavor will literally turn the setting into a Festival-within-a-Festival.

Tanglewood will be turned into the contemporary music capital of the world through this endeavor. Plans call for an intersive and exciting presentation of new and challenging works, some commissioned especially for the Festival. Many of the pieces to be programmed will be premieres. This season, the Festival of Contemporary Music will include among other highlights, a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Among other outstanding special events will be the Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler on the podium in a program especially planned for Tanglewood. This event is always one of the most popular each year and today is regarded as the greatest individual pops concert given anywhere in the world.

GUNTHER SCHULLER
. . . Festival director

On Aug. 15 there will be the annual Tanglewood-On-Parade. There will be concerts all during the afternoon at the Berkshire Music Center. In the evening there will be a Gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras. Michael Thomas Tilson will conduct.

The Music Festival will officially open on Friday evening of this coming week (June 30). At 7 p.m., there will be one of the popular weekend preludes. Featured will be the Tanglewood Festival Chorus under the direction of John Oliver.

At 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony's new music director, Seiji Ozawa, will conduct a Bach program. This event will close with the Cantata No. 191 with the Festival Chorus joining the Orchestra.

The following day at 10:30 a.m., there will be an open rehearsal of the orchestra. Conducting the evening concert at 8:30 p.m., will be Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, and the guest artist will be pianist Claude Frank.

SUN
LOWELL, MASS.
S. 40,129

JUN 25 1972 New England Newsclip

HERALD NEWS
FALL RIVER, MASS.
D. 41,749

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opens New Season

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Tanglewood, the nation's oldest and most continuous music festival, a summer mecca for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades opened its 1972 season Sunday.

For years, a box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood and its unique, open-air concert hall known as The Shed, designed by architect Eliel Saarinen in 1938.

Tanglewood, a 210-acre estate once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the gas range business, has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The Tappan family first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform there. It was followed by the Boston Symphony, and led the late Serge Koussevitzky, the BSO's conductor, to dream of an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934 after the Tappan family gave the estate to the BSO.

Located in the fashionable Berkshire Mountains, Tanglewood overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, of such scenic magnifcance that the writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

Those who attend the concerts spread blankets out in the open around the music shed and sprawl in comfort while listening to their favorite Bach, Beethoven or Brahms.

Sunday marked the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center. More than 400 students attracted from all over the world sang Randall Thompson's "Alleleuia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach performance for the first Berkshire Festival concert June 30 at 9 p.m. in The Shed.

The program will open a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg and Michael Tilson-Thomas.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood concert Aug 1t and a festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10. Featured soloists this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphonies, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the programs. Ozawa will close the season Aug. 20 with Mahler's 8th.

Tanglewood Opens Its 30th Season

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass. — The 1972 Tanglewood season opens today with the 30th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for the advanced study of music, at 2:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Theatre - Concert Hall.

The principal address will be delivered by Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight. Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" will be sung by over 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center at the conclusion of the opening exercises. Following the opening exercises, there will be a reception in the formal gardens. The public is cordially invited to the opening exercises and the reception which follows.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives its first Berkshire Festival concert of 1972 Friday evening, at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Bach concert which opens with a performance of the Brandenburg concerto no. 2 with Boston Symphony Principals Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; and Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein, violin, as soloists. Next follows a performance of the Brandenbugg Concerto No. 5 with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord. Following intermission, Mr. Ozawa conducts performances of the Suite No. 2 with soloist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and, to conclude the concert, the Cantata No. 191, with soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy tenor; and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The Weekend Prelude, Friday at 7:00 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert) presents the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director, in an all-Bach concert featuring three motets,

REPUBLICAN
WATERBURY, CONN.
S. 56,837

JUN 25 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood—Great Lady in a Straw Hat

Seiji Ozawa dresses informally as he leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in rehearsal for a Tanglewood performance. Under his arm is Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 27 1972

New England Newsclip

By PHYLLIS ANDREONI

Union Staff

Third of Seven Parts

The Straw Hat circuit runs the gamut from light-hearted comedy to symphony concerts.

Nd if the straw hat itself has gone out of style, certainly Straw Hat Theater, music and dance festivals haven't.

Each summer season, in true theatrical tradition, straw hat performances leave audiences wanting — wanting more, that is.

And if all summer roads seem to lead straight from the beach or the pool to summer theater — well, that's the way it should be.

A ticket to a performance on the Straw Hat Circuit can buy a lot. A few hours of escape. Perhaps a few hours of laughter. Maybe a few hours of absolute contentment.

For music lovers, the 1972 Berkshire Music Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a MUST.

The 1972 season at Tanglewood, in Lenox, began officially Sunday with opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music.

The main address, on government and the arts, was delivered by Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight.

Tanglewood is a 210 acre estate in the Berkshire Hills, given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1930s. It is world famous as the summer home of the Boston's orchestra.

All-Bach Opener

Nathaniel Hawthorne lived on the Tanglewood grounds and wrote that he could barely work in the presence of such scenic beauty. It is nearly unchanged today.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Festival is the country's oldest major festival of music. It has been at Tanglewood since 1937.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives concerts in Tanglewood's spacious Music Shed for eight weekends each summer. This year's concerts will be launched on Friday with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the orchestra, Seiji Ozawa.

Sunday, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons." He will open the second weekend July 7 with an All-Mozart program.

The Berkshire Music Center is the orchestra's summer school for the advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which both students and faculty give frequent public performances.

Programs involving the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra chamber music, choral and vocal concerts, music theater productions and composers forums, are announced weekly.

This year's Festival of Contemporary Music will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation. It is sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Foundation and is often called a "Festival-Within-a-Festival."

It is said that it turns Tanglewood into the contemporary music capital of the world during its intensive annual presentation of new and challenging works.

Brahms' Symphonies

Some works are especially commissioned for the festival and are heard in premiere performances.

Three Mahler symphonies will be performed on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30, when James Levine conducts Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. In the closing concert of the season Aug. 20, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's (Choral) Symphony No. 8.

The Tanglewood season will feature all four of the Brahms symphonies. July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4. Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Aug. 12. And Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, will conduct Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) July 14 and 15. And July 16. Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented during the summer include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Season," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Among the season's other soloists are Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; principal flute of the orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon, Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin, and harp player in the orchestra, Ann Hobson.

Boston Pops

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeanine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chrous, directed by John Oliver, the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir, also will perform.

On Aug. 1, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood as part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series.

Concert Times

Friday night concerts are at 9, Saturday at 8.30, and Sunday afternoons at 2.30.

The Tuesday Specials, in addition to the Boston Pops, will include the special Festival of Contemporary Music concert (Aug. 8), and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by the Berkshire Music Center students in the afternoon, and a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras (Aug. 15).

The Tanglewood box office is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Tanglewood may be reached from exits 1 or 2 of the Massachusetts Turnpike. The grounds are open two hours before each major concert.

While children are welcomed, parents are discouraged from binging infants or those too young to listen quietly and attentively.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal is this week. They are held each Saturday at 10.30 a.m. to benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each. Music lovers have the opportunity, during open rehearsals, to get a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the festival concerts.

This Friday at 7 p.m., ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert may attend at no charge the weekend prelude concert featuring the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, in an all-Bach concert. Included are three motets: "Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden," "Komm, Jesu, Komm" and "Jesu, meine Freude."

Tanglewood has been called the great lady of the summer entertainment circuit.

With its scenic and musical beauty, that may be an understatement.

Tanglewood Opens Today With Osawa

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUN 30 1972

MONITOR
CONCORD, N. H.
D. 15,300

JUN 26 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood: Blanket, Box Lunch And Wine

Seiji Ozawa—Conductor

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opened here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up

Tanglewood—Great Lady in a Straw Hat

Seiji Ozawa dresses informally as he leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in rehearsal for a Tanglewood performance. Under his arm is Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 27 1972

New England Newsclip

By PHYLLIS ANDREONI

Union Staff

Third of Seven Parts

The Straw Hat circuit runs the gamut from light-hearted comedy to symphony concerts.

Nd if the straw hat itself has gone out of style, certainly Straw Hat Theater, music and dance festivals haven't.

Each summer season, in true theatrical tradition, straw hat performances leave audiences wanting — wanting more, that is.

And if all summer roads seem to lead straight from the beach or the pool to summer theater — well, that's the way it should be.

A ticket to a performance on the Straw Hat Circuit can buy a lot. A few hours of escape. Perhaps a few hours of laughter. Maybe a few hours of absolute contentment.

For music lovers, the 1972 Berkshire Music Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a MUST.

The 1972 season at Tanglewood, in Lenox, began officially Sunday with opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music.

The main address, on government and the arts, was delivered by Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight.

Tanglewood is a 210 acre estate in the Berkshire Hills, given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1930s. It is world famous as the summer home of the Boston's orchestra.

All-Bach Opener

Nathaniel Hawthorne lived on the Tanglewood grounds and wrote that he could barely work in the presence of such scenic beauty. It is nearly unchanged today.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Festival is the country's oldest major festival of music. It has been at Tanglewood since 1937.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives concerts in Tanglewood's spacious Music Shed for eight weekends each summer. This year's concerts will be launched on Friday with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the orchestra, Seiji Ozawa.

Sunday, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons." He will open the second weekend July 7 with an All-Mozart program.

The Berkshire Music Center is the orchestra's summer school for the advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which both students and faculty give frequent public performances.

Programs involving the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra chamber music, choral and vocal concerts, music theater productions and composers forums, are announced weekly.

This year's Festival of Contemporary Music will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation. It is sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Foundation and is often called a "Festival-Within-a-Festival."

It is said that it turns Tanglewood into the contemporary music capital of the world during its intensive annual presentation of new and challenging works.

Brahms' Symphonies

Some works are especially commissioned for the festival and are heard in premiere performances.

Three Mahler symphonies will be performed on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30, when James Levine conducts Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. In the closing concert of the season Aug. 20, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's (Choral) Symphony No. 8.

The Tanglewood season will feature all four of the Brahms symphonies. July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4. Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Aug. 12. And Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, will conduct Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) July 14 and 15. And July 16. Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented during the summer include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Season," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Among the season's other soloists are Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; principal flute of the orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon, Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin, and harp player in the orchestra, Ann Hobson.

Boston Pops

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeanine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chrous, directed by John Oliver, the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir, also will perform.

On Aug. 1, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood as part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series.

Concert Times

Friday night concerts are at 9, Saturday at 8.30, and Sunday afternoons at 2.30.

The Tuesday Specials, in addition to the Boston Pops, will include the special Festival of Contemporary Music concert (Aug. 8), and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by the Berkshire Music Center students in the afternoon, and a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras (Aug. 15).

The Tanglewood box office is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Tanglewood may be reached from exits 1 or 2 of the Massachusetts Turnpike. The grounds are open two hours before each major concert.

While children are welcomed, parents are discouraged from binging infants or those too young to listen quietly and attentively.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal is this week. They are held each Saturday at 10.30 a.m. to benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each. Music lovers have the opportunity, during open rehearsals, to get a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the festival concerts.

This Friday at 7 p.m., ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert may attend at no charge the weekend prelude concert featuring the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, in an all-Bach concert. Included are three motets: "Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden," "Komm, Jesu, Komm" and "Jesu, meine Freude."

Tanglewood has been called the great lady of the summer entertainment circuit.

With its scenic and musical beauty, that may be an understatement.

Tanglewood Opens Today With Osawa

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

MONITOR
CONCORD, N. H.
D. 15,300

JUN 26 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood: Blanket, Box Lunch And Wine

Seiji Ozawa—Conductor

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opened here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up

Tanglewood—Great Lady in a Straw Hat

Seiji Ozawa dresses informally as he leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in rehearsal for a Tanglewood performance. Under his arm is Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 27 1972

New England Newsclip

By PHYLLIS ANDREONI

Union Staff

Third of Seven Parts

The Straw Hat circuit runs the gamut from light-hearted comedy to symphony concerts.

Nd if the straw hat itself has gone out of style, certainly Straw Hat Theater, music and dance festivals haven't.

Each summer season, in true theatrical tradition, straw hat performances leave audiences wanting — wanting more, that is.

And if all summer roads seem to lead straight from the beach or the pool to summer theater — well, that's the way it should be.

A ticket to a performance on the Straw Hat Circuit can buy a lot. A few hours of escape. Perhaps a few hours of laughter. Maybe a few hours of absolute contentment.

For music lovers, the 1972 Berkshire Music Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a MUST.

The 1972 season at Tanglewood, in Lenox, began officially Sunday with opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music.

The main address, on government and the arts, was delivered by Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight.

Tanglewood is a 210 acre estate in the Berkshire Hills, given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1930s. It is world famous as the summer home of the Boston's orchestra.

All-Bach Opener

Nathaniel Hawthorne lived on the Tanglewood grounds and wrote that he could barely work in the presence of such scenic beauty. It is nearly unchanged today.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Festival is the country's oldest major festival of music. It has been at Tanglewood since 1937.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives concerts in Tanglewood's spacious Music Shed for eight weekends each summer. This year's concerts will be launched on Friday with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the orchestra, Seiji Ozawa.

Sunday, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons." He will open the second weekend July 7 with an All-Mozart program.

The Berkshire Music Center is the orchestra's summer school for the advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which both students and faculty give frequent public performances.

Programs involving the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra chamber music, choral and vocal concerts, music theater productions and composers forums, are announced weekly.

This year's Festival of Contemporary Music will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation. It is sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Foundation and is often called a "Festival-Within-a-Festival."

It is said that it turns Tanglewood into the contemporary music capital of the world during its intensive annual presentation of new and challenging works.

Brahms' Symphonies

Some works are especially commissioned for the festival and are heard in premiere performances.

Three Mahler symphonies will be performed on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30, when James Levine conducts Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. In the closing concert of the season Aug. 20, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's (Choral) Symphony No. 8.

The Tanglewood season will feature all four of the Brahms symphonies. July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4. Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Aug. 12. And Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's current music director, William Steinberg, will conduct Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6 and 9) July 14 and 15. And July 16. Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented during the summer include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haydn's "The Season," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Among the season's other soloists are Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; principal flute of the orchestra, Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon, Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin, and harp player in the orchestra, Ann Hobson.

Boston Pops

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeanine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chrous, directed by John Oliver, the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir, also will perform.

On Aug. 1, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood as part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series.

Concert Times

Friday night concerts are at 9, Saturday at 8.30, and Sunday afternoons at 2.30.

The Tuesday Specials, in addition to the Boston Pops, will include the special Festival of Contemporary Music concert (Aug. 8), and Tanglewood-on-Parade, concerts by the Berkshire Music Center students in the afternoon, and a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras (Aug. 15).

The Tanglewood box office is open Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Tanglewood may be reached from exits 1 or 2 of the Massachusetts Turnpike. The grounds are open two hours before each major concert.

While children are welcomed, parents are discouraged from binging infants or those too young to listen quietly and attentively.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal is this week. They are held each Saturday at 10.30 a.m. to benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each. Music lovers have the opportunity, during open rehearsals, to get a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the festival concerts.

This Friday at 7 p.m., ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert may attend at no charge the weekend prelude concert featuring the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, in an all-Bach concert. Included are three motets: "Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden," "Komm, Jesu, Komm" and "Jesu, meine Freude."

Tanglewood has been called the great lady of the summer entertainment circuit.

With its scenic and musical beauty, that may be an understatement.

Tanglewood Opens Today With Osawa

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

MONITOR
CONCORD, N. H.
D. 15,300

JUN 26 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood: Blanket, Box Lunch And Wine

Seiji Ozawa—Conductor

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — A box lunch, a bottle of wine and a blanket have been synonymous with Tanglewood for thousands of music lovers for nearly four decades.

On Sunday, the 1972 Tanglewood season opened here on the spacious, 210-acre estate that has been the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home since 1934.

The estate is located in the fashionable Berkshires, and overlooks Stockbridge Bowl, a view of such scenic scope that writer Nathaniel Hawthorne, who once lived on the grounds, remarked he could barely work in the presence of such natural beauty.

The estate was once owned by the Tappan family, proprietors of the Tappan gas range business, who first opened up the grounds for music-making about 1930. The New York Philharmonic was the first orchestra to perform here, followed by the Boston Symphony, whose conductor, the late Serge Koussevitzky, fashioned the dream of making Tanglewood an annual music festival.

Koussevitzky, born in Russia in 1874, founded the Berkshire Music Center Festival in 1934, after the estate was donated to the BSO. That was followed by the founding of the Center for Advanced Study in 1940.

Despite war years, in which there were no festivals, Tanglewood remains the oldest and nost continuous major music estival in the country.

The unique open-air concert hall, known as The Shed, was built in 1938 by architect Eliel Saarinen. But since its founding, Tanglewood's multitudes have combined the pleasures of music with those of nature by blanketing the grounds around The Shed to sprawl under the open skies while absorbing their favorite Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Last year's attendance for the eight-week series of weekend concerts was 237,000, the highest ever.

Sunday marked the 30th annual opening exercises for the Berkshire Music Center, attracting over 400 students from all over the world, who will sing Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," commissioned by Koussevitzky for the initial opening exercises in 1940.

The Boston Symphony members, having completed their winter season, will begin arriving this week for the first Berkshire Festival concert on Friday, June 30 at 8 p.m., in The Shed.

Tanglewood artistic director Seiji Ozawa will conduct a traditional all-Bach concert. The performance will launch a season that will include conductors Leonard Bernstein, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Michael Tilson Thomas and Stanislaw Skowaczewski.

Arthur Fiedler will present his annual Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

A festival of contemporary classical music is planned the week of Aug. 4-10.

Soloists featured this season will include pianists Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Peter Serkin and Misha Dichter.

Three Mahler symphones, all four Brahms symphonies and four Beethoven symphonies dominate the concert programs.

The season will conclude on Sunday, Aug. 20, with Ozawa conducting Mahler's symphony No. 8.

The Boston Symphony was founded in 1881. Koussevitzky became music director in 1924, retiring in 1949, two years prior to his death. He has been succeeded by Charles Munch, Erich Leinsdorf, William Steinberg and, now, Ozawa.

Tanglewood's acceptance of the picnic-loving grass audience is accentuated this year by a new "Grass Pass" being offered. With the Grass Pass, concert-goers pay $24 for all 24 Tanglewood concerts, gaining them entrance into the grounds at one-third the regular price.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUN 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Summer '72

Theatres, festivals plan varied season for Berkshire visitors

By JANE MOREY

Everyone has their own way of anticipating the arrival of summer. Some eagerly await the first blooms of summer flowers; others look forward to backyard cookouts and start the long awaited count-down before vacation starts. Youngsters wait for that last school bell of the year, as their mothers prepare to have their offspring home with them all day; and fathers start wondering if it is really necessary to mow the lawn every week. Here in the Berkshires, summer means all of this and more.

To Berkshire residents, the arrival of summer means another "tourist season" with the opening of summer theaters, music and dance festivals. It means roadside stands popping up on the highways to offer visitors a chance to sample fresh grown produce, flowers and crafts. It means swimming, campings, outings, flea markets, tag sales, antique sales and auctions, and the many, many other attractions for which the area is noted, making the Berkshires and surrounding areas one of the fastest growing vacation spots in the country.

Summer also means another season of Summerscope, a tabloid published every two weeks throughout the summer to keep the vacationer informed on what's going on. Everyother week Summerscope will publish lists of events and attractions in the area, as well as items on interesting people hobbies and ways of life in the Berkshires. Because this is the first issue, we are including capsule listings of some of the major attractions which will be coming to the area this summer.

Williamstown Theatre in Williamstown, which opened its 18th season last night, will present Mary Stuart through July 8. July 11 through 15, Last of the Red Hot Lovers will be performed. The Resistible Rise of Arturo UI is scheduled for July 18 through 22; Once In A Lifetime, July 25 through 29; Uncle Vanya, August 1 through 5; and The Country Girl, August 8 through 12. August 15 through 19, the theatre will present a return of the season's most popular production. The theatre will close the season by presenting a musical on August 22 through 26.

Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens for their first eight weekends tonight. Seiji Ozawa and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski are highlighted in this weekends performances of Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart. Guest artists performing throughout the summer include Bruno Maderna, July 7 through 9; William Steinberg, July 14 through 16; Leonard Bernstien, July 21 through 23; Eugene Ormandy, July 28 through 30; Michael Tilson Thomas, August 4 through 6; Colin Davis, August 11 through 13; and Seiji Ozawa August 18 through 20. Other special events, which will be announced in Summerscope, are also scheduled for the season

JANE MOREY, the Summerscope editor, is a member of The Transcript's Adams news staff during the winter.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket will conclude its second week of performances tomorrow night with the Dayton Ballet Company. Other companies scheduled to appear at the Pillow this summer include Matteo and the Indo-American Dance Company and Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre, July 4 through 8; Afro-American Dance Ensemble and Carmen De Lavallade, July 11 through 15.

First Chamber Dance Company, July 18 through 22; Minnesota Dance Theatre, July 25 through 29; The Boston Ballet Company, August 1 through 5; Maria Alba Spanish Dance Company, August 8 through 12; Luis Rivera Spanish Dance Company and Takako Asakawa, August 15 through 19 and the Ethnic Dance Arts Company and Jacob's Pillow Dancers, August 22 through 26.

The theatre schedule at the Lenox Arts Center includes The Mother of Us All today through July 4; Jump Crow, July 5 through 9 and July 12 through 16; Beckett's Endgame, July 21 through 23 and July 26 through 30; Selavy's Magic Theatre, August 2 through 6 and August 9 through 13; and Love and War, August 16 through 20. Sunday Chamber music series at the Center include Veronica Jochum Von Moltka, pianist, July 2; Concord String Quartet, July 9; Sushil Mukherjee, Terrence Hall, marimba, and Manan Mehta, tabla, July 16; Monique Duphill, pianist, July 23; Mis Von Moltka and Eleanor Steber, soprano, July 30; The Lark Woodwind Quintet, August 6; Robert Helps, pianist, August 13; and Jules and Virginia Eskin on the cello and piano, August 20.

The Arena Civic Theatre in Greenfield, which opened for its second season on June 22, is presenting Plaza Suite through tomorrow. Other performances scheduled include The Boy Friend, July 6 through 15; Happy Birthday Wanda June, July 20 through 29; The Importance of Being Earnest, August 3 through 12; and A Memory of Two Mondays and Bea, Frank, Richie and Joan, August 17 through 26.

The Mohawk Trail Concert sociation will begin its third summer of informal concerts on July 22 with a Haydn, and Bach Program. July 29 will feature Schumann and Bartok program; August 5, Handel, Crumb and Ravel; August 12, Three Worlds of American Music; August 19, Bach program and August 26, Mozart program.

Other events on the Trail, sponsored by the Mohawk Trail Association, Inc. include the Yankee Doodle Day Family Concert on August 13 and Folkmusic of the world on August 20.

Those attractions listed above, as well as others, will be described in forthcoming issues of Summerscope. In addition to those listed, there are numerous other programs, festivals, and promotions being planned throughout the summer, and Summerscope will have advance write-ups on each of them.

Visitor views panorama of Mt. Greylock range from inside Stafford Monument on Stafford Hill, Cheshire. Transcript Photo by Randy Trabold.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 27 1972 New England Newsclip

Editorials

The arts and the 'common man'

Everybody talks about the necessity for supporting the arts, but as Lieutenant Governor Donald R. Dwight pointed out in his address at opening exercises at Tanglewood, it is only a small group that does anything about it. Since it is difficult to increase the productivity of a musician or the size of the hall in which he plays, it is necessary to broaden the base of support for the arts and involve more people in their health and welfare.

The usual appeal is to the "common man." With the glibness of a political candidate, spokesmen for the arts talk about the "common man" as the only hope for saving the world from a return to medieval darkness where there are no symphonic orchestras, no operas and no museums. This appeal to the "common man" is usually made in addresses to the business leaders of the community, to ladies at a formal tea or at a dinner dance where the ducats are 60 bucks a couple. The "common man" has yet to learn that he is being solicited.

Although he is not being directly solicited, he is paying in part to support the arts through his tax money, and Mr. Dwight put it on the line to the Tanglewood students and administration when he advised them to put the pressure on elected officials and to "woo" them to the cause.

He also advised them to become involved in the communities in which they work, to seek new audiences "and never stop looking for new ways to take your message to the people."

The medium is the message, of course, and it would be interesting to know exactly what percentage of Berkshire County residents are vitally interested in Tanglewood and what it offers. There have been implied threats by Tanglewood officials in the past couple of years that we might lose this great cultural center if the community didn't provide some financial backing. This was right in line with General Electric's hinting that we might lose the transformer division if the "common man" didn't pitch in and do his part. Music and transformers have much in common in this day and age.

Tanglewood has taken a step in the right direction by inaugurating its grass passes which bring the price down to a dollar a concert on a season basis, and Berkshire Night, which gives you a dollar off on any ticket when you present your coupon. These may be only tiny beginnings, but they are beginnings.

It's a two-way street, as Mr. Dwight pointed out to the musicians. They have to show the "common man" that they are interested in him before they can expect him to be interested in them. Both sides should try it. They may find they like it.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUN 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Letters to The Transcript

Tip to music lovers

In the published schedule and other material regarding Tanglewood there is usually mention of the open rehearsals held on Saturday mornings throughout the Tanglewood season. However, these publications never mention which works are played at these rehearsals.

If people knew which works to expect, area residents might take greater advantage of these rehearsals. We go fairly regularly and there is never a full house, in spite of the fact that any seat at a rehearsal costs less (only $2.50 — no reserved seats) than the cost to sit on the lawn at a regular Tanglewood concert. In fact, if one arrives for a rehearsal when tickets first go on sale (9 a.m., with the rehearsal beginning at 10.30 a.m.) one can choose from any seat in the shed including seats that cost $8 at a regular performance.

Anyway, here's "secret": On Saturday morning at Tanglewood the orchestra nearly always rehearses the concert scheduled for the next day, Sunday.

The regular Tanglewood concerts are, of course, given on Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. So by consulting the Tanglewood Sunday afternoon schedule, one has the key to the music, conductor and soloists to be heard on Saturday morning.

Some of the finest musicians in the world, the novelty of a rehearsal, a relaxed atmosphere and bargain prices — what more could one ask for except perhaps the scenic ride and an idyllic setting.

JOAN WINDOVER,
FRED WINDOVER
Sloan Rd.,
Williamstown

A burning question

The state of Massachusetts has a law forbidding outside burning except in certain cases. The United States Government states that the only way a person may dispose of an old flag (unuseable) is to burn it.

What do the people of Massachusetts do to dispose of their old flags, have a friend in Vermont burn it for us.?

ALAN D. HORBAL
458 East Main St.,
North Adams

32

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUN 30 1972

New England Newsclip

SEIJI OZAWA

Boston Symphony opens at Tanglewood

The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens today and will continue through Aug. 20. The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday July 2, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. He will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays beginning July 30 when James Levine conducts Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5, and in the closing concert of the season, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, August 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies, Nos. 1, 5, 6, and 9, will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Mr. Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place tomorrow morning, at 10.30. Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert. Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning at 10.30 a.m. and benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund. They offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing the music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Seats are unreserved at $2.50 each and are available the morning of the rehearsal.

Tomorrow evening at 8.30 in the Shed, Stanislaw Skorwaczewski conducts the Boston Symphony in a concert that includes Bach's Suite no. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony no. 39 in E-flat.

Seiji Ozawa conducts a performance of Haydn's "The Seasons" Sunday afternoon at 2 in the Shed. Soloists for this performance are soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, bass Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director.

Mr. Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9. The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony Harpist Ann Hobson. Next follows a performance of the Bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade no. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in c-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday morning, July 8 at 10.30 Mr. Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in the summer's second Open Rehearsal. Tickets for these Open Rehearsals are on sale the morning of the concert at the Festival Ticket Office at a cost of $2.50 each. These Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning at 10.30 a.m., offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the Berkshire Festival Concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Saturday evening, July 8 at 8.30 p.m. in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony. The concert opens with Mr. Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' "Tone roads no. 1," "Tone roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo (Over the pavements). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41 "Jupiter."

Mr. Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 9 at 2.30, opening with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Ravel's "Mother Goose."

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will

BOB DAVIS

The Arts
Views Reviews and Pre-views

SUMMER THINGS

The world of summer music and theatre is upon us once again. This is a world that moves the senses in many ways. I can smell the fresh clean air of the woods or the depressing atmosphere of "Hot and Muggy." The good smell of fragrant wood which permeates the hundreds of wooden outdoor theatres, or the acrid fumes of too many cars on a hot day crowded into one country road headed for the same summer playhouse. The sense of excitement that exists before the curtain opens on a new musical or before an artist makes his entrance to sing or play. Animated conversation mixed with lemonade! The wonderful sound of a great orchestra tuning up with its thousand sounds before the conductor wends his way through the hundred men who are poised and waiting to thrust the ever-changing sounds of a Beethoven or a Shostakovich into our waiting musical hearts. Yes, the world of the senses that are awakened by summer music and theatre are a world that everyone should experience at least once. The beautiful part of all this is that it is all around us in all forms. From the lightest of comedy to the most penetrating Shakespearian tragedies, or from a jazz festival to a thundering symphony; from the swingingest pop vocals to the great from the "Met" or "La Scala." You name it and it's here, there and everywhere.

SONG AND DANCE

Where does this wondrous world of the arts take place? Well, if you want to stay in your own back yard, there is some of everything. For symphony you would go west to Tanglewood In The Berkshires and there you would find your own world famous Boston Symphony. At Tanglewood, each day is filled with concerts by individual artists both vocal and instrumental, as well as string and brass ensembles from trio to chamber variety. In the evening, the full orchestra trumpets forth with its mighty triumphant sounds. All of this goes from July through August. While you are in the Berkshires, you might want to drop into Lee, Mass., and find out what is going on in the world of dance. There you will find "Jacobs Pillow" (July - August) which is known the world over as a show place for solo and group dancers. Go south to the "Connecticut College American Dance Festival" (July - August) and you will find complete ballet performances preceded by interesting dance lecture - demonstrations. In solo and small group group music, you can swing from one pole to another in the time it takes you to drive up Route 91 from New York City to Marlboro, Vermont. Thousands will converge on Radio City Music Hall to soak up what over 60 famous musicians in the world of "jazz" and "folk" have to say (July 1 - July 9) and more thousands walk through the hills of Marlboro (July 15 - August 15) to bask in the light of our beloved 95 year old Pablo Casals and the talented satellites he gathers around him.

SUMMER THEATRE

Theatre is another whole summer world. We have plays and musicals going on all around us. In Fitchburg, the "Hightor" playhouse holds forth from June 27 - August 19. My dictionary says "tor" means "A high craggy hill," so if you should go to the "Theatre on the Hill" you would have the choice of eight plays ranging from "The Miracle Worker" to "Your a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

For those who get to Maine, it would be a sad day if you were to miss going to the "Brunswick Playhouse" situated on the beautiful Bowdoin College Campus. This is one of the few "Resident" summer theatres left in America, and the only all professional group in Maine. This summer they will do "The Odd Couple," "The Fantastics," "My Fair Lady," "Oklahoma," "Fiddler on the Roof," and "1776."

AROUND THE WORLD

And so we go, on and on. The "Zoo" opera in Cincinnati, Wagner in Bayreuth, everything that's great at the Edinburg Festival, or Arab Soul performed by Oum Koulsoum at Baalbek.

So, become part of the "Hooked" generation. Pick your own thing and get on the "Go" this summer!

PUBLIC SPIRIT
AYER, MASS.
W. 5,150

JUN 29 1972

New England Newsclip

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289

MAY 25 1972 New England Newsclip

BU Program Listed For Tanglewood

Boston University at Tanglewood is an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Applied and Fine Arts in association with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox. On June 25 it starts its seventh year.

As formerly, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. Besides course work and performances, they may attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and many other programs and musical events at the Berkshire Music Center.

Running to Aug. 20, the music program includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by concert performer Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute. Also, a young artists program offers high school instrumentalists a chance to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and faculty from BU.

Offered at both basic and advanced levels, the art program provides studio instruction in drawing and painting and includes problems of figure, still life, landscape and composition. The BU Choral institute directed by John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt gives intensive study of choral repertoire from ancient through Renaissance, and from the end of the 19th century to the present. Mr. Oliver heads choral and vocal activities for the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, and conducts the BU Chorus and the MIT Chorus. Miss Hiatt is choral director at Smith College and an authority on Renaissance music. Together, they will direct a seminar for choral conductors to include a public performance.

Prof. Nagy, who will conduct a piano seminar from June 25 through July 22, will lead participants in a survey and analysis fo all works by Brahms, and selects Schubert works. Besides his concert carrer, he is chairman of the BU piano department.

Young artists program is open to a limited number of high school students, and includes private lessons, and a chance to play in chamber music groups and in the Young Artists Symphony Orchestra conducted by Lawrence Smith. He is on the faculty at the California Institute of Arts.

David Ratner of the BU Division of Art will direct the art program that offers college-level course work. Also on the Tanglewood art faculty are Sidney Goodman, teacher at the Philadelphia Museum College of Art; Paul Olsen, associate professor at the Minneapolis School of art; Paul Resika, adjunct professor at Cooper-Union; and James Weeks, head of the graduate painting program at BU.

Rosemarie Beck who teaches painting at Queens College and exhibits at the Peridot Gallery in New York, and Alex Katz, recently featured in a retrospective exhibit at Wadsworth Athenaeum in Hartford, will be visiting artists.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

MAY 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Boston Univ. to Conduct Programs at Tanglewood

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, will begin its seventh year on June 25.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. In addition to their course work and performance activities, they will have the opportunity to attend rhearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the myriad other programs and musical activities of the Berkshire Music Center.

The music program which will run to August 20, includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by concert performer Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute.

In addition, a Young Artists Program offers high school instrumentalists the opportunity to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University.

The art program, offered at both basic and advanced levels, provides studio instruction in drawing and painting and includes problems of figure, still life, landscape and composition.

The Boston University Choral Institute, under the direction of John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt, will offer intensive study of choral repertoire from ancient times through the Renaissance and from the end of the 19th century to the present, with special emphasis on the origins of polyphonic music and contemporary pieces.

John Oliver, who heads choral and vocal activities for the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, is conductor of the Boston University Chorus and the MIT chorus. Miss Hiatt is choral director at Smith College and an authority on music of the Renaissance.

A seminar for choral conductors, also directed by Oliver and Miss Hiatt, will include public performance by all participants.

Bela Boszormenyi - Nagy, who will conduct a piano seminar from June 25 through July 22, will lead participants in a survey and analysis of all works by Brahms and selected works by Schubert. Prof. Nagy, in addition to his concert career, is chairman of the piano department at Boston University.

The Young Artists Program, which involves a limited number of high school students, will include not only private lessons but also an opportunity to perform in chamber music groups and in the Young Artists Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Lawrence Smith. Smith, formerly assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera, is on the faculty of the California Institute of the Arts.

The art program, which offers college - level course work, will be directed by David Ratner, a faculty member in Boston University's Division of Art. Also on the Tanglewood art faculty are Sidney Goodman, recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship and teacher at the Philadelphia Museum College of Art; Paul Olsen, associate professor at the Minneapolis School of Art; Paul Resika, adjunct professor at Cooper Union; and James Weeks, head of the graduate painting program at Boston University.

Rosemarie Beck, who teaches painting at Queens College and exhibits at the Peridot Gallery in New York, and Alex Katz, recently featurd in a retrospective exhibition at the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, will be visiting artists in the Tanglewood program.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUN 22 1972 New England Newsclip

B.U. MUSIC & ART PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight--week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, will begin its seventh year on June 25.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. In addition to their course work and performance activities, they will have the opportunity to attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Myriad other programs and musical activities of the Berkshire Music Center.

The music program, which will run to August 20, includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by concert performer Bela Boszormenyi--Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute.

In addition, a Young Artists Program offers high school instrumentalists the opportunity to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University.

The art program, offered at both basic and advanced levels, provides studio instruction in drawing and painting and includes problems of figure, still life, landscape and composition.

The Boston University Choral Institute, under the direction of John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt, will offer intensive study of choral repertoire from ancient times through the Renaissance and from the end of the 19th century to the present, with special emphasis on the origins of polyphonic music and contemporary pieces.

OBSERVER AND SUNDAY FORUM
BRAINTREE, MASS.
S. 5,600

JUN 4 1972 New England Newsclip

B.U. AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will begin its seventh year on June 25.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
S. 106,767

JUN 4 1972 New England Newsclip

Study Sessions at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center, will begin its seventh year on June 25.

This is not to be confused with the Berkshire Music Center's fellowship program under which tuition and maintenance are provided to those selected through special auditions.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. In addition to their course work and performance activities, they will have the opportunity to attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony, and other programs and musical activities of the Berkshire Center.

The music program, which will run to Aug. 20, includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute, directed by John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt.

In addition, a Young Artists Program offers high school instrumentalists the opportunity to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University.

AFTER MUCH speculation, it has been announced that Donald Mattran is appointed director of the Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford. His new title becomes effective July 1, although he has been acting head of Hartt since July 1, 1971.

MUSIC

Raymond Morin

Mattran succeeds Mosche Paranov who became president emeritus last July. Dr. Paranov, honorary vice chancellor for life of the University of Hartford, will continue his activities at the college as advisor and consultant to the administration, and as opera and orchestral conductor.

Hartt has become increasingly attended by music students in the Worcester area.

Conductor of the Hartt Symphonic Wind Ensemble since joining the Hartt faculty in 1966, Mattran has also served as chairman of the department of music education, director of the summer session, and director of the summer youth program which he established in 1968.

Mattran earned his bachelor and master of music degrees from the University of Michigan, and has taught at the University of New Hampshire and at Boston University.

Conductor, lecturer and clinician at numerous All-State festivals, he is co-author of "A Teacher's Guide to the Literature of Woodwind Instruments."

Donald Mattran

The widely vented financial plight of the New England Conservatory, and the impending demise that has been reported for the School of Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary in New York are proof positive of grave problems confronting schools of music.

All best wishes are extended to Mattran in coping with the responsibilities of his new position.

COMPARED to the other mammoth summer festivals, like Saratoga and Blossom Center, Tanglewood is offering a small number of "special attractions" to attract the younger audience and hopefully make money.

Called the "Popular Artists Series," Tuesday, July 4, 11, 18 and 25, are the dates of the supplementary events.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, Tuesday. Aug. 1. Only one date, Tuesday, Aug 8, has been given for the special festival of contemporary music, honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago which sponsors it.

Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place Tuesday, August 15, to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. Concerts by the Center's students will begin in the afternoon, followed by a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras.

A NEED FOR string bass players and percussionists has been reported by Wolf Trap American University Academy's National Youth Orchestra in Washington, D.C.

The orchestra, which will be holding its second session this summer, is made up of young musicians from all over the country who live and rehearse on American University campus. They perform at Wolf Trap farm park in Virginia, the nation's first national park for the performing arts. Currently, all other seats in the orchestra have been filled.

Musicians accepted to the orchestra will be provided a tuition scholarship for the eight-week session (June 22-Aug. 20). Orchestra members are required to pay for their room and board on campus.

Young players aged 16 through 23 may apply to Eugene Kassman, director, Wolf Trap American University Academy, the American University, Washington, D.C. 20016.

MUSIC AND ARTISTS
NEW YORK, N. Y.
6 TI. A YR. CIRC. N. AVAIL.

FEB MAR 1972

Boston University Tanglewood Institute Lenox, Massachusetts

A choral institute for high school students and a seminar for choral conductors have been added to the summer program offered by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts at the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Massachusetts.

Now in its seventh season, the BU program will also include workshops in applied music, a piano seminar and the Young Artists Program for high school instrumentalists. Edwin E. Stein, dean of the School of Fine and Applied Arts at BU, heads the Tanglewood Institute.

The BU Choral Institute will be eight weeks of intensive study and performance for 35 high school students under the direction of John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt. Oliver, conductor of the Boston University Chorus, is head of vocal and choral activities for the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Hiatt is director of choral activities at Smith College.

The high school musicians will study the choral repertoire from ancient times through the Renaissance and from the end of the 19th century to the present, with a concentration on the origins of polyphonic music. There will also be classes in vocal techniques and diction (French, German and Italian) and some study of solfege.

The choral program is patterned, in a sense, on the highly-acclaimed Young Artists Program, which has been offered as part of the Boston University Tanglewood Institute since 1965. The Young Artists Program provides gifted high school instrumentalists a unique opportunity to experience eight weeks of intensive training and performance in both chamber music and the symphonic repertoire. In private study and master classes with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University, and by attending rehearsals and performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (as well as other musical events at Tanglewood), these young musicians discover the demands and rewards of professionalism in music.

This year the Young Artists Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Lawrence Smith, former assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera and currently on the faculty at the California Institute for the Arts.

The Seminar for Choral Conductors, also under the direction of Oliver and Miss Hiatt, will provide experience in daily conducting for all accepted. There will be in-depth analysis and performance by specialists in Chant, Perotin, Renaissance polyphony, Monteverdi, Schuetz and Bach, with emphasis on post-Webern repertory. In addition to public performances by all conductors, video tape will be used to help improve technical facility.

During the first four weeks of the Tanglewood session, Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, chairman of the piano department at BU, will be offering a seminar which includes a survey and analysis of all works by Brahms, including concerti, piano duets and two-piano pieces. Selected works of Schubert and other composers will also be discussed and performed.

As for applied music, these workshops are aimed at the student who wants to spend the summer in concentrated study of his instrument, with private lessons supplementing the rich musical experiences available at Tanglewood. Like all participants in the BU program, those enrolled in the applied music workshops have the privilege of attending rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the myriad other musical events of the Berkshire Music Center.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,285

MAY 25 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

MAY 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Boston Univ. to Conduct Programs at Tanglewood

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight - week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, will begin its seventh year on June 25.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. In addition to their course work and performance activities, they will have the opportunity to attend rhearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the myriad other programs and musical activities of the Berkshire Music Center.

The music program which will run to August 20, includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by concert performer Bela Boszormenyi - Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute.

In addition, a Young Artists Program offers high school instrumentalists the opportunity to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University.

The art program, offered at both basic and advanced levels, provides studio instruction in drawing and painting and includes problems of figure, still life, landscape and composition.

The Boston University Choral Institute, under the direction of John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt, will offer intensive study of choral repertoire from ancient times through the Renaissance and from the end of the 19th century to the present, with special emphasis on the origins of polyphonic music and contemporary pieces.

John Oliver, who heads choral and vocal activities for the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, is conductor of the Boston University Chorus and the MIT chorus. Miss Hiatt is choral director at Smith College and an authority on music of the Renaissance.

A seminar for choral conductors, also directed by Oliver and Miss Hiatt, will include public performance by all participants.

Bela Boszormenyi - Nagy, who will conduct a piano seminar from June 25 through July 22, will lead participants in a survey and analysis of all works by Brahms and selected works by Schubert. Prof. Nagy, in addition to his concert career, is chairman of the piano department at Boston University.

The Young Artists Program, which involves a limited number of high school students, will include not only private lessons but also an opportunity to perform in chamber music groups and in the Young Artists Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Lawrence Smith. Smith, formerly assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera, is on the faculty of the California Institute of the Arts.

The art program, which offers college - level course work, will be directed by David Ratner, a faculty member in Boston University's Division of Art. Also on the Tanglewood art faculty are Sidney Goodman, recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship and teacher at the Philadelphia Museum College of Art; Paul Olsen, associate professor at the Minneapolis School of Art; Paul Resika, adjunct professor at Cooper Union; and James Weeks, head of the graduate painting program at Boston University.

Rosemarie Beck, who teaches painting at Queens College and exhibits at the Peridot Gallery in New York, and Alex Katz, recently featurd in a retrospective exhibition at the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, will be visiting artists in the Tanglewood program.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUN 22 1972 New England Newsclip

B.U. MUSIC & ART PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight--week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, will begin its seventh year on June 25.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. In addition to their course work and performance activities, they will have the opportunity to attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Myriad other programs and musical activities of the Berkshire Music Center.

The music program, which will run to August 20, includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by concert performer Bela Boszormenyi–Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute.

In addition, a Young Artists Program offers high school instrumentalists the opportunity to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University.

The art program, offered at both basic and advanced levels, provides studio instruction in drawing and painting and includes problems of figure, still life, landscape and composition.

The Boston University Choral Institute, under the direction of John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt, will offer intensive study of choral repertoire from ancient times through the Renaissance and from the end of the 19th century to the present, with special emphasis on the origins of polyphonic music and contemporary pieces.

BU Program Listed For Tanglewood

Boston University at Tanglewood is an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Applied and Fine Arts in association with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox. On June 25 it starts its seventh year.

As formerly, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. Besides course work and performances, they may attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and many other programs and musical events at the Berkshire Music Center.

Running to Aug. 20, the music program includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by concert performer Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute. Also, a young artists program offers high school instrumentalists a chance to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and faculty from BU.

Offered at both basic and advanced levels, the art program provides studio instruction in drawing and painting and includes problems of figure, still life, landscape and composition. The BU Choral institute directed by John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt gives intensive study of choral repertoire from ancient through Renaissance, and from the end of the 19th century to the present. Mr. Oliver heads choral and vocal activities for the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, and conducts the BU Chorus and the MIT Chorus. Miss Hiatt is choral director at Smith College and an authority on Renaissance music. Together, they will direct a seminar for choral conductors to include a public performance.

Prof. Nagy, who will conduct a piano seminar from June 25 through July 22, will lead participants in a survey and analysis fo all works by Brahms, and selects Schubert works. Besides his concert carrer, he is chairman of the BU piano department.

Young artists program is open to a limited number of high school students, and includes private lessons, and a chance to play in chamber music groups and in the Young Artists Symphony Orchestra conducted by Lawrence Smith. He is on the faculty at the California Institute of Arts.

David Ratner of the BU Division of Art will direct the art program that offers college-level course work. Also on the Tanglewood art faculty are Sidney Goodman, teacher at the Philadelphia Museum College of Art; Paul Olsen, associate professor at the Minneapolis School of art; Paul Resika, adjunct professor at Cooper-Union; and James Weeks, head of the graduate painting program at BU.

Rosemarie Beck who teaches painting at Queens College and exhibits at the Peridot Gallery in New York, and Alex Katz, recently featured in a retrospective exhibit at Wadsworth Athenaeum in Hartford, will be visiting artists.

OBSERVER AND SUNDAY FORUM
BRAINTREE, MASS.
S. 5,600

JUN 4 1972 New England Newsclip

B.U. AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Mass., will begin its seventh year on June 25.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
S. 196,797

JUN 4 1972 New England Newsclip

Study Sessions at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Boston University at Tanglewood, an eight-week program in music and art conducted by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Center, will begin its seventh year on June 25.

This is not to be confused with the Berkshire Music Center's fellowship program under which tuition and maintenance are provided to those selected through special auditions.

As in previous years, the Boston University Tanglewood programs will enroll nearly 300 participants. In addition to their course work and performance activities, they will have the opportunity to attend rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony, and other programs and musical activities of the Berkshire Center.

The music program, which will run to Aug. 20, includes instruction in applied music and choral conducting, a piano seminar led by Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, and the Boston University Choral Institute, directed by John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt.

In addition, a Young Artists Program offers high school instrumentalists the opportunity to study with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University.

AFTER MUCH speculation, it has been announced that Donald Mattran is appointed director of the Hartt College of Music, University of Hartford. His new title becomes effective July 1, although he has been acting head of Hartt since July 1, 1971.

MUSIC

Raymond Morin

Mattran succeeds Mosche Paranov who became president emeritus last July. Dr. Paranov, honorary vice chancellor for life of the University of Hartford, will continue his activities at the college as advisor and consultant to the administration, and as opera and orchestral conductor.

Hartt has become increasingly attended by music students in the Worcester area.

Conductor of the Hartt Symphonic Wind Ensemble since joining the Hartt faculty in 1966, Mattran has also served as chairman of the department of music education, director of the summer session, and director of the summer youth program which he established in 1968.

Mattran earned his bachelor and master of music degrees from the University of Michigan, and has taught at the University of New Hampshire and at Boston University.

Conductor, lecturer and clinician at numerous All-State festivals, he is co-author of "A Teacher's Guide to the Literature of Woodwind Instruments."

Donald Mattran

The widely vented financial plight of the New England Conservatory, and the impending demise that has been reported for the School of Sacred Music at Union Theological Seminary in New York are proof positive of grave problems confronting schools of music.

All best wishes are extended to Mattran in coping with the responsibilities of his new position.

COMPARED to the other mammoth summer festivals, like Saratoga and Blossom Center, Tanglewood is offering a small number of "special attractions" to attract the younger audience and hopefully make money.

Called the "Popular Artists Series," Tuesday, July 4, 11, 18 and 25, are the dates of the supplementary events.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, Tuesday, Aug. 1. Only one date, Tuesday, Aug 8, has been given for the special festival of contemporary music, honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago which sponsors it.

Tanglewood-on-Parade will take place Tuesday, August 15, to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. Concerts by the Center's students will begin in the afternoon, followed by a gala evening concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras.

A NEED FOR string bass players and percussionists has been reported by Wolf Trap American University Academy's National Youth Orchestra in Washington, D.C.

The orchestra, which will be holding its second session this summer, is made up of young musicians from all over the country who live and rehearse on American University campus. They perform at Wolf Trap farm park in Virginia, the nation's first national park for the performing arts. Currently, all other seats in the orchestra have been filled.

Musicians accepted to the orchestra will be provided a tuition scholarship for the eight-week session (June 22-Aug. 20). Orchestra members are required to pay for their room and board on campus.

Young players aged 16 through 23 may apply to Eugene Kassman, director, Wolf Trap American University Academy, the American University, Washington, D.C. 20016.

MUSIC AND ARTISTS
NEW YORK, N. Y.
6 TI. A YR. CIRC. N. AVAIL.

FEB MAR 1972

Boston University Tanglewood Institute Lenox, Massachusetts

A choral institute for high school students and a seminar for choral conductors have been added to the summer program offered by Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts at the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox, Massachusetts.

Now in its seventh season, the BU program will also include workshops in applied music, a piano seminar and the Young Artists Program for high school instrumentalists. Edwin E. Stein, dean of the School of Fine and Applied Arts at BU, heads the Tanglewood Institute.

The BU Choral Institute will be eight weeks of intensive study and performance for 35 high school students under the direction of John Oliver and Iva Dee Hiatt. Oliver, conductor of the Boston University Chorus, is head of vocal and choral activities for the Berkshire Music Center. Miss Hiatt is director of choral activities at Smith College.

The high school musicians will study the choral repertoire from ancient times through the Renaissance and from the end of the 19th century to the present, with a concentration on the origins of polyphonic music. There will also be classes in vocal techniques and diction (French, German and Italian) and some study of solfege.

The choral program is patterned, in a sense, on the highly-acclaimed Young Artists Program, which has been offered as part of the Boston University Tanglewood Institute since 1965. The Young Artists Program provides gifted high school instrumentalists a unique opportunity to experience eight weeks of intensive training and performance in both chamber music and the symphonic repertoire. In private study and master classes with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and faculty from Boston University, and by attending rehearsals and performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (as well as other musical events at Tanglewood), these young musicians discover the demands and rewards of professionalism in music.

This year the Young Artists Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Lawrence Smith, former assistant conductor at the Metropolitan Opera and currently on the faculty at the California Institute for the Arts.

The Seminar for Choral Conductors, also under the direction of Oliver and Miss Hiatt, will provide experience in daily conducting for all accepted. There will be in-depth analysis and performance by specialists in Chant, Perotin, Renaissance polyphony, Monteverdi, Schuetz and Bach, with emphasis on post-Webern repertory. In addition to public performances by all conductors, video tape will be used to help improve technical facility.

During the first four weeks of the Tanglewood session, Bela Boszormenyi-Nagy, chairman of the piano department at BU, will be offering a seminar which includes a survey and analysis of all works by Brahms, including concerti, piano duets and two-piano pieces. Selected works of Schubert and other composers will also be discussed and performed.

As for applied music, these workshops are aimed at the student who wants to spend the summer in concentrated study of his instrument, with private lessons supplementing the rich musical experiences available at Tanglewood. Like all participants in the BU program, those enrolled in the applied music workshops have the privilege of attending rehearsals and concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the myriad other musical events of the Berkshire Music Center.

NEWS ADVERTISER
WESTFIELD, MASS.
D. 5,000

JUN 29 1972 New England Newsclip

1972 Berkshire Festival Opens Friday at Tanglewood

LENOX — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday in Lenox and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislow Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Young Musicians Gather

LENOX — The 450 young musicians arriving Sunday afternoon for a summer of study at Tanglewood were advised to fight public indifference by Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight.

Indifference Is Foe

He was principal speaker at an 82-minute program opening the thirtieth session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's eight-week summer school for the advanced study of music.

The students came from throughout the United States and 11 foreign countries. They will be involved in all phases of music study with a view toward professional careers.

Dwight, in a 23-minute talk, told them "You enemy is not a hostile public. It is an indifferent public," and he advised them to become involved in their communities to gain public support and to keep the pressure on their legislatures to increase government support.

Seija Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, music director designate and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and acting director of the center, was more specific in his 17-minute, off-the-cuff welcoming talk.

He told the students they must study music as they study language. "You have to be with it every day," he said. If I know every note—in my ear — then I can do something with my hands. If you know every note, then you can use your heart, your love."

Prokofieff's Sonata Opus 94 was played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Gilbert Kalish, pianist, both members of the center faculty.

The program ended, as it has every year since 1940, with the students singing, without accompaniment, Randall Thompson's "Alleluia."

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Lt. Gov. Dwight Tells Students Indifference Is The Enemy

Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight told 450 young musicians arriving at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon for a summer of study to fight public indifference, "your real enemy."

Dwight was the principal speaker at a program opening the 30th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school for the advanced study of music.

Dwight stressed the theme that the musician's real problem was overcoming public indifference, not public hostility, and he advised them to become involved in their communities, to gain public support and to keep the presseur on their legislatures to increase government support.

Seija Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, music director designate and conductor of the BSO and acting director of the center, told the students dedication was crucial to success.

"You have to be with it every day," he said. "If I know every note—in my ear—then I can do something with my hands. If you know every note, then you can use your heart, your love."

The program ended, as it has every year since 1940, with the students singing Thompson's "Alleleluia."

BOSTON AFTER DARK
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 75,000

JUN 27 1972 New England Newsclip

The Other Kind of Long Hair Music

BY RICHARD BUELL

Culture will abound in the American countryside this summer. For instance, at Saratoga Springs, New York, there will be the New York City Ballet, Liberace, Bugs Bunny, and Eugene Ormandy; at the Temple University Music Festival and Institute in Ambler, Pennsylvania, the devout may choose from among "Cosi fan Tutte," Johnny Mathis; Kathryn Grayson, Ferrante and Teicher, and a dozen concerts by the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

The names of particular festival-hopping performers crop up in a lot of brochures: if Sha Na Na and Alfred Brendel have not become fast friends by the end of summer, it will not be for lack of opportunity.

Some two dozen places in New England will have concerts to offer. These are given below state by state, followed by a selection from some of the more conspicuous happenings outside the area. Last and (numerically) least, we call your attention to the shamefully meagre fare available to stay-at-homes in the Greater Boston area. It may be good, but it isn't enouh.

MASSACHUSETTS

America's oldest music festival runs from June 30 to August 20 at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 210-acre estate in the Berkshires. This year there will be eight weekends of B.S.O. concerts (twenty-four programs, eleven conductors), a Festival of Contemporary Music, Open Rehearsals, vocal and instrumental concerts out of the Berkshire Music Center (the BSO's summer school), Weekend Preludes (free recitals by orchestra members and guests), and more. Highlights: Mahler symphonies conducted on consecutive Sundays by James Levine (No. 6), Michael Tilson Thomas (No. 5), and Seiji Ozawa (No. 8, the "Symphony of a Thousand"). The four Brahms symphonies will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, (2 and 4), Colin Davis, (3) and Bruno Maderna (1). Choral works: Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons," Davis the Berlioz "Te Deum" and Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces." Karel Ancerl will conduct Dvorak. Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli, Earle Brown, Charles Ives, Pavel Vejvanovsky, Carl Ruggles, Charles Wuorinen, Gyorgy Ligeti, and Olivier Messiaen will also figure on the B.S.O.'s programs, please note. The relevant address and number: Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240, (413) 637-1600.

On a different scale, the New Marlboro Chamber Players will be giving seven concerts, all on Saturdays at 8:30 P.M., July 8 to Aug. 12, in the Red Fox Music Barn, Route 57, New Marlboro, Mass.

The Metropolitan Opera Studio (July 15), pianist Stanley Hummel (Aug. 12), the Orpheus Trio (Aug. 26), the Rochester Chamber Soloists (Sept. 17), and the Beaux Arts Trio of N.Y. (Oct. 1) will appear in the south Mountain Concerts, Saturdays at 3 P.M. Information from Box 23, Pittsfield, Mass. 01201.

The Federated Church in Charlemont, Mass. is down the road a piece from Zoar, Rowe, Colrain, and Griswoldville. Mohawk Trail concerts will be given there July 22 to Aug. 29.

July 6 to Aug. 3, concerts at U Mass., Amherst, undoubtedly the finest given in that Zip Code area (01002).

CONNECTICUT

Yale in Norfolk. Orchestral, chamber, and operatic performances will take place July 1 to Aug. 25 on the Ellen Battell Stoeckel Estate, Norfolk, Connecticut 06058. The works to be performed include Carlisle Floyd's "Of Mice and Men" and Richard Strauss's "Ariadne auf Naxos," the Ravel String Quartet, the Brahms German Requiem, and Smetana's "From My Life." The Guarneri String Quartet, oboist Robert Bloom, violinist Broadus Earle, cellist Aldo Parisot, conductors Gustav Meier, Otto Werner Mueller, and Fenno Heath, and the Yale Summer Orchestra will be among the participants. The box office phone: (203) 542-5537.

At Music Mountain, Falls Village, Connecticut: concerts on ten Saturdays at 3 P.M. (July 1 to Sept. 2) and two Sundays at 4 P.M. (July 2, July 30) by the Berkshire String Quartet and visiting artists.

The 14th Summer Chamber Music Festival of the Silvermine String Quartet, pianist Murray Perahia, clarinetist Keith Wilson, "Poem in October" by John Corigliano, Jr., in Sunday concerts at 8 P.M. on July 16 and 30, Aug. 13 and 27. (203) 966-5617.

continued on page 34

Seiji Ozawa does his thing – just one of music happenings this summer.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUN 25 1972

Tourist Attractions

Berkshire Museums Are Popular

Located in the center of Pittsfield, the Berkshire Museum boasts a record attendance for an establishment of its size in the state. Included in this summer's program will be a "preview of a European Tour," July 29 and Aug. 5, in which cellist Luis Leguia and pianist Robert Freeman will be heard. Leguia is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which plays its usual summer festival at nearby Tanglewood, and Freeman is on the music faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has been soloist with the Boston Pops, Epslanade, and Princeton Chamber Orchestra. The concert will be presented in the Museum's air conditioned theatre.

NEWS ADVERTISER
WESTFIELD, MASS.
D. 5,000

JUN 29 1972 New England Newsclip

1972 Berkshire Festival Opens Friday at Tanglewood

LENOX — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday in Lenox and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 20.

The season begins with an All-Bach concert conducted by the Music Director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, Mr. Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Mr. Ozawa will open the second weekend with an All-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglewood season. On Saturday, July 22, Leonard Bernstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday, Aug. 12; and Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on Friday, July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1, 5, 6, and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg on July 14 and 15, and on Sunday, July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz "Te Deum" (both conducted by Colin Davis) Haydn's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy and Stanislow Skrowaczewski. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer, John Browning, Misha Dichter, Alicia De Larrocha, Peter Serkin, Alexis Weissenberg, Earl Wild, Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony; principal flute of the Boston Symphony Doriot Anthony Dwyer; principal bassoon Sherman Walt; principal oboe Ralph Gomberg; principal cello Jules Eskin and harp for the Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Singers performing at the Festival include Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Jessye Norman, Richard Lewis, Deborah O'Brien, Linda Phillips, Susan Clickner, Eunice Alberts, John Alexander, William Dooley and Saverio Barbieri.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver, will appear during the Tanglewood season, as will the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, and the St. Paul's School Choir.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Tuesday, Aug. 1, and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Young Musicians Gather

LENOX — The 450 young musicians arriving Sunday afternoon for a summer of study at Tanglewood were advised to fight public indifference by Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight.

Indifference Is Foe

He was principal speaker at an 82-minute program opening the thirtieth session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's eight-week summer school for the advanced study of music.

The students came from throughout the United States and 11 foreign countries. They will be involved in all phases of music study with a view toward professional careers.

Dwight, in a 23-minute talk, told them "You enemy is not a hostile public. It is an indifferent public," and he advised them to become involved in their communities to gain public support and to keep the pressure on their legislatures to increase government support.

Seija Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, music director designate and conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and acting director of the center, was more specific in his 17-minute, off-the-cuff welcoming talk.

He told the students they must study music as they study language. "You have to be with it every day," he said. If I know every note—in my ear — then I can do something with my hands. If you know every note, then you can use your heart, your love."

Prokofieff's Sonata Opus 94 was played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Gilbert Kalish, pianist, both members of the center faculty.

The program ended, as it has every year since 1940, with the students singing, without accompaniment, Randall Thompson's "Alleluia."

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Lt. Gov. Dwight Tells Students Indifference Is The Enemy

Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight told 450 young musicians arriving at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon for a summer of study to fight public indifference, "your real enemy."

Dwight was the principal speaker at a program opening the 30th session of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school for the advanced study of music.

Dwight stressed the theme that the musician's real problem was overcoming public indifference, not public hostility, and he advised them to become involved in their communities, to gain public support and to keep the presseur on their legislatures to increase government support.

Seija Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, music director designate and conductor of the BSO and acting director of the center, told the students dedication was crucial to success.

"You have to be with it every day," he said. "If I know every note—in my ear—then I can do something with my hands. If you know every note, then you can use your heart, your love."

The program ended, as it has every year since 1940, with the students singing Thompson's "Alleleluia."

BOSTON AFTER DARK
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 75,000

JUN 27 1972 New England Newsclip

The Other Kind of Long Hair Music

BY RICHARD BUELL

Culture will abound in the American countryside this summer. For instance, at Saratoga Springs, New York, there will be the New York City Ballet, Liberace, Bugs Bunny, and Eugene Ormandy; at the Temple University Music Festival and Institute in Ambler, Pennsylvania, the devout may choose from among "Cosi fan Tutte," Johnny Mathis; Kathryn Grayson, Ferrante and Teicher, and a dozen concerts by the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

The names of particular festival-hopping performers crop up in a lot of brochures: if Sha Na Na and Alfred Brendel have not become fast friends by the end of summer, it will not be for lack of opportunity.

Some two dozen places in New England will have concerts to offer. These are given below state by state, followed by a selection from some of the more conspicuous happenings outside the area. Last and (numerically) least, we call your attention to the shamefully meagre fare available to stay-at-homes in the Greater Boston area. It may be good, but it isn't enouh.

MASSACHUSETTS

America's oldest music festival runs from June 30 to August 20 at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 210-acre estate in the Berkshires. This year there will be eight weekends of B.S.O. concerts (twenty-four programs, eleven conductors), a Festival of Contemporary Music, Open Rehearsals, vocal and instrumental concerts out of the Berkshire Music Center (the BSO's summer school), Weekend Preludes (free recitals by orchestra members and guests), and more. Highlights: Mahler symphonies conducted on consecutive Sundays by James Levine (No. 6), Michael Tilson Thomas (No. 5), and Seiji Ozawa (No. 8, the "Symphony of a Thousand"). The four Brahms symphonies will be conducted by Leonard Bernstein, (2 and 4), Colin Davis, (3) and Bruno Maderna (1). Choral works: Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons," Davis the Berlioz "Te Deum" and Verdi's "Four Sacred Pieces." Karel Ancerl will conduct Dvorak. Andrea and Giovanni Gabrieli, Earle Brown, Charles Ives, Pavel Vejvanovsky, Carl Ruggles, Charles Wuorinen, Gyorgy Ligeti, and Olivier Messiaen will also figure on the B.S.O.'s programs, please note. The relevant address and number: Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240, (413) 637-1600.

On a different scale, the New Marlboro Chamber Players will be giving seven concerts, all on Saturdays at 8:30 P.M., July 8 to Aug. 12, in the Red Fox Music Barn, Route 57, New Marlboro, Mass.

The Metropolitan Opera Studio (July 15), pianist Stanley Hummel (Aug. 12), the Orpheus Trio (Aug. 26), the Rochester Chamber Soloists (Sept. 17), and the Beaux Arts Trio of N.Y. (Oct. 1) will appear in the south Mountain Concerts, Saturdays at 3 P.M. Information from Box 23, Pittsfield, Mass. 01201.

The Federated Church in Charlemont, Mass. is down the road a piece from Zoar, Rowe, Colrain, and Griswoldville. Mohawk Trail concerts will be given there July 22 to Aug. 29.

July 6 to Aug. 3, concerts at U Mass., Amherst, undoubtedly the finest given in that Zip Code area (01002).

CONNECTICUT

Yale in Norfolk. Orchestral, chamber, and operatic performances will take place July 1 to Aug. 25 on the Ellen Battell Stoeckel Estate, Norfolk, Connecticut 06058. The works to be performed include Carlisle Floyd's "Of Mice and Men" and Richard Strauss's "Ariadne auf Naxos," the Ravel String Quartet, the Brahms German Requiem, and Smetana's "From My Life." The Guarneri String Quartet, oboist Robert Bloom, violinist Broadus Earle, cellist Aldo Parisot, conductors Gustav Meier, Otto Werner Mueller, and Fenno Heath, and the Yale Summer Orchestra will be among the participants. The box office phone: (203) 542-5537.

At Music Mountain, Falls Village, Connecticut: concerts on ten Saturdays at 3 P.M. (July 1 to Sept. 2) and two Sundays at 4 P.M. (July 2, July 30) by the Berkshire String Quartet and visiting artists.

The 14th Summer Chamber Music Festival of the Silvermine String Quartet, pianist Murray Perahia, clarinetist Keith Wilson, "Poem in October" by John Corigliano, Jr., in Sunday concerts at 8 P.M. on July 16 and 30, Aug. 13 and 27. (203) 966-5671.

continued on page 34

Seiji Ozawa does his thing – just one of music happenings this summer.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUN 25 1972

Tourist Attractions

Berkshire Museums Are Popular

Located in the center of Pittsfield, the Berkshire Museum boasts a record attendance for an establishment of its size in the state. Included in this summer's program will be a "preview of a European Tour," July 29 and Aug. 5, in which cellist Luis Leguia and pianist Robert Freeman will be heard. Leguia is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which plays its usual summer festival at nearby Tanglewood, and Freeman is on the music faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has been soloist with the Boston Pops, Epslanade, and Princeton Chamber Orchestra. The concert will be presented in the Museum's air conditioned theatre.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Lt. Gov. Dwight Issues Challenge To Arts to Widen Support Base

By RICHARD CONWAY

Sunday afternoon, Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight issued a challenge to all musicians and music enthusiasts throughout the commonwealth.

Speaking at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, he said that the arts would have to find ways of broadening their base of support; and that if they wanted more government aid they would have to become "professionally involved in their communities" and "keep the pressure on their public officials."

Dwight said that government support "comes with recognition of need," and that not enough citizens recognize the need for the arts. Although in his 18 months of office he had spoken several times for the arts, he said that he had received fewer than half a dozen letters supporting his efforts for the arts and humanities.

Praising the work of the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, Dwight paraphrased a familiar quotation by saying "Never have so few done so much with so little." The council began in 1966 with a budget of $25,000. This past year, its budget was $106,000. The current proposed budget would double that figure. But Dwight pointed out the contrast of this figure with the $18 million arts budget of New York State.

The lieutenant governor said that although the general public was aware of the arts and somehow felt that they were important, the "Words of praise do not translate into dollars."

Dwight told his listeners that they must educate the public to the arts as they re and find ways of putting the arts into daily life. He emphasized that this must be done without "diluting the product." The arts must maintain their standards.

He felt that the public was indifferent, not hostile. If the needs and importance of the arts could be established in the public mind, Dwight felt the necessary support would come.

While the lieutenant governor was issuing his challenge, Seiji Ozawa, the Center's artistic director, was issuing the students yet another. His, of course, was musical.

Restating his theme of last year, Ozawa told the students that the most important thing was to train the ear, that hours should be spent on solfeggi. The musician should be able to hear every note in his ear without having to play it.

Ozawa told his audience of some of the values the students should get from their eight weeks at the center; but that it was the learning, the study, the striving for perfection that should motivate their lives.

Opening the rain - dampened ceremonies, Boston Symphony Orchestra manager Thomas D. Perry Jr. said that "Most great musicians have a yearning to teach." He noted that this was one of the major reasons for the Music Center's existence. This year some 450 students from across this country and from 11 foreign countries would study at the center.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 13 1972 New England Newsclip

Dwight To Give Convocation At Berkshire

Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight of Wayland and South Hadley will deliver the convocation at the official opening of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood June 25. The Center is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer academy for the advanced study of music.

Music at the event, which will be open to the public and to the reception which follows in the formal gardens, will be provided by members of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

The program will start at 2:30 p.m.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Dwight urges Tanglewood students to campaign for state aid to arts

By ANNE-GERARD FLYNN

Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight yesterday told 450 music students at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood that the performing artist must prove to the state that the arts are in need of public funding.

Dwight told the audience, which nearly filled Tanglewood's Theatre-Concert Hall, that faced with inflation and spiraling labor costs, "the arts must derive support from a broader base."

However, the lieutenant governor stressed that "before there is major public funding of any program, there must be major public support." He emphasized that no public support would be forthcoming unless musicians and other performing artists, themselves, applied pressure to elected officials.

Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight

Whitestone

Seiji Ozawa

The wrong image

"Keep your legislators aware of what you are doing by placing them on mailing lists. And let them know what you could be doing with more money," Dwight told the Tanglewood supporters.

"The arts and patrons of the arts, have long had an image of belonging to an elite social group," Dwight said. "The image may be unfair and inaccurate, but it is there. Many of my constituents see you as performing your music in velvet-lined salons before audiences of mink-draped ladies sipping jasmine tea. Of course, this is an exaggeration and, of course, it is inaccurate. You offer unparalleled service to large numbers of people. But your services must be recognized and understood and used by an even larger public if they are to be appreciated in terms of public support.

"You must understand that the dollars with which we administer the workings of government are the taxpayers' dollars and that competition for these dolars is intense. The arts must compete with the more immediate social concerns of welfare, education, transportation, housing and all the rest . . . and this competition takes place in the proverbial goldfish bowl."

The Republican lieutenant governor contrasted the $18 million budget of the New York State Council on the Arts with the $200,000 budget in Massachusetts. Dwight reported that the large New York budget "did not come without hard work on the part of those concerned with the plight of the arts."

There's no campaign

Stating that since his 18 months in office he has received few letters urging public support for the arts, he continued, "Nor will it happen here without a concerted, well-organized effort."

While Dwight addressed himself to the economic problems of Tanglewood, Seiji Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Music Center, gave a short speech on the educational problems confronting the students.

"What is a good conductor? One who moves his arms up and down," asked Ozawa, who spoke without notes and occasionally paused to lean on his elbow and think. "No, a good conductor, a good musician, is one who first hears every note in his ear, and then moves his arms or uses his heart to expand the meaning of his music."

Ozawa concluded by telling the students, "I became a father about one-half a year ago, and when I saw the face of my child when sleeping or drinking milk, my dreams for the future became so big. This is the wonderful thing about young people. I know my own future," and here the conductor paused to move his hands like the steps of a ladder over his head, "but your futures are big like this," and Ozawa opened his arms like a fan to either side.

Birds join sonata

Other speakers on the program were Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris, who welcomed the students as cochairman of the Tanglewood Friends organization, and Thomas D. Perry Jr., BSO manager, who read a telegram from Tanglewood artistic director, Gunther Schuller.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist for the BSO, and pianist Gilbert Kalish performed Prokofieff's sonata for flute and piano, Mrs. Dwyer's expressive playing inspired a few birds to chirp along during the andante and the delicate dancing tones of the flute seemed especially appropriate against the constant wash of the rain on the wooden building.

John Oliver conducted the students in Randall Thompson's "Alleluia" commissioned for the opening of the Center 30 years ago. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the center, was in the audience for yesterday's ceremony.

Refreshments, usually served in the formal gardens, had to be served under the theatre's colonade. No one's spirits, however, seemed affected by the weather.

Ethel Olsen, a 19-year-old pianist from Franklinville, N.J., said she had been looking forward to coming to Tanglewood since she was 10, and was eager to start the piano seminar on her "idol," Brahms. Friend Kathleen Anderson, a pianist and bassoon player, is back for a second year at the Center because "I figured I still had room for self-improvement so here I am giving it another try."

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 24 1972 New England Newscl

Lt. Gov. Dwight to speak tomorrow at Tanglewood

The opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer academy for the advanced study of music, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Tanglewood Theatre. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Lt. Gov. Donald Dwight will be the main speaker. Seiji Ozawa, artistic director of Tanglewood and newly appointed music director of the Boston Symphony, will also speak.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Gilbert Kalish, faculty memzers, will perform the Prokofieff Sonata for Flute and Piano. Opus 64. John Oliver will conduct the students in Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written for the opening of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940.

Refreshments will follow in the formal gardens.

36

Seiji Ozawa will open Tanglewood with all-Bach concert on June 20

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens June 30 and will continue through Aug. 20. The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Sieji Ozawa. On July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler shyphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglwood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglwood season. On July 22, Leonard Berstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haynd's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Staislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Betthoven Piano Concerto No 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahmns Piano Concerto No 2; Alicia De Larocha performing the Schumann Piano Concerto; Peter Ser' a performing in the Beethove Triple Concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

CHRONICLE
WILLIMANTIC, CONN.
D. 8,500
MAR 4 1972
New England Newsclip

THE BOSTON HERALD Traveler
D. 210,540 S. 260,961
JUN 4 1972
New England Newsclip

A summer of Ozawa

by Harry Neville

Boston won't have much of a chance to check out the Symphony's new music director designate next season. Because of prior commitments, Seiji Ozawa will conduct only a single program during 1972-73, and that is scheduled to be heard on Feb. 13, 15, 16 and 17.

There will be ample opportunity, however, to observe Ozawa in action this summer at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival begins with Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program on June 30, an all-Haydn program ("The Seasons") July 2. Ozawa will be equally busy the following weekend when he conducts the Friday and Sunday concerts of July 7 and July 9.

The latter programs are of unusual interest for a number of reasons, not only because of the soloists but also because Ozawa has a particularly congenial way with the composers to be played. Friday's program is all-Mozart: the "Haffner" Serenade, the Concerto for Flute and Harp with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Ann Hobson, and the Bassoon Concerto with soloist Sherman Walt.

Sunday's program includes one of Haydn's "Sturm und Drang" symphonies (No. 47 in G), Ravel's "Mother Goose" Suite, and Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto with soloist Garrick Ohlsson. Ozawa will also conduct the concerts of July 16 and Aug. 18 as well as the summer's final concert on Aug. 20, which will feature Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

As in past Tanglewood seasons, each weekend will include five principal events. A weekend "Prelude" concert of solo or chamber music takes place each Friday at 7 p.m. These events are free to ticketholders of the Friday night orchestral concerts at 9 p.m. Each Saturday features an open rehearsal at 10:30 in the morning plus the regular evening concert at 8:30, while concert time on Sundays is 2:30 p.m.

The Saturday open rehearsals are attractive for a number of reasons, and they should be investigated by everyone who makes weekend plans for Tanglewood. The rehearsals are devoted to preparation of the Sunday afternoon concert—the concert that ordinarily contains the "big" work of the weekend.

Thus, on July 1 you would witness Ozawa rehearsing Haydn's "The Seasons," while on July 15 the same conductor will be putting together Beethoven's Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy (with soloists Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin).

It should be interesting, too, to observe James Levine at work with Mahler's Sixth (July 29), Michael Tilson Thomas with Mahler's Fifth (Aug. 5), and Colin Davis with the Berlioz Te Deum (Aug. 12). The final open rehearsal of Aug. 19 will feature Ozawa preparing Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

Fascinating as it is to watch the "inner workings" of an orchestra, the rehearsals have other advantages as well. At $2.50, tickets are dirt cheap. Seats are unreserved and the unaffluent concert-goer thus gets an unusual chance to enjoy the best locations.

Tanglewood has an exciting array of conductors this summer. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Brahms' Second and Fourth Symphonies July 22, and Eugene Ormandy's July 29 program will include two of the works he does best: Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben." Colin Davis will conduct all three concerts of the seventh weekend, Aug. 11, 12 and 13.

Soloist of the Friday night concert will be soprano Jessye Norman, whose recordings and European reviews suggest that she is a major vocal discovery. Other conductors to appear are Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. The annual Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood concert will be given Aug. 1, and Arthur Fiedler will of course conduct.

Other special events taking place during mid-week will be Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation. Brochures with a complete schedule of BSO concerts are available from Symphony Hall, whose press department reports brisk ticket sales this year. A word to the wise, etc . . .

San Jose Mercury-News
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA
SUN. 184,103
JUN 4 1972

S.F. Musical Director Sets Guest Appearances

Conductors, unlike most people, do not apparently take summer vacations.

Seiji Ozawa, musical director of the San Francisco Symphony, left immediately after the close of the 1971-72 season for Tokyo to guest-conduct the Japan Philharmonic.

SEIJI OZAWA
. . . Hectic Summer

He will return in mid-June for a recording session with his west coast orchestra, originally scheduled in May, and then participate in the Tanglewood Festival the end of June and August.

In between appearances at Tanglewood, he will conduct concerts of the Chicago and Toronto symphonies and the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as performances of the Dresden Philharmonic and during the International Salzburg Festival in Austria.

After closing the Tanglewood Festival in August, Ozawa will conduct the Lucerne Festival in Switzerland, and then on to Finland for concerts with the Helsinki Philharmonic.

If the Japan Philharmonic finds a new sponsor and survives, Ozawa will fly back to Tokyo to open the season in September.

His time will be divided in October between several concert series with the La Scala Orchestra of Milan, the RAI Orchestra of Radio Italy in Rome and the Berlin Philharmonic in Germany. He will make recordings with the Berlin orchestra.

In November Ozawa will be back in Toronto for a series of performances and will take the Philadelphia Orchestra on a small tour of the east coast.

After this hectic summer schedule, Maestro Ozawa will return to open a third season as conductor and music director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

San Francisco Chronicle
THE VOICE OF THE WEST
D. 480,233 SAT. 450,227
MAY 23 1972

A Busy Summer For Seiji Ozawa

Seiji Ozawa, who finishes the San Francisco Symphony season this week, will tour major orchestras on three continents before returning to San Francisco to open the 1972-73 season on November 29. He leaves on Sunday for Tokyo with the Japan Philharmonic.

A recording session with the San Francisco Symphony in mid-June will bring him back to the Bay Area before his Tanglewood festival concert in late June and August. Between, he will guest conduct concerts of the Chicago Symphony, Toronto Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as concerts of the Dresden Philharmonic at the Salzburg Festival.

After closing the Tanglewood Festival in August, Ozawa conducts at the Lucerne Festival, and then to Finland for concerts with the Helsinki Philharmonic. If the Japan Philharmonic survives the summer (the orchestra must find new sponsors this summer), Ozawa will open its season in September.

October will be divided between concert series with the La Scala Orchestra of Milan, the RAI Orchestra of Radio Italy, Rome, and the Berlin Philharmonic, followed by recordings with the Berlin orchestra.

November sees Ozawa back in Toronto, before a series of nine concerts and small East Coast tour with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

After these, Ozawa returns to open his third season as music director of the San Francisco Symphony.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
NICHI BEI TIMES
D. 7,000
MAY 24 1972

Ending 2nd S.F. Season . . .

SEIJI OZAWA UNDERTAKING BUSY SCHEDULE UNTIL NEXT AUTUMN

PAGE ONE

Seiji Ozawa, who finishes his second season as conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra this week, will tour major orchestras on three continents before returning to this city to open the 1972-73 season on Nov. 29.

He leaves on Sunday for Tokyo to conduct the Japan Philharmonic orchestra.

A recording session with the San Francisco Symphony in mid-June will bring him back to the Bay Area before his Tanglewood Festival concert in late June and August.

Between, he will guest conduct concerts of the Chicago Symphony, Toronto Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as concerts of the Dresden Philharmonic at the Salzburg Festival.

After closing the Tanglewood Festival in August, Ozawa conducts at the Lucerne Festival and then to Finland for concerts with the Helsinki Philharmonic.

Scheduled For Japan

If the Japan Philharmonic survives the summer (the orchestra must find new sponsors or fold), Ozawa will open its season in September.

October will be divided between concerts with the La Scala Orchestra of Milan, the RAI Orchestra of Radio Italy, Rome, and the Berlin Philharmonic, followed by recordings with the Verlin orchestra.

November sees Ozawa back in Toronto, before a series of nine concerts and a small East Coast tour with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

After these, Ozawa returns to open his third season as music director and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony.

TRAVEL
FLORAL PARK, N. Y.
MONTHLY 279,000
JUN 1972

chestras at opposite ends of the country, the San Francisco Symphony and the Boston Symphony, will open the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony with an All-Bach concert June 30. A distinguished list of conductors and soloists will appear with the orchestra thru the season which runs to Aug. 20. . . . The Santa Fe, New Mexico, Opera opens its 16th season July 1, runs thru Aug. 26 with six productions, three of them new.

SOUTH MIDDLESEX DAILY NEWS
FRAMINGHAM, MA.
D. 24,000
MAR 28 1972
New England Newsclip

'72 Berkshire Festival Opens with Seigi Ozawa

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. He will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No.5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No.8.

36

Seiji Ozawa will open Tanglewood with all-Bach concert on June 20

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens June 30 and will continue through Aug. 20. The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Sieji Ozawa. On July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons." Ozawa will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler shyphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglwood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

All four of the Brahms symphonies will be heard during the Tanglwood season. On July 22, Leonard Berstein will conduct Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4; Symphony No. 3 will be conducted by Colin Davis on Saturday Aug. 12; Symphony No. 1 by Bruno Maderna on July 21.

Four Beethoven symphonies (1,5,6 and 9) will be conducted by the Orchestra's current Music Director, William Steinberg, on July 14 and 15, and on July 16, Seiji Ozawa will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 4.

Choral works to be presented this season include Verdi "Four Sacred Pieces," the Berlioz Te Deum (both conducted by Colin Davis), Haynd's "The Seasons," Mahler's Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Other conductors appearing at Tanglewood this season include: Karel Ancerl, Bruno Maderna, Eugene Ormandy, and Staislaw Skrowaczewski.

Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer performing the Betthoven Piano Concerto No 4; John Browning performing the Prokofiev No. 3; Misha Dichter performing the Brahmns Piano Concerto No 2; Alicia De Larocha performing the Schumann Piano Concerto; Peter Ser' ı performing in the Beethove Triple Concerto and Choral fantasy; Alexis Weissenberg performing the Chopin Piano Concerto No. 1; Earl Wild performing the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds; and performances by Claude Frank and Garrick Ohlsson.

Other soloists for this season's festival include Paul Zukofsky, violin; singers Phyllis Curtin, Richard Lewis and Jessye Norman and Boston Symphony members Joseph Silverstein, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, Sherman Walt and Ann Hobson.

Once again, Arthur Fiedler will present the Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood. This concert will be on Aug. 15 and will be part of the special Tuesdays at Tanglewood series consisting of seven Tuesday evening events including Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of its co-sponsorship with the Fromm Music Foundation, and during which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be represented for the first time.

CHRONICLE
WILLIMANTIC, CONN.
D. 8,500

MAR 4 1972

New England Newsclip

THE BOSTON HERALD
Traveler
D. 210,540 S. 260,961

JUN 4 1972

New England Newsclip

A summer of Ozawa

by Harry Neville

Boston won't have much of a chance to check out the Symphony's new music director designate next season. Because of prior commitments, Seiji Ozawa will conduct only a single program during 1972-73, and that is scheduled to be heard on Feb. 13, 15, 16 and 17.

There will be ample opportunity, however, to observe Ozawa in action this summer at Tanglewood. The Berkshire Festival begins with Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program on June 30, an all-Haydn program ("The Seasons") July 2. Ozawa will be equally busy the following weekend when he conducts the Friday and Sunday concerts of July 7 and July 9.

The latter programs are of unusual interest for a number of reasons, not only because of the soloists but also because Ozawa has a particularly congenial way with the composers to be played. Friday's program is all-Mozart: the "Haffner" Serenade, the Concerto for Flute and Harp with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Ann Hobson, and the Bassoon Concerto with soloist Sherman Walt.

Sunday's program includes one of Haydn's "Sturm und Drang" symphonies (No. 47 in G), Ravel's "Mother Goose" Suite, and Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto with soloist Garrick Ohlsson. Ozawa will also conduct the concerts of July 16 and Aug. 18 as well as the summer's final concert on Aug. 20, which will feature Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

As in past Tanglewood seasons, each weekend will include five principal events. A weekend "Prelude" concert of solo or chamber music takes place each Friday at 7 p.m. These events are free to ticketholders of the Friday night orchestral concerts at 9 p.m. Each Saturday features an open rehearsal at 10:30 in the morning plus the regular evening concert at 8:30, while concert time on Sundays is 2:30 p.m.

The Saturday open rehearsals are attractive for a number of reasons, and they should be investigated by everyone who makes weekend plans for Tanglewood. The rehearsals are devoted to preparation of the Sunday afternoon concert—the concert that ordinarily contains the "big" work of the weekend.

Thus, on July 1 you would witness Ozawa rehearsing Haydn's "The Seasons," while on July 15 the same conductor will be putting together Beethoven's Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy (with soloists Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin).

It should be interesting, too, to observe James Levine at work with Mahler's Sixth (July 29), Michael Tilson Thomas with Mahler's Fifth (Aug. 5), and Colin Davis with the Berlioz Te Deum (Aug. 12). The final open rehearsal of Aug. 19 will feature Ozawa preparing Mahler's Eighth Symphony.

Fascinating as it is to watch the "inner workings" of an orchestra, the rehearsals have other advantages as well. At $2.50, tickets are dirt cheap. Seats are unreserved and the unaffluent concert-goer thus gets an unusual chance to enjoy the best locations.

Tanglewood has an exciting array of conductors this summer. Leonard Bernstein will conduct Brahms' Second and Fourth Symphonies July 22, and Eugene Ormandy's July 29 program will include two of the works he does best: Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben." Colin Davis will conduct all three concerts of the seventh weekend, Aug. 11, 12 and 13.

Soloist of the Friday night concert will be soprano Jessye Norman, whose recordings and European reviews suggest that she is a major vocal discovery. Other conductors to appear are Bruno Maderna, William Steinberg, Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato and Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. The annual Boston Pops-at-Tanglewood concert will be given Aug. 1, and Arthur Fiedler will of course conduct.

Other special events taking place during mid-week will be Tanglewood-on-Parade and the Festival of Contemporary Music, celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation. Brochures with a complete schedule of BSO concerts are available from Symphony Hall, whose press department reports brisk ticket sales this year. A word to the wise, etc . . .

San Jose Mercury-News
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA
SUN. 184,103

JUN 4 1972

S.F. Musical Director Sets Guest Appearances

Conductors, unlike most people, do not apparently ..ke summer vacations.

..eiji Ozawa, musical director of the San Francisco Symphony, left immediately after the close of the 1971-72 season for Tokyo to guest-conduct the Japan Philharmonic.

SEIJI OZAWA
. . . Hectic Summer

He will return in mid-June for a recording session with his west coast orchestra, originally scheduled in May, and then participate in the Tanglewood Festival the end of June and August.

In between appearances at Tanglewood, he will conduct concerts of the Chicago and Toronto symphonies and the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as performances of the Dresden Philharmonic and during the International Salzburg Festival in Austria.

After closing the Tanglewood Festival in August, Ozawa will conduct the Lucerne Festival in Switzerland, and then on to Finland for concerts with the Helsinki Philharmonic.

If the Japan Philharmonic finds a new sponsor and survives, Ozawa will fly back to Tokyo to open the season in September.

His time will be divided in October between several concert series with the La Scala Orchestra of Milan, the RAI Orchestra of Radio Italy in Rome and the Berlin Philharmonic in Germany. He will make recordings with the Berlin orchestra.

In November Ozawa will be back in Toronto for a series of performances and will take the Philadelphia Orchestra on a small tour of the east coast.

After this hectic summer schedule, Maestro Ozawa will return to open a third season as conductor and music director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
NICHI BEI TIMES
D. 7,000

MAY 24 1972

Ending 2nd S.F. Season . . .

SEIJI OZAWA UNDERTAKING BUSY SCHEDULE UNTIL NEXT AUTUMN

Seiji Ozawa, who finishes his second season as conductor of the San Francisco Symphony orchestra this week, will tour major orchestras on three continents before returning to this city to open the 1972-73 season on Nov. 29.

He leaves on Sunday for Tokyo to conduct the Japan Philharmonic orchestra.

A recording session with the San Francisco Symphony in mid-June will bring him back to the Bay Area before his Tanglewood Festival concert in late June and August.

Between, he will guest conduct concerts of the Chicago Symphony, Toronto Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as concerts of the Dresden Philharmonic at the Salzburg Festival.

After closing the Tanglewood Festival in August, Ozawa conducts at the Lucerne Festival and then to Finland for concerts with the Helsinki Philharmonic.

Scheduled For Japan

If the Japan Philharmonic survives the summer (the orchestra must find new sponsors or fold), Ozawa will open its season in September.

October will be divided between concerts with the La Scala Orchestra of Milan, the RAI Orchestra of Radio Italy, Rome, and the Berlin Philharmonic, followed by recordings with the Verlin orchestra.

November sees Ozawa back in Toronto, before a series of nine concerts and a small East Coast tour with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

After these, Ozawa returns to open his third season as music director and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony.

TRAVEL
FLORAL PARK, N. Y.
MONTHLY 279,000

JUN 1972

chestras at opposite ends of the country, the San Francisco Symphony and the Boston Symphony, will open the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony with an All-Bach concert June 30. A distinguished list of conductors and soloists will appear with the orchestra thru the season which runs to Aug. 20. . . . The Santa Fe, New Mexico, Opera opens its 16th season July 1, runs thru Aug. 26 with six productions, three of them new.

SOUTH MIDDLESEX DAILY NEWS
FRAMINGHAM, MA.
D. 24,000

MAR 28 1972

New England Newsclip

'72 Berkshire Festival Opens with Seigi Ozawa

BOSTON — The 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens Friday, June 30 and will continue through Sunday, August 20.

The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. On Sunday, July 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons. He will open the second weekend with an all-Mozart program.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays at Tanglewood beginning July 30 when James Levine will conduct Mahler's Symphony No. 6. On Aug. 6, Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct Mahler's Symphony No.5. Then, in the closing concert of the season, Ozawa will conduct Mahler's Symphony No.8.

San Francisco Chronicle
THE VOICE OF THE WEST
D. 480,233 SAT. 450,227

MAY 23 1972

A Busy Summer For Seiji Ozawa

Seiji Ozawa, who finishes the San Francisco Symphony season this week, will tour major orchestras on three continents before returning to San Francisco to open the 1972-73 season on November 29. He leaves on Sunday for Tokyo with the Japan Philharmonic.

A recording session with the San Francisco Symphony in mid-June will bring him back to the Bay Area before his Tanglewood festival concert in late June and August. Between, he will guest conduct concerts of the Chicago Symphony, Toronto Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra, as well as concerts of the Dresden Philharmonic at the Salzburg Festival.

After closing the Tanglewood Festival in August, Ozawa conducts at the Lucerne Festival, and then to Finland for concerts with the Helsinki Philharmonic. If the Japan Philharmonic survives the summer (the orchestra must find new sponsors this summer), Ozawa will open its season in September.

October will be divided between concert series with the La Scala Orchestra of Milan, the RAI Orchestra of Radio Italy, Rome, and the Berlin Philharmonic, followed by recordings with the Berlin orchestra.

November sees Ozawa back in Toronto, before a series of nine concerts and small East Coast tour with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

After these, Ozawa returns to open his third season as music director of the San Francisco Symphony.

Philadelphia Inquirer
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
D. 463,503 SUN. 867,810

JUL 2 1972

Season Opens At Tanglewood

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — The 1972 schedule of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, being held at Tanglewood in Lenox, is now available in a brochure that can be obtained from the Berkshire Hills Conference office in Pittsfield, Symphony Hall in Boston or the Tanglewood box office in Lenox.

The 1972 season opened Friday, with an all-Bach program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa. Regularly scheduled concerts are Friday at 9, Saturdays at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30. Open rehearsals are Saturdays at 10:30 A. M.

Special dates are Tuesday, Aug. 1, when Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops, and Aug. 15 when the Boston Symphony and the Berkshire Music Center Orchestras combine to present an evening concert.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUL 13 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Slates Three Youth Concerts

LENOX — Once again, Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center present a series of three Youth Concerts to be held Friday afternoons at 1.30 p.m. in the Theatre - Concert Hall on July 14, 21, and 28.

The one-hour long concerts, played by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, and by the Boston University Tanglewood Institute Orchestra, are designed especially for young audiences between the ages of 6 and 17. The concerts will include explanations as well as demonstrations of the orchestra's musical instruments.

Admission is 50 cents per person. Tickets are available on a first - come, first - served basis at the Main Gate at Tanglewood. Early reservations are suggested for camp groups. Please call (413) 637-1600, ext. 242 for information and reservations.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 13 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood to Present Three Youth Concerts

Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center will present a series of three Youth Concerts to be held Friday afternoons at 1:30 in the Theatre - Concert Hall. Dates for the three concerts are July 14, 21, and 28.

The one-hour long concerts, played by the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, and by the Boston University Tanglewood Institute Orchestra, are designed especially for young audiences between the ages of 6 and 17. The concerts will include explanations as well as demonstrations of the orchestra's musical instruments.

Tickets are available on a first-come, first - served basis at the Main Gate at Tanglewood. Early reservations are suggested for camp groups.

The first concert, Friday, features the Boston University Tanglewood Institute Orchestra conducted by Lawrence Smith. The concert includes music by Mendelssohn, Vaughn Williams, Beethoven, and Ginastera.

The second concert on July 21 presents the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra directed by a Conducting Fellow chosen for this concert by Seiji Ozawa.

The third concert, on July 28, will be played by the Boston University Tanglewood Institute Orchestra, again conducted by Lawrence Smith.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 7 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood sets youth concerts

Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Center will again sponsor a series of concerts especially designed for young people between the ages of 6 and 17.

Demonstrations

The concerts will be held on Friday afternoons, July 14, 21 and 28 at 1:30, in the Theatre - Concert Hall. During the hour-long programs, explanations and demonstrations will be given of the various musical instruments in an orchestra.

The series will be given by the Boston University Tanglewood orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center orchestra. The first concert will feature the Boston orchestra under the direction of Lawrence Smith in a program of Mendelssohn, Vaughan Williams, Beethoven and Ginastera.

There is a small admission fee. Reservations are advised for camp groups.

The second concert will feature the Center orchestra, and Smith will direct the Boston orchestra in the final concert.

Newport Music Festival to Have 50 Performers

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Several major works that haven't been performed since the 19th century are included in the Newport Musical Festival of 48 musical events from July 27 through Aug. 12.

The 17-day program is sponsored by the Rhode Island Arts Foundation and set within the opulent surroundings of Newport's fabled mansions.

Among the 50 performers are Raymond Lewenthal, Flavio Varani, Virginia Eskin and Peter Basquin, pianists; The Bergson Trio; Lark Woodwind Quintet; Festival Double String Quartet; George Ricci, cellist; and Henryk Kowalski, violinist.

Two evenings of dance are planned with the Boston Ballet Company and Joffrey II Ballet.

Metropolitan Opera Studio will present the American premiere of Cesar Cui's opera, "The Mandarin's Son," and concert excerpts from Dame Ethyl Smyth's opera, "The Wreckers."

Also included are two Cruise Concerts on Narragansett Bay, aboard the M-V New Shoreham, July 29, and M-V Mount Hope, August 12.

Evening performances, at 9:30 p.m., are at The Breakers, Marble House, and The Elms. Other programs, distributed among Newport landmarks, are at 9:30 and 11 a.m., and 5 p.m.

Tickets for morning events are $4; afternoons, $6; and evenings, $8. Cruise tickets are $20, and the Aug. 5 benefit, $30.

Program details and ticket information may be obtained by writing to Newport Music Festival, 23 Bridge St., Newport, R.I. 02840.

UNLIKE THE OTHER large summer festivals that count on rock and jazz programs to bolster the box-office, Tanglewood has cancelled its proposed series of "popular artists" concerts for this month.

In addition to the regular 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony in the eight weekends of the Berkshire Music Festival, concentration and promotion are on the three special concerts on Tuesday nights in August.

Opener is the Boston Pops Concert, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, at 8:30 p.m., Aug. 1; Festival of Contemporary Music, honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, at 8:30 p.m., Aug. 8; and Tanglewood-on-Parade, beginning at 2 p.m., Aug. 15.

Parade features the several departments of the Berkshire Music Center in miscellaneous programs, ending with the combined Boston Symphony and Center orchestras at 8:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct both orchestras in Handel's Royal Fireworks Music and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, complete with cannons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

WHEN MISCHA Mischakoff made his final appearance with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at the Worcester Festival of 1967, the extent of his "retirement" wasn't made quite clear.

Tonight at 8:30 at Hartt College of Music, Hartford, the 75-year-old Mischakoff will give a joint recital with pianist Raymond Hanson in the college's summer chamber music festival.

During the past year, Mischakoff has been commuting to Hartt from his home in Detroit to perform his duties as a faculty member.

Mischakoff had a 43-year career at the Worcester Festival. His first appearance was in 1924 as concert master under Henry Hadley. Then came six festivals as Albert Stoessel's concert master, and 10 more under Paul Paray, Eugen Jochum and Sixten Ehrling.

He still holds a unique position in the esteem and affection of Worcester audiences.

THE CLEVELAND Orchestra's annual sustaining fund campaign for this year has passed the $1 million mark, leaving an operational deficit of $400,000.

Alfred M. Rankin, president of the orchestra's sponsoring organization, opines that increased government support is the only answer to symphony orchestras' growing financial needs.

His statement: "The gap between income and expenses continues to widen and our ability to close this gap through voluntary fund-raising is not keeping pace.

"Raising the price of tickets is not the answer as this would have the inevitable result of reducing the very audiences we are trying to reach — the young, less well-to-do, a wide spectrum of the community."

A string ensemble performing in Newport's famed Marble House.

MUSIC

Raymond Morin

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
S. 103,767

JUL 9 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood bargain day

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

For less than the $3 it costs to sit on the grass at Tanglewood during a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, music-lovers can observe conductors like Leonard Bernstein and Colin Davis, and have a choice of any seat in the house.

Every Saturday morning during July and August, the BSO holds open rehearsal at Tanglewood. Most people have heard about these rehearsals, but not nearly so many have attended. Since we attend somewhat regularly, we are willing to give our impressions and to pass along some tips to anyone who may be thinking of attending.

Our advice is to plan to arrive at 9 in the morning when the doors open and rehearsal tickets go on sale. The actual rehearsals don't begin until 10:30, but by arriving early you'll have a perfect choice of seats. Leave something on the seat you choose to reserve it and stroll the Tanglewood grounds. This charming estate contains 210 acres and overlooks Lake Mahkeenac. It's idyllic in the mornings when the people are sparse and before the dew has disappeared.

It can be cool at Tanglewood in the morning, particularly after you're seated in the Shed. We always bring sweaters regardless of how pleasant the day seems when we start out. In addition, we suggest bringing along a thermos of coffee, and, if arriving early, something to read. If arriving early is not to your liking, don't worry about not being able to get a seat. There are always plenty of seats left at 10:30.

Admission to the regular Tanglewood concerts is somewhat expensive with the better seats ranging from $6 to $8 each. Admission to the lawn during regular concerts is $3 per person. At rehearsals, however, there are no reserved seats. Any seat costs only $2.50.

No publications of the Tanglewood concert schedule ever mention which works will be played at these Saturday morning rehearsals. We feel this is one reason rehearsals are not more popular. People are reluctant to take their chances concerning the works they will be hearing. Here's the secret: On Saturday morning, the orchestra nearly always rehearses the Sunday afternoon concert. Therefore, by checking the Tanglewood schedule for the Sunday afternoon concert, you'll know which musical works and conductor to expect on Saturday morning.

During the actual rehearsal, the conductor occasionally stops the orchestra, gives an instruction and has a section of the score repeated. Although this interrupts the continuity of the music, it happens infrequently and is one of the most interesting aspects of the rehearsals, especially if you are familiar with the work or if you sit close enough to hear the conductor's instructions.

As you would expect, the musicians are dressed informally at rehearsals. This informality can be one of the best features of Saturday morning at Tanglewood. Once you've watched Seiji Ozawa in bell bottoms conduct Tchaikovsky's Sixth symphony (as we did last summer), you won't forget it for a long time.

The open rehearsals usually don't end until after 1 in the afternoon. This brings us to our final tip: Bring a lunch.

JOAN & FRED WINDOVER
Sloan Road
Williamstown

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 26 1972 New England Newsclip

Music as escape?

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Tanglewood broke an attendance ~~record on~~ the weekend of July 14, 15, 16. The largest crowd in 35 years helps our second largest industry — tourism.

Do people go to Tanglewood to escape reality? Is culture an escape? For 32 years, I have attended the various presentations at Tanglewood.

Life has many problems and we have all heard of the "cultural explosion," but what would be your reason for attending Tanglewood concerts?

Most people will answer by admitting that music is the "soul of the arts."

It would be interesting to have people's opinions on why they attend. I know that there are many reasons.

Do you go there to escape reality? Is culture an escape?

MACK LANDIS
241 South St.
Pittsfield

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539

JUL 31 1972 New England Newsclip

SINCERELY YOURS . . . MERRI HOLMES

Dear Mrs. Holmes: This is not a household problem, but perhaps you can answer my question.

I'm a great music lover and each time I hear the commercial on television for the Tanglewood concerts, I wonder what the name of the background music is. I would very much like to know so that I can add it to my collection of recordings. Mrs. S. G., Southboro.

Dear Mrs. S. G.: I have been told that the music is "Fingel's Cave," by Felix Mendelssohn.

I agree that the melody is quite lovely and I, too, was happy to learn the title of it.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.
RECORD
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 4,000

JUL 20 1972

The magic of Tanglewood

By Terri Lowen Finn

I have just returned from my annual pilgrimage to the foothills of the Berkshires where I attended the opening concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Once again I have some special musical memories to savour -- the brilliantly executed cadenza by harpsichordist Levin, in the Bach Brandenburg Concerto number 5, the small Japanese Conductor Ozawa, his body moving to the music as a willow bending in the wind -- and I reflect anew on the reasons why Tanglewood is so unique among the many music festivals held throughout this country.

There are more imposing structures built to house summer audiences and orchestras than the one at Tanglewood. Here, the Music Shed is the height of simplicity but anything more would seem inappropriate. Set upon 210 acres of the most magnificent lawns, meadows and towering trees the Shed is but a small part of the total atmosphere.

As far back as the 18th century the Berkshire area attracted those wanting a respite from city pressures. Farm lands became estates of the wealthy and in time small concerts were held on the grounds of these estates. Artists, dancers and musicians wishing a haven where they could create in harmony with nature soon followed.

In the winter of 1936 the owners of Tanglewood, descendants of William Tappan, made the extraordinary gift of the entire estate -- hundreds of acres with the buildings -- to Dr. Serge Koussevitsky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On August 12, 1937 a huge crowd gathered in a tent on the grounds for the inaugural concert. The great drawback was protection from the elements. The tent was no match for the fierce storms which drowned out the music, the players and the audience.

As the concert concluded, one of the benefactors came to the stage and started the drive to build a shed. $100,000 was raised, an architect was engaged and the building was completed amazingly by June of 1938. In August 1938 Dr. Koussevitsky led the orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Today, a quarter of a million people attend the eight week series.

Visitors to Tanglewood come early to the concerts, not only to enjoy the setting but to listen to the variety of music coming from the various buildings throughout the grounds. It is in these buildings, comprising the Berkshire Music Center, that classes are taught in chamber and orchestral performance, conducting and composition to young people who have gathered from all parts of the world. Their teachers include members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as well as outstanding soloists, conductors and composers.

Audiences at Tanglewood are knowledgeable and enthusiastic. A small music shop on the grounds does a thriving business in sheet music, scores, books, and musical mementoes. The open rehearsals on Saturday mornings are extremely well attended. There's a feeling of informality and closeness between the audience and musicians as everyone listens to the directions of the conductor.

The fringe benefits of my Tanglewood trips will last me a lifetime. The hand carved Chinese chest I never expected to find came about through a desire to see Leonard Bernstein conduct the Beethoven Missa Solemnis. All roads leading to Tanglewood abound with antique shops. And my favorite Bumbeck print was bought while staying at a special Inn near Lenox which houses an art gallery and concert hall. Perhaps the best part of going to Tanglewood is knowing that it's close enough to be going back very soon.

SOCIETY

by Miriam Tod

Good news comes as a welcome relief in these days when it seems disasters of one kind or another, tragedies and problems are the everyday norm. The quiet successes and accomplishments of the average man and woman do not make the headlines, yet often their efforts have a very direct bearing on an organization whose purpose affects others in a profound way.

Two such groups, both quite different were able to report successful news to their membership recently. The council of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has grown from modest beginnings ~~back in the~~ 1960s to a force of women to reckon with. It is extremely doubtful the orchestra could survive today without the financial support this group provides, or the interest and liaison they spread between the audience and the musicians.

This group has had some remarkably successful benefits over the years, not the least of which was the first Symphony Ball which was attended by the then Mrs. John F. Kennedy. This spring they held their second Musical Marathon over radio station WCRB and, as a result of the three days of continually played never-before-recorded music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, raised an incredible $60,000 for the orchestra, $10,000 over the hoped for goal, and $20,000 more than the first Marathon. Mrs. John M. Bradley, whose mother-in-law Mrs. Ralph Bradley of Canton supports so many good causes, was the chairman of the event and to her and the 250 volunteers from the Friends and from the orchestra must go credit for a job well don. Another result, of the Marathon was 1,300 new Friends were added to the organization, bringing the total number involved today to 4,263 persons.

In addition to the vast amount raised by this one project, the Friends donations, exclusive of the Marathon, had reached $488,525 by the end of June, bringing a total contribution by this group of hard working ladies to a whopping $584,525.

Almost all this had been raised quietly behind the scenes with little fanfare from the many involved, just a dedication to a cause in which they believe — the continued support of an orchestra that brings pleasure and relief from the pressures of daily care to the millions and millions their music touches.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

JUL 28 1972

New England Newsclip

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.
DOMINION-POST
SUN. 14,500

JUL 23 1972

TANGLEWOOD'S CLIMATE BOTH NATURAL AND ARTISTIC

VIEWS and REVIEWS

By E. DONNELL STONEMAN

LENOX, Mass. — It's called Tanglewood, a huge tract of lawns and meadows — 210 acres in all — where music lovers by the thousands have been gathering each summer since 1937 to hear a series of weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. These musical events make up the annual Berkshire Festival.

The setting for the major concerts is the Music Shed, a unique, fan-shaped structure incorporating remarkably effective acoustical panels, which provides shelter for nearly 6,000 with additional space available on the grassy lawn ringing the shed for those inclined to listen more informally.

The story of how the Shed was built is typical of the Tanglewood climate, both natural and artistic. When the descendants of the estate's original owner offered it as a gift to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony, it was quickly and gratefully accepted.

The first concert, on Aug. 12, 1937, was given in a tent at Tanglewood. During the course of the program of music by Wagner, a violent rain storm erupted. Three times the players paused in their performance of "The Ride of the Valkyries" as the pouring rain on the canvas roof vied with the sound of Wagner's orchestra. At the conclusion of the concert, a cry went up to raise the necessary funds of $100,000 then and there for a permanent music shed. The response was immediate and complete. Less than 12 months later, on June 16, 1938, Beethoven's Ninth symphony was performed, inaugurating the new Music Shed.

Today, an estimated quarter of a million people visit Tanglewood during the eight-week summer season. They come bringing lawn chairs, hampers filled with food and drink, blankets for the occasional late-evening chill, and a voracious appetite for the sound of music.

They find a park open, for a small entrance fee, to their full enjoyment. A small shop sells recordings, sheet music, paperback books, film, and other necessary items for summer leisure. A large canteen offers cafeteria service on a selected list of refreshments and a spacious picnic area to relax while eating.

Most people, though, prefer to bring their own and Tanglewood encourages them to make use of the acres of green lawn shaded by giant oaks. There is never a "keep off the grass" sign here. And it's surprising, too, to find an immaculate park when the crowds leave and the gates finally close for the night.

For the weekend visitor there is a variety of programs. A full concert is scheduled every Friday night during the summer. An open rehearsal, beginning at 10:30 on Saturday morning and usually lasting two to three hours, attracts many listeners anxious to hear a preview of the Sunday afternoon program.

Another concert follows on Saturday evening and then, an afternoon concert begins at 2:30 each Sunday. In addition, a program of music by the Berkshire Music Center orchestra is usually performed in the adjacent Theatre-Concert Hall on Sunday evening.

The artistic director this summer at Tanglewood is the young conductor, Seiji Ozawa who has just been named music director of the Boston Symphony beginning with the 1973-74 season. Leonard Bernstein, long a driving force at Tanglewood and scheduled for a special guest sppearance this summer, remains Adviser to the Festival.

Other guest conductors during the current season are Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, who is conducting a 10-week master class, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis and Karel Ancerl. The music director of the Boston Symphony, William Steinberg, and his young associate conductor, Michael Tilson Thomas, are also scheduled to lead the orchestra during the latter part of the season.

From its original basic plan, the Berkshire Music Center has grown to include a nearby Theatre Concert Hall, a smaller Chamber Music Hall, a Rehearsal Stage, and several individual "barns" where students can work in solitude.

The vocal, instrumental and conducting master classes are held in the Hawthorne Cottage, a charming red building across Hawthorne Road, facing the Lion Head Gate to Tanglewood, where Nathanel Hawthorne lived and wrote about the Berkshires.

Since 1940, the Music Center has offered outstanding music students from all over the world the unique experience of studying and performing in the stimulating environment of one of the world's foremost centers of artistic activity.

With its spacious vistas of lawns stretching in one direction down to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac, in another to the crests of the surrounding Berkshire hills, Tanglewood presents an incomparably beautiful setting for the study, performance, and enjoyment of the world's great music.

NEXT WEEK: Dance and Drama at Saratoga.

PHYLLIS CURTIN, soprano, is a native of Clarksburg.

AFTER DARK
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MONTHLY CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUL 1972

The Classical Scene
by Robert Jacobson

. In nearby Tanglewood (in the Massachusetts Berkshires) there's no opera, but you have the Boston Symphony under Ozawa, Maderna, Steinberg, Bernstein, Ancerl, Ormandy, Levine, Tilson-Thomas, Ceccato and Davis until August 20. Ozawa leads Haydn's The Seasons on the 2nd, with Phyllis Curtin and Robert Hale. The weekend of the 14th through the 16th is all-Beethoven with Steinberg and Ozawa sharing duties on Symphonies 1, 4, 5, 6 and 9, as well at Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy (with Peter Serkin). In August comes the Berlioz Te Deum and the closing Mahler Eighth.

'Grass Pass' Started At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced a new ticket plan for Tanglewood, the Grass Pass.

The Grass Pass will admit the purchaser to the Tanglewood lawn for all 24 Berkshire Festival concerts at a price of $24.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN
NEWARK, N. J.
MONTHLY 245.100

JUL 1972

. . . The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 and continues through August 20. The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Other conductors scheduled to appear at Tanglewood include Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski and Arthur Fiedler.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.
RECORD
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 4,000

JUL 20 1972

The magic of Tanglewood

By Terri Lowen Finn

I have just returned from my annual pilgrimage to the foothills of the Berkshires where I attended the opening concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Once again I have some special musical memories to savour -- the brilliantly executed cadenza by harpsichordist Levin, in the Bach Brandenburg Concerto number 5, the small Japanese Conductor Ozawa, his body moving to the music as a willow bending in the wind -- and I reflect anew on the reasons why Tanglewood is so unique among the many music festivals held throughout this country.

There are more imposing structures built to house summer audiences and orchestras than the one at Tanglewood. Here, the Music Shed is the height of simplicity but anything more would seem inappropriate. Set upon 210 acres of the most magnificent lawns, meadows and towering trees the Shed is but a small part of the total atmosphere.

As far back as the 18th century the Berkshire area attracted those wanting a respite from city pressures. Farm lands became estates of the wealthy and in time small concerts were held on the grounds of these estates. Artists, dancers and musicians wishing a haven where they could create in harmony with nature soon followed.

In the winter of 1936 the owners of Tanglewood, descendants of William Tappan, made the extraordinary gift of the entire estate -- hundreds of acres with the buildings -- to Dr. Serge Koussevitsky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On August 12, 1937 a huge crowd gathered in a tent on the grounds for the inaugural concert. The great drawback was protection from the elements. The tent was no match for the fierce storms which drowned out the music, the players and the audience.

As the concert concluded, one of the benefactors came to the stage and started the drive to build a shed. $100,000 was raised, an architect was engaged and the building was completed amazingly by June of 1938. In August 1938 Dr. Koussevitsky led the orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Today, a quarter of a million people attend the eight week series.

Visitors to Tanglewood come early to the concerts, not only to enjoy the setting but to listen to the variety of music coming from the various buildings throughout the grounds. It is in these buildings, comprising the Berkshire Music Center, that classes are taught in chamber and orchestral performance, conducting and composition to young people who have gathered from all parts of the world. Their teachers include members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra as well as outstanding soloists, conductors and composers.

Audiences at Tanglewood are knowledgeable and enthusiastic. A small music shop on the grounds does a thriving business in sheet music, scores, books, and musical mementoes. The open rehearsals on Saturday mornings are extremely well attended. There's a feeling of informality and closeness between the audience and musicians as everyone listens to the directions of the conductor.

The fringe benefits of my Tanglewood trips will last me a lifetime. The hand carved Chinese chest I never expected to find came about through a desire to see Leonard Bernstein conduct the Beethoven Missa Solemnis. All roads leading to Tanglewood abound with antique shops. And my favorite Bumbeck print was bought while staying at a special Inn near Lenox which houses an art gallery and concert hall. Perhaps the best part of going to Tanglewood is knowing that it's close enough to be going back very soon.

SOCIETY

by Miriam Tod

Good news comes as a welcome relief in these days when it seems disasters of one kind or another, tragedies and problems are the everyday norm. The quiet successes and accomplishments of the average man and woman do not make the headlines, yet often their efforts have a very direct bearing on an organization whose purpose affects others in a profound way.

Two such groups, both quite different were able to report successful news to their membership recently. The council of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has grown from modest beginnings ~~back in the~~ 1960s to a force of women to reckon with. It is extremely doubtful the orchestra could survive today without the financial support this group provides, or the interest and liaison they spread between the audience and the musicians.

This group has had some remarkably successful benefits over the years, not the least of which was the first Symphony Ball which was attended by the then Mrs. John F. Kennedy. This spring they held their second Musical Marathon over radio station WCRB and, as a result of the three days of continually played never-before-recorded music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, raised an incredible $60,000 for the orchestra, $10,000 over the hoped for goal, and $20,000 more than the first Marathon. Mrs. John M. Bradley, whose mother-in-law Mrs. Ralph Bradley of Canton supports so many good causes, was the chairman of the event and to her and the 250 volunteers from the Friends and from the orchestra must go credit for a job well don. Another result, of the Marathon was 1,300 new Friends were added to the organization, bringing the total number involved today to 4,263 persons.

In addition to the vast amount raised by this one project, the Friends donations, exclusive of the Marathon, had reached $488,525 by the end of June, bringing a total contribution by this group of hard working ladies to a whopping $584,525.

Almost all this had been raised quietly behind the scenes with little fanfare from the many involved, just a dedication to a cause in which they believe — the continued support of an orchestra that brings pleasure and relief from the pressures of daily care to the millions and millions their music touches.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

JUL 28 1972

New England Newsclip

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.
DOMINION-POST
SUN. 14,500

JUL 23 1972

TANGLEWOOD'S CLIMATE BOTH NATURAL AND ARTISTIC

VIEWS and REVIEWS

By E. DONNELL STONEMAN

LENOX, Mass. — It's called Tanglewood, a huge tract of lawns and meadows — 210 acres in all — where music lovers by the thousands have been gathering each summer since 1937 to hear a series of weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. These musical events make up the annual Berkshire Festival.

The setting for the major concerts is the Music Shed, a unique, fan-shaped structure incorporating remarkably effective acoustical panels, which provides shelter for nearly 6,000 with additional space available on the grassy lawn ringing the shed for those inclined to listen more informally.

The story of how the Shed was built is typical of the Tanglewood climate, both natural and artistic. When the descendants of the estate's original owner offered it as a gift to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony, it was quickly and gratefully accepted.

The first concert, on Aug. 12, 1937, was given in a tent at Tanglewood. During the course of the program of music by Wagner, a violent rain storm erupted. Three times the players paused in their performance of "The Ride of the Valkyries" as the pouring rain on the canvas roof vied with the sound of Wagner's orchestra. At the conclusion of the concert, a cry went up to raise the necessary funds of $100,000 then and there for a permanent music shed. The response was immediate and complete. Less than 12 months later, on June 16, 1938, Beethoven's Ninth symphony was performed, inaugurating the new Music Shed.

Today, an estimated quarter of a million people visit Tanglewood during the eight-week summer season. They come bringing lawn chairs, hampers filled with food and drink, blankets for the occasional late-evening chill, and a voracious appetite for the sound of music.

They find a park open, for a small entrance fee, to their full enjoyment. A small shop sells recordings, sheet music, paperback books, film, and other necessary items for summer leisure. A large canteen offers cafeteria service on a selected list of refreshments and a spacious picnic area to relax while eating.

Most people, though, prefer to bring their own and Tanglewood encourages them to make use of the acres of green lawn shaded by giant oaks. There is never a "keep off the grass" sign here. And it's surprising, too, to find an immaculate park when the crowds leave and the gates finally close for the night.

For the weekend visitor there is a variety of programs. A full concert is scheduled every Friday night during the summer. An open rehearsal, beginning at 10:30 on Saturday morning and usually lasting two to three hours, attracts many listeners anxious to hear a preview of the Sunday afternoon program.

Another concert follows on Saturday evening and then, an afternoon concert begins at 2:30 each Sunday. In addition, a program of music by the Berkshire Music Center orchestra is usually performed in the adjacent Theatre-Concert Hall on Sunday evening.

The artistic director this summer at Tanglewood is the young conductor, Seiji Ozawa who has just been named music director of the Boston Symphony beginning with the 1973-74 season. Leonard Bernstein, long a driving force at Tanglewood and scheduled for a special guest sppearance this summer, remains Adviser to the Festival.

Other guest conductors during the current season are Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, who is conducting a 10-week master class, Eugene Ormandy, Colin Davis and Karel Ancerl. The music director of the Boston Symphony, William Steinberg, and his young associate conductor, Michael Tilson Thomas, are also scheduled to lead the orchestra during the latter part of the season.

From its original basic plan, the Berkshire Music Center has grown to include a nearby Theatre Concert Hall, a smaller Chamber Music Hall, a Rehearsal Stage, and several individual "barns" where students can work in solitude.

The vocal, instrumental and conducting master classes are held in the Hawthorne Cottage, a charming red building across Hawthorne Road, facing the Lion Head Gate to Tanglewood, where Nathanel Hawthorne lived and wrote about the Berkshires.

Since 1940, the Music Center has offered outstanding music students from all over the world the unique experience of studying and performing in the stimulating environment of one of the world's foremost centers of artistic activity.

With its spacious vistas of lawns stretching in one direction down to the shores of Lake Mahkeenac, in another to the crests of the surrounding Berkshire hills, Tanglewood presents an incomparably beautiful setting for the study, performance, and enjoyment of the world's great music.

NEXT WEEK: Dance and Drama at Saratoga.

PHYLLIS CURTIN, soprano, is a native of Clarksburg.

AFTER DARK
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MONTHLY CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUL 1972

The Classical Scene

by Robert Jacobson

. In nearby Tanglewood (in the Massachusetts Berkshires) there's no opera, but you have the Boston Symphony under Ozawa, Maderna, Steinberg, Bernstein, Ancerl, Ormandy, Levine, Tilson-Thomas, Ceccato and Davis until August 20. Ozawa leads Haydn's The Seasons on the 2nd, with Phyllis Curtin and Robert Hale. The weekend of the 14th through the 16th is all-Beethoven with Steinberg and Ozawa sharing duties on Symphonies 1, 4, 5, 6 and 9, as well at Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy (with Peter Serkin). In August comes the Berlioz Te Deum and the closing Mahler Eighth.

'Grass Pass' Started At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced a new ticket plan for Tanglewood, the Grass Pass.

The Grass Pass will admit the purchaser to the Tanglewood lawn for all 24 Berkshire Festival concerts at a price of $24.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN
NEWARK, N. J.
MONTHLY 245,100

JUL 1972

. . . The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 and continues through August 20. The season begins with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Other conductors scheduled to appear at Tanglewood include Karel Ancerl, Aldo Ceccato, Eugene Ormandy, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski and Arthur Fiedler.

CHRONICLE
WILLIMANTIC, CONN.
D. 8,500

JUL 28 1972 New England Newsclip

Cabbages and Kings

By Robert E. Jenkins

CANAAN, N.Y. — Sitting here looking out over Queechy Lake toward the Berkshire Hills, which loom up several miles away, it is nearly impossible to believe there is anything wrong in the world.

You sip on a cold drink watching swimmers and boaters while you digest the magnificent lunch served by the Stony Kill Steak House thinking only that in a few hours you will head a few miles east to Lenox, Mass., and Tanglewood. Tonight Leonard Bernstein, who says he will retire for a year after the performance, will conduct Brahms' Symphony No. 4 and 2.

Tanglewood! The Great Shed! The place we, as kids, sneaked through the woods to watch Koussevitzky and Munch rehearse the world's greatest orchestra, the Boston Symphony. We were not the music lovers who would line up outside the Mets as portrayed by Harry Golden, just thrill seekers more interested in getting by guards and fences than listening to "long hair" music.

It was a learning experience though and some of us ended up actually liking the stuff they play in The Shed and now pay our way through the gates of Tanglewood and doors of concert halls.

You sit up here in the Berkshires melting into a big blob of contentment because, Thomas Wolf notwithstanding, you can return further than all the way home. Perhaps it's Freudian nonsense about returning to the womb. I don't know, but whenever I return to the Berkshires or to the ocean — where I spent a great part of my young life — I do not return to the womb I return to the zygote stage.

Unfortunately, reverting to a zygote does not absolutely relieve you of responsibilities so during a long weekend you still think of work. You watch the television news and run out to buy newspapers and tune in the radio newseasts, but they are mercifully refreshing since they do not mention Meskill or Steele or Hilsman, there is not a mention of Windham-Willimantic consolidation, not a word, pro or con, about the I-84 construction battle.

We do hear that the North Vietnamese dikes have either been bombed or have not been bombed, that both Nixon and McGovern have said something, but the worst news is that the Red Sox lost.

It would be nice, you think, if the worst thing you could hear every day is that the Red Sox lost, but the whole damn world is sick and it's a battle between the selfish and the apathetic.

You have the selfish Windhamites who want their fine life and the apathy of Willimantic citizens who are willing to pay 80 per cent of that life; you have the selfishness of the more affluent who, with their leisure time and money, can afford to get away, but would deny those with less money and time and I-84 which would let them leave and return to the area with a minimum of time and expense.

As one who has arrived at his destination via I-84 to Hartford, I-91 to Springfield and the Mass Pike to Canaan (in less than two hours) it is difficult to agree with those who would stop the new I-84 corridor through eastern Connecticut. Economic considerations aside, we could have a pleasant highway though eastern Connecticut with minimal damage to the environment and a maximum benefit to the people.

On the economic side we have the politicians stressing the fact a highway will attract light "non-polluting" industry, but we ain't got one around with the vision enough to consider anything else. For example, if eastern Connecticut's politicians had more imagination they would spend less time argueing about the relative merits of a jetport and get down to business attracting the homeless Newport Jazz Festival.

With an easy access highway and plenty of space to build a facility, eastern Connecticut could become the Tanglewood of Jazz. Sure there would be a few more motels and restaurants, but with proper controls the area could remain virtually the same, and without any beaches or urban area to gather in, all those freaky kids that scare many of us to death would have only trees to "molest."

The Berkshires have survived culture and so could eastern Connecticut.

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN.
D. 11,891

JUL 29 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 29 1972 New England Newsclip

Thomas at rehearsal

Notes and photographs by Warren Fowler

Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians were dressed very casually, open throat sportshirts, one or two in shorts and striped tank tops.

Jocular mood prevailed with much byplay between orchestra and Michael Tilson Thomas. It was a high-level kind of joking but with a deep respect for each other.

I sat in the violin section with my camera case at my side, and one of the older men in the section took the end of his bow and kept moving exposed film rolls about, and pushing lens under chairs to harass me, all in fun.

During break several men came over and expressed keen interest in 180 mm. lens I was using and were very knowledgable about photography.

When a musician would hit a clinker, MTT would screw up face and run through passage again. The entire rehearsal, although very serious, had a kind of picnic air about it.

MTT would always suggest that a passage would be played thus and so, rather than saying, "This is the way I want it."

When rehearsal was all over, MTT got involved with a music friend and sat down at a piano behind stage and played some jazz to illustrate his point.

Curtain behind MTT is called a rehearsal curtain and is used to absorb sound when there are no people in the shed as there weren't the day this particular rehearsal took place. Obviously it is not used during open rehearsals.

There's More Than Air In Berkshires

By JOHN ROBERTS

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.—Last week in this section, Allan Lewis struck a great blow for gin and tonic and staying at home when he characterized the usual uninspired and uninspiring stuff offered at summer theaters.

But all summer theater is not warmed over hash. An alternative is I-91 and the Berkshires. Maybe there's something about those hills and mountains that attracts and traps the Muses. A recent look around up north uncovered a couple of gems.

The Williamstown Theater here, has got to be one of the most unusual and ambitious theaters in the country — summer or otherwise. Its loyal core of directors, actors and designers—under the artistic and executive leadership of Nikos Psacharopoulous — includes Leland Ball, Jeff Bleckner, Arvin Brown, Peter Hunt and Austin Pendleton as associate directors; actors like Donald Madden, Maria Tucci, faces familiar to New Haven audiences like Tom Atkins, Emery Batis, David Clennon, Joyce Ebert, George Ede, Laurie Kennedy, James Naughton, Joan Pape, William Swetland and Lee Wallace; designers like Santo Loquasto and John Conklin.

There are more, but to stop the name dropping, suffice it to say that some very talented people have grown with and maintained working ties with this theater.

It has established itself as an institution with an artistic identity, rather than an off-season vacation place for theater artists. Many full-time civic theaters would be hard pressed to match Williamstown's short season in scope and quality.

They start the summer by presenting a new production each week, at the end of the season they resurrect the most successful productions for a return run. This season they've already done "Mary Stuart," "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui," and "Once in a Lifetime." Tuesday through Saturday they'll play "Uncle Vanya." And after that Long Wharf's Arvin Brown directs "The Country Girl."

Stockbridge

Down the road in Stockbridge, in a building reminiscent of a grange hall, is the Berkshire Theater Festival at the Berkshire Playhouse. This group leans toward trying out new plays, but began its season by giving a young writer, Paul Zindel, a two-work retrospective. The plays are "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little" with Julie Harris, followed by "The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man-In-The-Moon-Marigolds" starring and directed by June Havoc. Tuesday they open a new production, "Clark and Myrna," starring Vivian Vance, Lucille Ball's cohort on the old "I Love Lucy" show. It runs until Aug. 12.

The important point about these Bay State theaters is that each has an identity, a sense of artistic purpose. Each has an on-going institutional direction. With the exceptions of the Goodspeed Opera House, which had devoted its labors to vintage musicals, and the Sharon Playhouse, which has planned a season with each production representative of one decade in seventy years of American drama, Connecticut summer theaters are little more than landlords renting space.

There's more to life in the Berkshires

See BERKSHIRES Page 5D

REGISTER
NEW HAVEN, CONN.
S. 137,000
JUL 30 1972
New England Newsclip

Finnish Couple Visits Granby Under American Host Program

GRANBY (C) — Each summer Larry and Carol Bressor of West Granby entertain a number of European school teachers, and their visitors get to see America from an American home rather than from a bus.

The program which the Bressors are quick to praise and encourage is the American Host Program, and under this plan the Bressors have had teachers from Holland, Germany, Belgium, the UK, and presently from Finland. The Bressors point out that the program now includes provisions to arrange sojourns in Europe for the American families who have taken in the touring teachers.

The Bressor's present guests are Ensio and Salme Jalovaara from Keitele in central Finland. Mrs. Jalovaara, who speaks very good English with a slight Oxford accent, is the principal of a middle school there.

She explains that her school is for children between the ages of 10 and 15, and the courses offered correspond almost directly to those of a comparable American school. Her husband, Ensio, is a dentist who has a small, fully subsidized private practice, but whose main time is spent in the schools.

Finnish dentistry is paid in full by the government, and school there means a lot of instruction in the subject, and any work that needs to be done. Dr. Jalovaara added that his work also includes pre-natal dentistry, and a pregnancy in Finland means that the mother's teeth are put in the best order, and there is instruction to insure that the offspring will have good teeth.

The Bressors took the Jalovaaras to the UConn Dental School, and they were impressed.

The Jalovaaras enjoy their sports which are both water and cross country skiing. Their home town of Keitele makes the Harjun Fin ski which is used for cross country. They explained that during the week, the Finnish night in winter starts at 3 p.m., thus making skiing impossible, but on weekends they take 10 kilometer jaunts.

Snowmobiles are not used extensively there except in Lapland, and they added that there is a concern about them for the way the vehicles spook reindeer. Similarly, Dr. Jalovaara explains that any boat on the Finnish lakes which has over 20 hp must be registered, and there is an attempt to control noise and pollution there.

One of the most interesting Finnish sports is "Pesapallo" where there are four pads around a square with a man in the center throwing a hard ball to a man with a club at one of the pads. In fact, the game came to Finland from a gym teacher who had lived in the States, but while the Finns love their baseball, it's strictly amateur, not professional.

Finland is the only country which repaid its financial aid to the U.S. after World War I and it fought a war of bitter memories with the Soviet Union back in 1940. Says Mrs. Jalovaara, "I can like the Soviets because I realize that what has happened is not an individual's fault," and she then adds, "I do not agree with the policies in Vietnam or the race situation, but that too is not an individual's fault.

The Jalovaara's greatest joy in New England thus far has been Tanglewood. "In Finland at a concert, you dress and sit up straight in a straight backed chair, and I think we ought to have picnics on the lawn."

FARMINGTON VALLEY HERALD
SIMSBURY, CONN.
W. 6,300
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRES

(Continued from Page 1D)

than plays. Drive out of Stockbridge and over to Becket, down a country road into the woods, and you reach Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Here in a handsome, rough hewn, barn-like theater dance gets to stop being a "stepchild" art and finds a place all to itself for the summer. Each week from June through August, a different dance company takes over the stage. Tuesday through Saturday it's the Boston Ballet Company, and the week after that the Maria Alba Spanish Dance Company.

Lenox

And of course in Lenox there's the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, the aristocratic granddaddy of the rock festival (the offspring can be visited practically in the back yard at the Lenox Arts Center where The Youngbloods are slated Saturday and Taj Mahal on Aug. 12). Tanglewood is a beautiful place to be and a unique experience. It's a combination concert, picnic and traffic jam. The audience can easily hit 15,000 (a more polite and responsive mob you'll never-meet) so it's not a place to merely "work in" on the way by. The best way to do Tanglewood is to take full advantage of the surroundings by arriving an hour or two early with a full picnic hamper and enough wine to carry you through until at least an hour after the concert.

When you add all there is to see and do in the Berkshires to the landscape, the charm of the villages, the hospitality of the country inns and fine restaurants, you've got a great weekend destination. Better still, a long weekend.

TRAVELING WITH THE BSO

Wins Tour

Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover, Mass., Chairman of the Friends Of the Boston Orchestra, depart the Red Lion Inn for a tour of the Berkshires and Tanglewood. Mrs. Sargent bid and won the opportunity to have a tour of the Berkshires on Mr. Walt's BMW motorcycle, during the Symphony's recent 1972 Musical Marathon benefit which raised nearly $60,000 for the orchestra. (UPI Photo)

NEWS
BANGOR, MAINE
D. 78,230
AUG 1 1972

Going with the woodwind

Sherman Walt, first bassoon of the Boston Symphony, makes good his pledge of a Berkshire tour on his motorcycle offered to a donor to the BSO's 1972 radio Musical Marathon benefit. Mrs. George Lee Sargeant is the winning passenger, whose trip began at the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass.

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264
JUL 29 1972
New England Newsclip

CAPE COD STANDARD TIMES
HYANNIS, MASS.
D. 25,776
JUL 28 1972
New England Newsclip

Wins tour

Sherman Walt, left, principal bassoonist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. George Lee Sargent, right, of Dover, Mass., chairman of the Boston Symphony, depart the Red Lion Inn for a tour of the Berkshires and Tanglewood. Mrs. Sargent bid and won the opportunity to have a tour of the Berkshires, on Mr. Walt's BMW motorcycle, during the Symphony's recent 1972 Musical Marathon benefit, which raised nearly $60,000 for the Orchestra. (UPI)

BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra's recent musical marathon to raise funds included auction of tour of the Berkshires with motorcyclist Sherman Walt, who is also BSO's principal bassoonist. High bidder, Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover, chairman of the Friends of Tanglewood, and Walt begin tour at Red Lion, Stockbridge. UPI

CHRONICLE
WILLIMANTIC, CONN.
D. 8,500
JUL 29 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 28 1972
New England Newsclip

INS TOUR: Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Mrs. George Lee Sergent, chairman of Friends of the Boston Symphony, depart the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass. for a tour of the Berkshires and Tanglewood. Mrs. Sergent bid and won the opportunity to have the tour with Walt during the Symphony's 1972 musical marathon benefit which raised nearly $60,000 for the Orchestra. (UPI Wirephoto)

Whitestone photo

UPTEMPO — Boston Symphony bassoonist Sherman Walt takes Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover on motorcycle tour of Tanglewood. Mrs. Sargent was high bidder for the ride in the Symphony's Musical Marathon which raised nearly $60,000 for the Boston Orchestra.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 28 1972
New England Newsclip

TRAVELING WITH THE BSO

Wins Tour

Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover, Mass., Chairman of the Friends Of the Boston Orchestra, depart the Red Lion Inn for a tour of the Berkshires and Tanglewood. Mrs. Sargent bid and won the opportunity to have a tour of the Berkshires on Mr. Walt's BMW motorcycle, during the Symphony's recent 1972 Musical Marathon benefit which raised nearly $60,000 for the orchestra. (UPI Photo)

NEWS
BANGOR, MAINE
D. 78,230
AUG 1 1972

Going with the woodwind

Sherman Walt, first bassoon of the Boston Symphony, makes good his pledge of a Berkshire tour on his motorcycle offered to a donor to the BSO's 1972 radio Musical Marathon benefit. Mrs. George Lee Sargeant is the winning passenger, whose trip began at the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass.

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264
JUL 29 1972
New England Newsclip

CAPE COD STANDARD TIMES
HYANNIS, MASS.
D. 25,776
JUL 28 1972
New England Newsclip

Wins tour

Sherman Walt, left, principal bassoonist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. George Lee Sargent, right, of Dover, Mass., chairman of the Boston Symphony, depart the Red Lion Inn for a tour of the Berkshires and Tanglewood. Mrs. Sargent bid and won the opportunity to have a tour of the Berkshires, on Mr. Walt's BMW motorcycle, during the Symphony's recent 1972 Musical Marathon benefit, which raised nearly $60,000 for the Orchestra. (UPI)

Whitestone photo

BOSTON SYMPHONY Orchestra's recent musical marathon to ed auction of tour of the Berkshires with motorcyclist Sherman BSO's principal bassoonist. High bidder, Mrs. George Lee Sargent of the Friends of Tanglewood, and Walt begin tour at Red

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 28 1972
New England Newsclip

INS TOUR: Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Mrs. George Lee Sergent, chairman of Friends of the Boston Symphony, depart the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass. for a tour of the Berkshires and Tanglewood. Mrs. Sergent bid and won the opportunity to have the tour with Walt during the Symphony's 1972 musical marathon benefit which raised nearly $60,000 for the Orchestra. (UPI Wirephoto)

CHRONICLE
WILLIMANTIC, CONN.
D. 8,500
JUL 29 1972
New England Newsclip

UPTEMPO — Boston Symphony bassoonist Sherman Walt takes Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover on motorcycle tour of Tanglewood. Mrs. Sargent was high bidder for the ride in the Symphony's Musical Marathon which raised nearly $60,000 for the Boston Orchestra.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 28 1972
New England Newsclip

Bike Commuter-Conductor

Conductor Aldo Ceccato, Milan, Italy, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this weekend, is in his own element as he bicycles to and from rehearsals on a bicycle borrowed from one of the Tanglewood student guides at Lenox, Mass. An amateur bicycle speed racer in Italy, Ceccato has been spending free time on a bicycle at Tanglewood. He has been appointed conductor of the Detroit Symphony for the coming year.

(Associated Press Wirephoto)

Tanglewood Cyclist

Conductor Aldo Ceccato of Milan, Italy, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this weekend, is in his own element as he bicycles to and from rehearsals on a cycle borrowed from one of the Tanglewood student guides. An amateur bicycle speed racer in Italy, Ceccato has been spending free time on a bicycle at Tanglewood. He has been appointed conductor of the Detroit Symphony for the coming year.

AP Photo

Bike Commuter

Conductor Aldo Ceccato of Milan, Italy, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this weekend, is in his own element as he bicycles to and from rehearsals on a cycle borrowed from one of the Tanglewood student guides. An amateur bicycle speed racer in Italy, Ceccato has been appointed conductor of the Detroit Symphony for the coming year.

AMATEUR SPEED RACER—Conductor Aldo Ceccato of Milan, Italy, bicycled to and from rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood where he was guest conductor this past weekend. An amateur racer in Italy, Ceccato borrowed the bicycle from a student guide at Tanglewood and has been spending his free time riding it. Ceccato has been appointed conductor of the Detroit Symphony for the coming year. (AP Wirephoto)

A RACY TUNE AT TANGLEWOOD — Aldo Ceccato, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which is playing at Tanlewood this weekend, also happens to be one of Italy's finest bicycle speed racers. (UPI Wirephoto)

SPEEDY CONDUCTOR: Aldo Ceccato, guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood this weekend, also happens to be one of Italy's finest bicycle speed racers. Ceccato commutes back and forth to work on a bicycle loaned to him by one of the young Tanglewood student guides. (UPI Wirephoto)

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

AUG 6 1972

New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS
D. 13,225

AUG 7 1972

NEWS ADVERTISER
WESTFIELD, MASS.
D. 5,000

AUG 5 1972

CHRONICLE
WILLIMANTIC, CONN.
D. 8,500

AUG 5 1972

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

AUG 7 1972

The Charlotte Observer
CHARLOTTE, N. C.
D. 174,906 SUN. 2[illegible]

AUG 5 1972

PORT HURON, MICH.
TIMES HERALD
D. 38,000

AUG 5 1972

IN THE SWING — Aldo Ceccato of Milan, Italy, guest conductor this weekend at Tanglewood, was in own element as he bicycled to and from rehearsals. Ceccato is an amateur bicycle speed racer in Italy. He has been appointed conductor of Detroit Symphony for coming year. (AP Wirephoto)

Travel

SHAKER Villa

YOU don't have to wait until October to camp at October Mountain State Forest near Lenox, Mass. In fact, you'd better not if you are interested in the area's main attraction. The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, runs for eight weeks during July and August.

I hasten to add that you are already too late for this year's festival which concluded last weekend. But music lovers would do well to make a note for next year. It's a rare experience that I suspect most persons come away from determined to return. We did. And even if the festival doesn't attract you, the Lenox area offers other pleasures.

We started out at 7:20 Saturday morning, Aug. 5. At 10:15 we pulled up at the gate of October Mountain State Forest. Distance traveled—150.6 miles. Subtract eight miles and 10 to 15 minutes for the trouble we had finding the Massachusetts Turnpike on-ramp at Auburn and you'll have a fairly accurate reading of what the trip involves from suburban Providence.

Fortunately, two tent sites were open when we arrived. We were lucky. On weekends during July and August, October Mountain is likely to be full. But don't let that stop you. There are other public and private grounds within a 15-mile radius of Lenox, one of which is bound to have space.

Seeing the Berkshires of western Massachusetts is itself enough to

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
S. 207,211
AUG 27 1972
New England Newsclip

BOSTON REVIEW OF THE ARTS
BOSTON, MASS.
MONTHLY CIRC.N.AVAIL.
AUG 1972

TANGLEWOOD

Tanglewood is a pastoral little plot of Berkshire County land that houses the summer season of the Boston Symphony; last summer some two-hundred and forty thousand people trekked there to hear concerts in surroundings more idyllic than the overheated, overpriced halls of our overpopulated cities. Named after the Hawthorne tales, it also houses the Berkshire Music Center, an altogether remarkable musical-educational institution.

The Berkshire Music Center is the brain child of Serge Koussevitsky, the flamboyant Russian aristocrat who rode herd over the Boston Symphony from 1924 to 1949. In a proposal-statement to the trustees of the orchestra in 1939, he was gushily effusive about the potential of the Center:

> . . . a historical mission . . . a perennial contribution of America to human art and culture.

He went on:

> . . . the greatest living composers would teach the art of composition, the greatest virtuosi—the art of perfect performance, the greatest conductors—the mystery of conducting orchestras and choruses . . . a free cooperation of such an elite would certainly result in the creation of new and great values, in the radiation of beams of high culture over a nation and the world at large, and finally in the education and training of a new generation of American artists.

Beneath all that Koussevitskian excess lay a highly realistic nuts-and-bolts plan to fill certain drastically empty gaps in the education of the American musician. In 1940 the need for an institution where students could obtain practical experience in orchestral playing, conducting, and composition was critical, for few music schools had any interest in teaching their students much besides how to become big-league virtuosi, an unrealistic prospect at best.

The first summer of the Berkshire Music Center was an immediate success. Men like Leonard Bernstein and Eleazar de Carvalho were student conductors, Paul Hindemith taught composition, and Koussevitsky passed on large doses of his musical wizardry to the student orchestra.

As the years passed, the Berkshire Music Center grew—the 1972 edition is a most complicated animal. One hundred seventy musicians will be fellowship students (a fellowship pays tuition, in addition to a grant for housing and feeding a student during the summer); there will be nine composers, seven conductors, and a host of instrumentalists and singers. Working with the faculty to coordinate the energy-channeling of all that talent is Daniel Gustin, the administrator of the Berkshire Music Center.

"This is the only training center in this country supported by a symphony orchestra," he told me, going on to give a precise chronicle of the financial setup as well as a detailed preview of the summer.

"No one pays tuition here: the fellowships [total cost to the Berkshire Music Center per student is $2000] are underwritten by individuals, business firms, and foundations. Most of the gifts that come in are between $500 and $1000."

The difference, it turns out, is made up by the Boston Symphony; last summer's deficit was close to $250,000. Gustin then went on to talk about the Festival of Contemporary Music, a big attention-getting Berkshire Music Center event each season.

"The cost of FOCM is partially underwritten by the Fromm Foundation in Chicago. The whole Fromm involvement in Tanglewood started around 1956. The Fromm people would underwrite specific pieces like Luciano Berio's Circles; they were played by Boston Symphony people. In following summers, though, specific players from outside were brought in to play the Fromm pieces. We had Paul Zukofsky up here when he was seventeen; he was one of the original Fromm players, along with John Bergamo, a really fantastic percussionist.

"It began, though, to strike people as peculiar that players had to be brought in from outside to play these pieces, and since the Fromm people liked Tanglewood and the whole idea of the Berkshire Music Center, the Fromm activities were integrated into the program."

Tanglewood this summer will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Fromm Foundation in a big way. Besides performances of Berio's Circles and Elliott Carter's Double Concerto, well-established works premiered in the early Fromm years, there will be a new opera, Chocorua by Robert Selig (commissioned half by Fromm, half by the Berkshire Music Center), new pieces by Fred Lerdahl, Bruno Maderna, and Gunther Schuller commissioned for the Festival, plus vocal and chamber concerts. For the first time the Boston Symphony will participate in FOCM, premiering Charles Wuorinén's violin concerto, with Paul Zukofsky (now a ripe old twenty-eight) as soloist and Michael Tilson Thomas conducting.

That is about half of the total output of contemporary music at Tanglewood this summer. There has always been a fair-to-moderate amount of griping among the students about the quantity of such music they are required to play. I asked Joseph Silverstein, chairman of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, what effect he felt this volume of new music had.

"That's very difficult to evaluate," he said. "No matter how carefully the Festival is conceived in terms of balance, there are always problems." Contemporary music has a way of being more difficult than originally thought and needing more rehearsal time than originally planned for.

There is no question in my mind that this exposure is immensely valuable. The students gain an understanding and technical grasp that will hold them in good stead later on.

The Berkshire Music Center has produced more big-name conductors per square foot than any other institution around: Leonard Bernstein, Seiji Ozawa, Eleazar de Carvalho, Claudio Abbado, Michael Tilson Thomas, and Lawrence Foster, to name just a few. The reason for this is fairly simple. Tanglewood is not a large place geographically; a student conductor at Tanglewood has a good chance to meet and/or be seen by just about anyone who comes there; hence his chances for "the big break" are greatly enhanced.

The conducting program has undergone more changes year by year than any other endeavor of the Berkshire Music Center. Joseph Silverstein again: "We try to make the activities of the student conductors as interesting as possible; we don't like to have conductors sitting around with a hot stick in their hands and nothing to do."

What about the actual teaching of conducting? Silverstein: "First of all, teaching conducting is virtually impossible. Conducting is learned, not taught; the conductor must learn through experience to develop a vocabulary of gestures which will effectively convey his musical ideas to the orchestra."

Though a student conductor does not get a great deal of actual conducting, the opportunity to hear a major orchestra in rehearsal day after day, to talk with people like Silverstein about specific orchestral problems, and to make personal contacts with the visiting conductors is most valuable and quite exciting.

The newest addition to the Berkshire Music Center lineup is the Music Theater Project, an experimental opera program offered for the first time in 1971. Funded by the National Opera Institute and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music, the Project is under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, the new general director of the Washington Opera Society. Last summer's offerings were highly successful productions of Ligeti's Adventures and the Weill-Brecht Mahagonny Songspiel; this summer's program will consist of Monteverdi's The Coronation of Poppea, the Weill-Brecht Der Jasager, and Selig's Chocorua.

Strasfogel is most proud of the accomplishments of the Project: ". . . a project that can appeal and even draw people of varying backgrounds; people that have never heard or wanted to hear anything past Brahms came to hear the Ligeti and will come to hear Chocorua."

Strasfogel talks of the undertaking as "The Music Theater of poverty, to paraphrase Grotowski." (Douglas Schmidt's excellent set for Adventures cost an incredibly low $500, and things are just as tight this summer.)

The young singers in the Project are among the best this country has to offer. Of the twelve singers last year, four have been awarded $10,000 grants from the National Opera Institute.

Strasfogel: "The educational goal here is to expand everyone's abilities: the coaches, the singers, the tech people, the designers, the conductors, the directors. With the exception of Center Opera in Minnesota, this is the only organization totally devoted to experimental opera.

"We don't work with specialists in modern music: these people are trying to make their way as opera singers."

It is much to the credit of the Berkshire Music Center that it decided to revive opera at Tanglewood; opera is always expensive, and it was expense that forced the folding of Tanglewood's earlier opera undertaking.

I'm not sure that the Berkshire Music Center "radiates beams of high culture" over the nation, but it has been a most important contribution to American musical life for many years now, and will no doubt continue to be an important training center and stepping-stone in the careers of young musicians.

John Oliver

TOWN CRIER
WAYLAND MASS.
W. 4,652
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Coffee seller at Tanglewood is Wayland's Paul Moyer [his dad is personnel director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra]. A story and pictures on the new Tanglewood on page 14.

PAGE ONE

Travel

SHAKER Villa

BOSTON REVIEW OF THE ARTS
BOSTON, MASS.
MONTHLY CIRC. N. AVAIL.
AUG 1972

YOU don't have to wait until October to camp at October Mountain State Forest near Lenox, Mass. In fact, you'd better not if you are interested in the area's main attraction. The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra, runs for eight weeks during July and August.

I hasten to add that you are already too late for this year's festival which concluded last weekend. But music lovers would do well to make a note for next year. It's a rare experience that I suspect most persons come away from determined to return. We did. And even if the festival doesn't attract you, the Lenox area offers other pleasures.

We started out at 7:20 Saturday morning, Aug. 5. At 10:15 we pulled up at the gate of October Mountain State Forest. Distance traveled—150.6 miles. Subtract eight miles and 10 to 15 minutes for the trouble we had finding the Massachusetts Turnpike on-ramp at Auburn and you'll have a fairly accurate reading of what the trip involves from suburban Providence.

Fortunately, two tent sites were open when we arrived. We were lucky. On weekends during July and August, October Mountain is likely to be full. But don't let that stop you. There are other public and private grounds within a 15-mile radius of Lenox, one of which is bound to have space.

Seeing the Berkshires of western Massachusetts is itself enough to

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
S. 207,211
AUG 27 1972
New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD

Tanglewood is a pastoral little plot of Berkshire County land that houses the summer season of the Boston Symphony; last summer some two-hundred and forty thousand people trekked there to hear concerts in surroundings more idyllic than the overheated, overpriced halls of our overpopulated cities. Named after the Hawthorne tales, it also houses the Berkshire Music Center, an altogether remarkable musical-educational institution.

The Berkshire Music Center is the brain child of Serge Koussevitsky, the flamboyant Russian aristocrat who rode herd over the Boston Symphony from 1924 to 1949. In a proposal-statement to the trustees of the orchestra in 1939, he was gushily effusive about the potential of the Center:

> . . . a historical mission . . . a perennial contribution of America to human art and culture.

He went on:

> . . . the greatest living composers would teach the art of composition, the greatest virtuosi – the art of perfect performance, the greatest conductors – the mystery of conducting orchestras and choruses . . . a free cooperation of such an elite would certainly result in the creation of new and great values, in the radiation of beams of high culture over a nation and the world at large, and finally in the education and training of a new generation of American artists.

Beneath all that Koussevitskian excess lay a highly realistic nuts-and-bolts plan to fill certain drastically empty gaps in the education of the American musician. In 1940 the need for an institution where students could obtain practical experience in orchestral playing, conducting, and composition was critical, for few music schools had any interest in teaching their students much besides how to become big-league virtuosi, an unrealistic prospect at best.

The first summer of the Berkshire Music Center was an immediate success. Men like Leonard Bernstein and Eleazar de Carvalho were student conductors, Paul Hindemith taught composition, and Koussevitsky passed on large doses of his musical wizardry to the student orchestra.

As the years passed, the Berkshire Music Center grew – the 1972 edition is a most complicated animal. One hundred seventy musicians will be fellowship students (a fellowship pays tuition, in addition to a grant for housing and feeding a student during the summer); there will be nine composers, seven conductors, and a host of instrumentalists and singers. Working with the faculty to coordinate the energy-channeling of all that talent is Daniel Gustin, the administrator of the Berkshire Music Center.

"This is the only training center in this country supported by a symphony orchestra," he told me, going on to give a precise chronicle of the financial setup as well as a detailed preview of the summer.

"No one pays tuition here: the fellowships [total cost to the Berkshire Music Center per student is $2000] are underwritten by individuals, business firms, and foundations. Most of the gifts that come in are between $500 and $1000."

The difference, it turns out, is made up by the Boston Symphony; last summer's deficit was close to $250,000. Gustin then went on to talk about the Festival of Contemporary Music, a big attention-getting Berkshire Music Center event each season.

"The cost of FOCM is partially underwritten by the Fromm Foundation in Chicago. The whole Fromm involvement in Tanglewood started around 1956. The Fromm people would underwrite specific pieces like Luciano Berio's Circles; they were played by Boston Symphony people. In following summers, though, specific players from outside were brought in to play the Fromm pieces. We had Paul Zukofsky up here when he was seventeen; he was one of the original Fromm players, along with John Bergamo, a really fantastic percussionist.

"It began, though, to strike people as peculiar that players had to be brought in from outside to play these pieces, and since the Fromm people liked Tanglewood and the whole idea of the Berkshire Music Center, the Fromm activities were integrated into the program."

Tanglewood this summer will celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Fromm Foundation in a big way. Besides performances of Berio's Circles and Elliott Carter's Double Concerto, well-established works premiered in the early Fromm years, there will be a new opera, Chocorua by Robert Selig (commissioned half by Fromm, half by the Berkshire Music Center), new pieces by Fred Lerdahl, Bruno Maderna, and Gunther Schuller commissioned for the Festival, plus vocal and chamber concerts. For the first time the Boston Symphony will participate in FOCM, premiering Charles Wuorinén's violin concerto, with Paul Zukofsky (now a ripe old twenty-eight) as soloist and Michael Tilson Thomas conducting.

That is about half of the total output of contemporary music at Tanglewood this summer. There has always been a fair-to-moderate amount of griping among the students about the quantity of such music they are required to play. I asked Joseph Silverstein, chairman of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, what effect he felt this volume of new music had.

"That's very difficult to evaluate," he said. "No matter how carefully the Festival is conceived in terms of balance, there are always problems." Contemporary music has a way of being more difficult than originally thought and needing more rehearsal time than originally planned for.

There is no question in my mind that this exposure is immensely valuable. The students gain an understanding and technical grasp that will hold them in good stead later on.

The Berkshire Music Center has produced more big-name conductors per square foot than any other institution around: Leonard Bernstein, Seiji Ozawa, Eleazar de Carvalho, Claudio Abbado, Michael Tilson Thomas, and Lawrence Foster, to name just a few. The reason for this is fairly simple. Tanglewood is not a large place geographically; a student conductor at Tanglewood has a good chance to meet and/or be seen by just about anyone who comes there; hence his chances for "the big break" are greatly enhanced.

The conducting program has undergone more changes year by year than any other endeavor of the Berkshire Music Center. Joseph Silverstein again: "We try to make the activities of the student conductors as interesting as possible; we don't like to have conductors sitting around with a hot stick in their hands and nothing to do."

What about the actual teaching of conducting? Silverstein: "First of all, teaching conducting is virtually impossible. Conducting is learned, not taught; the conductor must learn through experience to develop a vocabulary of gestures which will effectively convey his musical ideas to the orchestra."

Though a student conductor does not get a great deal of actual conducting, the opportunity to hear a major orchestra in rehearsal day after day, to talk with people like Silverstein about specific orchestral problems, and to make personal contacts with the visiting conductors is most valuable and quite exciting.

The newest addition to the Berkshire Music Center lineup is the Music Theater Project, an experimental opera program offered for the first time in 1971. Funded by the National Opera Institute and the Martha Baird Rockefeller Fund for Music, the Project is under the direction of Ian Strasfogel, the new general director of the Washington Opera Society. Last summer's offerings were highly successful productions of Ligeti's Adventures and the Weill-Brecht Mahagonny Songspiel; this summer's program will consist of Monteverdi's The Coronation of Poppea, the Weill-Brecht Der Jasager, and Selig's Chocorua.

Strasfogel is most proud of the accomplishments of the Project: ". . . a project that can appeal and even draw people of varying backgrounds; people that have never heard or wanted to hear anything past Brahms came to hear the Ligeti and will come to hear Chocorua."

Strasfogel talks of the undertaking as "The Music Theater of poverty, to paraphrase Grotowski." (Douglas Schmidt's excellent set for Adventures cost an incredibly low $500, and things are just as tight this summer.)

The young singers in the Project are among the best this country has to offer. Of the twelve singers last year, four have been awarded $10,000 grants from the National Opera Institute.

Strasfogel: "The educational goal here is to expand everyone's abilities: the coaches, the singers, the tech people, the designers, the conductors, the directors. With the exception of Center Opera in Minnesota, this is the only organization totally devoted to experimental opera.

"We don't work with specialists in modern music: these people are trying to make their way as opera singers."

It is much to the credit of the Berkshire Music Center that it decided to revive opera at Tanglewood; opera is always expensive, and it was expense that forced the folding of Tanglewood's earlier opera undertaking.

I'm not sure that the Berkshire Music Center "radiates beams of high culture" over the nation, but it has been a most important contribution to American musical life for many years now, and will no doubt continue to be an important training center and stepping-stone in the careers of young musicians.

John Oliver

TOWN CRIER
WAYLAND MASS.
W 4,652
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Coffee seller at Tanglewood is Wayland's Paul Moyer [his dad is personnel director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra]. A story and pictures on the new Tanglewood on page 14.

PAGE ONE

Tanglewood: old guard, new guard, avant-garde

Showtime

NEW GUARD IS PLANTED ON TANGLEWOOD'S PLUSH LAWN

LENOX, Mass. — The Old Guard gives Tanglewood stability. But the New Guard gives it verve.

Not so long ago, most of the fans you saw at the Berkshire Music Festival were Old Guard fans: white dinner jackets, flowered chiffon gowns, pearl necklaces, fur stoles.

That was before the management hit on a new policy—a relaxed dress code and picnicking on the lawn. Never mind stability, it was perfectly clear where the audience really was now.

THE NEW Guard invaded the 210-acre summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and things haven't been the same since. Bare-foot and blue-jeaned, scented with incense and pot, back-packed, long-haired, music-love kids: New Guard.

In fact, the power shift in the 70's has been so drastic the country's oldest major music festival—founded in the 30's—is looking like the country's youngest.

Of course, there are still a few Old Guard diehards who teeter on the edge of irrelevancy. They buy $8.50 reserved seats under Eliel Saarinen's $100,000 Music Shed while the kids pay $3 to sit on the lawn.

The diehards also dine on pressed duck seasoned with brandy at Blantyre Castle—the poshest place around. Last weekend, a busboy told me all attendance records were broken for lunch. Everybody, he said, was headed for Tanglewood.

THE NEW GUARD, on the other hand, spreads out on blankets or folding chairs with sandwiches and soda. And there are a few culinary artists. They bring fiberglas picnic hampers filled with such exotica as fried chicken and white wine and they light insect candles to keep things homey.

The situation could make for an emotional confrontation. But the Old Guard is chivalrous, and there's been no real resistance to increasing domination by the New Guard.

THIS WEEK the Old Guard and the New Guard are getting together to hear contemporary music.

An electronic violin concerto by Charles Wuorinen is having its premiere and Aaron Copland has set eight of Emily Dickinson's simple but eloquent poems to less simple eloquent music. . .and there's a lot of Mary Quant Davis that can't believe what she's hearing or seeing.

Mary Quant Davis is 70 and she still has the straightness and elegance of a young woman who once competed in horse shows. She can still remember the halcyon days when the Old Guard arbited manners and mores from stately old mansions built by bankers and brokers near Lenox at the turn of the century.

SHE ALSO REMEMBERS—vividly—the storm that erupted during the Boston Symphony's first concert at Tanglewood in 1936. The concert was in a tent, and just as Serge Koussevitzky began to conduct Wagner's "The Ride of the Valkyries" all Hell broke loose. The roar of the thunder and heavy splashing of the rain inundated even Wagner's heavy orchestration and three times Koussevitzky had to stop the orchestra.

"He'd start again when there were lulls in the storm," says Mrs. Davis. "But some of the player's instruments were damaged by water and they had to change the second half of the program."

Of course, some things haven't changed. The mountains still fall away gently in the background from Lenox as they did when Mary Quant Davis was a girl, and on a clear August night, the stars are so close they fill your lap.

"The place has changed," says Mrs. Davis, tugging at the short white gloves she always wears to concerts. She throws her head back haughtily and stabs her finger at the New Guard on the lawn.

"In the old days they'd never allow that kind of nonsense," she says. "Never."

What kind of nonsense?

"Nobody came here without being dressed," she replies. Her words are terse, but she eyes the crowd like a squirrel approaching a peanut, apprehensive but curious. "Going to a concert used to be like going to a party. You dressed up. It was a lot of trouble but I liked it that way.

"Nowadays," she shrugs "people don't care how they look. I guess I'm old-fashioned. Anyway. . .if the music's good, I suppose everyone's entitled to enjoy it."

MAURY LEAVITT has ushered at Tanglewood for six years.

He gets two free tickets and admission to festival events any time in return for his services. "The air's good," he says. "It clears the head. And the music's good."

A law student at Duquesne, he grew up 22 years ago in Pittsfield on North Thumberland Road—an Old Guard address. But Maury Leavitt is emphatically New Guard. He doesn't like to wear a tie unless "he has to" and he's interested in all kinds of music "as long as it's good music."

His parents began taking him to Tanglewood when he was three. By the time he was eight, he couldn't sit still for a whole evening of Beethoven of Bach.

"For awhile my interest in the classics eclipsed," he says. "I came back here in high school because the lawn was a great place to take a date.

"Look," he says rubbing his chin. "Formality kills good music. Here everybody rubs shoulders. I don't go to concerts in the winter because I don't like to be confined. I'd rather be on the lawn. . ."

BUT WHAT ABOUT the kind of music at Tanglewood? The spectrum is wide but not so wide as to include the music of the young: folk music and rock and the "people's art" of pop festivals. There's none of that here—at the summer home of the classics. How is it then that the New Guard is so interested in the music of the Old Guard?

Maury Leavitt says most of the young people you see at Tanglewood go to two concerts a night. He says they go first to the Lenox Art Center for twilight rock and folk concerts. Afterwards, he says, they come over for the "heavier" stuff.

He also says it's the Old Guard that insists on pegging music according to styles or eras. The New Guard integrates everything.

"I keep hearing there's a young people's music and an old people's music, an elite music and a petit-bourgeois music," says Leavitt, looking at the lawn polk-dotted with people. "At Tanglewood there's only good music and bad music. The music is everybody's."

Including Mary Quant Davis?

He stares at the palms of his hands, reflecting on the question. "I grew up here," he answers slowly. "This is hokey New England. The people wouldn't get excited if Christ stopped his boat down here.

"We import our culture," he smiles. "And we import. . .the audience."

Louisa Kreisberg

The small red cottage still stands on the Tanglewood grounds where Nathaniel Hawthorne took up residence in 1848 and wrote that he could barely work in the presence of such scenic beauty, and the gardens are relics of an earlier, more formal age.

BUT THE LUSH green of the Berkshires is slowly being asphalted and the streets are lined with gaudy motels bearing such all-American names as Pilgrim, Laurel Hill and Sunset.

The Tanglewood Festival has broadened so widely in size and scope that attendance this summer should exceed a quarter of a million during the eight-week season.

THE REPORTER DISPATCH
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 46,656

The Daily Times
MAMARONECK, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 9,835

AUG 11 1972

The Herald Statesman
YONKERS, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 49,614

The Daily Argus
MOUNT VERNON, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 19,256

The Standard-Star
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 21,059

THE DAILY ITEM
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 16,084

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.
NEWS
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 6,550

AUG 11 1972

Tanglewood...
good sounds, good scenery, great show

The audience often spills out onto the lawn during a Symphony performance. The music shed (background) was funded by Friends of the Berkshire Festival and was dedicated in 1938

Mass. Electric troubleman Chuck Coons (left) discusses Tanglewood's electric service with Jim Kiley, operations manager of the Festival. Tanglewood has back-up electric service which can be switched to if problems develop with the primary feeder

It's easy to see why so many people flock to the Berkshires every summer to spend their leisure time. The serenity of the rolling, green hills; the quiet dignified towns with their quaint inns and smart shops and the clean, crisp air are all part of the Berkshire summer scene.

Adding its own flavor to this locale is Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood is the home of the Berkshire Music Festival and summer residence of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For eight weeks each summer Tanglewood draws to the Berkshires musicians of all abilities as well as those who just appreciate good music.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Music Festival is this country's oldest major festival of music. The Boston Symphony under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitsky began participating in the Festival in 1936. With the exception of a couple of years during World War II they have been residing at Tanglewood every summer since then.

Since the 1930's a number of other features have been added to the Tanglewood program. These include the Berkshire Music Center, the Symphony's summer school for the advanced study of music, and the Festival of Contemporary Music offering many current works, some commissioned especially for the Festival.

The 210 acres that comprise Tanglewood became the permanent summer home of the Berkshire Festival as a result of a gift in 1936 by the descendants of William Aspinwall Tappan, owners of the land.

Nathaniel Hawthorne once lived in a red cottage on the edge of Tappan's Tanglewood in the mid 1800's. The area's beauty inspired Hawthorne to write and plan several books while living here, including the Tanglewood Tales, named after the Tappan estate.

The beauty of the countryside and the area's literary history (Longfellow, Holmes and Melville were also sometime residents) have continued to attract distinguished residents through the years.

The Berkshire Festival now has an annual attendance of nearly a quarter-million visitors during its eight weeks. Each season at Tanglewood there are two weeks of chamber orchestra concerts and six weeks of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Symphony's programs are given on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Each Saturday morning the Orchestra's rehearsal is opened to the public for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Pension Institution.

While the Berkshire Festival is comprised primarily of the 24 concerts and eight open rehearsals, the Tanglewood season as a whole embraces a vast array of music, including Boston Pops concerts, Contemporary Trends concerts and the annual Festival of Contemporary Music sponsored in cooperation with the Fromm Music Foundation.

The 1972 season runs from June 30-August 20. Tickets may be obtained by contacting the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts 01240—Telephone (413) 637-1600.

Tanglewood: old guard, new guard, avant-garde

Showtime

Louisa Kreisberg

LENOX, Mass. — The Old Guard gives Tanglewood stability. But the New Guard gives it verve.

Not so long ago, most of the fans you saw at the Berkshire Music Festival were Old Guard fans: white dinner jackets, flowered chiffon gowns, pearl necklaces, fur stoles.

That was before the management hit on a new policy—a relaxed dress code and picnicking on the lawn. Never mind stability, it was perfectly clear where the audience really was now.

THE NEW Guard invaded the 210-acre summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and things haven't been the same since. Bare-foot and blue-jeaned, scented with incense and pot, back-packed, long-haired, music-love kids: New Guard.

In fact, the power shift in the 70's has been so drastic the country's oldest major music festival—founded in the 30's—is looking like the country's youngest.

Of course, there are still a few Old Guard diehards who teeter on the edge of irrelevancy. They buy $8.50 reserved seats under Eliel Saarinen's $100,000 Music Shed while the kids pay $3 to sit on the lawn.

The diehards also dine on pressed duck seasoned with brandy at Blantyre Castle—the poshest place around. Last weekend, a busboy told me all attendance records were broken for lunch. Everybody, he said, was headed for Tanglewood.

THE NEW GUARD, on the other hand, spreads out on blankets or folding chairs with sandwiches and soda. And there are a few culinary artists. They bring fiberglas picnic hampers filled with such exotica as fried chicken and white wine and they light insect candles to keep things homey.

The situation could make for an emotional confrontation. But the Old Guard is chivalrous, and there's been no real resistance to increasing domination by the New Guard.

THIS WEEK the Old Guard and the New Guard are getting together to hear contemporary music.

An electronic violin concerto by Charles Wuorinen is having its premiere and Aaron Copland has set eight of Emily Dickinson's simple but eloquent poems to less simple eloquent music. . .and there's a lot of Mary Quant Davis that can't believe what she's hearing or seeing.

Mary Quant Davis is 70 and she still has the straightness and elegance of a young woman who once competed in horse shows. She can still remember the halcyon days when the Old Guard arbited manners and mores from stately old mansions built by bankers and brokers near Lenox at the turn of the century.

SHE ALSO REMEMBERS—vividly—the storm that erupted during the Boston Symphony's first concert at Tanglewood in 1936. The concert was in a tent, and just as Serge Koussevitzky began to conduct Wagner's "The Ride of the Valkyries" all Hell broke loose. The roar of the thunder and heavy splashing of the rain inundated even Wagner's heavy orchestration and three times Koussevitzky had to stop the orchestra.

"He'd start again when there were lulls in the storm," says Mrs. Davis. "But some of the player's instruments were damaged by water and they had to change the second half of the program."

Of course, some things haven't changed. The mountains still fall away gently in the background from Lenox as they did when Mary Quant Davis was a girl, and on a clear August night, the stars are so close they fill your lap.

NEW GUARD IS PLANTED ON TANGLEWOOD'S PLUSH LAWN

"The place has changed," says Mrs. Davis, tugging at the short white gloves she always wears to concerts. She throws her head back haughtily and stabs her finger at the New Guard on the lawn.

"In the old days they'd never allow that kind of nonsense," she says. "Never."

What kind of nonsense?

"Nobody came here without being dressed," she replies. Her words are terse, but she eyes the crowd like a squirrel approaching a peanut, apprehensive but curious. "Going to a concert used to be like going to a party. You dressed up. It was a lot of trouble but I liked it that way.

"Nowadays," she shrugs "people don't care how they look. I guess I'm old-fashioned. Anyway. . .if the music's good, I suppose everyone's entitled to enjoy it."

MAURY LEAVITT has ushered at Tanglewood for six years.

He gets two free tickets and admission to festival events any time in return for his services. "The air's good," he says. "It clears the head. And the music's good."

A law student at Duquesne, he grew up 22 years ago in Pittsfield on North Thumberland Road—an Old Guard address. But Maury Leavitt is emphatically New Guard. He doesn't like to wear a tie unless "he has to" and he's interested in all kinds of music "as long as it's good music."

His parents began taking him to Tanglewood when he was three. By the time he was eight, he couldn't sit still for a whole evening of Beethoven of Bach.

"For awhile my interest in the classics eclipsed," he says. "I came back here in high school because the lawn was a great place to take a date.

"Look," he says rubbing his chin. "Formality kills good music. Here everybody rubs shoulders. I don't go to concerts in the winter because I don't like to be confined. I'd rather be on the lawn. . ."

BUT WHAT ABOUT the kind of music at Tanglewood? The spectrum is wide but not so wide as to include the music of the young: folk music and rock and the "people's art" of pop festivals. There's none of that here—at the summer home of the classics. How is it then that the New Guard is so interested in the music of the Old Guard?

Maury Leavitt says most of the young people you see at Tanglewood go to two concerts a night. He says they go first to the Lenox Art Center for twilight rock and folk concerts. Afterwards, he says, they come over for the "heavier" stuff.

He also says it's the Old Guard that insists on pegging music according to styles or eras. The New Guard integrates everything.

"I keep hearing there's a young people's music and an old people's music, an elite music and a petit-bourgeois music," says Leavitt, looking at the lawn polk-dotted with people. "At Tanglewood there's only good music and bad music. The music is everybody's."

Including Mary Quant Davis?

He stares at the palms of his hands, reflecting on the question. "I grew up here," he answers slowly. "This is hokey New England. The people wouldn't get excited if Christ stopped his boat down here.

"We import our culture," he smiles. "And we import. . .the audience."

The small red cottage still stands on the Tanglewood grounds where Nathaniel Hawthorne took up residence in 1848 and wrote that he could barely work in the presence of such scenic beauty, and the gardens are relics of an earlier, more formal age.

BUT THE LUSH green of the Berkshires is slowly being asphalted and the streets are lined with gaudy motels bearing such all-American names as Pilgrim, Laurel Hill and Sunset.

The Tanglewood Festival has broadened so widely in size and scope that attendance this summer should exceed a quarter of a million during the eight-week season.

THE REPORTER DISPATCH
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 46,656

The Daily Times
MAMARONECK, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 9,835

AUG 11 1972

The Herald Statesman
YONKERS, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 49,614

The Daily Argus
MOUNT VERNON, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 19,256

The Standard-Star
NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 21,059

THE DAILY ITEM
PORT CHESTER, N. Y.
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 16,084

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.
NEWS
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 6,550

AUG 11 1972

Tanglewood...
good sounds, good scenery, great show

The audience often spills out onto the lawn during a Symphony performance. The music shed (background) was funded by Friends of the Berkshire Festival and was dedicated in 1938

Mass. Electric troubleman Chuck Coons (left) discusses Tanglewood's electric service with Jim Kiley, operations manager of the Festival. Tanglewood has back-up electric service which can be switched to if problems develop with the primary feeder

It's easy to see why so many people flock to the Berkshires every summer to spend their leisure time. The serenity of the rolling, green hills; the quiet dignified towns with their quaint inns and smart shops and the clean, crisp air are all part of the Berkshire summer scene.

Adding its own flavor to this locale is Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood is the home of the Berkshire Music Festival and summer residence of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For eight weeks each summer Tanglewood draws to the Berkshires musicians of all abilities as well as those who just appreciate good music.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Music Festival is this country's oldest major festival of music. The Boston Symphony under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitsky began participating in the Festival in 1936. With the exception of a couple of years during World War II they have been residing at Tanglewood every summer since then.

Since the 1930's a number of other features have been added to the Tanglewood program. These include the Berkshire Music Center, the Symphony's summer school for the advanced study of music, and the Festival of Contemporary Music offering many current works, some commissioned especially for the Festival.

The 210 acres that comprise Tanglewood became the permanent summer home of the Berkshire Festival as a result of a gift in 1936 by the descendants of William Aspinwall Tappan, owners of the land.

Nathaniel Hawthorne once lived in a red cottage on the edge of Tappan's Tanglewood in the mid 1800's. The area's beauty inspired Hawthorne to write and plan several books while living here, including the Tanglewood Tales, named after the Tappan estate.

The beauty of the countryside and the area's literary history (Longfellow, Holmes and Melville were also sometime residents) have continued to attract distinguished residents through the years.

The Berkshire Festival now has an annual attendance of nearly a quarter-million visitors during its eight weeks. Each season at Tanglewood there are two weeks of chamber orchestra concerts and six weeks of concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. The Symphony's programs are given on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Each Saturday morning the Orchestra's rehearsal is opened to the public for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Pension Institution.

While the Berkshire Festival is comprised primarily of the 24 concerts and eight open rehearsals, the Tanglewood season as a whole embraces a vast array of music, including Boston Pops concerts, Contemporary Trends concerts and the annual Festival of Contemporary Music sponsored in cooperation with the Fromm Music Foundation.

The 1972 season runs from June 30-August 20. Tickets may be obtained by contacting the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts 01240—Telephone (413) 637-1600.

BOSTON AFTER DARK
BOSTON, MASS.
W. 70,000

JUL 18 1972

Summer '72: hitting the Berkshires

(Doug Munson photo)

You can stand there to order your borscht from Alice Brock's takeout place and it seems like pickle can rhyme with motorsickle.

BY DAVID PITT

STOCKBRIDGE—If you point your wheels, thumb, or what have you due west from Boston and proceed 150 miles, you'll end up in a locale once described by a bunch of Dutch settlers as a "hideous, howling wilderness." That was in 1692. Nowadays, Berkshire County is more civilized; but there are times -- notably during the height of the summer tourist stampede when howls and hideousness are still the rule.

However, since in the summer the Berkshires seemingly offer something for everybody -- and seemingly everybody comes looking for it -- that's to be expected. Conservative estimates place the summer population increase county-wide at about three times the norm. But crowds in the Berkshire Hills are still easier to tolerate than crowds in the city, and even during the height of the tourist season the Berkshire's wooded bumps (the natives call them mountains) can provide some escape.

If you're driving, the Mass Pike is the most expedient way to get to the Berkshires; the toll is outrageous, state police are everywhere, and road repair crews frequently turn sections of the highway into an obstacle course, but if you stay alert, keep your nose clean and bring money, you'll get here from Boston in two and a half hours. On the other hand, if you like scenery and driving longer, (or happen to be hitching) take Route 9. Once you get clear of the roadside horrors of Worcester and parts of Springfield, the views are nice.

Ostensibly, most people come here for the music, but there's also theatre, art galleries by the score, films and film workshops, poetry readings on the grass, and quaint points of historical interest. As a friend once sardonically noted, Berkshire County is the land of cultural overkill.

For those given to reading local chamber of commerce literature, the Berkshires means Tanglewood, the summer headquarters of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tanglewood is actually a former brahman estate (one of many in the area), and -- even inundated with the 10,000 or so people who often show up for concerts -- it is a breathtakingly beautiful place to stroll about, with easily the best view around of the valley between Lenox and Stockbridge. The concerts themselves are another story. If you're a serious listener, forget the weekend concerts by the full orchestra. If you buy the cheapo tickets and sit out on the lawn, the acoustics will be fine, but the chances are you'll also be treated to the sounds of people listening to the ball game on a transistor radio, old ladies in lawn chairs animatedly discussing the weather, babies shrieking, and frisbees clattering. If you pay for seats inside the main shed, the distraction quotient is somewhat lower, but I've never been able to steel myself to sitting amidst thousands of over-enthusiastic souls applauding wildly between, and sometimes in the midst of, symphonic movements. The best deal is to plunk down some nominal contribution and become a Friend of Tanglewood, which means you get passes to the smaller, weekday concerts. There are fewer musical celebrities at these events, but the atmosphere is less Coney Island.

A few years back, there was a small baroque music festival down the road at a place once known as Music Inn. Before that, Music Inn once housed the now legendary School of Jazz, and was the summer hangout of the Modern Jazz Quartet, as well as other people on the order of Dave Brubeck, Mahalia Jackson and Pete Seeger. But rising costs and the inexorable competitive pull of Tanglewood eventually did both enterprises in, and now Music Inn has become a multi-media grab bag of culture known as the Lenox Arts Center. Last year, and the year before, it's chief drawing cards were rock, folk, and blues heavies like B.B. King, Joan Baez, Delaney and Bonnie, James Taylor, Arlo Guthrie and others whose names escape me at the moment. But there was also a fine cinema schedule -- in some cases featuring introductory raps by the filmmakers -- and some interesting contemporary theatre productions. Much the same is scheduled for this year, the chief difference being that the accent seems to be on experimental, workshop productions, with more audience participation. There will be some good music as well -- McLaughlin and the Mahavishu Orchestra, the Youngbloods, Taj Mahal and the Butterfield Blues Band are among some of the groups scheduled.

The two major theatre festivals are about 30 miles apart. The oldest, the Berkshire Playhouse, opened in 1928 in Stockbridge as one of the first summer-stock theatres in the country--(as a matter of fact, Katherine Hepburn worked as an apprentice there, and made her first stage appearance on its stage 42 years ago). After many years, the place went into a period of decline and finally vanished, only to be fixed up and reopened in the mid-sixties thanks to the efforts of local playwright William Gibson, Ann Bancroft, Eli Wallach and an assortment of other theatrical notables. The Berkshire Playhouse began its renaissance with a commitment to producing new plays by relative unknowns (Don Peterson's "Does a Tiger Wear A Necktie" for instance), but included a nice mix of traditional crowd-pleasers like Wilder and Williams. Then it went a bit overboard on standard fare, but now seems to have moved back to a predominantly experimental approach, notwithstanding an anticipated assortment of Broadway tryout productions this season.

The Williamstown Theatre started in 1955, and its offerings of new productions of old plays has made it sort of the Tanglewood of drama festivals. The physical layout of the place -- on the Williams College campus -- is plush compared to the Berkshire Playhouse, and what I've seen there suggests that you can generally expect an evening of pretty solid acting and lavish stage productions. For my money, it's rather predictable stuff.

If you're into art exhibitions, it's hard to go anywhere in the county -- especially around Lenox and Stockbridge -- without tripping across the doorstep of a private gallery. They seem to be everywhere. Two are particularly noteworthy. The Clark Art Institute is in Williamstown, and it's got one of the finest collections of impressionist work in the United States. Also the lighting inside is superb. And, if you want to combine a gallery tour with a look at one of the Berkshire's most famous latter-day tourist shrines, visit the Art Union in Great Barrington. It's in "Alice's Church," a hallowed place in the history of the local counter-culture, and the backdrop for Arlo and his Gang in the movie, "Alice's Restaurant."

It seems like eons since that picture put the mellow little hamlet of Stockbridge on the map; but carloads of folk still regularly unload on the Main Street, looking for the Church, the Restaurant or Officer Obie. If you too are into pilgrimmages of that sort, bear in mind that the Church -- contrary to the impression left by the movie -- is actually 10 miles south of Stockbridge. On the other hand, Alice's Restaurant is off in an alley in Stockbridge, but has another name and is now a slightly more expensive and infinitely more pretentious European-type place. She no longer owns it. Obanhein is frequently in evidence directing the crush of cars that descend on the town on their way to and from Tanglewood; and while it's possible he's still prepared to handcuff and jail anyone dumping garbage illegally, he is -- at least nowadays -- much more friendly than the movie would have you believe. I only wonder how much longer he's going to enjoy posing for snapshots with visiting longhairs.

Alice Brock herself is also around. She's just opened a place on route 183 in a section of Stockbridge called Glendale. It is, oddly enough, another restaurant. Well, in a manner of speaking anyway; it's a take-out joint called "Take Out Alice," which offers such diverse items as Greek cheese pastries, cold borscht and tacos. How long it will remain open is a matter of conjecture at this writing, however; she has a liquor license, but the town selectmen are concerned that customers will drink spirits on the premises, which would be a violation of the terms of the license. Alice told the selectmen at a recent meeting she'd make sure that wouldn't happen; but they remained skeptical, and Alice left the meeting in a huff, calling out as she went, "Well, then, you'd better come over and close me down."

A final note in the local color department: there is a bar up the road a few miles from "Take Out Alice" called "Mundy's Silver City," and it offers about as much local color as you'd want to see -- in one swell foop, anyway. It boasts a semi-resident motorcycle gang called the "Lost Souls," whose members make a lot of noise and frighten people, but who are by and large very friendly characters, so far as is known. Also Mundy's often has good live music and relatively inexpensive booze. There are only two annoying features: on busy nights, there is a shortage of oxygen inside; and the management is acutely paranoid about serving minors. The Stockbridge and State Police have made sure of the latter feature.

Apart from things cultural, there are plenty of places to swim, although not as many since phosphate pollution became rampant. Much of Stockbridge Bowl is choked with weeds as a result, but if you ask around you may find a spot that's clear of them and not on somebody's private lakefront. My own preference for swimming sites used to be either the old West Stockbridge or Lee quarries; but they're now off-limits to everybody but the owners. Too many kids threw beer cans around and then had to be fished out half-drowned after drinking the contents. The same crew of beer-drinkers frequents Laurel Lake, in Lee...but even with the litter and the noise, it is a magnificent swimming lake. It's deep, clear, and features a cliff with a rope you can swing out on. And on really hot days, try Bash-Bish Falls, in the southwest corner of the county. I'm told the forest rangers have restricted swimming around the waterfall because of some drownings in recent summers; but even if you can't swim, the water is ice-cold, and you can get cooled off just standing near the spray. In addition, the whole Bash Bish area looks like the South Seas.

Finally, accomodations. As one might expect, motel, hotel and boarding house rates are astronomical in the summer. You'll just have to look around. In the height of the Tanglewood season, even the cheesy motels along the Ugly Strip of Route 7 leading into the Ugly City of Pittsfield are filled up. That leaves camping. There are two major camping areas...one is in the Pittsfield State Forest; and I understand that there are camping areas set aside in Beartown State Forest, in Lee, the town adjoining Stockbridge. It is a good idea to check into this sort of thing well in advance, though. Sometimes campsites are as scarce as motel rooms around here, and the various arms of the law don't like you bedding down just anywhere. Your best bet would be to ring up one of the state recreation agencies in Pittsfield. If the line is busy, I suggest a week-end in New York.

(Doug Munson photo)

One of the enticements of Massachusetts' Berkshires . . . the water tumbles quietly. And sometimes hippies take showers.

BLANK PAGE

46

MUSIC

The tourist traps torture Tanglewood

By ELLEN PFEIFER
Music Critic

So you've seen all those ads on the tube celebrating "The Music of Tanglewood." You've seen the idyllic setting of the Boston Symphony's estate in Lenox and decided, finally, to spend that weekend you've promised yourself listening to symphony concerts, soaking up sun, swimming, and relaxing in the beautiful Berkshires.

Better to spend it at Carson Beach. The water may be polluted and there won't be any mountains, but ultimately it will be more relaxing and certainly cheaper.

The problem isn't so much with Tanglewood and the BSO but with the whole gouge-the-tourist ambiance of the surrounding towns and resort areas. Reviewing the BSO concerts, of course, comprises a great portion of my summer activity so I have occasion to be gouged (and also the paper where my expense account goes) just like everyone else — only much more frequently. And it makes me angrier and angrier.

SO, SUPPOSE you do take that weekend trip, what can you expect? The following scenario is typical.

The two of you (your wife, husband, girlfriend, boyfriend, or pal) fill up the gas tank and take off on a Friday afternoon. The trip from the South Station entrance to the Mass Pike will take about two hours and 15 minutes and will cost you $2.95 in tolls.

Arriving in Lee, Lenox, Pittsfield or the areas most immediately accessible to Tanglewood, you check into your hotel (where you have had reservations a month or more in advance) or you spend an hour or more trying to find a place to stay. There's always the chance at this time of the summer, that you may not find any vacancies in any of the motels or hotels.

Pianist Rudolf Firkusny will be one of six pianists to give recitals this year under the sponsorship of the Boston University Celebrity Series. He will appear at Symphony Hall, Sunday, Nov. 19, at 3 p. m.

Assuming that you have made your reservations, you can expect a huge bill for your two nights' stay unless, you stay at a guest house which is the best bargain around. At the Holiday Inn, for instance, the quoted per night rates are $13.50-$27 for a single and $18-$42 for a double — and you can bet those minimum figures apply only in the off-season. At the Colonial Hilton Inn in Pittsfield, the quoted rates are $16-and-up for a single (I paid $27.50 on my last visit) and $22-and-up for a double. The Tanglewood Motor Inn runs from $11 to $32 for a single and $15 to $32 for a double — again, the maximum figures are what you can expect for the summer seasons.

IF YOU HAVE checked into your accommodations at 6 p.m., you will probably change and look for a place to eat. You try the Lenox House and discover that since you haven't made reservations, you will probably have to wait an hour before getting a table. That's cutting things a bit close if you want to make the 9 p.m. concert. So you drive on.

Stopping at the Curtis Inn in Lenox, you decide to try the buffet. That will come to $12.50 for two. The buffet, when I went, consisted of a half-full tray of carrot and celery sticks; a half watermelon filled with segments of canned orange and grapefruit; a bowl of not-very-crisp lettuce; an empty plate which, you deduce from the seeds and juice, had held sliced tomatoes; and several bowls with about a tablespoon of salad dressing at the bottom of each. No effort is made to refill the serving containers.

Farther down the line, there are trays of cold cuts and cheese. Then chafing dishes with rice, seafood Newburg (mostly sauce), Burgundy beef (with meat stringy and overcooked) and an enormous chunk of roast beef (that did look good). For dessert, apple betty made with canned apples, pineapple upside down cake and custard pudding with whipped cream. A bottle of Heineken's costs $.90 extra. Service was poor; there was no napkin at my place and I finally got up and got one from another table since it wasn't likely that the waiter would bring me one before the end of the meal.

AFTER A leisurely meal, you leave about 8:30 which allows you a half hour to drive the half-mile to Tanglewood. As usual, however, the traffic has backed up and you sit in line while the Lenox police try hopelessly to cope with the cars. By the time you finally get parked and onto the grounds, the performance has begun and you will miss the whole first piece if it is short or the whole first movement if it is a longer work.

The next morning, you and your companion may decide to eat breakfast in your hotel or to go out. If you choose the latter, you may try a place like Rossi's in Lee. There you find a menu where everything is a la carte. What looks to be a large jigger of orange juice is $.25. Ham and eggs are $1.55. Cinnamon toast is $.20. Coffee is a quarter and you pay extra for a second cup. You will also wait 20 minutes before being served.

Unless you have learned your lesson, made dinner reservations early, and arrived at Tanglewood an hour before concert time, your second evening in the Berkshires could easily be a repeat performance of the first.

Sunday, there are other problems to frustrate you. Eating lunch on the Tanglewood grounds before the afternoon concert is lots of fun and a good way to avoid the traffic. Driving down the road to the estate, you will see several signs urging motorists to park along the way. One charges $.50 for the privilege; fifty yards later, another sign offers the same arrangement for $2.00.

A LITTLE FARTHER along is a greenhouse which advertises a special Tanglewood Fruit basket. The cost is $1.50. When you inspect it, you discover a small bunch of grapes, a nectarine and a few cherries.

If you've made the mistake of waiting until arrival at Tanglewood to buy lunch, you will really get taken. Actually, the snack bar is the only gyp one will encounter on the grounds, although I'm personally of the opinion that $3.00 is too much to charge people for sitting on the grass where you can't hear much anyway.

The food at the snack bar is atrocious and exorbitantly expensive. For example, a ham sandwich — that is, one slice of ham between two pieces of Wonder bread without lettuce or anything — costs $.80.

And you can't buy much besides sandwiches either. No fruit, salad, baked beans, potato salad or any so-called picnic food. Just those dry sandwiches, brownies, chocolate chip cookies, and beverages.

After the concert, you fill up the gas tank again and begin the two hour plus ride back. Again the tolls will come to $2.95.

Certainly I care whether the BSO has good audiences but, in all honesty, the Berkshire area around Tanglewood is becoming, next to Provincetown in the summer and Miami Beach anytime, one of the most unpleasant places to be. Even if you don't buy trinkets in the hundreds of artsy-craftsy shops, just existing out there for a weekend will empty your pockets and strain your patience.

It's a shame too, because the scenery is gorgeous, the watersports fun and music in that setting a real pleasure. The merchants, retaurateurs and hotel owners know that, of course, and charge what the (very considerable) traffic will bear.

HERALD
NEW BRITAIN, CONN.
D. 33,737

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

1 Boston view of Berkshire s called 'damnable tirade'

he director of the Berkshire s Conference has labeled a ...mnable tirade" an article in the Boston Herald Traveler and Record-American which accused Berkshire entrepreneurs of "tourist gouging."

The article by music critic Ellen Pfeifer appeared in the Aug. 6 edition of the newspaper.

John V. Geary, director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, the agency responsible for promoting tourism in the Berkshires, said he expects a statement about the article from the newspaper's managing editor early next week.

Second thoughts

Geary said he has learned through the conference's Boston-based advertising representative, Herbert W. Frank, that the paper's managing editor, advertising chief and the head of the resort and travel section have all had second thoughts about the piece, entitled "The tourist traps torture Tanglewood."

"I get the impression that none of them are too happy with the article, and I am sure there is no doubt in their minds how I feel," Geary said Friday.

"Miss Pfeifer may be a competent music critic but she is no authority on tourism. The rates for Berkshire facilities are equitable, and they are on a par with other tourist centers in New England," Geary said.

Miss Pfeifer concluded her article by writing, "The Berkshire area around Tanglewood is becoming, next to Provincetown in the summer and Miami Beach anytime, one of the most unpleasant places to be. Even if you don't buy trinkets in the hundreds of artsy-craftsy shops, just existing out there for a weekend will empty your pockets and strain your patience."

Geary was asked this week by the Lenox Selectmen to reply to the Boston newspaper's article.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER &
RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885

AUG 19 1972

New England Newsclip

Like Highway Robbery

Your article on the "tourist trap" at Tanglewood and its surrounding towns cannot go unnoticed! I, and a number of friends, have frequented the concerts for years, and I thoroughly agree there's a highway robbery situation today.

God bless our Boston Symphony Orchestra, and long may it survive; but thank the good Lord that someone has had the courage to expose the "Berkshire Bandits".

Jack Payne
Lowell

MUSIC

The tourist traps torture Tanglewood

By ELLEN PFEIFER
Music Critic

So you've seen all those ads on the tube celebrating "The Music of Tanglewood." You've seen the idyllic setting of the Boston Symphony's estate in Lenox and decided, finally, to spend that weekend you've promised yourself listening to symphony concerts, soaking up sun, swimming, and relaxing in the beautiful Berkshires.

Better to spend it at Carson Beach. The water may be polluted and there won't be any mountains, but ultimately it will be more relaxing and certainly cheaper.

The problem isn't so much with Tanglewood and the BSO but with the whole gouge-the-tourist ambiance of the surrounding towns and resort areas. Reviewing the BSO concerts, of course, comprises a great portion of my summer activity so I have occasion to be gouged (and also the paper where my expense account goes) just like everyone else — only much more frequently. And it makes me angrier and angrier.

SO, SUPPOSE you do take that weekend trip, what can you expect? The following scenario is typical.

The two of you (your wife, husband, girlfriend, boyfriend, or pal) fill up the gas tank and take off on a Friday afternoon. The trip from the South Station entrance to the Mass Pike will take about two hours and 15 minutes and will cost you $2.95 in tolls.

Arriving in Lee, Lenox, Pittsfield or the areas most immediately accessible to Tanglewood, you check into your hotel (where you have had reservations a month or more in advance) or you spend an hour or more trying to find a place to stay. There's always the chance at this time of the summer, that you may not find any vacancies in any of the motels or hotels.

Pianist Rudolf Firkusny will be one of six pianists to give recitals this year under the sponsorship of the Boston University Celebrity Series. He will appear at Symphony Hall, Sunday, Nov. 19, at 3 p. m.

Assuming that you have made your reservations, you can expect a huge bill for your two nights' stay unless, you stay at a guest house which is the best bargain around. At the Holiday Inn, for instance, the quoted per night rates are $13.50-$27 for a single and $18-$42 for a double — and you can bet those minimum figures apply only in the off-season. At the Colonial Hilton Inn in Pittsfield, the quoted rates are $16-and-up for a single (I paid $27.50 on my last visit) and $22-and-up for a double. The Tanglewood Motor Inn runs from $11 to $32 for a single and $15 to $32 for a double — again, the maximum figures are what you can expect for the summer seasons.

IF YOU HAVE checked into your accommodations at 6 p.m., you will probably change and look for a place to eat. You try the Lenox House and discover that since you haven't made reservations, you will probably have to wait an hour before getting a table. That's cutting things a bit close if you want to make the 9 p.m. concert. So you drive on.

Stopping at the Curtis Inn in Lenox, you decide to try the buffet. That will come to $12.50 for two. The buffet, when I went, consisted of a half-full tray of carrot and celery sticks; a half watermelon filled with segments of canned orange and grapefruit; a bowl of not-very-crisp lettuce; an empty plate which, you deduce from the seeds and juice, had held sliced tomatoes; and several bowls with about a tablespoon of salad dressing at the bottom of each. No effort is made to refill the serving containers.

Farther down the line, there are trays of cold cuts and cheese. Then chafing dishes with rice, seafood Newburg (mostly sauce), Burgundy beef (with meat stringy and overcooked) and an enormous chunk of roast beef (that did look good). For dessert, apple betty made with canned apples, pineapple upside down cake and custard pudding with whipped cream. A bottle of Heineken's costs $.90 extra. Service was poor; there was no napkin at my place and I finally got up and got one from another table since it wasn't likely that the waiter would bring me one before the end of the meal.

AFTER A leisurely meal, you leave about 8:30 which allows you a half hour to drive the half-mile to Tanglewood. As usual, however, the traffic has backed up and you sit in line while the Lenox police try hopelessly to cope with the cars. By the time you finally get parked and onto the grounds, the performance has begun and you will miss the whole first piece if it is short or the whole first movement if it is a longer work.

The next morning, you and your companion may decide to eat breakfast in your hotel or to go out. If you choose the latter, you may try a place like Rossi's in Lee. There you find a menu where everything is a la carte. What looks to be a large jigger of orange juice is $.25. Ham and eggs are $1.55. Cinnamon toast is $.20. Coffee is a quarter and you pay extra for a second cup. You will also wait 20 minutes before being served.

Unless you have learned your lesson, made dinner reservations early, and arrived at Tanglewood an hour before concert time, your second evening in the Berkshires could easily be a repeat performance of the first.

Sunday, there are other problems to frustrate you. Eating lunch on the Tanglewood grounds before the afternoon concert is lots of fun and a good way to avoid the traffic. Driving down the road to the estate, you will see several signs urging motorists to park along the way. One charges $.50 for the privilege; fifty yards later, another sign offers the same arrangement for $2.00.

A LITTLE FARTHER along is a greenhouse which advertises a special Tanglewood Fruit basket. The cost is $1.50. When you inspect it, you discover a small bunch of grapes, a nectarine and a few cherries.

If you've made the mistake of waiting until arrival at Tanglewood to buy lunch, you will really get taken. Actually, the snack bar is the only gyp one will encounter on the grounds, although I'm personally of the opinion that $3.00 is too much to charge people for sitting on the grass where you can't hear much anyway.

The food at the snack bar is atrocious and exorbitantly expensive. For example, a ham sandwich — that is, one slice of ham between two pieces of Wonder bread without lettuce or anything — costs $.80.

And you can't buy much besides sandwiches either. No fruit, salad, baked beans, potato salad or any so-called picnic food. Just those dry sandwiches, brownies, chocolate chip cookies, and beverages.

After the concert, you fill up the gas tank again and begin the two hour plus ride back. Again the tolls will come to $2.95.

Certainly I care whether the BSO has good audiences but, in all honesty, the Berkshire area around Tanglewood is becoming, next to Provincetown in the summer and Miami Beach anytime, one of the most unpleasant places to be. Even if you don't buy trinkets in the hundreds of artsy-craftsy shops, just existing out there for a weekend will empty your pockets and strain your patience.

It's a shame too, because the scenery is gorgeous, the watersports fun and music in that setting a real pleasure. The merchants, retaurateurs and hotel owners know that, of course, and charge what the (very considerable) traffic will bear.

HERALD
NEW BRITAIN
D. 33,737

JUN 24

A Boston view of Berkshire is called 'damnable tirade'

The director of the Berkshire Hills Conference has labeled a "damnable tirade" an article in the Boston Herald Traveler and Record-American which accused Berkshire entrepreneurs of "tourist gouging."

The article by music critic Ellen Pfeifer appeared in the Aug. 6 edition of the newspaper.

John V. Geary, director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, the agency responsible for promoting tourism in the Berkshires, said he expects a statement about the article from the newspaper's managing editor early next week.

Second thoughts

Geary said he has learned through the conference's Boston-based advertising representative, Herbert W. Frank, that the paper's managing editor, advertising chief and the head of the resort and travel section have all had second thoughts about the piece, entitled "The tourist traps torture Tanglewood."

"I get the impression that none of them are too happy with the article, and I am sure there is no doubt in their minds how I feel," Geary said Friday.

"Miss Pfeifer may be a competent music critic but she is no authority on tourism. The rates for Berkshire facilities are equitable, and they are on a par with other tourist centers in New England," Geary said.

Miss Pfeifer concluded her article by writing, "The Berkshire area around Tanglewood is becoming, next to Provincetown in the summer and Miami Beach anytime, one of the most unpleasant places to be. Even if you don't buy trinkets in the hundreds of artsy-craftsy shops, just existing out there for a weekend will empty your pockets and strain your patience."

Geary was asked this week by the Lenox Selectmen to reply to the Boston newspaper's article.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER &
RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885

AUG 19 1972

New England
Newsclip

Like Highway Robbery

Your article on the "tourist trap" at Tanglewood and its surrounding towns cannot go unnoticed! I, and a number of friends, have frequented the concerts for years, and I thoroughly agree there's a highway robbery situation today.

God bless our Boston Symphony Orchestra, and long may it survive; but thank the good Lord that someone has had the courage to expose the "Berkshire Bandits".

Jack Payne
Lowell

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

APR 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Tourism said county's second biggest business

Tourism has become Berkshire County's second biggest business, now bringing over $27 million into the region annually.

This is the conclusion of a report prepared by John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, in a brochure drafted for distribution this summer.

The dollars paid out by the estimated 1.2 million tourists who visit the Berkshires each year benefit primarily the lodging, food and ski facilities, according to the report.

Total estimated hotel-motel income is placed at $9,636,000. Restaurant income from tourists is adjudged to be $5,781,600, while the county's ski areas receive on the order of $9 million annually.

Ski areas in the county include Brodie Mountain, Bosquet's, Butternut Basin, Otis Ridge and Jiminy Peak. Catamount, just over the state line in Hillsdale, N.Y., is considered part of the economic region.

Those areas that have been in operation that long have increased their annual income by 300 per cent since 1957, according to Mr. Geary.

Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, accounts for another $3 million in tourist income, while the cash receipts of remaining Berkshire attractions is assessed at $1 million.

Mr. Geary reports that tourism in the Berkshires is topped as a business only by General Electric Co.'s Pittsfield installation.

The Berkshire Hills Conference, founded 47 years ago, promotes tourisim in the county. Its budget is funded by donations from private sources and by the county.

Tourism second to G.E. as city's largest industry

PITTSFIELD — "You want hotel reservations and tickets for Tanglewood this week-end?... Well, we're pretty tight on space right now, but think we can get you in a good inn about 20 miles away..."

That was part of a typical phone conversation in the offices of the Berkshire Hills Conference, the tourist promotion agency of Pittsfield and the county.

Tourism is the next-largest industry in the area after General Electric. John V. Geary, director of the Conference, estimates 3500-4500 persons earn their living directly from tourism.

The Berkshires draw the bulk of their tourists during the winter and summer seasons.

In the winter, 600,000 skiers visit the seven major ski areas. This winter, that number dropped to about 500,000 because of the lack of snow.

In the summer, close to 240,000 persons visit the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home in Tanglewood during its eight-week concert series. Summer theatre, resorts, and camps bring in another 365,000 visitors. Thus over 1,200,000 persons a year visit Berkshire County. They spend over $30 million.

Geary says tourism has increased "three or four percent every year for the last ten years." He predicted that in another ten years it would pass General Electric — based on the continued growth of tourism and the slow decline of General Electric.

"Also people are coming from the city and buying their second home in the Berkshires. This can only stimulate the economy. More will come because they are tired of city life. They come out here to live," Geary added.

Al Bogdan, director of the Urban Coalition, had a less optimistic appraisal of tourism's impact on the future economy:

"Though tourism has a significant place in the Berkshire economy, the average yearly wage is only $3800 in the service area and you can't raise a family on that amount of money.

"Tourism can be an important secondary job source. An example would be the housewife looking for a part-time job or students looking for summer work. But you can't base an economy on it."

Bogdan hopes county agencies and the business sector will provide more comprehensive control of the environment to prevent its "self-destruction through commercialization."

The need to prevent exploitation of the county's natural beauty was echoed by Geary.

"The Conference is taking advantage of the natural assets of the county, but we'll always be concerned about orderly growth for the good of the area."

To handle the increased numbers of visitors predicted for future years a new resort is being planned for Adams, 12 miles north of Pittsfield. It will have a 300-room hotel with complete recreational facilities for year round use.

There has also been a commitment by the Association of Business and Commerce (ABC) to attract conventions: a new convention hall is being planned for the Pittsfield area. According to ABC, this should help make the Berkshires a year-round tourist attraction while keeping the effects on the environment to a minimum.

BERKSHIRE COURIER
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.
W. 3,650

AUG 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Boston Critic Says Berkshires Gyp The Tourist

BOSTON - A music critic for the newly merged Boston Sunday Traveler and Sunday Advertiser has labeled the Berkshires with a "gouge-the-tourist ambiance", especially in the towns and resort areas immediately surrounding Tanglewood.

Ellen Pfeifer outlines a typical weekend trip to Tanglewood, listing prices and naming names, to illustrate her point. She starts with the trip up the Mass. Pike, (tolls: $2.95), and details expenses and inconveniences incurred in Lee, Lenox and Pittsfield, ending with the trip back down the Pike, (tolls: $2.95). Of course, she fails to mention that any gouging on tolls is the fault of Boston, not the Berkshires.

Miss Pfeifer lists minumum and maximum rates for hotels and motels, and says "you can bet those minimum figures apply only in the off season". She says she paid $27.50 at the Colonial Hilton Inn in Pittsfield on her last visit. She lists rates for the Holiday Inn in Lenox and the Tanglewood Motel.

Continuing on, Miss Pfeifer lists the perils of dining out. Mentioning the Lenox house, she complains of an hours wait if you try there without reservations. Moving on to the Curtis Inn in Lenox, she tells what happens if you try their buffet. At $12.50 for 2 persons, she lists a buffet that sounds suspiciously like the leavings of a vegetarian picnic and says no attempt is made to refill the trays on the buffet. As a final touch, she says service was poor and she had no napkin at her table.

We will skip the attempt to drive the distance from the Curtis Inn to Tanglewood at 8:30 on the night of a performance. We can experience that thrill almost any hour of the day right here on Main Street in Great Barrington.

Skipping to breakfast the next morning, she details an adventure in eating at Rossi's in Lee, beginning with "what looks like a large jigger of orange juice for .25¢" through the need to pay for a second cup of coffee and the 20 minute wait for service in the first place.

Moving on to Sunday, and lunch at Tanglewood, Miss Pfeifer notes that "you will really get taken." She says $3.00 is too much to pay for sitting on the grass where you can't hear much anyway. But her real complaint is the snack bar, which she says is "atrocious and exorbitantly expensive."

Miss Pfeifer concluded that the Berkshire area around Tanglewood is becoming, "next to Provincetown in the summer and Miami Beach anytime," one of the most unpleasant places to be."

Taken all together, Miss Pfeifer's indictment of the Berkshires is a crushing blow to our civic pride and to the individual personal pride of those who live here and love the Berkshires. That is, it would be a crushing blow if Miss Pfeifer did not reveal herself to be a singularly naive, unimaginative and ill-formed tourist of the type who is born to be taken.

There is no doubt that prices are prone to rise during peak summer or winter seasons at resorts, but people who head for the Colonial Hilton or the Holiday Inn are asking for it. If you know you are going to go here often during the summer, a little common sense and looking around will tell you there are places other than Pittsfield or the Pittsfield-Lenox road that are better all around for accommodations for Tanglewood.

As for eating out, well, the Curtis Inn a half hour before a Tanglewood performance is where one would expect to find some one who did not know his way in the Berkshires and never got out of sight of his destination. And as for the Lenox House for dinner and Rossi's Restaurant in Lee for breakfast, and the Tanglewood snack bar for Sunday lunch, well, my only question is why? The Berkshires have more fine restaurants per mile and population count than almost anywhere else in the nation. Miss Pfeifer, Awake! Try South County for a change. All the world around Tanglewood does not exist only between the exit of the turnpike in Lee and Park Square in Pittsfield. Why, that stretch of road is nothing but a tourist trap!

Since Miss Pfeifer is ob-

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

SEP 8 1972 New England Newsclip

Wet Spring hurt

Area tourist business rebounds

The Berkshire Hills Conference, the county's promotional agency, reported today that area summer tourism business indicated an overall four to five per cent increase over 1971 despite a very slow start to the season by extended bad weather.

John V. Geary, BHC executive director, said he had had a survey conducted from one end of the county by an impartial researcher whose talks with area businessmen concluded that final figures for the season will make them happier than they were in the Spring and early Summer.

In Northern Berkshire, Mr. Geary said the Williams Inn in Williamstown reported a steady rise in business all summer after a rainy June which produced slow business.

The Williamstown Theatre reported a small drop in attendance because of poor weather early in the season but more than 20,000 people extended performances during the eight-week season. The attendance was 4,000 less than 1971.

No financial crisis was expected because of the attendance loss in the 18th season, however. The theater is leased summers from Williams College.

Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood set an all-time attendance record in eight weeks as 257,860 persons went through the gates. This marked an 18.5 per cent increase from last year. It was the 32nd year of the festival.

Highlights of the eight weeks of the festival were the weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra which drew 207,265 listeners.

Concerning restaurants, in Williamstown the 1896 House found little change this summer from last year's patronage. Howard Johnson's, also in Williamstown, found business better this year. The Howard Johnson's in Pittsfield also gained a little this summer over last year, after a slow start during rainy June.

Motels in the Berkshires reported consistently a slow start in early summer because of the unpleasant weather. However, most found that losses created during June either were made up or exceeded during the season. In Williamstown, the Chimney Mirror Motel reported total business about the same as last summer, with weekends full, but unlike most others, midweek also held up well thanks to the many commercial people who used the facilities.

At the Northside Motel, Williamstown, a slow July was encountered, but August business made up for it, and overall figures about equal last year. The Berkshire Hills Motel in Williamstown reported business a little better than last year, and that unlike most others, it often was full during mid-week. This is accounted for by parents accompanying students for enrollment in Williams College, and guests attracted to Green Mountain Park race track a few miles north in Pownal, Vt.

In Lanesboro, the Mountain View Motel reported summer business closely matched that of last year, with a slight increase that seemed only to meet increased cost caused by inflation. This establishment enjoyes a great deal of repeat business, according to Matthew J. Kennedy, the manager.

Also in Lanesboro, the Country Style Motel manager blamed poor weather early in the season for a 10 per cent drop from last year. However, as was the case with most motels, the weekends were crowded, but the midweek slow. And Albert's Motel and Housekeeping Apartments, Lanesboro, were crowded weekends, but slow during midweek which was somewhat relieved by several all-week guests.

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D. 125,082

JUL 18 1972 New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

APR 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Tourism said county's second biggest business

Tourism has become Berkshire County's second biggest business, now bringing over $27 million into the region annually.

This is the conclusion of a report prepared by John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, in a brochure drafted for distribution this summer.

The dollars paid out by the estimated 1.2 million tourists who visit the Berkshires each year benefit primarily the lodging, food and ski facilities, according to the report.

Total estimated hotel-motel income is placed at $9,636,000. Restaurant income from tourists is adjudged to be $5,781,600, while the county's ski areas receive on the order of $9 million annually.

Ski areas in the county include Brodie Mountain, Bosquet's, Butternut Basin, Otis Ridge and Jiminy Peak. Catamount, just over the state line in Hillsdale, N.Y., is considered part of the economic region.

Those areas that have been in operation that long have increased their annual income by 300 per cent since 1957, according to Mr. Geary.

Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, accounts for another $3 million in tourist income, while the cash receipts of remaining Berkshire attractions is assessed at $1 million.

Mr. Geary reports that tourism in the Berkshires is topped as a business only by General Electric Co.'s Pittsfield installation.

The Berkshire Hills Conference, founded 47 years ago, promotes tourisim in the county. Its budget is funded by donations from private sources and by the county.

Tourism second to G.E. as city's largest industry

PITTSFIELD — "You want hotel reservations and tickets for Tanglewood this week-end?... Well, we're pretty tight on space right now, but think we can get you in a good inn about 20 miles away..."

That was part of a typical phone conversation in the offices of the Berkshire Hills Conference, the tourist promotion agency of Pittsfield and the county.

Tourism is the next-largest industry in the area after General Electric. John V. Geary, director of the Conference, estimates 3500-4500 persons earn their living directly from tourism.

The Berkshires draw the bulk of their tourists during the winter and summer seasons.

In the winter, 600,000 skiers visit the seven major ski areas. This winter, that number dropped to about 500,000 because of the lack of snow.

In the summer, close to 240,000 persons visit the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home in Tanglewood during its eight-week concert series. Summer theatre, resorts, and camps bring in another 365,000 visitors. Thus over 1,200,000 persons a year visit Berkshire County. They spend over $30 million.

Geary says tourism has increased "three or four percent every year for the last ten years." He predicted that in another ten years it would pass General Electric — based on the continued growth of tourism and the slow decline of General Electric.

"Also people are coming from the city and buying their second home in the Berkshires. This can only stimulate the economy. More will come because they are tired of city life. They come out here to live," Geary added.

Al Bogdan, director of the Urban Coalition, had a less optimistic appraisal of tourism's impact on the future economy:

"Though tourism has a significant place in the Berkshire economy, the average yearly wage is only $3800 in the service area and you can't raise a family on that amount of money.

"Tourism can be an important secondary job source. An example would be the housewife looking for a part-time job or students looking for summer work. But you can't base an economy on it."

Bogdan hopes county agencies and the business sector will provide more comprehensive control of the environment to prevent its "self-destruction through commercialization."

The need to prevent exploitation of the county's natural beauty was echoed by Geary.

"The Conference is taking advantage of the natural assets of the county, but we'll always be concerned about orderly growth for the good of the area."

To handle the increased numbers of visitors predicted for future years a new resort is being planned for Adams, 12 miles north of Pittsfield. It will have a 300-room hotel with complete recreational facilities for year round use.

There has also been a commitment by the Association of Business and Commerce (ABC) to attract conventions: a new convention hall is being planned for the Pittsfield area. According to ABC, this should help make the Berkshires a year-round tourist attraction while keeping the effects on the environment to a minimum.

BERKSHIRE COURIER
GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS
W. 3,650

AUG 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Boston Critic Says Berkshires Gyp The Tourist

BOSTON - A music critic for the newly merged Boston Sunday Traveler and Sunday Advertiser has labeled the Berkshires with a "gouge-the-tourist ambiance", especially in the towns and resort areas immediately surrounding Tanglewood.

Ellen Pfeifer outlines a typical weekend trip to Tanglewood, listing prices and naming names, to illustrate her point. She starts with the trip up the Mass. Pike, (tolls: $2.95), and details expenses and inconveniences incurred in Lee, Lenox and Pittsfield, ending with the trip back down the Pike, (tolls: $2.95). Of course, she fails to mention that any gouging on tolls is the fault of Boston, not the Berkshires.

Miss Pfeifer lists minumum and maximum rates for hotels and motels, and says "you can bet those minimum figures apply only in the off season". She says she paid $27.50 at the Colonial Hilton Inn in Pittsfield on her last visit. She lists rates for the Holiday Inn in Lenox and the Tanglewood Motel.

Continuing on, Miss Pfeifer lists the perils of dining out. Mentioning the Lenox house, she complains of an hours wait if you try there without reservations. Moving on to the Curtis Inn in Lenox, she tells what happens if you try their buffet. At $12.50 for 2 persons, she lists a buffet that sounds suspiciously like the leavings of a vegetarian picnic and says no attempt is made to refill the trays on the buffet. As a final touch, she says service was poor and she had no napkin at her table.

We will skip the attempt to drive the distance from the Curtis Inn to Tanglewood at 8:30 on the night of a performance. We can experience that thrill almost any hour of the day right here on Main Street in Great Barrington.

Skipping to breakfast the next morning, she details an adventure in eating at Rossi's in Lee, beginning with "what looks like a large jigger of orange juice for .25¢" through the need to pay for a second cup of coffee and the 20 minute wait for service in the first place.

Moving on to Sunday, and lunch at Tanglewood, Miss Pfeifer notes that "you will really get taken." She says $3.00 is too much to pay for sitting on the grass where you can't hear much anyway. But her real complaint is the snack bar, which she says is "atrocious and exorbitantly expensive."

Miss Pfeifer concluded that the Berkshire area around Tanglewood is becoming, "next to Provincetown in the summer and Miami Beach anytime," one of the most unpleasant places to be."

Taken all together, Miss Pfeifer's indictment of the Berkshires is a crushing blow to our civic pride and to the individual personal pride of those who live here and love the Berkshires. That is, it would be a crushing blow if Miss Pfeifer did not reveal herself to be a singularly naive, unimaginative and ill-formed tourist of the type who is born to be taken.

There is no doubt that prices are prone to rise during peak summer or winter seasons at resorts, but people who head for the Colonial Hilton or the Holiday Inn are asking for it. If you know you are going to go here often during the summer, a little common sense and looking around will tell you there are places other than Pittsfield or the Pittsfield-Lenox road that are better all around for accommodations for Tanglewood.

As for eating out, well, the Curtis Inn a half hour before a Tanglewood performance is where one would expect to find some one who did not know his way in the Berkshires and never got out of sight of his destination. And as for the Lenox House for dinner and Rossi's Restaurant in Lee for breakfast, and the Tanglewood snack bar for Sunday lunch, well, my only question is why? The Berkshires have more fine restaurants per mile and population count than almost anywhere else in the nation. Miss Pfeifer, Awake! Try South County for a change. All the world around Tanglewood does not exist only between the exit of the turnpike in Lee and Park Square in Pittsfield. Why, that stretch of road is nothing but a tourist trap!

Since Miss Pfeifer is ob-

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

SEP 8 1972 New England Newsclip

Wet Spring hurt

Area tourist business rebounds

The Berkshire Hills Conference, the county's promotional agency, reported today that area summer tourism business indicated an overall four to five per cent increase over 1971 despite a very slow start to the season by extended bad weather.

John V. Geary, BHC executive director, said he had had a survey conducted from one end of the county by an impartial researcher whose talks with area businessmen concluded that final figures for the season will make them happier than they were in the Spring and early Summer.

In Northern Berkshire, Mr. Geary said the Williams Inn in Williamstown reported a steady rise in business all summer after a rainy June which produced slow business.

The Williamstown Theatre reported a small drop in attendance because of poor weather early in the season but more than 20,000 people extended performances during the eight-week season. The attendance was 4,000 less than 1971.

No financial crisis was expected because of the attendance loss in the 18th season, however. The theater is leased summers from Williams College.

Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood set an all-time attendance record in eight weeks as 257,860 persons went through the gates. This marked an 18.5 per cent increase from last year. It was the 32nd year of the festival.

Highlights of the eight weeks of the festival were the weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra which drew 207,265 listeners.

Concerning restaurants, in Williamstown the 1896 House found little change this summer from last year's patronage. Howard Johnson's, also in Williamstown, found business better this year. The Howard Johnson's in Pittsfield also gained a little this summer over last year, after a slow start during rainy June.

Motels in the Berkshires reported consistently a slow start in early summer because of the unpleasant weather. However, most found that losses created during June either were made up or exceeded during the season. In Williamstown, the Chimney Mirror Motel reported total business about the same as last summer, with weekends full, but unlike most others, midweek also held up well thanks to the many commercial people who used the facilities.

At the Northside Motel, Williamstown, a slow July was encountered, but August business made up for it, and overall figures about equal last year. The Berkshire Hills Motel in Williamstown reported business a little better than last year, and that unlike most others, it often was full during mid-week. This is accounted for by parents accompanying students for enrollment in Williams College, and guests attracted to Green Mountain Park race track a few miles north in Pownal, Vt.

In Lanesboro, the Mountain View Motel reported summer business closely matched that of last year, with a slight increase that seemed only to meet increased cost caused by inflation. This establishment enjoyes a great deal of repeat business, according to Matthew J. Kennedy, the manager.

Also in Lanesboro, the Country Style Motel manager blamed poor weather early in the season for a 10 per cent drop from last year. However, as was the case with most motels, the weekends were crowded, but the midweek slow. And Albert's Motel and Housekeeping Apartments, Lanesboro, were crowded weekends, but slow during midweek which was somewhat relieved by several all-week guests.

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D. 195,022

JUL 18 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 9 1972

New England Newsclip

The sun shines on Tanglewood

B. Lynn

It has long been a standard ploy for cartoonists to draw a beam of sunlight falling on a rectory's TV antenna while all around the rain is falling. This summer Tanglewood has had that beam shining on its Shed as attendance has boomed while everywhere else in New England the tourist business has fallen off as much as 40 per cent. As of this date, Tanglewood is 18,511 admissions ahead of last year, and management is shaking its head wonderingly and keeping its batons crossed.

Across the Hudson River the Saratoga Performing Arts Center has also experienced a rewarding season in that its ballet attendance was up 19.5 per cent and its orchestra concerts are somewhat ahead of last year. The popular concerts are down but these are more likely to be affected by a rainy evening.

The Tanglewood management has no instant answers to why the attendance is up so gratifyingly in such a rainy season. They feel that their programs are attractive and their orchestra is playing beautifully, but they feel this way every year no matter what the attendance figures. They have noticed that there seem to be more cars per person and that the parking facilities are taxed quite a bit more than in the past, and there are lots more picknickers on the lawn than in recent years. The food concession is 20 per cent ahead of last year and the new wine and beer booth is gurgling happily.

It seems likely that the limited access highways are having the most effect on the attendance rise. People now realize how easy it is to pop on to the high-speed roads, hear the concert, and be home again at a reasonable hour. Also, more and more tourists seem to be including Tanglewood on their tours of New England.

Whatever the reason, it is good news that a cultural bastion like Tanglewood is not being besieged by the plagues of falling attendance and disinterest. So do not be surprised if next season at the opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center, the entire management comes before the audience and breaks into a rain dance.

HERALD
MANCHESTER, CONN.
D. 16,095

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD (Photographed By Reginald Pinto)

BSO

SEIJI OZAWA GIVES HIS THANKS, ORIENTAL STYLE, TO AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD (Photographed By Reginald Pinto)

HERALD
MANCHESTER, CONN.
D. 16,095

JUL 31 1972

New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 19 1972

New England Newsclip

SUMMER MUSIC flows pleasantly out of the Shed at Tanglewood wafting over the lawn, tranquillizing the assembled multitude and registering with its hearers the notion that here is a fine place.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
AUG 9 1972
New England Newsclip

The sun shines on Tanglewood

It has long been a standard ploy for cartoonists to draw a beam of sunlight falling on a rectory's TV antenna while all around the rain is falling. This summer Tanglewood has had that beam shining on its Shed as attendance has boomed while everywhere else in New England the tourist business has fallen off as much as 40 per cent. As of this date, Tanglewood is 18,511 admissions ahead of last year, and management is shaking its head wonderingly and keeping its batons crossed.

Across the Hudson River the Saratoga Performing Arts Center has also experienced a rewarding season in that its ballet attendance was up 19.5 per cent and its orchestra concerts are somewhat ahead of last year. The popular concerts are down but these are more likely to be affected by a rainy evening.

The Tanglewood management has no instant answers to why the attendance is up so gratifyingly in such a rainy season. They feel that their programs are attractive and their orchestra is playing beautifully, but they feel this way every year no matter what the attendance figures. They have noticed that there seem to be more cars per person and that the parking facilities are taxed quite a bit more than in the past, and there are lots more picknickers on the lawn than in recent years. The food concession is 20 per cent ahead of last year and the new wine and beer booth is gurgling happily.

It seems likely that the limited access highways are having the most effect on the attendance rise. People now realize how easy it is to pop on to the high-speed roads, hear the concert, and be home again at a reasonable hour. Also, more and more tourists seem to be including Tanglewood on their tours of New England.

Whatever the reason, it is good news that a cultural bastion like Tanglewood is not being besieged by the plagues of falling attendance and disinterest. So do not be surprised if next season at the opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center, the entire management comes before the audience and breaks into a rain dance.

HERALD
MANCHESTER, CONN.
D. 16,095
JUL 27 1972
New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD (Photographed By Reginald Pinto)

SEIJI OZAWA GIVES HIS THANKS, ORIENTAL STYLE, TO AUDIENCE AT TANGLEWOOD (Photographed By Reginald Pinto)

HERALD
MANCHESTER, CONN.
D. 16,095
JUL 31 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
AUG 19 1972
New England Newsclip

SUMMER MUSIC flows pleasantly out of the Shed at Tanglewood wafting over the lawn, tranquillizing the assembled multitude and registering with its hearers the notion that here is a fine place.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER &
RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885

AUG 16 1972

New England Newsclip

THE SOUND OF MUSIC and the crisp, clear air of the Berkshires provides a welcome relief in the summer for Boston youngsters, thanks to a grant and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The grant, from the Frederick J. Kennedy Memorial Foundation, provides funds that enable 400 - 500 students from the Boston public school to spend four days at the Boston Symphony's summer home, Tanglewood in Lenox. The young guests attend concerts, meet members of the orchestra, receive dance lessons and just plain enjoy the sites in the Berkshires. Among the group (in photo above, left) are Juanita Hall, Ronald Dunston, Maurice Rogers and Amos Thompson who observe West Indian Alfred Hughes who performs a native dance. Larry Wolfe (center photo) bass violin player for the Symphony, lets Duane Baskin try his hand on the instrument. Then Larry tries his own hand at another base — baseball (right photo) — in game with the visitors. See other photo at right.

Staff Photos by Earl Ostroff

FUTURE MAESTRO?—Ronald Dunston sits in the conductor's chair and intently watches a demonstration on the base violin. Maybe Ron will get another chance to sit in the conductor's chair when he gets a little older.

SOCIETY

by Miriam Tod

There's a robin up at Tanglewood who proves that the good old maternal instinct transcends worry about unknown or even personal fear. She has built her nest high up in the rafters of The Shed, right over the section of the stage where the percussion section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is located, and the fact that thousands of people are sitting not too far below her doesn't seem to phase her one bit.

Her extreme bravery was certainly put to the test on Sunday afternoon, for the concert, performed by the orchestra during the fifth weekend of the 1972 Tanglewood season, must have been one of the loudest on record — Mahler's Sixth Symphony. As the drums boomed and the trumpets blared below her, Mrs. Robin flew serenely in and out among the rafters of The Shed gathering nourishment for her new babies.

Tanglewood in the summer is a way of life for the hundreds of people connected with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. To the musicians and their families, the staff and the students at the Berkshire Music Center and Boston University's summer music school it is a working holiday. Many like Madame Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the orchestra's great conductor, have been at this summer location of the orchestra since its inception in 1936 when Mrs. Gorham Brooks and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan offered the 210-acre estate to Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra as a permanent summer home. Tiny and fragile Madame Koussevitzky lives in the house, "Saranek," on the hill overlooking Tanglewood and Lake Mah-Kee-Nac that she and her late husband bought years ago in the pouring rain having no idea of the breathtaking view of the Berkshires that met their eyes when they took possession of the house months later.

Madame Koussevitzky, all in white, was in her usual box seat at Sunday's concert, and was, as always, surrounded by friends and well-wishers at intermission. With her was her sister, Duchess Anna de Leuchtenberg de Beauharnais, who spends every summer with her at "Saranek." Another who was constantly greeting friends was soprano Phyllis Curtin, artist-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, who was accompanied by her tall husband, Eugene Cook.

In the almost 40 years since Tanglewood began, the musicians in the orchsetra have made a second home for themselves in the countryside around Lenox and Stockbridge. A great number of those with families have bought homes or cottages in the areas around Lake Mah-Kee-Nac which borders on the Tanglewood property. Particulary popular are the sections beside the lake called the Mah-Kee-Nac Terraces, Shores and Heights. In some of these areas almost 50 per cent of the residents are members of the BSO, many of whom have worked on their houses themselves, building on an addition or fixing them up.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

AUG 1 1972

New England Newsclip

Among those who summer along the lake shore are violist Robert Karol whose cottage is right on the water; horn player Harry Shapiro; Violist Jerry Lipson, and trumpet player Roger Voisin. On Sunday, Mr. Voisin and his wife gave a luncheon party on the patio outside their cottage before the 2:30 concert, and among their guests was a lady whose father had played bass in the orchestra for 48 years before his retirement. Mrs. Jeannette Titus of Braintree and her pretty daughter, Mary who is studying to be a nurse, spent the weekend in the Berkshires recalling memories of the years when her father performed there.

It is a working holiday for the musicians for they rehearse and perform and teach all summer. Yet there is a carefree feeling about it all which was epitomised on Sunday by the sight of percussionist Tom Gauger leaving after the concert surrounded by his five children, a twin on each arm, another set of twins following behind and the "single" beside his pretty blonde wife, all heading for what was obviously going to be a picnic, en famille.

REDUCTION RATIO

17x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Karman

James Kiley smiles over some particularly lush begonias he has raised at his greenhouse near the main gate at Tanglewood.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 15 1972
New England Newsclip

Keeper Kiley

By Madeline F. Winter

LENOX, Mass.

James F. Kiley is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's grass expert. And, after experimenting with a variety of flowers, over the years, especially tuberous begonias and fuchsias, he has become a well-known horticulturist. When his double green thumb came to the attention of the Tanglewood administrators, they constructed a greenhouse close to the nine-room white shingle house the Kileys live in near Tanglewood's main gate.

In late winter Kiley purchases begonia cuttings from Gilbert Harlow, professor of mechanical engineering at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., who raises begonias for a hobby. Kiley uses his own special soil mix for potting plants. He keeps the exact proportions a secret but not the ingredients — leaf mold, perlite and three-year-old composted soil. He uses fish emulsion on begonias and fuchsias, and Ra-Pid-Gro on the 700 geraniums he raises from cuttings each year.

Before the greenhouse was built in 1959, Tanglewood purchased fully grown all the plants used in the many window boxes, the hanging baskets of fuchsias and pots of begonias that decorate the grounds. In addition to paying for itself, the greenhouse has given Kiley an opportunity to experiment.

A native of West Stockbridge and a graduate of Williams High School, Kiley was hired by Tanglewood 23 years ago as a laborer. He was promoted in February from supervisor of maintenance to operations manager. In his new position he has the added responsibility of hiring summer employes. These include ticket sellers, gatemen, ticket takers, ushers and parking attendants, Kiley also oversees the cafeteria operation and security. The grounds crew numbers four year-round men and 10 in the summer.

The 20 acres of lush green lawn at the BSO's summer home at Tanglewood are the envy of every homeowner. According to Kiley, a self-taught turf expert, a planned program of intense care and a deep root system produce the durable lawns that survive millions of footsteps each year.

The lawns are aerified several times in the spring and fall to combat compaction. During summer months when the grass is walked on daily, a slicing machine with small knives is used every seven to 10 days. Both of these processes allow water, fertilizer and air to reach the root system, developing and maintaining it.

In the spring and fall before fertilizing, an aero-thatch removes thatch, or dead grass. Also in the fall, approximately 22 yards of top dressing are applied to the most heavily trampled areas. The grounds crew developed its own top dressing by generously fertilizing areas of a nearby Tanglewood-owned field, letting vegetation grow up and then plowing it under, when the cycle has been repeated a couple of times, the result is excellent grass food, Kiley said, "much like composted soil."

After being aerified in September the lawns are heavily fertilized. This helps to establish a healthy root system while the growing season is still in progress. A lighter application of fertilizer is also applied when spring growth is well underway, approximately six weeks after the first mowing. In August, soil samples are collected and tested for fertility and acidity. If lime is needed to reduce acidity, it is applied in winter, when the ground is frozen.

Kiley estimates his crew uses six tons of 12-4-8 fertilizer a year. The lawns are cut twice a week with an 11-foot wide cutting device attached to a machine Kiley describes as a "Rube Goldberg." The job takes four and one-half hours.

In addition to the countless hours he spends on the job at Tanglewood, Kiley somehow finds time to serve as selectman for the town of Stockbridge. He has been attending turf conferences at the University of Massachusetts since 1959, and lectures and shows slides to civic organizations and garden clubs.

Miller

The lawn gets a workout

Ed Kalacki gives lawn second trim of the week

MICHAEL STEINBERG

The Stanislaw method

LENOX — Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minnesoto Orchestra, had his moment of greatest visibility at Tanglewood when, on the Saturday night of the season's first weekend, he conducted Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart with the Boston Symphony for an audience of over 8000. In all, though, Skrowaczewski spent three weeks at the Berkshire Music Center, engaged most of the time in the less public but no less important tasks of training the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, which means, to begin with, turning 98 young players, most of whom have never before worked together, into an orchestra and of helping the seven holders of fellowships in conducting to learn their metier.

There is some overlap because the Conducting Fellows observe Skrowaczewski and the other professionals—this year they include Leonard Bernstein, Bruno Maderna, Seiji Ozawa, and Joseph Silverstein — as they work with the BMC Orchestra (they also attend as many Boston Symphony rehearsals as they can). Then, with one or more of the professionals watching them, the Fellows rehearse the BMC Orchestra and conduct it at public concerts.

There are also seminars away from the orchestra at which questions from the most general ("What does 'knowing a score' really mean?") to the most particular (if you make a gesture at hip-level, the violins can see it, but the horns probably can't) are discussed.

One Saturday morning, I watched Skrowaczewski work with the BMC Orchestra on the last movement of the Brahms 1st Symphony. I was impressed by his sense of harmony, by his concern, therefore, for the bass lines which define the harmony, and, in a more general way, by an economy that led him to say what he had to say with sharp precision and also to know when to say nothing.

MUSIC, B-19

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 23 1972
New England Newsclip

Conductor knows when silence best

The Skowaczewski method

★ MUSIC
Continued from Page B-17

I also watched the student conductors watching Skrowaczewski, looking up from their scores as notorious trouble-spots approached — the pizzicato passages in the introduction, the difficult syncopations in the middle of the movement, the acceleration into the coda — and then writing notes to themselves or sometimes just smiling as each hurdle was cleared.

I asked permission to attend one of the seminars, and a few days later found myself in Hawthorne Cottage on the Tanglewood grounds, in a rather stark room with straight chairs around the walls, a grand piano, and a blackboard, and of course with lean, nervously energetic maestro and six of the Conducting Fellows. Eighteen notes were played on the piano, and the blackboard was used not at all. At least with respect to the piano, that session was atypical: normally, Skrowaczewski explained, there was analysis of scores—himself an able composer, he is highly organized about that sort of thing—as well as exercises when he sat at the keyboard and played according to the students' conducting. That evening, however, two students would be leading the BMC Orchestra in concert, they had just had their dress rehearsal, and a large part of the seminar would be given over to a post-mortem on the rehearsal.

Skrowaczerski began by praising Phillip Lehrman's well-chosen and well-maintained tempo for the Brahms Tragic Overture, but, he continued, the "piano" after the two slashing chords at the beginning was not Brahms's "piano sotto voce" but "piano indifferente." He made suggestions for how the piece could be made to ge better that night even without benefit of further rehearsal: "Make pianissimo not with hips, elbows (he stood to demonstrate) but with hands and face . . . you look as though you're afraid the pianissimo will not be there . . . your face expresses doubt, so they cannot enjoy . . . always try to visualize your expression." The big viola tune, he assured him, "will come out warmer if you just ask for it . . . you have left hand, you can do." But elsewhere, "the beat not bigger, but more stinging."

More, though, Skrowaczewski commented on rehearsal technique, for future reference, as it were, always with an eye to economy. "If you can show it by gesture, it is better not to speak about . . . don't overact, they'll do it themselves very well." Later: "at a fortepiano, say how long, say 'piano after the first 16th,' 'first 8th,' or whatever . . . that replaces repeating, having to say 'not together' . . . but if at the beginning you say too many things without playing, you risk complet inattention." Then: "don't say 'it's not rhythmic enough,' then they don't know what's wrong . . . say 'you're playing triplets instead of dotted quarters and eights . . . use the word 'triplets' and then play it."

Then John Neschling and Mozart's Prague Symphony. Early on, this dialogue:

N.: "They were rushing."

S.: "No, sorry."

N.: "I was rushing."

S.: "Yes, sorry."

Always the motif, "they don't need your help, that goes automatically," and, about a series of eighth-notes too explicitly beaten for the violins, "don't bother them . . . of course don't abandon them either." On providing a beat that would be sufficiently clear for the slow introduction, but not chop things up either: "No, don't beat eighths, subdivide four." Later: "Your downbeat is rough, like for 'Elektra,'" and, analogous to the viola tune in the Brahms, "you've never really asked them to play this beautifully (the second theme in the first movement) . . . do it tonight and they will" (he did, and they did). And: "Don't just indicate 'too loud,' show who is too loud . . . but if you indicate it with your left hand very far down, then the violins will see it and they will go away, but the horns and trumpets who actually are too loud will not see it, and the balance will be worse than before."

SKROWACZEWSKI
'. . . don't beat eighths'

The discussion moved on to more general problems, for example, knowing a score enough to conduct it from memory, which, Skrowaczewski said, meant knowing it well enough to write it out and then some: "You must not be so busy remembering it that you cannot react as it goes by." On approaching a new score: pacing is the most essential part of articulating form, so from the beginning have the tempo clearly in mind. Almost the hardest part of conducting, Skrowaczewski said, is to have a tempo live in you so that at any time you can find it, at every rehearsal, performance, after each interruption of a recording session.

Recordings as a study tool have "very interesting possibilities. Yes, they are even OK, provided you don't conduct. Never conduct a record. You can only follow, and the essence of conducting is that you have to provoke it. Upbeats, the preparation, are so terribly important, and on records there are no upbeats." And he went on to describe a demonstration for a class at which George Szell had conducted a movement by indicating only the upbeats.

A student asked about opera, another about "difficult" soloists. It was upbeats again, the clear signal of what would happen next. The hazard in opera is not so much the prima donna ("the better they are the easier you can do things with them — really") as unmusical directors, not only those who interpret operas "against the music," but those with no feeling for moment-to-moment musical requirements, and he described trying to work out something as chamber-musical as "Komm', Hoffnung" in the Vienna production of "Fidelio" with a near-sighted Leonore whom the director had placed "at least 150 yards away and who could see me only on television, if at all." As for concerto soloists, even problematic ones can be stimulating — he cited an "Emperor" with Glenn Gould, "14 minutes slower than any I had ever conducted or heard, but with marvelous inner rhythm, though I wouldn't next time go to an orchestra and say, 'now, gentlemen, the tempo is . . .' And if you have a soloist who really makes you crazy" — he mentioned a violinist for whom he had recently conducted the Paganini B minor in Stuttgart in a performance which became "an exercise in acrobatics and quick response" — "You can treat it always as a very interesting experience."

James Kiley smiles over some particularly lush begonias he has raised at his greenhouse near the main gate at Tanglewood.

Keeper Kiley

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 15 1972
New England Newsclip

By Madeline F. Winter

LENOX, Mass.

James F. Kiley is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's grass expert. And, after experimenting with a variety of flowers, over the years, especially tuberous begonias and fuchsias, he has become a well-known horticulturist. When his double green thumb came to the attention of the Tanglewood administrators, they constructed a greenhouse close to the nine-room white shingle house the Kileys live in near Tanglewood's main gate.

In late winter Kiley purchases begonia cuttings from Gilbert Harlow, professor of mechanical engineering at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., who raises begonias for a hobby. Kiley uses his own special soil mix for potting plants. He keeps the exact proportions a secret but not the ingredients — leaf mold, perlite and three-year-old composted soil. He uses fish emulsion on begonias and fuchsias, and Ra-Pid-Gro on the 700 geraniums he raises from cuttings each year.

Before the greenhouse was built in 1959, Tanglewood purchased fully grown all the plants used in the many window boxes, the hanging baskets of fuchsias and pots of begonias that decorate the grounds. In addition to paying for itself, the greenhouse has given Kiley an opportunity to experiment.

A native of West Stockbridge and a graduate of Williams High School, Kiley was hired by Tanglewood 23 years ago as a laborer. He was promoted in February from supervisor of maintenance to operations manager. In his new position he has the added responsibility of hiring summer employes. These include ticket sellers, gatemen, ticket takers, ushers and parking attendants. Kiley also oversees the cafeteria operation and security. The grounds crew numbers four year-round men and 10 in the summer.

The 20 acres of lush green lawn at the BSO's summer home at Tanglewood are the envy of every homeowner. According to Kiley, a self-taught turf expert, a planned program of intense care and a deep root system produce the durable lawns that survive millions of footsteps each year.

The lawns are aerified several times in the spring and fall to combat compaction. During summer months when the grass is walked on daily, a slicing machine with small knives is used every seven to 10 days. Both of these processes allow water, fertilizer and air to reach the root system, developing and maintaining it.

In the spring and fall before fertilizing, an aero-thatch removes thatch, or dead grass. Also in the fall, approximately 22 yards of top dressing are applied to the most heavily trampled areas. The grounds crew developed its own top dressing by generously fertilizing areas of a nearby Tanglewood-owned field, letting vegetation grow up and then plowing it under, when the cycle has been repeated a couple of times, the result is excellent grass food, Kiley said, "much like composted soil."

After being aerified in September the lawns are heavily fertilized. This helps to establish a healthy root system while the growing season is still in progress. A lighter application of fertilizer is also applied when spring growth is well underway, approximately six weeks after the first mowing. In August, soil samples are collected and tested for fertility and acidity. If lime is needed to reduce acidity, it is applied in winter, when the ground is frozen.

Kiley estimates his crew uses six tons of 12-4-8 fertilizer a year. The lawns are cut twice a week with an 11-foot wide cutting device attached to a machine Kiley describes as a "Rube Goldberg." The job takes four and one-half hours.

In addition to the countless hours he spends on the job at Tanglewood, Kiley somehow finds time to serve as selectman for the town of Stockbridge. He has been attending turf conferences at the University of Massachusetts since 1959, and lectures and shows slides to civic organizations and garden clubs.

The lawn gets a workout

Ed Kalacki gives lawn second trim of the week

MICHAEL STEINBERG

The Stanislaw method

LENOX — Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Music Director of the Minnesoto Orchestra, had his moment of greatest visibility at Tanglewood when, on the Saturday night of the season's first weekend, he conducted Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart with the Boston Symphony for an audience of over 8000. In all, though, Skrowaczewski spent three weeks at the Berkshire Music Center, engaged most of the time in the less public but no less important tasks of training the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, which means, to begin with, turning 98 young players, most of whom have never before worked together, into an orchestra and of helping the seven holders of fellowships in conducting to learn their metier.

There is some overlap because the Conducting Fellows observe Skrowaczewski and the other professionals—this year they include Leonard Bernstein, Bruno Maderna, Seiji Ozawa, and Joseph Silverstein — as they work with the BMC Orchestra (they also attend as many Boston Symphony rehearsals as they can). Then, with one or more of the professionals watching them, the Fellows rehearse the BMC Orchestra and conduct it at public concerts.

There are also seminars away from the orchestra at which questions from he most general ("What does 'knowing a score' really mean?") to the most particular (if you make a gesture at hip-level, the violins can see it, but the horns probably can't) are discussed.

One Saturday morning, I watched Skrowaczewski work with the BMC Orchestra on the last movement of the Brahms 1st Symphony. I was impressed by his sense of harmony, by his concern, therefore, for the bass lines which define the harmony, and, in a more general way, by an economy that led him to say what he had to say with sharp precision and also to know when to say nothing.

MUSIC, B-19

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 23 1972
New England Newsclip

Conductor knows when silence best

The Skowaczewski method

★ MUSIC
Continued from Page B-17

I also watched the student conductors watching Skrowaczewski, looking up from their scores as notorious trouble-spots approached — the pizzicato passages in the introduction, the difficult syncopations in the middle of the movement, the acceleration into the coda — and then writing notes to themselves or sometimes just smiling as each hurdle was cleared.

I asked permission to attend one of the seminars, and a few days later found myself in Hawthorne Cottage on the Tanglewood grounds, in a rather stark room with straight chairs around the walls, a grand piano, and a blackboard, and of course with lean, nervously energetic maestro and six of the Conducting Fellows. Eighteen notes were played on the piano, and the blackboard was used not at all. At least with respect to the piano, that session was atypical: normally, Skrowaczewski explained, there was analysis of scores—himself an able composer, he is highly organized about that sort of thing—as well as exercises when he sat at the keyboard and played according to the students' conducting. That evening, however, two students would be leading the BMC Orchestra in concert, they had just had their dress rehearsal, and a large part of the seminar would be given over to a post-mortem on the rehearsal.

Skrowaczerski began by praising Phillip Lehrman's well-chosen and well-maintained tempo for the Brahms Tragic Overture, but, he continued, the "piano" after the two slashing chords at the beginning was not Brahms's "piano sotto voce" but "piano indifferente." He made suggestions for how the piece could be made to ge better that night even without benefit of further rehearsal: "Make pianissimo not with hips, elbows (he stood to demonstrate) but with hands and face . . . you look as though you're afraid the pianissimo will not be there . . . your face expresses doubt, so they cannot enjoy . . . always try to visualize your expression." The big viola tune, he assured him, "will come out warmer if you just ask for it . . . you have left hand, you can do." But elsewhere, "the beat not bigger, but more stinging."

More, though, Skrowaczewski commented on rehearsal technique, for future reference, as it were, always with an eye to economy. "If you can show it by gesture, it is better not to speak about . . . don't overact, they'll do it themselves very well." Later: "at a fortepiano, say how long, say 'piano after the first 16th,' 'first 8th,' or whatever . . . that replaces repeating, having to say 'not together' . . . but if at the beginning you say too many things without playing, you risk complet inattention." Then: "don't say 'it's not rhythmic enough,' then they don't know what's wrong . . . say 'you're playing triplets instead of dotted quarters and eights . . . use the word 'triplets' and then play it."

Then John Neschling and Mozart's Prague Symphony. Early on, this dialogue:

N.: "They were rushing."

S.: "No, sorry."

N.: "I was rushing."

S.: "Yes, sorry."

Always the motif, "they don't need your help, that goes automatically," and, about a series of eighth-notes too explicitly beaten for the violins, "don't bother them . . . of course don't abandon them either." On providing a beat that would be sufficiently clear for the slow introduction, but not chop things up either: "No, don't beat eighths, subdivide four." Later: "Your downbeat is rough, like for 'Elektra,'" and, analogous to the viola tune in the Brahms, "you've never really asked them to play this beautifully (the second theme in the first movement) . . . do it tonight and they will" (he did, and they did). And: "Don't just indicate 'too loud,' show who is too loud . . . but if you indicate it with your left hand very far down, then the violins will see it and they will go away, but the horns and trumpets who actually are too loud will not see it, and the balance will be worse than before."

SKROWACZEWSKI
'. . . don't beat eighths'

The discussion moved on to more general problems, for example, knowing a score enough to conduct it from memory, which, Skrowaczewski said, meant knowing it well enough to write it out and then some: "You must not be so busy remembering it that you cannot react as it goes by." On approaching a new score: pacing is the most essential part of articulating form, so from the beginning have the tempo clearly in mind. Almost the hardest part of conducting, Skrowaczewski said, is to have a tempo live in you so that at any time you can find it, at every rehearsal, performance, after each interruption of a recording session.

Recordings as a study tool have "very interesting possibilities. Yes, they are even OK, provided you don't conduct. Never conduct a record. You can only follow, and the essence of conducting is that you have to provoke it. Upbeats, the preparation, are so terribly important, and on records there are no upbeats." And he went on to describe a demonstration for a class at which George Szell had conducted a movement by indicating only the upbeats.

A student asked about opera, another about "difficult" soloists. It was upbeats again, the clear signal of what would happen next. The hazard in opera is not so much the prima donna ("the better they are the easier you can do things with them — really") as unmusical directors, not only those who interpret operas "against the music," but those with no feeling for moment-to-moment musical requirements, and he described trying to work out something as chamber-musical as "Komm', Hoffnung" in the Vienna production of "Fidelio" with a near-sighted Leonore whom the director had placed "at least 150 yards away and who could see me only on television, if at all." As for concerto soloists, even problematic ones can be stimulating — he cited an "Emperor" with Glenn Gould, "14 minutes slower than any I had ever conducted or heard, but with marvelous inner rhythm, though I wouldn't next time go to an orchestra and say, 'now, gentlemen, the tempo is . . .' And if you have a soloist who really makes you crazy" — he mentioned a violinist for whom he had recently conducted the Paganini B minor in Stuttgart in a performance which became "an exercise in acrobatics and quick response" — "You can treat it always as a very interesting experience."

REDUCTION RATIO

16x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A5

A4

A3

1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz 1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Whitestone

Tanglewood head usher Harry Stedman is toasted on his 70th birthday, July 23, during concert intermission.

Tanglewood head usher enjoys job

By MARGE HARRIS

"Being head usher at Tanglewood might be a two-aspirin headache for some, but 70-year-old Harry Stedman, who has held that position for "about 25 years, I think," is happy with the volunteer job.

Harry inherited the head position when Willard M. Sistare left the Berkshires in 1955 to become manager of the auditorium at the University of Connecticut in Storrs. "I was Bill's right-hand man for three years before he left, so I was pretty well trained," Stedman said.

Estimating that he has probably supervised the seating of 15 million concert-goers, Stedman says that he starts recruiting ushers and program girls about May 1 each year. "We have to wait until the program comes out because so many of them want to pick the concert they want to hear. The number of ushers and program girls varies from week to week, maybe 45 to 50, or as high as 80 in each category. Years ago, we used to get a lot of young GE engineers as volunteers, but now we are getting even younger people.

* * * *

More of the young married couples are coming to the concerts, too," he said. "Maybe they are getting away from all that rock, or maybe they're just growing up.

"You know there are some fellows who have been ushering longer than I have," he continued, "Ben Bowers, Ed Dorfman and O. P. McCarty have been there longer, although they don't get to every concert. I haven't missed an open rehearsal or a concert in the last 15 years. You might call my wife, Charlotte, a 'Tanglewood widow'; she sometimes listens on FM but doesn't go to Lenox. But she takes calls when the ushers can't make the concert, or from people looking for tickets.

"And then, there's Bess Richards. She's been in charge of the program girls for a long time. She took over from Martha Young about 24 years ago. She was a Dalton girl and she moved to Florida after she retired from Crane's, but she has come back up here for the last three summers to help out."

Has he met lots of celebrities while ushering? "No," he said, "I'm confined to the back of the shed. I don't go to the boxes or reserved seats, but Madame Koussevitzky always speaks . . . She's such a gracious lady, so nice. And, of course, I knew her husband and Charles Munch and Erich Leinsdorf. I remember Leonard Bernstein and Seiji Ozawa from when they were students. Munch and Leinsdorf were very kind to me when, on occasion, I went to watch their rehearsals at the concert hall in Boston. They always asked how things were in the Berkshires."

* * * *

Harry says that people, for the most part, are orderly. "But I remember one pops concert night when the people in the front of the Shed broke the rope to get inside, they were so eager to see Arthur Fiedler. It was a struggle, but we got them back outside. Latecomers sometimes cause problems; we don't seat them during a concert, except at intermissions, it's too distracting for those in the Shed. But sometimes if it's really hot, we can manage to get some of them into the back, out of the sun. If they'd only realize that, with all the traffic, they should plan to get an earlier start.

"And then there are the people who expect wonders of you. We've had fun with the contact lens wearers. In the last five years we've searched hours, with flashlights in the dark for them. Three were found still in the eyes, they had just moved off center; one was in the lady's purse, and we found two on the floor."

Stedman retired four years ago after 28 years as personnel manager at Crane & Co., Dalton. A native of Worcester, he grew up in Gardner where his brother, Clarke, is now mayor. Stedman took a teaching job in Dalton after college and became vice principal of the high school. He left that job on a year's leave of absence to set up the personnel department at Crane's and never went back. Active in the Dalton community, he has been president of the Community Recreation Association, is an elected trustee of the Dalton Library and served an unprecedented nine years as chairman of the Pittsfield Advisory Board of the Salvation Army. He maintains his ties with the SA by working closely with the Eagle Santa Toy Fund as liaison for that organization. And, as if all that weren't enough, he spends five afternoons a week as tour guide at Crane's Museum.

Stedman and his wife, the former Charlotte Mason of Litchfield, Conn., have a son, David, who works at Crane's and a daughter, Carolyn (Mrs. Peter J. Wiles) whose husband is a professor at the London School of Economics; and four grandchildren.

"I suppose one of these years I'll have to think about retiring as head usher, but there are plenty of good men to take my place," he said recently, as he prepared to go to Lenox to supervise the seating of the thousands expected for the Tanglewood-on-Parade gala.

Whitestone

RUTH SEARS gets a bit of attention herself as friends help her celebrate her 25 years as head nurse at Tanglewood. From left are Jim Kiley, operations manager; Harry Stedman, head usher; and Warren Sears, administrator and head of Red Cross. The combined length of service for the four at Tanglewood totals an exact 100 years.

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264
AUG 16 1972
New England Newsclip

Tee for Tanglewood

Seiji Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, and the Boston Symphony's 1972-73 music adviser, took a few practice swings before competing with 35 other BSO members in the orchestra musicians' third annual tournament held recently at the Stockbridge (Mass.) Golf Club. Also competing were several Philadelphia Orchestra golfers, visiting from their summer season in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
AUG 25 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
AUG 17 1972
New England Newsclip

The golfer:

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D. 195,032
SEP 28 1972
New England Newsclip

MYSTERY GOLFER, better known for his work with a baton, is Seiji Ozawa, new conductor of the Boston Symphony. In recent BSO tournament, Ozawa, a 15 handicapper, didn't let the rain bother him. In fact, he suggested that the annual golf tourney be made a monthly ever

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER &
RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885
AUG 18 1972
New England Newsclip

TANGLEW director Se to make sw
the swing
instad of h
third annua
phony Orc
Tournamen members phony wer
the event bridge Golf

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
SEP 29 1972
New England Newsclip

FORE-TISSIMO — Grin of satisfaction crosses Seiji Ozawa's face as musical director of Boston Symphony Orchestra tees off in annual BSO Musicians Golf Tournament at Stockbridge Country Club. Members of Philadelphia Orchestra also participated in tourney.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
AUG 15 1972
New England Newsclip

Bercomar

THE FINALE of the BSO golf tourney at the Stockbridge Golf Club yesterday was the presentation of the trophy to the new champion, concertmaster Joe Silverstein. Left to right are: Ralph Gomberg, pro Paul Falls, Silverstein and Harry Shapiro. Gomberg and Shapiro were runners-up.

Joe Silverstein master in BSO golf tournament

By Bercomar News Service

The fourth annual BSO Open at the Stockbridge Golf Club produced a number of winners but the champion of the famed musical unit was concertmaster Joe Silverstein who edged out Ralph Gomberg and defending champion Bob Karol.

Conductor Seiji Ozawa of Japan may not have conducted his foursome very successfully in the best-ball category but proved his popularity with the golfing musicians. While far removed from the prize list, he displayed great enthusiasm for the game and particularly the fact that he parred the 515 yard, par-five, seventh hole.

Only good things

Ozawa, interviewed on his tournament play, stated, "I tell you only the good things." Foremost in his mind was "I parred the 7th." Incidentally, it is the No. 1 handicap hole. He used a 4-wood off the tee, added a 20-yard dub with his 3-wood, stroked a 4-iron third shot just short of the river, hit a 6-iron shot over the Housatonic and found the center of the green. After boldly knocking his 25 foot putt into the hole for his par, the famed musical director waved his putter as if conducting a Wagnerian symphony.

In the foursome competition, Ralph Gomberg's contingent of musicians, member and guest, set the pace in the gross best-ball flight with their two under par 34-35—69. Aiding Gomberg were Don Ingram, Don McKenzie and Pete Schweitzer.

Challenging quartet

Challenging the Gomberg quartet were Harry Shapiro, Phil Nelson, Jim Brosnahan and Mark Gilligan. They finished strongly after a par matching start for their card of 36-33—69 to equal Gomberg's victory but settled for the net best-ball prize with a 59.

Silverstein and Gomberg battled for the title of BSO champion. Both posted 42s going out and then the struggle began. A double bogey six at the 12th dropped Gomberg behind by two strokes. The tide of victory swung back and forth on the next two holes before Silverstein added a bird at the 470-yard 15th to take the lead.

Stagliano late

While low handicap star Jim Stagliano flew back from a honeymoon in Italy for the title play, he was several hours late arriving in Stockbridge. Silverstein's 42-41—83 took the crown over Gomberg's 42-43—85 and defending Karols' 45-41—86. Samuel Mayes of the guest Philadelphia orchestra players topped his delegation with a card of 46-44—90.

During the tournament banquet Ozawa told the competitors "The Boston Symphony is far behind. In the Far East we have a tournament every month." With Ozawa and retired BSO treasurer Jim Brosnahan as chairman, the group will go to Cape Cod for another tournament in October. However, the BSO championship will continue to be played at the Stockbridge Golf Club.

TUESDAYS AT TANGLEWOOD

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUN 23 1972 New England Newsclip

Tuesday Concerts Set at Tanglewood

Three concerts highlight the 1972 series of Tanglewood Tuesday Specials in Lenox, beginning with the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops on Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed.

Other special events include a Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation on Aug. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, and finally, on Aug. 15, Tanglewood on - Parade.

The proposed series of Popular Artists concerts scheduled for the four Tuesdays in July has been canceled.

The concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops on Aug. 1 features an evening of the music of Lerner and Loew with soloists soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo - soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The Festival of Contemporary Music concert features Elliott Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his Double concerto for piano, harpsichord, and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his Circles for soprano, harp, and two percussionists. The concert also will include newly commissioned works by Tanglewood Artistic Director for the Berkshire Music Center Gunther Schuller, and Bruno Maderna.

Tanglewood - on - parade begins at 2 p.m. with concerts all afternoon featuring ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students.

Highlight of the day is the gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the Orchestra in music that includes Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, complete with canons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

For further information on these, and other Berkshire Festival events, call the Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, Lenox.

TIMES
WOBURN, MASS.
D. 10,800
JUN 27 1972 New England Newsclip

Program Highlights For Tanglewood Tuesday Concerts

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — Three concerts highlight the 1972 series of Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, beginning with the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops on August 1 at 8:30 p. m. in the Shed. Other special events include a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Forum Music Foundation on August 8 at 8:30 p. m. in the Shed, and finally, on August 15, Tanglewood-on-Parade. The proposed series of Popular Artists concerts scheduled for the four Tuesdays in July has been cancelled.

The concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops on August 1 features an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe with soloists soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. The concert includes music from My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi.

The Festival of Contemporary Music concert on August 8 at 8:30 p. m. in the Shed honors the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, sponsor of Tanglewood's Festival of Contemporary Music which runs this year from August 4 through 10. The concert of August 8 features Elliott Carter conducting member of the Berkshire Music Center in his Double concerto for piano, harpsicord, and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his Circles for soprano, harp, and two percussionists.

Tanglewood-on-parade on August 15 begins at 2:00 p. m. with concerts all afternoon featuring ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students. Highlights of the day is the gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras at 8:30 p. m. in the Shed. Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the Orchestra in music that includes Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, and Tchaikovksy's 1812 Overture, complete with canons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

For further information on these, and other Berkshire Festival events, please call the Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood — area code 413-637-1600.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood's 'Tuesdays' to open with Boston Pops

A concert by Arthur Fiedler's Boston Pops on Aug. 1 will launch this season's series of Tuesday specials at Tanglewood.

The other events in the series will be a Festival of Contemporary Music concert, which will honor the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, on Aug. 8, and the gala Tanglewood-on-Parade on Aug. 15.

Lerner-Lowe music

The Pops concert, which will be at 8:30 in the Shed, will feature an evening of the music of Lerner and Lowe, including selections from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "Gigi." The Tanglewood Festival Chorus directed by John Oliver will perform, with soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian and baritone Richard Fredericks as soloists.

The Fromm Foundation sponsors the Festival of Contemporary Music, slated this year from Aug. 4 through 10. The 8:30 concert will feature Elliot Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his own double concerto for piano, harpsichord and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his "Circles" for soprano, harp and two percussionists. Newly commissioned works by Gunther Schuller, artistic director of the music center, and Bruno Maderna will also be performed.

Tanglewood on Parade, starting at 2, consists of concerts all afternoon by ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students. The gala concert will be at 8:30 in the Shed with Michael Tilson Thomas conducting the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras. On the program is Handel's Royal Fireworks Music and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, complete with cannons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

Further information is available from the Tanglewood box office.

Summer Arts
And Things To Do

Three Concerts Among Tanglewood Highlights

LENOX — Three concerts highlight the 1972 series of Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, beginning with the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops on Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. Other special events include a special Festival of Contemporary Music Concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation on Aug. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, and finally, on Aug. 15, Tanglewood-on-Parade. The proposed series of Popular Artists concerts scheduled for the four Tuesdays in July has been canceled.

The concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops on Aug. 1 features an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe with soloists soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadina, and baritone Richard Fredericks with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The concert includes music from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon," and "Gigi."

The Festival of Contemporary Music concert on Aug. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed honors the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, sponsor of Tanglewood's Festival of Contemporary Music which runs this year from Aug. 4 - 10.

The concert Aug. 8 features Elliott Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his Double concerto for piono, harpsichord, and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his Circles for soprano, harp, and two percussionists. The concert also will include newly commissiomed works by Tanglewood Artistic Director for the Berkshire Music Center Gunther Schuller, and Bruno Maderna.

Tanglewood-on-parade on Aug. 15 begins at 2 p.m. with concerts all afternoon featuring ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students. Highlight of the day is the gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the Orchestra in music that includes Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, and Tchaikovshy's 1812 Overture, complete with canons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 5 1972 New England Newsclip

TELEGRAPH
NASHUA, N. H.
D. 69,493
JUL 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood's Program Features Arthur Fiedler

LENOX, Mass. — Three concerts highlight the 1972 series of Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, beginning with the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler cnducting the Boston Pops on Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed.

Other special events include a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation on Aug. 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, and finally, on Aug. 15, Tanglewood-on-Parade.

Broadway Tunes

The concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops features an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe with soloists soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The concert includes music from "May Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon," and "Gigi."

The festival of contemporary music concert features Elliott Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his double concerto for piano, harpsichord, and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his circles for soprano, harp, and two percussionists.

Classical Pieces

The concert also will include newly commissioned works by Tanglewood artistic director for the Berkshire Music Center Gunther Schuller, and Bruno Maderna.

Tanglewood-on-parade begins at 2 p.m. with concerts all afternoon featuring ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students. Highligh of the day is the gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed.

Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the orchestra in music that inludes Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," and Tchaikowsky's "1812 Overture," complete with cannons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

For further information on these, and other Berkshire Festival events, call the festival ticket office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

POPS TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE

THREE TANGLEWOOD TUESDAY SPECIALS

B Sym

Three concerts highlight the 1972 series of Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, beginning with the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops on August 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. Other Tuesday events include a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation on August 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, and finally, on August 15, Tanglewood-on-Parade.

The concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops will include music from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "Gigi."

The Festival of Contempory Music Concert will include newly commissioned works by Tanglewood Artistic Director for the Berkshire Music Center Gunther Schuller, and Bruno Maderna.

Tanglewood-on-parade begins at 2:00 o'clock with concerts all afternoon featuring ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students. Highlightof the day is the gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the Orchestra in music that includes Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, and Tchaikowksy's 1812 Overture, complete with canons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300
JUL 13 1972 New England Newsclip

64

LATHAM, N. Y.
TOWNSMAN
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUL 20 1972

Evening At Pops Tuesday

What's a Ferrante and Tiecher? Could be a law firm. Or a mellow Italian wine. Happens though, that it's the famous duo-piano team, who join Arthur Fiedler and the Boston POPS on EVENING AT POPS this Tuesday, July 25 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 17. The pianists and Pops artists can also be seen Friday, July 28 at 10:30 p.m. and Sunday, July 30, at 10 p.m. over TV-17.

This appearance marks Ferrante and Teicher's POPS debut. (They're the "Movie Theme Team," the guys who've appeared in concert halls throughout the United States, Canada and European-and who are so popular their booking runs two to three years in advance. They receive quite a welcome from the POPS audience. And they give it right back with a marvelous Stephen Foster Medley complete with "slappin 'them ole' piano keys" and a symphonic orchestration of "Camptown Ladies Sing This Song" (do, da, do dah). They also play the theme from "Exodus," one of their hit recordings

Then, "Malaguena" on two pianos-with sounds you've nenver heard before. But besides the sparkling piano work, the tambourines snap, the triangles ring, and the castanets click! But the show-stopper-absolutely-is the wonderful medley from "Fiddler On The Roof." It's full of exuberance and life, and the audience smiles, taps thei feet, and has a wonderful, beautiful time.

LEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
S. 106,767

JUL 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Benefit Is Set for Tanglewood

B. Sym

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

MUSIC

Raymond Morin

Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, with soloists and chorus in a program of music by Lerner and Loewe.

This is the annual Tanglewood event to benefit the pension fund of the Boston Symphony. The fund also benefits from the Saturday morning rehearsals at Tanglewood during the eight weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Soloists for the Tuesday night concert are Nancy Stokes, soprano; Corinne Curry, mezzo-soprano; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor; and Richard Fredericks, baritone.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus of 150 mixed voices has been prepared by its director John Oliver.

Selections from Lerner and Loewe Broadway shows will include "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon," and "Gigi."

Following intermission, Fiedler will conduct the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's "Eleanor Rigby," a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's "Look What They've Done to My Song."

Admission to the Tanglewood lawn is $3, on sale two hours before the concert.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 27 1972 New England Newsclip

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops with soloists and chorus in an evening of music by Lerner and Loewe at Tanglewood Tuesday, Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. In this candid picture taken this past season at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., Fiedler was directing Peter and the Wolf with a somewhat original commentary by columnist Art Buchwald. The photographer, William Haroutounian, is first violinist with the National Symphony Orchestra and plays with the New Marlboro Chamber Players during the summer. — Photo by William Haroutounian

Berkshire Eagle July 25.

Pops at Tanglewood Slates Evening of Hits

LENOX — Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood with soloists and chorus in an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe Aug. 1.

Soloists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Louise Russell, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredricks, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The concert takes place at 8.30 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert features music from the Broadway shows of Lerner and Loewe, including My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi.

Following intermission, Mr. Fiedler conducts the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's Eleanor Rigby, a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's Look What They've Done to My Song.

Tickets are on sale at the Festival Ticket Office; Tanglewood; Lenox, Massachusetts 01240, telephone area code 413, 637-1600, as well as all Ticketron locations in New England and New York State.

Ticket prices range from $3.50 to $8.50. Admission to the Lawn is $3, on sale two hours before the concert.

Boston Pops Sets Tanglewood Concert

LENOX, Mass. —Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Aug. 1, 8:30 p.m. The concert will feature contemporary songs.

Soloists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund are Louise Russell, soprano; Corinne Curry, mezzo-soprano; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor and Richard Fredricks, baritone.

Songs from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot" "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "Gigi" will be performed along with a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes; the Beatles "Eleanor Rigby" and Melanie Safka's "Look What They've Done to My Song Ma."

Tickets are now on sale at the festival ticket office.

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003

JUL 23 1972

Tanglewood

Boston Pops Set For Aug. 1

Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood with soloists and chorus in an evening of the music of Lerner and Lowe Tuesday, Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in The Shed.

Soloists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The concert features music from the Broadway shows of Lerner and Lowe, including My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi.

Following intermission, Mr. Fiedler conducts the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's "Eleanor Rigby," a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's "Look What They've Done to My Song." There will of course be the famous Pops extras.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 6 1972

Fiedler to Conduct Pops At Tanglewood Aug. 1

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 1 in the first of three Tanglewood Tuesday Specials at the shed in Lenox, Mass.

* * *

Other specials include Festival of Contemporary Music at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 8 and Tanglewood-on-Parade beginning at 2:30 p.m. Aug. 15.

* * *

The series of popular artists concerts scheduled for the four Tuesdays in July has been canceled.

The Boston Pops concert features an evening of Lerner and Loewe music with soloists Nancy Stokes, soprano; Corinne Curry, mezzo; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor, and Richard Fredericks, baritone. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, with John Oliver directing, will also participate. The concert will include music from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "Gigi."

The contemporary music concert features Elliott Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his double concerto for piano, harpsichord and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his Circles for sporano, harp and two percussionists.

The Aug. 15 concert features ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students, and will include a gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the shed. Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the orchestra in music that includes Handels "Royal Fireworks Music" and Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," complete with cannons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000

AUG 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Lerner And Lowe Music At Tanglewood

B 50

— Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood with soloists and chorus in an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe. Solists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Louise Russell, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredricks, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The concert takes place Tuesday, at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert features music from the broadway shows of Lerner and Loewe, including My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi. Following intermission, Mr. Fiedler concuts the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's Eleanor Rigby, a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's Look What They've Done to My Song. There will of course be the famous Pops extras.

64

LATHAM, N. Y.
TOWNSMAN
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUL 20 1972

Evening At Pops Tuesday

What's a Ferrante and Tiecher? Could be a law firm. Or a mellow Italian wine. Happens though, that it's the famous duo-piano team, who join Arthur Fiedler and the Boston POPS on EVENING AT POPS this Tuesday, July 25 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 17. The pianists and Pops artists can also be seen Friday, July 28 at 10:30 p.m. and Sunday, July 30, at 10 p.m. over TV-17.

This appearance marks Ferrante and Teicher's POPS debut. (They're the "Movie Theme Team," the guys who've appeared in concert halls throughout the United States, Canada and European-and who are so popular their booking runs two to three years in advance. They receive quite a welcome from the POPS audience. And they give it right back with a marvelous Stephen Foster Medley complete with "slappin 'them ole' piano keys" and a symphonic orchestration of "Camptown Ladies Sing This Song" (do, da, do dah). They also play the theme from "Exodus," one of their hit recordings

Then, "Malaguena" on two pianos-with sounds you've nenver heard before. But besides the sparkling piano work, the tambourines snap, the triangles ring, and the castanets click! But the show-stopper-absolutely-is the wonderful medley from "Fiddler On The Roof." It's full of exuberance and life, and the audience smiles, taps thei feet, and has a wonderful, beautiful time.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
S. 106,767

JUL 30 1972

New England Newsclip

Benefit Is Set for Tanglewood

B. Sym

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

MUSIC

Raymond Morin

Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, with soloists and chorus in a program of music by Lerner and Loewe.

This is the annual Tanglewood event to benefit the pension fund of the Boston Symphony. The fund also benefits from the Saturday morning rehearsals at Tanglewood during the eight weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Soloists for the Tuesday night concert are Nancy Stokes, soprano; Corinne Curry, mezzo-soprano; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor; and Richard Fredericks, baritone.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus of 150 mixed voices has been prepared by its director John Oliver.

Selections from Lerner and Loewe Broadway shows will include "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon," and "Gigi."

Following intermission, Fiedler will conduct the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's "Eleanor Rigby," a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's "Look What They've Done to My Song."

Admission to the Tanglewood lawn is $3, on sale two hours before the concert.

Boston Pops Sets Tanglewood Concert

LENOX, Mass. —Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Aug. 1, 8:30 p.m. The concert will feature contemporary songs.

Soloists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund are Louise Russell, soprano; Corinne Curry, mezzo-soprano; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor and Richard Fredricks, baritone.

Songs from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot" "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "Gigi" will be performed along with a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes; the Beatles "Eleanor Rigby" and Melanie Safka's "Look What They've Done to My Song Ma."

Tickets are now on sale at the festival ticket office.

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003

JUL 23 1972

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops with soloists and chorus in an evening of music by Lerner and Loewe at Tanglewood Tuesday, Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. In this candid picture taken this past season at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., Fiedler was directing Peter and the Wolf with a somewhat original commentary by columnist Art Buchwald. The photographer, William Haroutounian, is first violinist with the National Symphony Orchestra and plays with the New Marlboro Chamber Players during the summer. — Photo by William Haroutounian

Berkshire Eagle July 25,

Pops at Tanglewood Slates Evening of Hits

LENOX — Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood with soloists and chorus in an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe Aug. 1.

Soloists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Louise Russell, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredricks, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The concert takes place at 8.30 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert features music from the Broadway shows of Lerner and Loewe, including My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi.

Following intermission, Mr. Fiedler conducts the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's Eleanor Rigby, a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's Look What They've Done to My Song.

Tickets are on sale at the Festival Ticket Office; Tanglewood; Lenox, Massachusetts 01240, telephone area code 413, 637-1600, as well as all Ticketron locations in New England and New York State.

Ticket prices range from $3.50, to $8.50. Admission to the Lawn is $3, on sale two hours before the concert.

Tanglewood

Boston Pops Set For Aug. 1

Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood with soloists and chorus in an evening of the music of Lerner and Lowe Tuesday, Aug. 1 at 8:30 p.m. in The Shed.

Soloists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The concert features music from the Broadway shows of Lerner and Loewe, including My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi.

Following intermission, Mr. Fiedler conducts the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's "Eleanor Rigby," a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's "Look What They've Done to My Song." There will of course be the famous Pops extras.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 6 1972

Fiedler to Conduct Pops At Tanglewood Aug. 1

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 1 in the first of three Tanglewood Tuesday Specials at the shed in Lenox, Mass.

* * *

Other specials include Festival of Contemporary Music at 8:30 p.m. Aug. 8 and Tanglewood-on-Parade beginning at 2:30 p.m. Aug. 15.

* * *

The series of popular artists concerts scheduled for the four Tuesdays in July has been canceled.

The Boston Pops concert features an evening of Lerner and Loewe music with soloists Nancy Stokes, soprano; Corinne Curry, mezzo; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor, and Richard Fredericks, baritone. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, with John Oliver directing, will also participate. The concert will include music from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon" and "Gigi."

The contemporary music concert features Elliott Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his double concerto for piano, harpsichord and orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his Circles for sporano, harp and two percussionists.

The Aug. 15 concert features ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students, and will include a gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the shed Michael Tilson Thomas conducts the orchestra in music that includes Handels "Royal Fireworks Music" and Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," complete with cannons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000

AUG 1 1972

New England Newsclip

Lerner And Lowe Music At Tanglewood

— Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops at Tanglewood with soloists and chorus in an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe. Solists participating in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Louise Russell, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredricks, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The concert takes place Tuesday, at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert features music from the broadway shows of Lerner and Loewe, including My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, and Gigi. Following intermission, Mr. Fiedler concuts the Pops in Lennon and McCartney's Eleanor Rigby, a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's Look What They've Done to My Song. There will of course be the famous Pops extras.

Music Review

Fiedler Pops it again at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

IF THERE was "Rain in Spain" last night it was of no concern to the 13,235 people, who went to Tanglewood to hear a Lerner and Loewe Evening played by Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops orchestra for a pension fund benefit concert. In spite of the late afternoon storm, which threatened to deter those who planned to sit on the lawns, the clouds disappeared and a crowd which filled every seat inside the auditorium and covered every blade of grass adjacent to the Shed was lulled to euphoric somnolence or aroused by infectious appeal as the mood of the moment dictated.

There was a novelty this year to the program of this annual event. A chorus recruited from the students of the Berkshire Music Center and trained by John Oliver participated with the orchestra. A stunning quartet of soloists sang all sorts of the favorites from "Camelot," "Gigi," "Brigadoon," "Paint Your Wagon" and "My Fair Lady." Louise Russell was the soprano soloist; Corinne Curry, mezzo-soprano; Vahan Khanzadian, tenor; and Richard Fredericks, baritone.

* * *

FIEDLER indulges in no fussy business as he stands in front of his orchestra. He gets down to brass tacks with a minimum of ado and in an easy but dignified manner proceeds at once to the function of the evening. The soloists could not refrain from a bit of hamming, but they entered so completely into the spirit of the pleasant songs they were allotted, and the amplification conveyed the vitality of their voices so faithfully that they compounded the happiness of the program.

Pops programs once were supposed to concentrate on the passing favorites while the so-called symphony programs confined themselves to the immortals, but who would hazard a guess when or if "My Fair Lady" will ever tire or bore us? Maybe the distinction of "Pops" lies in the disposition it creates. There is no great argument nor struggle of emotion nor conflict of agony and despair in Lerner and Loewe. It's pure enjoyment and no one surpasses Fiedler at his unique task.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

13,500 At Tanglewood Roar Their Love For Fiedler

BY MILTON COLE

We don't mean to be a town gossip, but it is necessary for us to report that the longest continuing love affair is still going strong in the Bay State.

Unabashedly 13,235 men, women and children told all who would listen that they still love Arthur Fiedler with a passion.

They jammed the Tanglewood shed and lawn for the annual Boston Pops Pension Fund Benefit Concert Tuesday night.

They endured traffic jams, long treks from far-off parking spaces, long lines for everything from a soft drink to use of the toilet facilities, and all to sit and listen to and applaud and cheer a white-haired 78-year-old man who doesn't walk with the same spry step he used to.

Evokes Music

But Arthur Fiedler still evokes from the Boston Pops orchestra the kind of music that the public wants and loves, and he has a genius for setting up a program that keeps his public happy.

Tuesday night hundreds of people were still looking for their proper seats when Fiedler, in red jacket, strode onto the stage. The shed and the lawn crowds exploded into cheers and applause.

There was noise and undercurrent of talk as people still sought to get seated, but even though they were stumbling around in the dark, the audience became hushed as Fiedler raised his arms and the orchestra broke into an overture of Lerner and Loewe music.

As to be expected from musicians of the caliber of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the music throughout was flawless, but there were little Fiedler touches, the bazooka-type horn that the late Bob Burns made famous, was used on one song.

Clop-Clop

A couple of pieces of wood provided a clop-clop sound that Fiedler interspersed into another piece of music from Brigadoon.

The first part of the evening was as much vocal as it was instrumental. With the Pops providing a fantastic background, that soared and quieted at the flick of a Fielder wrist, soprano Louise Russell, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian and baritone Richard Fredricks sang Lerner and Loewe music from Camelot, Gigi, Paint Your Wagon and My Fair Lady.

Khanzadian was given a long ovation for "If Ever I Would Leave You" with a huge voice coming from a relatively small frame.

Louise Russell was lauded for "I Could Have Danced All Night," and Vorinne Curry for "Wouldn't It Be Loverly."

But the high point for this reviewer and for much of the crowd was a spine-tingling version of "They Call the Wind Maria." It was done by Richard Fredricks and the Tanglewood Festival Chrous and drew a couple of minutes of applause.

'He's the Master

Through all this Fiedler was the master and the large crowd basked in the glory of his work and the performance of the orchestra.

But after intermission, the love affair bloomed into a torrid romance. There were an awful lot of white hairs in the audience, but surprisingly, perhaps, a larger number of younger people too.

And when the Pops came back in shirtsleeves and broke into Eleanor Rigby by the Beatles John Lennon and Paul McCartney, the audience knew this was the "real" part of the evening for them.

The sound effects, the blasting of the horns and the soaring of the strings. This was Pops and this was Fiedler. Came the coup d'etat, "Look What They've Done to My Song," and the audience was ready.

Next to us sat a woman whose age might have been 50. "When "Look What They've Done" began she started swaying a little bit from side to side in rhythm to the music.

Clapping

And then she began the rhythmic clapping that has been a Pops landmark and that Fiedler has evoked from audiences from the days when the Pops first began their Esplanade concerts in Boston more than 30 years ago.

As the clapping grew in volume Fiedler suddenly turned from the orchestra and began conducting the audience. a big smile on his face. And the 13,235 responded with "La-la-la, lalala, babe" and Fiedler the orchestra and the 13,000 people grinned happily.

When it was over the audience was on its feet cheering, whistling and applauding. Fielder came back for three bows and then two encores, and the woman next to me ate it up, as did everyone else.

Finally Fiedler returned and without a word raised the baton, and began the traditional cut-off for any Boston Pops concert, Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

As the crowd cheered, the woman turned to me and said:

"Now we can go home."

Indeed they could and did, and though they had to fight the traffic and the carbon monoxide fumes, their love for Arthur Fiedler was undiminished. It will go on as long as he does ...hopefully forever.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
AUG 2 1972
New England Newsclip

'Pops' Performs Common Music Uncommonly Well

By FRANK N. PATTERSON

LENO X— Perhaps pops is popular because it simply stirs and rouses our spirits. It doesn't try to kindle or fire our souls as will full - blown symphony orchestras with their August intent and elegant programs.

However, while these great orchestras do their earnest effort to "tell us more" will suffer an occasional pratfall into poor taste, pops will never stumble, never compromise and never pretend.

Despite the fact that last nights program included, as usual, such gaudy baubles as "Show Me," the results were all predictably fair and winning and tasteful.

The rousing orgiastic performance of "With A Little Bit Of Luck" left the orchestra's image still cool and kempt. Even the rough virtues of "Gigi" were smoothered by the likes of a doting parent called "pops" into a manner of respectability only a prude would question.

Sure, you may object to that "Medley Of Old Favorites" whose gloss makes a kind of homogenious hash with it's "My Fair Lady, Camelot, Paint Your Wagon, Brigadoon, Gigi" etc, etc. But have you ever found the results vulgar?

While Fiedler never exhibited a lapse in good manners, approximately 14,000 screaming fans indicated Melanies "Look What They've Done To My Song" was an extraordinary improvement.

But Fiedler goes on as usual, showing devout listeners that a waltz need not apologize because it is not a symphony and it is no crime to perform common music if it is performed in an uncommon manner.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
AUG 2 1972
New England Newsclip

Whitestone

FEATURED SOLOISTS, who had major roles in last night's Pops at Tanglewood, are congratulated by conductor Arthur Fiedler. From left, Richard Fredricks, Corinne Curry, Louise Russell and Vahan Khanzadian, who, backed by the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, gave a Lerner-Loewe program. Some 13,235 added applause.

56

Thomas to conduct on-parade

Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and principal guest conductor of the orchestra beginning in September, will conduct the annual gala benefit concert for the Berkshire Music Center on Tuesday, Aug. 15, at 8:30 p.m. in the Tanglewood Shed.

The Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist orchestras will combine for the first time for a performance in the Shed. The program includes Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture with cannons, Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" by Wagner.

Other Tanglewood-on-parade events include an afternoon of "mini-concerts" given by members of the Berkshire Music Center beginning at 2:30 at various locations on the grounds. Vocal, instrumental, and chamber music programs, illustrative of the advanced work that takes place during the intense eight-week session of the Center, will highlight the activities.

Further information is available by contacting the ticket office at Tanglewood.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 4 1972 New England Newsclip

GAZETTE
TAUNTON, MASS.
D. 13,000

AUG 15 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Concert

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a gala concert tonight at Tanglewood as a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

AUG 7 1972 New England Newsclip

Gala Set at Tanglewood

LENOX — Michael Tilson Thomas, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony, and Principal Guest Conductor of the Orchestra beginning in September 1972, conducts the annual Gala Benefit Concert for the Berkshire Music Center, August 15 at 8.30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

The concert, featuring the combined Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist Orchestras (the first concert ever to involve three orchestras in the Shed,) includes Techaikovsky's 1812 Overture with cannons, Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, Respighi's Fountains of Rome and Siegfried's Rhine Journey by Wagner.

Other Tanglewood-on-Parade events include an afternoon of "mini-concerts" given by members of the Berkshire Music Center beginning at 2.30 p.m. at various locations on the Tanglewood grounds.

Vocal, instrumental, and chamber music programs, illustrative of the advanced work that takes place during the intense eight-week session of the Berkshire Music Center, highlight the afternoon's activities.

Tickets are $2 for Lawn admission, $4 for regular seats in the Shed, and $6 for Box seats and entitle the concert-goer to all events. Please call or write the Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts 01240 (413-637-1600) for reservations and further information.

ITEM
LYNN, MASS.
D. 34,202

AUG 12 1972 New England Newsclip

The PERFORMING ARTS

Repertory in Boston in residence at the Boston Center for the Arts features a fairy tale in mime for grown-ups "The Little Prince" by Saint-Exupery each Monday at 8:08 p.m. Other productions included from the Boston Repertory Theatre Company's program include "The Romantics" on Fridays and " A Hatful of Rain" each Saturday. Sunday's fare is "Grandma's In the Cellar."

The lobby gallery opens at 7:30 p.m. There are no tickets sold but donations are requested.

* * *

Popular radio host Jess Cain and Laugh-In favorite Barbara Sharma team up in "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" opening Monday at the North Shore Music Theatre, Beverly for two weeks. Performances are at 8:15 p.m.

The Music-Theatre's full-scale musical series for youngsters draws to a close Thursday, Aug. 17 with "The Princess and the Frog" staged by the Gingerbread Players and Jack, under the sponsorship of the North Shore Community Arts Foundations. Performances are at 9:30 and 11:30 a.m.

* * *

Michael Tilson Thomas, Associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducts the annual Gala Benefit Concert for the Berkshire Music Center Tuesday Aug. 15 at 8:30 p.m., in Tanglewood's Music Shed in Lenox. Thomas has selected Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture With Cannons," Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" by Wagner at 8:30 p.m. Mini concerts by Berkshire Music Center members will be a feature of the afternoon beginning at 2:30 p.m.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

AUG 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Thomas To Conduct 'Parade' Evening

Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and principal guest conductor of the orchestra beginning this September, conducts the annual Gala Benefit Concert for the Berkshire Music Center, Tuesday, Aug. 15 at 8:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

The concert, featuring the combined Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist Orchestras (the first concert ever to involve three orchestras in the Shed), includes Tchaikovksy's 1812 Overture with cannons, Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, Respighi's Fountains of Rome and Siegfried's Rhine Journey by Wagner.

Other Tanglewood-on-Parade events include an afternoon of "mini-concerts" given by members of the Berkshire Music Center beginning at 2:30 p.m. at various locations on the Tanglewood grounds.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000

AUG 10 1972 New England Newsclip

Gala Benefit Concert Slated At Tanglewood

Michael Tilson Thomas, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony, and Principal Guest Conductor of the Orchestra beginning in September 1972, conducts the annual Gala Benefit Concert for the Berkshire Music Center, Tuesday, August 15 at 8:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed. The concert, featuring the combined Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist Orchestras (the first concert ever to involve three orchestras in the Shed), includes Tchaikovksy's 1812 Overture with cannons, Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, Respighi's Fountains of Rome and Siegfried's Rhine Journey by Wagner.

Other Tanglewood-on-Parade events include an afternoon of "mini-concerts" given by members of the Berkshire Music Center beginning at 2:30 p.m. at various locations on the Tanglewood grounds. Vocal, instrumental, and chamber music programs, illustrative of the advanced work that takes place during the intense eight-week session of the Berkshire Music Center, highlight the afternoon's activities.

Please call or write the Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts 01240 (413-637-1600) for reservations and further information.

6NP

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285

AUG 15 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood gala today

Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and principal guest conductor of the orchestra beginning next month, will conduct the annual Gala Benefit Concert for the Berkshire Music Center, tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The concert, featuring the combined Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist orchestras, will include Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" by Wagner.

Mini-concerts are being given today prior to the evening performance by members of the Berkshire Music Center at various locations on the Tanglewood grounds.

Thomas Conducting Gala Benefit Concert

LENOX — Michael Tilson Thomas, Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony, and principal guest conductor of the orchestra beginning September, 1972, will conduct the annual Gala Benefit Concert for the Berkshire Music Center, Aug. 15 at 8.30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

The concert, featuring the combined Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist Orchestras (the first concert ever to involve three orchestras in the Shed), will include Tchaikovksy's "1812 Overture" with cannons, Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and "Siegfried's "Rhine Journey" by Wagner.

Other Tanglewood - on - Parade events include an afternoon of "mini-concerts" given by members of the Berkshire Music Center beginning at 2.30 p.m. at various locations on the Tanglewood grounds.

Vocal, instrumental, and chamber music programs, illustrative of the advanced work that takes place during the intense eight-week session of the Berkshire Music Center, highlight the afternoon's activities.

Tickets are $2 for Lawn admission, $4 for regular seats in the Shed, and $6 for Box Seats and entitle the concert-goer to all events.

RECORDER GAZETTE
GREENFIELD, MASS.
D. 14,698
AUG 15 1972
New England Newsclip

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977
AUG 17 1972
New England Newsclip

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003
AUG 13 1972

Benefit Concert Slated At Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS. — Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the annual gala benefit concert for the Berkshire Music Center Tuesday, 8:30 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The program includes Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" with cannons and fireworks; Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and Wagner's "Siegfried's Rhine Journey."

On Friday at 7 p.m. pianist Alexis Weissenberg will perform the original piano version of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition." With the Boston Symphony Chamber Players he will perform "Quintet in E Flat" by Beethoven.

At 9 p.m. Friday Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Weissenberg will appear again. The program includes Ligeti's "Melodien;" Chopin's "Piano Concerto No. One" and Bartok's suite from "The Miraculous Mandarin."

On Saturday at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal of the program to be presented 8:30 o'clock that night. Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct.

This program includes Mozart's "Symphony No. 31 ('Paris');" Messiaen's "Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum" and Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. Two."

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Ozawa will conduct again, this time directing the orchestra through Mahler's "Symphony No. Eight ('Symphony of a Thousand')."

Guest artists will be Deborah O'Brian and Linda Phillips, sopranos; Jane Bryden, mezzo-soprano; Susan Clickner and Eunice Alberts, altos; John Alexander, tenor; William Dooley, baritone and Saverio Barbieri, bass.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will be directed by John Oliver, the St. Paul's School Boy Choir by Theodore Marier, and Berj Zamkochian will play the organ.

TELEGRAPH
NASHUA, N. H.
D. 69,493
AUG 9 1972
New England Newsclip

Concert Set For Tuesday At Festival

LENOX, Mass. — Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, and principal goest conductor of the Orchestra beginning in September, will conduct the annual benefit concert for the Berkshire Music Center, Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

The concert, featuring the combined Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artist Orchestras (the first concert ever to involve three orchestras in the Shed), includes Tchaikovksy's "1812 Overture" with annons, Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" by Wagner.

Other Tanglewood-on-Parade events include an afternoon of "mini-concerts" given by members of the Berkshire Music Center beginning at 2:30 p.m. at various locations on the Tanglewood grounds. Vocal, instrumental, and chamber music programs, illustrative of the advanced work that takes place during the intense eight-week session of the Berkshire Music Center, highlight the afternoon's activities.

Ticket information is available by calling or writing to the Festival ticket office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 01240.

1812 'Blast' Resounds at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Music Review

LENOX — Tanglewood-on-Parade was a super talent gala that began at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday and ended eight hours later with a 175-piece orchestra playing Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, accompanied by guns, cannons, and fireworks.

For the 1812 blast the Boston Symphony combined with the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. Conductor for the evening concert was Michael Tilson Thomas.

Appropriately, this annual event benefits the center, an important fountainhead of music's future. It comprises about 400 students from the United States and many foreign countries who are completing eight weeks in the Boston Symphony's academy for advanced study.

Starting audience on Tuesday was 600 that grew to 7,756 for the evening orchestral program.

Also participating with the Boston Symphony wind instruments and percussion for Handel's "Royal Fireworks" music was Boston University Young Artists Orchestra.

The Loudest

The Berkshire Center Orchestra of 90 players was heard alone in Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," and joined the Boston Symphony for Wagner's "Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey" from "Twilight of the Gods."

Top of the spectacular list was Tchaikovsky's 1812. The main reason was that it probably received the loudest performance heard on planet Earth since Erich Leinsdorf conducted it at Tanglewood a few seasons ago with the same orchestral resources and artillery.

Thomas had complete control of the whole works including the cannons which he cued by closed-circuit television. They were lined up ominously on the grounds aimed at nearby Lake Mahkeenac over which the fireworks were displayed.

Tuesday's real musical news, however, was made during the five hours of "mini-concerts" by various departments of the Center.

The evidence they gave of music's future and performance were both elating and depressing.

Events of the eight-ring circus overlapped and took place in six locations so that transient audiences had to keep on the go.

There was reason for dismay for those who heard David Winkler's Chamber Concerto for six wind players and two percussionists, conducted by Tibor Pusztai.

It was a familiar recital of shreiks, grunts and other tonal ragout — the type of package that's being marketed by the ungifted.

More of this produce was available. But elsewhere "on campus" marvelous things were happening.

One of the best was Chavez' Toccata for Percussion Instruments, performed by six players under Tom Gauger's direction. It was part of the chamber music program by Boston University Tanglewood Institute.

Portions were an exciting and deafening din but there was also sensitive production of ingenious sound effects, structural clarity, and objectivity.

On the same program, Roger Voisin conducted a brilliant performance of Parris' Sonatina for six brass instruments.

Vocal Department

Completely absorbing from start to finish was the center's vocal department program.

It included at least two singers who are bound to climb the ladder of success — baritone Robert Woods from Cleveland Heights, Ohio, and mezzo-soprano Nancy Lee O'Brien from Van Nuys, Calif.

In all four sections of Martin's lugubrious but melodically luxuriant "Monologues," Woods maintained a youthful, resonant, wide-ranged voice, and compelling dramatic flair.

Miss O'Brien rejoiced in her four Richard Strauss songs, rewarding them with an opulent voice of dramatic stature and effortless delivery.

Conductor Thomas helped climax the day with a reserved control of his huge orchestras, and thorough, efficient cueing.

Handel's "Royal Fireworks" was discharged with penetrating, brassy, festive sounds from about 60 players, giving equal respect to the gentle euphony in the siciliana interlude dedicated to peace.

The Center Orchestra was positively brilliant in dispensing the gossamer sounds and pictorial references in Respighi's "Fountains."

Huge size of the combined orchestras was made most apparent by the brasses in Wagner's "Rhine Journey." But delicate woodwind solos and gorgeous nuances from cellos were sculptured to chamber orchestra dimension.

PROGRAM

Royal Fireworks Music — Handel
Winds and Brasses of the Boston Symphony, Berkshire Music Center and Boston University Young Artists Orchestras.
The Fountains of Rome — Respighi
Berkshire Music Center Orchestra
Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey, from "Twilight of the Gods" — Wagner
Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras
Overture, 1812 — Tchaikovsky
Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras, with guns and cannons.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
AUG 11 1972
New England Newsclip

Benefit At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a gala concert tonight at Tanglewood as a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

The combined Boston Symphony, Music Center, and Boston University young artist orchestras will perform.

Tanglewood-on-parade wil also feature an afternoon o min-concerts by music cente students, who are enrolled i an eight week advanced in struction course.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 16 1972 New England

Over 7,000 attend Tanglewood on Parade on cool evening

Photos by Whitestone

Mr. and Mrs. John Tobin of Delmar, N.Y., enjoyed picnic supper under one of the cannons which boomed during finale of 1812 Overture. George Bisacca of Eastover, Lenox, was in charge of the artillery brigade and the fireworks display.

Fireworks lit the sky following the concert.

Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., wife of the Boston Symphony Orchestra manager, with Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and state Rep. and Mrs. Frank J. Matrango, were among the 7,756 who attended the gala Tanglewood-on-Parade concert last evening in Lenox.

Whitestone

Thomas conducting the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center orchestras during last night's gala Tanglewood-on-Parade concert. Some 7,756 attended.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 16 1972 New England Newsclip

On-Parade Review

Thomas ably sounds chime, cannon

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A MAN HASN'T lived until he has heard "The 1812 Overture" played at a Tanglewood - on - Parade gala concert. Such would probably be the consensus of the 7,756 persons, who happily gathered at Tanglewood yesterday for the annual affair which boasts an afternoon and evening of fine music — complete with fireworks.

The gala evening concert featured Michael Tilson Thomas conducting the combined orchestras of the Boston Symphony, the Berkshire Music Center and the Boston University Young Artists. The combined total massed nearly 200 musicians on stage for a performance of the 1812 just as Tchaikovsky conceived it to dramatize and commemorate the withdrawal of the French troops under Napoleon, a strategic retreat which the Russians have always regarded as a victory.

As the progress of the battle of Borodino ebbs and flows in favor of the French, La Marseillaise is heard and when the Russians repulse the invaders their national anthem, "God save the Czar," dominates the scene. As the Russians eventually triumph, the tubular chimes are thoroughly pounded during the closing measures as if all the bells of Moscow are being sounded.

As Thomas conducts the orchestras in these maneuvers, on the far lawns, real cannons, from Eastover's battery of artillery, are released and giant firecrackers are set off. A reverberating thrill!

* * *

THE ANNUAL four-ring musical circus started in early afternoon, displaying all of the many features of the summer's training program, and then culminated with the great program in the Main Shed. Many people brought lunches and, thanks to the perfect, although fall-like weather, were able to enjoy them on the spacious lawns and terraces of the beautiful Tanglewood grounds.

* * *

MICHAEL Tilson Thomas commanded the massive forces with easy but forceful control, playing, to start, the Royal Fireworks music of Handel, music of a century earlier than the Tchaikovsky overture but analogous to it in several ways.

Handel prepared, on commission of George II, music for a mighty public entertainment, complete also with fireworks, to celebrate the close of a war, that of the Austrian Succession in 1748. Thomas played all the movements of the original score, which has an amusing melange of Italian, French and English legends.

He followed this with a surprisingly well-done performance of the Respighi "Fountains of Rome," played by the Berkshire Music Center orchestra, and then after the intermission, the combined orchestras in the Dawn and Siegfried's Rhine Journey from Wagner's "Die Gotterdammerung" and, as the climax, what has become the theme song of the T-O-P celebration, "1812."

* * *

THE ROSTER of the Berkshire Music Center includes students of many degrees of advancement but, in general, the level is probably the highest of any postgraduate music school in the country. This accounts for the splendid performance of the Respighi "Fountains" in which only undergraduates took part.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 16 1972 New England Newsclip

Gala planned at Tanglewood tonight

Whitestone

Michael Tilson Thomas, who will conduct tonight's gala concert at Tanglewood-on-Parade, is shown with Mrs. Edward M. Kennedy, one of the more than 30,000 who attended the weekend concerts. Thomas will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Handel's "Royal Fireworks Music," and Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," in Shed at 8:30.

TANGLEWOOD FRIENDS AND OTHER EVENTS

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

OCT 18 1971 New England Newsclip

ommunity Events

Friends of Tanglewood Annual Meeting Held Friday

Paul Rocheleau

About 60 attended the annual meeting of the Friends of Tanglewood, where they heard committee reports and discussed plans for next year's activities. Curtis R. Buttenheim and Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris are cochairmen.

Tanglewood Friends To Meet Tomorrow

The annual meeting of the Tanglewood Council of Friends will take place at Tanglewood's Main house tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 when election of new council officers and members will take place.

The Friends had their most successful year to date with an increase in memberships of the Friends of Music at Tanglewood from 860 in 1970 to 975 in 1971 and contributions totaling $303,-853, which included a matching grant of $100,000 from the National Foundation of the Arts. Contributions in 1970 totaled $103,642.

Chairmen Curtis Buttenheim and Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris of Lenox will hear reports from subcommittee chairmen and one from Forrester C. Smith, development director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

OCT 16 1971 New England

Tanglewood Group Renames Cochairmen

Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris and Curtis R. Buttenheim were re-elected cochairmen of the Tanglewood Council of Friends at the group's annual meeting last evening. About 50 attended the meeting which was held in Main House. A cocktail hour followed.

William A. Selke was re-elected vice chairman. Members of the executive committee are Mrs. Morton Weiss and John Nadeau, community relations; Mrs. Buttenheim, special events, James R. Sloan, business, and Mrs. James G. Garivaltis and Mrs. Samuel Boxer, membership.

Form area group in support of Tanglewood

An organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends of Music at Tanglewood was held at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence in Norfolk.

Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood; Mrs. Perry and Forrester Smith, director of development, addressed the group. Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are forming the Litchfield County committee to promote interest in enlarging the number of friends of Tanglewood. Both the Perrys and Smith spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

The following communities were represented at the meeting; Colebrook, Mrs. Harold Hess; Winsted, Mrs. Max Galinsky for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vogelsonger; Torrington, Miss Eleanor Gaines Smith; the Cornwalls, Mrs. Peter Hayward; Sharon, Mrs. S. T. Church; Lakeville and Salisbury, Mrs. Albert Sly. Mrs. Wagner Thieiens of Litchfield was unable to attend.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday at Robin Hill, Mountain Road, Norfolk, the summer residence of James Laughlin.

On Aug. 17, the Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood, which will include visiting classes in session. It will also include hearing Michale Tilson Thomas, assistant conductor.

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN.
D. 11,891

AUG 7 1972 New England Newsclip

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

JUL 10 1972 New England Newsclip

SOCIETY

by Miriam Tod

Incredible though it may seem it was a first visit for many of the most ardent of music lovers. It seemed hard to believe that many of these 50 members of the Council of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra had ever visited Tanglewood; that center of music known throughout the world that is located practically on their own doorstep when compared to the distances in this country.

On Thursday, though, thanks to the farsightedness of Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover and Wareham, president of the Boston Council of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this oversight in the musical education of fmany of the supporters of the BSO was rectified when a huge bus, complete with all the comforts of home, took them the length of the Mass. Turnpike for a day at Tanglewood.

Limited to 50 the numbers were sold out months before the actual date for this event was so popular that it may have started a new trend of exchanges and cooperation between the Friends of the BSO in Boston and the Friends of the BSO in Tanglewood of whom the former were the guests.

In keeping with this summer of '72 it was a chilly day and up in the Berkshires heavy clouds kept obscuring that seldom seen phenomenon, the sun. Warm coats and dresses and jackets were the favorite garb and even then there was an occasional shiver or two when a breeze blew up every so often.

As the bus rolled into the parking lot of the huge 250 acre estate that is Tanglewood the 50 guests from Boston were greeted by Mrs. Stephen V.C. Morris of Washington and Lenox, president of the Friends of the BSO at Tanglewood. Every guest was handed a box luncheon for later consumption and taken by their hostesses straight to the huge open sided building known as The Shed where the Boston Symphony Orchestra were rehearsing with their new musical advisor and director, Seigi Ozawa. It was Beethoven's Third Piano Concert, with Garrick Ohlsson of White Plains, N.Y. as soloist, that came rolling over the immaculate green lawns surrounding The Shed to greet the visitors, a perfect introduction to the special musical magic that is Tanglewood.

From the rehearsal the group joined many members of the Tanglewood Friends in the yellow and white striped tent on the grounds that was inaugurated a few years ago as a sort of "in" club for season ticket holders and VIP's. Round tables centered with flowers were set on the grass both inside and outside the ten, and the guests could enjoy the view of encircling hills and Lake Mahkeenac below as they ate their cold chicken and sandwiches.

The event for the members of the Tanglewood Friends was the first of the "Walk and Talk", four events to be held during the summer based, flatteringly, on the extremely successful Stage Door Lectures sponsored by the Boston Council of Friends during the winter. The speaker on Thursday, who talked in the same informal atmosphere as do the orchestra members at the Stage Door Lectures, was soprano Phyllis Curtin, artist-in-residence at Tanglewood this summer. A completely charming, poised and knowledgeable speaker she had her audience spellbound from the start as she told them of her concern for American singers and 20th Century music and asked of her listeners "where are both to go to be heard in this day and age?".

The background noises heard during the talk eminated from the rehearsal rooms in The Shed for the tent is located immediately behind the building. Snatches of Ravel's Bolero, scales practiced on a variety of instruments and brief bars of the more difficult parts of the music to be performed this weekend could be heard as a suitable background for Miss Curtin's talk.

Many of the most devoted followers of the BSO availed themselves of the opportunity to come to Tanglewood. Mrs. Alfred Willmann came with her daughter, Lyndell. She and her husband had just returned from a visit to her daughter and grandchildren in Milwaukee, and Lyndell was celebrating the end of her school year as a teacher. Mrs. James Perkins of Westwood, one of the two lady trustess of the orchestra, was seated with Mrs. George Lee Sargent, Mrs. Kay Whitty, the Friends' invaluable executive secretary, Mrs. William J. Mixter of Dedham and Mrs. Edwin Green of Cambridge.

Among the others at this event were Mrs. Joseph Valatka of Abington, Mrs. A. Lloyd Russell of South Dartmouth, who was spending the weekend there in order to attend all the concerts; Mrs. K. Peabody Brewster, Mrs. David Bird and Mrs. Thomas Jansen of Dedham.

CONN. WESTERN NEWS
CANAAN, CONN.
W. 2,295

JUL 19 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Friends Organize for County

NORFOLK--The organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends of Music at Tanglewood was held at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence on July 8.

Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood, and his wife addressed the group. The director of development, Forrester Smith, also spoke to the group. They spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are organizing the group to promote interest in enlarging the number of Friends of Tanglewood.

Area towns represented at the meeting included Mrs. Peter Hayward for the Cornwalls, Mrs. S.T. Church for Sharon and Mrs. Albert Sly for Lakeville and Salisbury.

The next meeting will be held at the summer home of James Laughlin, Mountain Road, on Aug. 9. The Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood on Aug. 16.

The tour will include visiting classes in session and a box lunch in the Friends' tent.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

'Friends' Unit Formed To Aid Tanglewood

The organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends of Music at Tanglewood was held last week at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence. Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood and Mrs. Perry and Forrester Smith, director of development, addressed the group.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are forming the Litchfield County Committee to promote interest in enlarging the number of Friends of Tanglewood. Both the Perrys and Mr. Smith spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 9 at Robin Hill on Mountain Road, the summer residence of James Laughlin. On Wednesday, Aug. 16, the Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood.

(Norfolk

Tanglewood Backers Organize

NORFOLK — The organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends Of Music At Tanglewood was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence.

Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood and Mrs. Perry and Forrester Smith, director of development, addressed the group.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are forming the Litchfield County Committee to promote interest in enlarging the number of Friends of Tanglewood.

Both the Perrys and Mr. Smith spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

The following comunities were represented at the meeting: Colebrook, Mrs. Harold Hesse; Winsted, Mrs. Max Galinsky for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vogelsonger; Torrington, Mrs. Eleanor Gaines Smith; the Cornwalls, Mrs. Peter Hayward; Sharon, Mrs. S. T. Church; Lakeville and Salisbury, Mrs. Albert Sly; Mrs. Wagner Thielens was unable to be present to represent Litchfield.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 9 at Robin Hill, Mountain Road, summer residence of James Laughlin.

On Wednesday, Aug. 16, the Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood which will include visiting classes in session as well as box lunch in the Friends tent.

CITIZEN
WINSTED, CONN.
D. 4,600

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

TANGLEWOOD FRIENDS AND OTHER EVENTS

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
OCT 18 1971 New England Newsclip

ommunity Events

Friends of Tanglewood Annual Meeting Held Friday

Paul Rocheleau

About 60 attended the annual meeting of the Friends of Tanglewood, where they heard committee reports and discussed plans for next year's activities. Curtis R. Buttenheim and Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris are cochairmen.

Tanglewood Friends To Meet Tomorrow

The annual meeting of the Tanglewood Council of Friends will take place at Tanglewood's Main house tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 when election of new council officers and members will take place.

The Friends had their most successful year to date with an increase in memberships of the Friends of Music at Tanglewood from 860 in 1970 to 975 in 1971 and contributions totaling $303,-853, which included a matching grant of $100,000 from the National Foundation of the Arts. Contributions in 1970 totaled $103,642.

Chairmen Curtis. Buttenheim and Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris of Lenox will hear reports from subcommittee chairmen and one from Forrester C. Smith, development director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
OCT 16 1971 New England

Tanglewood Group Renames Cochairmen

Mrs. Stephen V. C. Morris and Curtis R. Buttenheim were re-elected cochairmen of the Tanglewood Council of Friends at the group's annual meeting last evening. About 50 attended the meeting which was held in Main House. A cocktail hour followed.

William A. Selke was re-elected vice chairman. Members of the executive committee are Mrs. Morton Weiss and John Nadeau, community relations; Mrs. Buttenheim, special events, James R. Sloan, business, and Mrs. James G. Garivaltis and Mrs. Samuel Boxer, membership.

Form area group in support of Tanglewood

An organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends of Music at Tanglewood was held at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence in Norfolk.

Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood; Mrs. Perry and Forrester Smith, director of development, addressed the group. Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are forming the Litchfield County committee to promote interest in enlarging the number of friends of Tanglewood. Both the Perrys and Smith spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

The following communities were represented at the meeting; Colebrook, Mrs. Harold Hess; Winsted, Mrs. Max Galinsky for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vogelsonger; Torrington, Miss Eleanor Gaines Smith; the Cornwalls, Mrs. Peter Hayward; Sharon, Mrs. S. T. Church; Lakeville and Salisbury, Mrs. Albert Sly. Mrs. Wagner Thieiens of Litchfield was unable to attend.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday at Robin Hill, Mountain Road, Norfolk, the summer residence of James Laughlin.

On Aug. 17, the Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood, which will include visiting classes in session. It will also include hearing Michale Tilson Thomas, assistant conductor.

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN
D. 11,891
AUG 7 1972 New England Newsclip

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525
JUL 10 1972 New England Newsclip

SOCIETY

by Miriam Tod

Incredible though it may seem it was a first visit for many of the most ardent of music lovers. It seemed hard to believe that many of these 50 members of the Council of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra had ever visited Tanglewood, that center of music known throughout the world that is located practically on their own doorstep when compared to the distances in this country.

On Thursday, though, thanks to the farsightedness of Mrs. George Lee Sargent of Dover and Wareham, president of the Boston Council of Friends of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this oversight in the musical education of fmany of the supporters of the BSO was rectified when a huge bus, complete with all the comforts of home, took them the length of the Mass. Turnpike for a day at Tanglewood.

Limited to 50 the numbers were sold out months before the actual date for this event was so popular that it may have started a new trend of exchanges and cooperation between the Friends of the BSO in Boston and the Friends of the BSO in Tanglewood of whom the former were the guests.

In keeping with this summer of '72 it was a chilly day and up in the Berkshires heavy clouds kept obscuring that seldom seen phenomenon, the sun. Warm coats and dresses and jackets were the favorite garb and even then there was an occasional shiver or two when a breeze blew up every so often.

As the bus rolled into the parking lot of the huge 250 acre estate that is Tanglewood the 50 guests from Boston were greeted by Mrs. Stephen V.C. Morris of Washington and Lenox, president of the Friends of the BSO at Tanglewood. Every guest was handed a box luncheon for later consumption and taken by their hostesses straight to the huge open sided building known as The Shed where the Boston Symphony Orchestra were rehearsing with their new musical advisor and director, Seigi Ozawa. It was Beethoven's Third Piano Concert, with Garrick Ohlsson of White Plains, N.Y. as soloist, that came rolling over the immaculate green lawns surrounding The Shed to greet the visitors, a perfect introduction to the special musical magic that is Tanglewood.

From the rehearsal the group joined many members of the Tanglewood Friends in the yellow and white striped tent on the grounds that was inaugurated a few years ago as a sort of "in" club for season ticket holders and VIP's. Round tables centered with flowers were set on the grass both inside and outside the ten, and the guests could enjoy the view of encircling hills and Lake Mahkeenac below as they ate their cold chicken and sandwiches.

The event for the members of the Tanglewood Friends was the first of the "Walk and Talk", four events to be held during the summer based, flatteringly, on the extremely successful Stage Door Lectures sponsored by the Boston Council of Friends during the winter. The speaker on Thursday, who talked in the same informal atmosphere as do the orchestra members at the Stage Door Lectures, was soprano Phyllis Curtin, artist-in-residence at Tanglewood this summer. A completely charming, poised and knowledgeable speaker she had her audience spellbound from the start as she told them of her concern for American singers and 20th Century music and asked of her listeners "where are both to go to be heard in this day and age?".

The background noises heard during the talk eminated from the rehearsal rooms in The Shed for the tent is located immediately behind the building. Snatches of Ravel's Bolero, scales practiced on a variety of instruments and brief bars of the more difficult parts of the music to be performed this weekend could be heard as a suitable background for Miss Curtin's talk.

Many of the most devoted followers of the BSO availed themselves of the opportunity to come to Tanglewood. Mrs. Alfred Willmann came with her daughter, Lyndell. She and her husband had just returned from a visit to her daughter and grandchildren in Milwaukee, and Lyndell was celebrating the end of her school year as a teacher. Mrs. James Perkins of Westwood, one of the two lady trustess of the orchestra, was seated with Mrs. George Lee Sargent, Mrs. Kay Whitty, the Friends' invaluable executive secretary, Mrs. William J. Mixter of Dedham and Mrs. Edwin Green of Cambridge.

Among the others at this event were Mrs. Joseph Valatka of Abington, Mrs. A. Lloyd Russell of South Dartmouth, who was spending the weekend there in order to attend all the concerts; Mrs. K. Peabody Brewster, Mrs. David Bird and Mrs. Thomas Jansen of Dedham.

CONN. WESTERN NEWS
CANAAN, CONN.
W. 2,295
JUL 19 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Friends Organize for County

NORFOLK--The organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends of Music at Tanglewood was held at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence on July 8.

Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood, and his wife addressed the group. The director of development, Forrester Smith, also spoke to the group. They spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are organizing the group to promote interest in enlarging the number of Friends of Tanglewood.

Area towns represented at the meeting included Mrs. Peter Hayward for the Cornwalls, Mrs. S.T. Church for Sharon and Mrs. Albert Sly for Lakeville and Salisbury.

The next meeting will be held at the summer home of James Laughlin, Mountain Road, on Aug. 9. The Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood on Aug. 16.

The tour will include visiting classes in session and a box lunch in the Friends' tent.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405
JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

'Friends' Unit Formed To Aid Tanglewood

The organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends of Music at Tanglewood was held last week at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence. Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood and Mrs. Perry and Forrester Smith, director of development, addressed the group.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are forming the Litchfield County Committee to promote interest in enlarging the number of Friends of Tanglewood. Both the Perrys and Mr. Smith spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 9 at Robin Hill on Mountain Road, the summer residence of James Laughlin. On Wednesday, Aug. 16, the Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood.

Norfolk

Tanglewood Backers Organize

NORFOLK — The organizational meeting of the Litchfield County Friends Of Music At Tanglewood was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. James F. Lawrence.

Todd Perry, director of Tanglewood and Mrs. Perry and Forrester Smith, director of development, addressed the group.

Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Charles Garside are forming the Litchfield County Committee to promote interest in enlarging the number of Friends of Tanglewood.

Both the Perrys and Mr. Smith spoke of the need for expanded financial support.

Fhe following comunities were represented at the meeting: Colebrook, Mrs. Harold Hesse; Winsted, Mrs. Max Galinsky for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vogelsonger; Torrington, Mrs. Eleanor Gaines Smith; the Cornwalls, Mrs. Peter Hayward; Sharon, Mrs. S. T. Church; Lakeville and Salisbury, Mrs. Albert Sly; Mrs. Wagner Thielens was unable to be present to represent Litchfield.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 9 at Robin Hill, Mountain Road, summer residence of James Laughlin.

On Wednesday, Aug. 16, the Litchfield County Friends of Tanglewood will be given a special tour of Tanglewood which will include visiting classes in session as well as box lunch in the Friends tent.

CITIZEN
WINSTED, CONN.
D. 4,600
JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

60

CITY POST
MARLBORO, MASS.
W. 3,300

JUN 15 1972 New England Newsclip

"Friends" Go To Tanglewood

MARLBORO — The Friends of the Marlboro Public Library have two summer trips planned, and persons planning to take advantage of either or both trips may make their reservations now.

The first trip slated for July 9 will be to the Tanglewood Berkshire Festival. Seiji Ozawa the Boston Symphony Orchestra will present "Haydn: Symphony No. 47," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 3," and Garrick Ohlsson in Ravel's "Ma mere l'Oye."

On August 19, The Friends and company will attend the "Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival." This will be the 40th year of the Festival, and the 31st year it has been held in the Ted Shawn Theatre. Luis Rivera and Company, Takako Asakawa and David Hatch Walker will be the starring performers.

Both of these trips will be made on Trailways Buses which will leave the Marlboro Public Library rear parking lot at 10 a.m.

The cost of the trips will include free ice cold tonic during the trips and for picnic lunches whch everyone is asked to bring. Lunches will be eaten prior to the afternoon programs.

Reservations may be made by contacting Mrs. Toni Paternoster, 253 Boston post Road, Marlboro, and further information may be obtained by phoning 481-1390 or 485-0290.

THE FIRST UNITARIAN

INDEPENDENT
WESTBORO, MASS.
W. 2,000

JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Talking Tanglewood

By Cathy Chapman

The "Silver Eagle" will wing its way to Tanglewood via the super and not so super-highways, Sunday, July 9 with 36 or 46 persons aboard depending on who acts fast enough to obtain reservations.

The trip to Tanglewood for an afternoon of music is a repeat. Last year a busload of "Friends" and their friends made the trip to the shrine of music in the Berkshires to hear Leonard Bernstein conduct. The program was most enjoyable, but, unfortunately the bus "balked" "fussed" and "fumed" at making the trip. Evidently it had planned a quiet weekend in the parking lot with a spanking new busette parked in lot 17. Ah! such is life for buses and busettes.

This year with the cooperation of the "Silver Eagle" a bus equipped with the accoutrements of finer living the Friends of the Marlboro Public Library and their guests will hear Seiji Ozawa conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Haydn Symphony No 47," "Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3", with Garrick Ohlasson, also Ravel's "Ma mere l'Oye."

Reservations for the bus trip which includes the price of admission and free tonic are still available. Everybody brings picnic lunches. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Toni Paternoster at 481-1390 or contact the Marlboro Public Library.

Later in the summer August 19 to be exact the Friends will travel to Jacob's Pillow for the 1972 Dance Festival which is in its 40th year. Luis Rivera and Company along with Takako Askawa and David Hatch Walker will be among the performing artists at this festival. Reservations for this trip can be made now by contacting Mrs. Paternoster or the library.

If you were aboard the "Silver Eagle" last summer when the Friends skimmed their way over the highways to Stratford-on-Avon in Connecticut you simply must know how great it was!

The trip to Tanglewood promises to be as great this year, but, in order to be part of the happy throng quick action is necessary. Hope you will be among the lucky ones!

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 27 1972 New England Newsclip

YMCA Plans Fishing, Tanglewood Trips

AGAWAM — The Agawam YMCA Outdoor Center will sponsor several special events next month, according to organizers.

On Tuesday, there will be a trip to Tanglewood in Lenox. The performance, which is at 8:30 p. m., will be a special Boston Pops concert with Arthur Fiedler conducting. The cost will cover both admission to the concert and transportation between Agawam and Lenox.

Fishing enthusiasts are invited to participate in a salt water fishing trip on Saturday, Aug. 26. The cost of the tripwill include boat, fee, bait and tackle and transportation.

Two tennis tournaments will be held. On Sunday, Aug. 6, there will be a mixed couples tournament at 3 p. m. and a men's singles tournament will run from Aug. 18-20. There will be a small registration fee for both events and trophies will be awarded to the winners.

For further information, persons should inquire at the Agawam YMCA.

GAZETTE
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 97,539

JUL 14 1972 New England Newsclip

Kaleidoscope

By DAVID D. OSWELL

A SHORT but potentially fine season of entertainment has been announced by the Berkshire Theater Festival in Stockbridge. Only three plays are scheduled, two of them premieres of new plays.

"The Effect of Gamma Rays on Man in the Moon Marigolds," the award winning drama which was tremendously successful in New York and Boston, opens Tuesday. It stars June Havoc, who will also direct. It runs through July 29.

The season's first new play, "Clark and Myrna," will star Vivian Vance and George Irving. It was written by Elliot Baker and will run from Aug. 1 to Aug. 12.

Mary Mitchell's new play, "Love Child," opens Aug. 15 and, with a cast not yet announced, will run through Aug. 26.

TANGLEWOOD is the destination of an Aug. 1 trip sponsored by the Office of Youth Affairs in Holden.

That evening's concert will be given by the Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler conducting.

Ticket prices are from $3.50 to $8.50 for box seats. They're available from the Youth Affairs office and must be purchased by July 24. Only checks or money orders can be accepted and they must be payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc.

The bus is scheduled to leave the Holden Town Hall at 5:30 p.m. and return by 1:30 a.m.

SUN
HUDSON, MASS.
D. 3,050

ENTERPRISE
MARLBORO, MASS.
D. 5,619

JUL 7 1972 New England Newsclip

Reservations for Tanglewood Concert Are Still Available

MARLBORO — A few reservations for Sunday's trip to the 1972 Tanglewood Berkshire Festival, sponsored by the Friends of the Marlboro Public Library, are still available.

Reservations may be made at the library or by calling Mrs. Toni Paternoster, 481-1390, or Ray Johnson, 485-0290.

Sunday's concert will include Haydn's Symphony No. 47; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3; and Ravel's "Ma Mere l'Oye."

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Garrick Ohlsson will be the piano soloist.

CONNECTICUT JEWISH LEDGER
HARTFORD, CONN.
W. 23,882

AUG 10 1972 New England Newsclip

N.H. Center Slates Trip to Tanglewood

NEW HAVEN — The New Haven Jewish Community Center, 1156 Chapel Street, will sponsor its second trip of the season to the Tanglewood Concerts Sunday. The concert will feature Colin Davis as conductor in a program of music by Beethoven and Berlioz. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will also perform.

Seats are available to all Center members. Non-members may join the trip through special arrangements. A coach bus will leave the Center at 10:15 a.m. in time for a picnic lunch and visit of the Tanglewood grounds.

For reservations, call the Jewish Center, 865-5181.

HERALD
NEW BRITAIN, CONN.
D. 33,737

JUN 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Art Museum schedules bus trips

The New Britain Museum of American Art has announced two bus trips scheduled for July 12, and Aug. 1.

The first trip will take the group 'down to the sea' to "Discover the Charms of Long Island." The itinerary will includes a ferry ride across Long Island Sound from New London to Orient Point, a leisurely bus ride to Setauket where they will visit the Delano Studios, followed by luncheon at the Three Village Inn opposite the Village Green in Stony Brook. After luncheon the group will continue to the western end of Long Island to Old Westbury Gardens and a 30-room Georgian mansion containing paintings by famous artists and 18th century furniture. The bus will leave the museum at 8:15 a.m. Reservations close July 8.

The August trip will take the group up the hills to "The Boston Pops at Tanglewood." Included will be a visit to Naumkeag Gardens, the former estate of Joseph Choate, ambassador to England, a steak or roast dinner at the Red Lion Inn and an evening with Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops Orchestra at Tanglewood. The bus will leave the museum at 12:30 p.m. Reservations close July 29.

Mrs. Lois Blomstrann, assistant to the director at the museum, is in charge of reservations. Further information can be had by contacting the museum.

"Friends" Exhibit

The exhibition at the museum, containing the paintings by its "Friends," will remain open to the public for viewing next week, closing Friday. Paintings can be reclaimed Friday between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

PRESS
MIDDLETOWN, CONN.
D. 19,775

AUG 2 1972 New England Newsclip

Summer Students Take Field Trips To Area Centers

Approximately 70 students enrolled in the Middlesex Community College Summer Session in Middletown participated last week in field trips to the American Shakespeare Festival Theater in Stratford, Connecticut and to Tanglewood, the Berkshire Festival Concert in Lenox, Massachusetts, today announced Marvin Hagel, Director of Student Activities at Middlesex.

At Stratford, 40 students saw a production of George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" on Tuesday, July 25; at Tanglewood, 30 students saw the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eugene Ormandy, perform a program of Beethoven and Strauss on Saturday, July 29.

The field trips were largely subsidized by MvCC's Student Activity Fund, said Hagel. "The trip to Stratford cost students only $1.00; the trip to Tanglewood, only $5," he said.

"Summer school is a rewarding but tough experience for all of us, and we were happy to provide these enjoyable and enriching extra-curricular opportunities for our students before they begin preparations for final exams," said Hagel. The MxCC Summer Session ends this week.

HERALD NEWS
FALL RIVER, MASS.
D. 41,749

AUG 15 1972 New England Newsclip

Choristers Plan Bus Tour to Tanglewood

The fourth annual Tanglewood Music Festival bus tour, sponsored by the Cathedral Choristers of Fall River, will be held Sunday.

Programmed for Sunday afternoon's performance is Gustave Mahler's Eighth Symphony, under the direction of Seiji Ozawa. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will perform under the baton of the Japanese maestro. The program marks the end of the 1972 season at the summer home of the orchestra.

The bus will leave from St. Mary's School at 8:30 a.m. A stop at Stockbridge has been planned to allow time for touring the village town. After the concert a sitdown smorgasbord will be served at a restaurant. Reservations may be made by contacting Rev. William G. Campbell at the cathedral rectory.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 23 1972 New England Newsclip

Benefit For Alumnae Scholar Plan

Western Mass Alumnae Club sponsoring "Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood" night

The five Mount Holyoke Alumnae Clubs of Western Massachusetts, the alumnae clubs of Berkshire County, Franklin County, Hampshire County, Greater Holyoke and Springfield are planning a "Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood" night to benefit the new Alumnae Scholar Plan.

Invitations for the Tanglewood concert on Friday evening, July 14 have been sent to Mount Holyoke alumnae, parents and friends throughout the New England and Middle Atlantic States. Mount Holyoke College President David B. Truman and Mrs. Truman, honorary chairmen, will host a champagne reception at 8 p.m. following a 7 p.m. prelude concert by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin guest soloist.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present the main concert of the evening. William Steinberg will conduct the orchestra in Beethoven's Symphony No. 6 in F, op. 68, "Pastoral," and Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 in C minor, op. 67.

Mrs. Inez Williams Hinchcliff of Lenox, who is in charge of reservations, said, "We are really pleased by the initial response to our mailing. Over 200 tickets have been sold to date and reservations have come in from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and even Ohio. We hope that all will plan to come early for the prelude concert and the champagne reception so that they can meet alumnae from different areas before the concert."

The committee planning the event consists of alumnae from the different clubs. Mrs. Carolyn Czaja Topor of Springfield is chairman and serving with her on the committee are: Mrs. Gladys Allen Brigham of Pittsfield; Mrs. Hinchcliff, Mrs. Janice Kubic Lachowetz of Easthampton; Mrs. Mary Higley Mills of South Hadley; Mrs. Chrystal Skinner Montgomery of East Northfield; and Mrs. Margaret Farman Woods of Holyoke.

Checks may be made payable to "Mount Hoyloke at Tanglewood" and tickets are available in several categories: Benefactor, $25. each; patron, $18. each; Sponsor, $12.50 each; Friend, $10. each; and Lawn Tickets, $5. each. Tickets purchased at the gate the night of the performance WILL NOT benefit Mount Holyoke. Reservations close July 1 and may be made by writing to Mrs. Harris Hinchcliff, 13 Cliffwood St., Lenox, Mass., 11240.

Buses to Tanglewood will be leaving from various centers and arrangements for transportation may be made by contacting the committee member in your area, or the club president.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

JUN 30 1972 New England Newsclip

July 14 College Benefit Set At Tanglewood

"Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood," an evening of music and an opportunity for alumnae and friends of Mount Holyoke College to support the new Alumnae Scholar Plan, takes place July 14 at the Berkshire summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Alumnae Scholar Plan was inaugurated this year to offer Mount Holyoke College alumnae clubs an opportunity to focus their fund raising effort in support of the financial aid program of the college.

Western Massachusetts' five alumnae clubs decided that with Tanglewood as the drawing card they would arrange a benefit in support of the new plan. Mount Holyoke alumnae, parents and friends throughout the New England and Middle Atlantic states have been invited.

Over 200 Sold

Over 200 tickets have been sold to date with reservations still coming in. Deadline is July 1 for reserving a place, which may be done by writing reservations chairman Mrs. Harris Hinchcliff, 13 Cliffwood St., Lenox.

Besides Mrs. Hinchcliffe, the events committee includes College Persident and Mrs. David B. Truman as honorary chairmen, Mrs. Caraolyn Czaja Topor of Springfield as chairman, assisted by Mrs. Margaret Farman Woods of Holyoke, Mrs. Mary Higley Mills of South Hadley and Mrs. Janice Kubic Lachowetz of Easthampton.

Also, Mrs. Gladys Allen Brigham of Pittsfield and Mrs. Chrystal Skinner Montgomery of East Northfield.

Both the prelude concert at 7 p. m. and the 9 p. m. main concert, following a champagne recention hosted by the Trumans, will feature Beethoven music. William Steinberg will conduct.

Buses to Tanglewood will leave various centers for the event. Arrangements for transportation may be made by contacting the area committee member.

TANGLEWOOD BENEFIT — Looking over the "Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood" program printed for a July 14 event planned by the five Western Mass. Mount Holyoke College alumnae clubs for the benefit of the college's alumnae scholar plan, from left, Mrs. David B. Truman, wife of Mount Holyoke's president; Mrs. Joseph M. Topor of Springfield, chairman of the event committee, and Mrs. Gill Woods of Longfellow Dr., Holyoke, event committee member.

Tanglewood Event To Benefit Mount Holyoke

SOUTH HADLEY — Tanglewood is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the summer mecca of music lovers as far south as New Haven, New York, New Jersey, as far east as Boston and the Cape, and as far north as Vermont and New Hampshire.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200

JUN 26 1972 New England Newsclip

The five Mount Holyoke College Alumnae clubs of western Massachusetts, the alumnae clubs of Berkshire County, Franklin County, Hampshire County, Greater Holyoke and Springfield, have decided that with Tanglewood the drawing card that it is, there was every reason in the world to mix the music of Beethoven, the charm of the Berkshire setting with an opportunity for alumnae and friends of Mount Holyoke to support the new Alumnae Scholar Plan. And so a benefit was arranged.

The Alumnae Scholar Plan, inaugurated this year, offers Mount Holyoke College Alumnae Clubs an opportunity to focus their fund raising effort in support of the Financial Aid program of the college. The plan has given new impetus and excitement to club fund raising.

Invitations Sent

Invitations for the Tanglewood concert have been sent to Mount Holyoke alumnae, parents and friends throughout the New England and Middle Atlantic states, and they will gather at Tanglewood on Friday evening, July 14, for a night of champagne, wandering minstrels and a concert by the Boston Symphony orchestra. William Steinberg will conduct the orchestra in Beethoven's Symphony No. 6 in F, op. 68, "Pastoral," and Beethoven's Symphony No. 5, in C minor, op. 67.

Mount Holyoke College President David B. Truman and Mrs. Truman will host a champagne reception at 8 p.m. following a 7 p.m. prelude concert by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, Peter Serkin, guest soloist.

"The idea of a Tanglewood event, jointly sponsored by the five clubs, seemed a natural," said Carolyn Czaja Topor, of Springfield, chairman of the Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood evening. "We felt that Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony and the time of the year were an unbeatable combination."

Mrs. Inez Williams Hinchcliff, of Lenox, who is in charge of reservations, said, "We are really pleased by the initial response to our mailing. Over 200 tickets have been sold to date, and reservations have come in from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and even Ohio! We hope that all will plan to come early for the prelude concert and the champagne reception so that they can meet alumnae from different areas before the concert."

The committee planning the event consists of alumnae from the different clubs. President and Mrs. Truman are honorary chairmen, Mrs. Topor is chairman, and serving with her on the committee are Mrs. Gladys Allen Brigham of Pittsfield, Mrs. Hinchcliff, Mrs. Janice Kubic Lachowetz of Easthampton, Mrs. Mary Higley Mills of South Hadley, Mrs. Chrystal Skinner Montgomery of East Northfield, and Mrs. Margaret Farman Woods of Holyoke.

Checks Payable

Checks may be made payable to Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood. Tickets purchased at the gate the night of the performance will not benefit Mount Holyoke. Reservations close July 1, 1972, and may be made by writing to Mrs. Harris Hinchcliff, 13 Cliffwood Street, Lenox, Mass. 11240.

Buses to Tanglewood will be leaving from various centers and arrangements for transportation may be made by contacting the committee member in your area or the club president.

TRANSCRIPT TELEGRAM
HOLYOKE, MASS.
D. 30,000

MAY 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Party For Mount Holyoke Western Mass. Club

The Mount Holyoke College Clubs of Western Massachusetts are sponsoring a Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood party July 14.

The concert that evening to be conducted by William Steinberg of the Boston Symphony will feature two Beethoven symphonies, No. 5 and No. 6.

There will be a prelude concert given by the chamber players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Peter Serkin as guest soloist.

President David B. Truman of Mount Holyoke and Mrs. Truman will host a champagne reception between the two concerts with wandering minstrels playing.

Concert At Tanglewood

The Mount Holyoke Clubs of Western Massachusetts invite public support of "Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood", on July 14, at the famed outdoor bowl in Lenox.

A chartered bus will leave a central point in Greenfield late in the afternoon. Reservations and further information may be obtained from Mrs. William B. Hayes, 26 Grinnell St.

A Beethoven concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be featured in the program for the benefit of the college's alumnae scholarships and to provide other financial aid for students.

The Boston Symphony Chamber Players, with Peter Serkin as guest soloist, will present a prelude concert at 7 p. m. From 8 to 9 there will be a champagne reception with wandering minstrels.

The main concert will include Beethoven's Fifth and Sixth Symphonies.

The deadline for making bus-reservations is July 7. For concert tickets, Mrs. Harris Hinchcliff, 13 Cliffwood St., Lenox should be contacted. Ticket deadline is July 1.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUN 15 1972 New England Newsclip

Mt. Holyoke Club Schedules Benefit At Tanglewood

The Mount Holyoke clubs of western Massachusetts have invited nearby alumnae of the college to share in a Mount Holyoke at Tanglewood program on the evening of July 14. Proceeds will be used for financial aid for students.

The event will include a 7 p.m. prelude concert of Beethoven music by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players and a champagne reception complete with wandering minstrels at 8 o'clock.

The Boston Symphony concert for the evening, starting at 9 p.m., will feature Beethoven's fifth and sixth symphonies, conducted by William Steinberg.

Reservations must be made before July 1. Tickets sold at the gate will not benefit the Mount Holyoke scholarship fund. Anyone wishing further information may get in touch with Mrs. Harris Hinchcliff, 13 Cliffwood Street, Lenox, Mass. 11240 (tel. 413-637-1661).

RECORDER GAZETTE
GREENFIELD, MASS.
D. 14,698

JUN 19 1972 New England Newsclip

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 2 1972

Benefit Set By Alumnae

Alumnae and friends of Mount Holyoke College will gather July 14 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for an evening of music to benefit the college's Alumnae Scholar Plan.

Sponsored by alumnae groups in western Massachusetts, the evening will begin at 7 p.m. with music by Beethoven featuring Peter Serkin, of the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra guest soloist. Dr. David B. Truman, president of Mount Holyoke, and Mrs. Truman will hold at a champagne reception at 8 p.m. The main concert program at 9 p.m. will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by William Steinberg.

For further information and tickets contact Mrs. Carol Orvis, Rensselaer, Mrs. Janet Butlin, Delmar, or Mrs. Harris Hinchcliff, Lenox, Mass.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUN 27 1972

"MOUNT HOLYOKE at Tanglewood" is the name of a gala fund-raising event being sponsored by Mount Holyoke College alumnae groups in the Western Massachussetts area.

The event, which will take place at 7 p.m., Friday, July 14, in Lenox, Mass., will help provide scholarship funds for students in different regions of the United States, under the Alumnae Scholar Plan.

Residents of the Metroland area wishing further information about the evening of music and champagne, can contact Carol Orvis of Rensselaer, president of Mount Holyoke alumnae of the Albany area, or Janet Butlin, vice president.

62

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN

Concertmaster Silverstein Speaker at Walks Series

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be featured speaker at the second in the series of Tanglewood Walks and Talks, Thursday, at noon in the Tent.

Silverstein, in addition to being concertmaster is the orchestra's assistant conductor. Speaking on "What difference does a conductor make?", Silverstein, through the use of audience participation, will demonstrate and talk about the role of the orchestra conductor and his overall importance and responsibility.

Following the talk, a member of the staff of the Boston Symphony will give a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds.

The series of four Tanglewood Walks and Talks lectures are free to members of the Tanglewood Friends, and $1 for guests and nonmembers. Friends and guests may bring their picnic lunches to the Tanglewood Tent at noon. Hot and cold beverages will be provided.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 19 1972

New England Newscli

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUL 21 1972

New England Newsclip

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN

Lecture Set On Importance Of Conductor

LENOX — Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will speak at the second in the series of Tanglewood walks and talks, today at noon in the tent.

Silverstein, in addition to being concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, is the orchestra's assistant conductor.

Speaking on "What difference does a conductor make," Silverstein, through the use of audience participation, will demonstrate and talk about the role of the orchestra conductor and his overall importance and responsibility.

Following the talk, a member of the staff of the Boston Symphony will give a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds.

Tanglewood bargain day

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

For less than the $3 it costs to sit on the grass at Tanglewood during a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, music-lovers can observe conductors like Leonard Bernstein and Colin Davis, and have a choice of any seat in the house.

Every Saturday morning during July and August, the BSO holds open rehearsal at Tanglewood. Most people have heard about these rehearsals, but not nearly so many have attended. Since we attend somewhat regularly, we are willing to give our impressions and to pass along some tips to anyone who may be thinking of attending.

Our advice is to plan to arrive at 9 in the morning when the doors open and rehearsal tickets go on sale. The actual rehearsals don't begin until 10:30, but by arriving early you'll have a perfect choice of seats. Leave something on the seat you choose to reserve it and stroll the Tanglewood grounds. This charming estate contains 210 acres and overlooks Lake Mahkeenac. It's idyllic in the mornings when the people are sparse and before the dew has disappeared.

It can be cool at Tanglewood in the morning, particularly after you're seated in the Shed. We always bring sweaters regardless of how pleasant the day seems when we start out. In addition, we suggest bringing along a thermos of coffee, and, if arriving early, something to read. If arriving early is not to your liking, don't worry about not being able to get a seat. There are always plenty of seats left at 10:30.

Admission to the regular Tanglewood concerts is somewhat expensive with the better seats ranging from $6 to $8 each. Admission to the lawn during regular concerts is $3 per person. At rehearsals, however, there are no reserved seats. Any seat costs only $2.50.

No publications of the Tanglewood concert schedule ever mention which works will be played at these Saturday morning rehearsals. We feel this is one reason rehearsals are not more popular. People are reluctant to take their chances concerning the works they will be hearing. Here's the secret: On Saturday morning, the orchestra nearly always rehearses the Sunday afternoon concert. Therefore, by checking the Tanglewood schedule for the Sunday afternoon concert, you'll know which musical works and conductor to expect on Saturday morning.

During the actual rehearsal, the conductor occasionally stops the orchestra, gives an instruction and has a section of the score repeated. Although this interrupts the continuity of the music, it happens infrequently and is one of the most interesting aspects of the rehearsals, especially if you are familiar with the work or if you sit close enough to hear the conductor's instructions.

As you would expect, the musicians are dressed informally at rehearsals. This informality can be one of the best features of Saturday morning at Tanglewood. Once you've watched Seiji Ozawa in bell bottoms conduct Tchaikovsky's Sixth symphony (as we did last summer), you won't forget it for a long time.

The open rehearsals usually don't end until after 1 in the afternoon. This brings us to our final tip: Bring a lunch.

JOAN & FRED WINDOVER
Sloan Road
Williamstown

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 18 1972

New England Newsclip

Concertmaster to lecture in Tanglewood walks-talks

Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be featured speaker at the second in the series of Tanglewood Walks and Talks this Thursday, July 20 at noon in the Tanglewood tent. Mr. Silverstein, in addition to being concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, is the Orchestra's assistant conductor.

Speaking on "What difference does a conductor make?", Mr. Silverstein will demonstrate and talk about the role of the orchestra conductor and his overall importance and responsibility. The audience will be free to ask questions. Following the talk, a member of the staff of the Boston Symphony will give a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds.

The series of four Tanglewood Walks and Talks lectures are free to members of the Tanglewood Friends. A small fee is charged for guests and nonmembers. Friends and guests may bring their picnic lunches to the Tanglewood Tent at noon. Hot and cold beverages will be provided.

Joseph Silverstein

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 1 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood 3rd talk series features musician-author

Musician and author Harry Ellis Dickson, who first performed with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the opening concert of the Tanglewood Music Shed in 1938, will be guest speaker at the third Tanglewood Walks and Talks on Thursday at 12:30 p.m. in the Tent.

Orchestra changes

Mr. Dickson's talk, "The BSO —A Look Backward and Forward," will discuss the changes that have taken place in the orchestra during the 33 years that he has been affiliated with it. He will talk about the musical and artistic innovations as well as physical changes that have occurred.

The musician will also speak about the early days of both the late Serge Koussevitzky, BSO conductor and founder of Tanglewood, and the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer academy for the advanced study of music.

Mr. Dickson is a member of the first violin section of the BSO. He is assistant conductor of the Boston Pops and Esplanade Orchestras and music director of the youth concerts at Symphony Hall. He is author of "Gentlemen, More Dolce Please," a book about the BSO and his experiences with founder Koussevitzky.

The Walks and Talks are free to Tanglewood Friends, and are open to the public at a small fee. Everyone is invited to bring a picnic lunch, for which hot and cold beverages will be provided.

Harry E. Dickson

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

AUG 2 1972

New England Newsclip

Dickson To Speak Of B.S.O.

LENOX — Harry Ellis Dickson, member of the first violin section of the Boston Symphony orchestra, assistant conductor of the Boston Pops and Esplanade Orchestras, music director of youth concerts at Symphony Hall and author of the book "Gentlemen, More Dolce Please!" will be the speaker at the third program of the Tanglewood Walks and Talks series. It is tomorrow at 12.30 p.m. in the Tent.

The title of Dickson's talk, "The B.S.O.—A Look Backward and Forward", will show the changes that have taken place in the Orchestra physically, musically and artistically during the past 33 years.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

AUG 16 1972

New England Newsclip

Thomas talks speaker Thursday

Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and principal guest conductor of the orchestra for the 1972-73 season, will be the featured speaker Thursday at 12:30 at the last of the series of Tanglewood walks and talks.

The affair will be held in the Tanglewood tent. Admission is free to Friends with a small fee charged to nonmembers.

Interested persons are invited to bring their lunches. Hot and cold beverages will be provided.

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003
JUN 27 1972

Soprano To Perform At Tanglewood Opening

LENOX, Mass. — Soprano Phyllis Curtin of the Metropolitan Opera will perform twice during the opening weekend of the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood.

On Friday at 9 p.m. she will sing in an all-Bach concert. Seji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program includes "Brandenburg Concerto—Numbers Two and Five;" "Suite No. Two" and "Cantata No. 191 ("Gloria in excelsis Deo")."

On Sunday at 2 p.m., Miss Curtin will sing in Haydn's "The Seasons," directed by John Oliver and conducted by Ozawa.

On Saturday at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; that night at 8:30 o'clock the orchestra, conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, will perform Bach's "Suite No. Three," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. One" and Mozart's "Symphony No. 39." Claude Frank is guest pianist.

REDDING PILOT
RIDGEFIELD, CONN.
W. 1,227
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Berkshire Music Festival Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists, June 30—Aug. 20. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Information from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857
JUL 1 1972
New England Newsclip

Weekend at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Mountains that Hawthorne once roamed are now filled with the sounds of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in residence at their annual summer home, Tanglewood.

Concerts began last night, and will continue through Aug. 20 with performances of the BSO on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

Each Thursday, space permitting, The Times will run a list of that weekend's concerts. A free brochure listing ticket information and more complete programs is available by writing the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

TONIGHT — 8:30 p.m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting; Bach Suite No. 3, Beethoven piano concerto No. 1, Claude Frank soloist, and Mozart's Sym. No. 39.

SUNDAY — 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting; Haydn's "The Seasons," featuring Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale and the Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 28 1972

For The Record

Theater Art Music

At The Theater

Colonie Coliseum, "The Rothchilds," with Theodore Bikel and Geraldine Brooks, through Sunday. Starting Thursday, "Company," with George Maharis and Vivian Blaine.

Williamstown Theater, Williamstown, Mass. "Mary Stuart," with Carol Teitel and Patricia Elliot, directed by Nikos Psacharopoulos. The Friedrich Schiller play will open Thursday.

Juilliard Acting Co. Spa Summer Theater, Saratoga Springs, "School for Scandal," Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Mac-Haydn Theater, Chatham, "Fiddler on the Roof," Friday through July 9.

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Jacob's Pillow, Becket, Mass. Through Saturday, Dayton Ballet Company, directed by Josephine Schwarz; Morse Donaldson Dance Company.

Albany Institute of History and Art, 125 Washington Ave., Albany. Annual Regional Exhibition by Artists of the Mohawk-Hudson Region, through July 21.

University Gallery at SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany. A special exhibition in connection with the assembly of the International Association of Theater for Children and Youth —puppets, posters, programs, costumes, masks. Arranged primarily for production people.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUN 28 1972

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood's First Weekend

Friday, June 30 7:00 p. m.

Tanglewood's first weekend, Friday, June 30, 7:00 p. m.

Weekend Prelude, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director: Bach: 3 motets.

9:00 p. m. Seiji Ozawa, conductor, all-Bach concert; Brandenburg concerto No. 2; Brandenburg concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in excelsis Deo" with chorus and soloists.

Saturday, July 1, 10:30 a. m.: Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsal.

8:30 p. m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor; Claude Frank pianist; Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1; Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

Sunday, July 2, 2:00 p. m.: Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director; Haydn: The Seasons.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WEST
D. 966,293 SUN. 1,246,870
JUN 25 1972

MASSACHUSETTS: Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 1-Aug. 31. At Tanglewood. Eastern National Morgan Horse Show, Northampton, July 26-30.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday June 30 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL CHORUS
JOHN OLIVER director

MARTIN HOHERMAN cello
HENRY PORTNOI double bass
HARRY KELTON organ

MOTETS BY BACH

Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden S. 230
(O praise the Lord, all ye nations)

Komm, Jesu, komm S. 229
(Come, Jesu, come)

Jesu, meine Freude S. 227
(Jesu, my joy)

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUN 25 1972
New England Newsclip

Alix Jeffry

SEIJI OZAWA leads the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program Friday to open the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656
JUN 26 1972

BOSTON BOW. Metropolitan Opera soprano Phyllis Curtain will join the Boston Symphony in launching its summer season Friday at Tanglewood, outside Lenox, Mass. The Berkshire Festival opens that evening under the baton of Seiji Ozawa. Two days later, she returns as soloist in Haydn's "The Seasons" with the orchestra.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 3 1972
New England Newsclip

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Despite threatening skies, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was greeted by a record turnout as it opened the 35th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood during the weekend.

A total of 23,102 passed through the gates Friday, Saturday and Sunday as the annual summer music festival got underway.

Massachusetts, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 with an All-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Before the close of the season on August 20, listeners will be treated to 3 Mahler symphonies, all 4 Brahms symphonies, 4 Beethoven symphonies, Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum, Haydn's The Seasons and other works, and to a host of noted soloists.

MUSIC JOURNAL
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 16,719
JUN 1972

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003
JUN 27 1972

Soprano To Perform At Tanglewood Opening

LENOX, Mass. — Soprano Phyllis Curtin of the Metropolitan Opera will perform twice during the opening weekend of the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood.

On Friday at 9 p.m. she will sing in an all-Bach concert. Seji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program includes "Brandenburg Concerto—Numbers Two and Five;" "Suite No. Two" and "Cantata No. 191 ("Gloria in excelsis Deo")."

On Sunday at 2 p.m., Miss Curtin will sing in Haydn's "The Seasons," directed by John Oliver and conducted by Ozawa.

On Saturday at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; that night at 8:30 o'clock the orchestra, conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, will perform Bach's "Suite No. Three," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. One" and Mozart's "Symphony No. 39." Claude Frank is guest pianist.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood's First Weekend

Friday, June 30 7:00 p. m. Tanglewood's first weekend, Friday, June 30, 7:00 p. m.

Weekend Prelude. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. Bach: 3 motets.

9:00 p. m. Seiji Ozawa, conductor, all-Bach concert; Brandenburg concerto No. 2; Brandenburg concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in excelsis Deo" with chorus and soloists.

Saturday, July 1, 10:30 a. m.: Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsal.

8:30 p. m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor; Claude Frank pianist; Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1; Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

Sunday, July 2, 2:00 p. m.: Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director; Haydn: The Seasons.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WEST
D. 966,293 SUN. 1,246,870
JUN 25 1972

MASSACHUSETTS: Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 1-Aug. 31. At Tanglewood. Eastern National Morgan Horse Show, Northampton, July 26-30.

REDDING PILOT
RIDGEFIELD, CONN.
W. 1,227
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Berkshire Music Festival Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists, June 30—Aug. 20. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Information from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N.Y.
D. 8,245
JUN 28 1972

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUN 25 1972
New England Newsclip

Alix Jeffry

SEIJI OZAWA leads the Boston Symphony in an all-Bach program Friday to open the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857
JUL 1 1972
New England Newsclip

Weekend at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Mountains that Hawthorne once roamed are now filled with the sounds of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in residence at their annual summer home, Tanglewood.

Concerts began last night, and will continue through Aug. 20 with performances of the BSO on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

Each Thursday, space permitting, The Times will run a list of that weekend's concerts. A free brochure listing ticket information and more complete programs is available by writing the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

TONIGHT — 8:30 p.m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting: Bach Suite No. 3, Beethoven piano concerto No. 1, Claude Frank soloist, and Mozart's Sym. No. 39.

SUNDAY — 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting: Haydn's "The Seasons," featuring Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale and the Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday June 30 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL CHORUS
JOHN OLIVER director

MARTIN HOHERMAN cello
HENRY PORTNOI double bass
HARRY KELTON organ

MOTETS BY BACH

Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden S. 230
(O praise the Lord, all ye nations)

Komm, Jesu, komm S. 229
(Come, Jesu, come)

Jesu, meine Freude S. 227
(Jesu, my joy)

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

19

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656
JUN 26 1972

BOSTON BOW. Metropolitan Opera soprano Phyllis Curtain will join the Boston Symphony in launching its summer season Friday at Tanglewood, outside Lenox, Mass. The Berkshire Festival opens that evening under the baton of Seiji Ozawa. Two days later, she returns as soloist in Haydn's "The Seasons" with the orchestra.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 3 1972
New England Newsclip

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Despite threatening skies, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was greeted by a record turnout as it opened the 35th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood during the weekend.

A total of 23,102 passed through the gates Friday, Saturday and Sunday as the annual summer music festival got underway.

Massachusetts, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 with an All-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Before the close of the season on August 20, listeners will be treated to 3 Mahler symphonies, all 4 Brahms symphonies, 4 Beethoven symphonies, Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum, Haydn's The Seasons and other works, and to a host of noted soloists.

MUSIC JOURNAL
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 16,719
JUN 1972

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 28 1972

For The Record

Theater Art Music

At The Theater

Colonie Coliseum, "The Rothchilds," with Theodore Bikel and Geraldine Brooks, through Sunday. Starting Thursday, "Company," with George Maharis and Vivian Blaine.

Williamstown Theater, Williamstown, Mass. "Mary Stuart," with Carol Teitel and Patricia Elliot, directed by Nikos Psacharopoulos. The Friedrich Schiller play will open Thursday.

Juilliard Acting Co. Spa Summer Theater, Saratoga Springs, "School for Scandal," Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Mac-Haydn Theater, Chatham, "Fiddler on the Roof," Friday through July 9.

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Jacob's Pillow, Becket, Mass. Through Saturday, Dayton Ballet Company, directed by Josephine Schwarz; Morse Donaldson Dance Company.

Albany Institute of History and Art, 125 Washington Ave., Albany. Annual Regional Exhibition by Artists of the Mohawk-Hudson Region, through July 21.

University Gallery at SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany. A special exihibtion in connection with the assembly of the International Association of Theater for Children and Youth—puppets, posters, programs, costumes, masks. Arranged primarily for production people.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003
JUN 27 1972

Soprano To Perform At Tanglewood Opening

LENOX, Mass. — Soprano Phyllis Curtin of the Metropolitan Opera will perform twice during the opening weekend of the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood.

On Friday at 9 p.m. she will sing in an all-Bach concert. Seji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program includes "Brandenburg Concerto — Numbers Two and Five;" "Suite No. Two" and "Cantata No. 191 ("Gloria in excelsis Deo")."

On Sunday at 2 p.m., Miss Curtin will sing in Haydn's "The Seasons," directed by John Oliver and conducted by Ozawa.

On Saturday at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; that night at 8:30 o'clock the orchestra, conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, will perform Bach's "Suite No. Three," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. One" and Mozart's "Symphony No. 39." Claude Frank is guest pianist.

REDDING PILOT
RIDGEFIELD, CONN.
W. 1,227
JUN 22 1972
New England Newsclip

Berkshire Music Festival Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists, June 30—Aug. 20. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Information from Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857
JUL 1 1972
New England Newsclip

Weekend at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Mountains that Hawthorne once roamed are now filled with the sounds of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in residence at their annual summer home, Tanglewood.

Concerts began last night, and will continue through Aug. 20 with performances of the BSO on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

Each Thursday, space permitting, The Times will run a list of that weekend's concerts. A free brochure listing ticket information and more complete programs is available by writing the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

TONIGHT — 8:30 p.m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting; Bach Suite No. 3, Beethoven piano concerto No. 1, Claude Frank soloist, and Mozart's Sym. No. 39.

SUNDAY — 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting; Haydn's "The Seasons," featuring Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale and the Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 28 1972

For The Record

Theater Art Music

At The Theater

Colonie Coliseum, "The Rothchilds," with Theodore Bikel and Geraldine Brooks, through Sunday. Starting Thursday, "Company," with George Maharis and Vivian Blaine.

Williamstown Theater, Williamstown, Mass. "Mary Stuart," with Carol Teitel and Patricia Elliot, directed by Nikos Psacharopoulos. The Friedrich Schiller play will open Thursday.

Juilliard Acting Co. Spa Summer Theater, Saratoga Springs, "School for Scandal," Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Mac-Haydn Theater, Chatham, "Fiddler on the Roof," Friday through July 9.

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Jacob's Pillow, Becket, Mass. Through Saturday, Dayton Ballet Company, directed by Josephine Schwarz; Morse Donaldson Dance Company.

Albany Institute of History and Art, 125 Washington Ave., Albany. Annual Regional Exhibition by Artists of the Mohawk-Hudson Region, through July 21.

University Gallery at SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany. A special exihibtion in connection with the assembly of the International Association of Theater for Children and Youth —puppets, posters, programs, costumes, masks. Arranged primarily for production people.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUN 28 1972

Music-Dan

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood's First Weekend

Friday, June 30 7:00 p. m.

Tanglewood's first weekend, Friday, June 30, 7:00 p. m.

Weekend Prelude, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. Bach: 3 motets.

9:00 p. m. Seiji Ozawa, conductor, all-Bach concert; Brandenburg concerto No. 2; Brandenburg concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in excelsis Deo" with chorus and soloists.

Saturday, July 1, 10:30 a. m.: Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsal.

8:30 p. m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor; Claude Frank pianist; Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1; Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

Sunday, July 2, 2:00 p. m.: Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director; Haydn: The Seasons.

THE TIME
TROY,
D. 42,1
JUN 30 197

Tanglewoo Opens Toni With Symph

Tanglewood Artistic Di Seiji Osawa will conduc Boston Symphony in an all program starting at 9 p.m day to open the 1972 seaso the Lenox, Mass. music cen

Included in this evening's p formance will be the Brande burg Concertos No. 2 and Suite No. 2 and Cantata No 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATIO I IN THE WEST
D. 966,293 SUN. 1,246,870
JUN 25 1972

MASSACHUSETTS: Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 1-Aug. 31. At Tanglewood. Eastern National Morgan Horse Show, Northampton, July 26-30.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festi
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Directo
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Frid

RIOT ANTHONY DWYER flute,
SILVERSTEIN violin

S. 1050

WYER flute, JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin, sichord

nor S. 1067

ge
s 1 & 2
naise – double nuett adinerie
DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER flute

ntata no. 191 'Gloria in excelsis Deo'
Chorus: Gloria in excelsis Deo
Duet: Gloria Patri
Chorus: Sicut erat in principio
PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano, SETH McCOY tenor
TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL CHORUS
John Oliver director

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The harpsichord continuo is played by ROBERT LEVIN

Robert Levin plays a harpsichord by CARL FUDGE

The organ continuo is played by BERJ ZAMKOCHIAN

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 26

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

21

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 3 1972
New England Newsclip

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Despite threatening skies, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was greeted by a record turnout as it opened the 35th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood during the weekend.

A total of 23,102 passed through the gates Friday, Saturday and Sunday as the annual summer music festival got underway.

MUSIC JOURNAL
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 16,719
JUN 1972

Massachusetts, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 with an All-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Before the close of the season on August 20, listeners will be treated to 3 Mahler symphonies, all 4 Brahms symphonies, 4 Beethoven symphonies, Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum, Haydn's The Seasons and other works, and to a host of noted soloists.

Deutsche Grammophon

Boston Symphony Orchestra

2530 160

2530 145

2707 054 (2 LP's)

2530 137

2530 048

2530 102

2530 078

2530 038

2530 103

Deutsche Grammophon Records, MusiCassettes and 8-Track Stereo Cartridges are distributed in the USA by Polydor Incorporated; in Canada by Polydor Records Canada Ltd.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday June 30 1972 at 9 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

SEIJI OZAWA conductor

BACH

Brandenburg concerto no. 2 in F S.1047
- Allegro
- Andante
- Allegro assai
- ARMANDO GHITALLA trumpet, DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER flute, RALPH GOMBERG oboe, JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin

Brandenburg concerto no. 5 in D S. 1050
- Allegro
- Affettuoso
- Allegro
- DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER flute, JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin, ROBERT LEVIN harpsichord

intermission

Suite no. 2 in B minor S. 1067
- Ouverture
- Rondeau
- Sarabande
- Bourées 1 & 2
- Polonaise – double
- Menuett
- Badinerie
- DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER flute

Cantata no. 191 'Gloria in excelsis Deo'
- Chorus: Gloria in excelsis Deo
- Duet: Gloria Patri
- Chorus: Sicut erat in principio
- PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano, SETH McCOY tenor
- TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL CHORUS
  - John Oliver director

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The harpsichord continuo is played by ROBERT LEVIN

Robert Levin plays a harpsichord by CARL FUDGE

The organ continuo is played by BERJ ZAMKOCHIAN

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 26

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood.

On Friday at 9 p.m. she will sing in an all-Bach concert. Seji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program includes "Brandenburg Concerto—Numbers Two and Five;" "Suite No. Two" and "Cantata No. 191 ("Gloria in excelsis Deo")."

On Sunday at 2 p.m., Miss Curtin will sing in Haydn's "The Seasons," directed by John Oliver and conducted by Ozawa.

On Saturday at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal czewski, will perform ... "Suite No. Three," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. One" and Mozart's "Symphony No. 39." Claude Frank is guest pianist.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUN 28 1972

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood's First Weekend

Friday, June 30 7:00 p. m.

Tanglewood's first weekend, Friday, June 30, 7:00 p. m.

Weekend Prelude, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. Bach: 3 motets.

9:00 p. m. Seiji Ozawa, conductor, all-Bach concert; Brandenburg concerto No. 2; Brandenburg concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in excelsis Deo" with chords and soloists.

Saturday, July 1, 10:30 a. m.: Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsal.

8:30 p. m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor; Claude Frank pianist; Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1; Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

Sunday, July 2, 2:00 p. m.: Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director; Haydn: The Seasons.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WEST
D. 966,293 SUN. 1,246,870
JUN 25 1972

MASSACHUSETTS: Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 1-Aug. 31. At Tanglewood. Eastern National Morgan Horse Show, Northampton, July 26-30.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Saturday July 1 1972 at 8.30

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

STANISLAW SKROWACZEWSKI conductor

BACH — Suite no. 3 in D S. 1068
Ouverture
Air
Gavottes 1 & 2
Bourée
Gigue

*BEETHOVEN — Piano concerto no. 1 in C op.15
Allegro
Largo
Rondo: allegro

CLAUDE FRANK

intermission

*MOZART — Symphony no. 39 in E flat K. 543
Adagio – allegro
Andante con moto
Menuetto – trio
Finale: allegro

Claude Frank plays the Steinway piano

The harpsichord continuo is played by ROBERT LEVIN

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 29

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & *RCA RECORDS

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Despite threatening skies, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was greeted by a record turnout as it opened the 35th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood during the weekend.

A total of 23,102 passed through the gates Friday, Saturday and Sunday as the annual summer music festival got underway.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Over closer to the Atlantic at Lenox, Massachusetts, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 with an All-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Before the close of the season on August 20, listeners will be treated to 3 Mahler symphonies, all 4 Brahms symphonies, 4 Beethoven symphonies, Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum, Haydn's The Seasons and other works, and to a host of noted soloists.

MUSIC JOURNAL
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 16,719
JUN 1972

S RECORD
N. Y.
,181
72

For The Record

Art Music

At The Theater

Colonie Coliseum, "The Rothchilds," with Theodore Bikel and Geraldine Brooks, through Sunday. Starting Thursday, "Company," with George Maharis and Vivian Blaine.

Williamstown Theater, Williamstown, Mass. "Mary Stuart," with Carol Teitel and Patricia Elliot, directed by Nikos Psacharopoulos. The Friedrich Schiller play will open Thursday.

Juilliard Acting Co. Spa Summer Theater, Saratoga Springs, "School for Scandal," Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Mac-Haydn Theater, Chatham, "Fiddler on the Roof," Friday through July 9.

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Jacob's Pillow, Becket, Mass. Through Saturday, Dayton Ballet Company, directed by Josephine Schwarz; Morse Donaldson Dance Company.

Albany Institute of History and Art, 125 Washington Ave., Albany. Annual Regional Exhibition by Artists of the Mohawk-Hudson Region, through July 21.

University Gallery at SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany. A special exihibtion in connection with the assembly of the International Association of Theater for Children and Youth —puppets, posters, programs, costumes, masks. Arranged primarily for production people.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

Attach these Tanglewoodian scenes to your sunglasses so you can keep tonight's setting when you're at home watching your phonograph reproduce the Tanglewood performances of these stars:

Seiji Ozawa, here June 30, July 2, 7, 9, 16 and August 18, 20; William Steinberg, July 14, 15; Peter Serkin, July 16; Eugene Ormandy, July 28, 29; Alexis Weissenberg, August 18; Misha Dichter, August 19.

RCA Records and Tapes

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday June 30 1972 at 9 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

SEIJI OZAWA conductor

BACH

Brandenburg concerto no. 2 in F S.1047
Allegro
Andante
Allegro assai

ARMANDO CHITALLA trumpet, DORIOT A
RALPH COMBERG oboe, JOSEPH SILVERST

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Sunday July 2 1972 at 2.30 pm

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

SEIJI OZAWA conductor

HAYDN

Die Jahreszeiten (The seasons)

Der Frühling (Spring)
Die Sommer (Summer)

intermission

Der Herbst (Autumn)
Der Winter (Winter)

PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano
SETH McCOY tenor
ROBERT HALE bass
TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL CHORUS
John Oliver director
ROBERT LEVIN harpsichord continuo

first performance at the Berkshire Festival

The program note for this afternoon's concert begins on page 31

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

the 1972 summer season at Tanglewood.

On Friday at 9 p.m. she will sing in an all-Bach concert. Seji Ozawa will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program includes "Brandenburg Concerto—Numbers Two and Five;" "Suite No. Two" and "Cantata No. 191 ("Gloria in excelsis Deo")."

On Sunday at 2 p.m., Miss Curtin will sing in Haydn's "The Seasons," directed by John Oliver and conducted by Ozawa.

On Saturday at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal "Suite No. Three," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. One" and Mozart's "Symphony No. 39." Claude Frank is guest pianist.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUN 28 1972

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000

JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood's First Weekend

Friday, June 30 7:00 p. m: Tanglewood's first weekend, Friday, June 30, 7:00 p. m.

Weekend Prelude, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Director. Bach: 3 motets.

9:00 p. m. Seiji Ozawa, conductor, all-Bach concert; Brandenburg concerto No. 2; Brandenburg concerto No. 5; Suite No. 2; Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in excelsis Deo" with chorus and soloists.

Saturday, July 1, 10:30 a. m.: Boston Symphony Orchestra Open Rehearsal.

8:30 p. m. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor; Claude Frank pianist; Bach: Suite No. 3; Beethoven: Piano concerto No. 1; Mozart: Symphony No. 39.

Sunday, July 2, 2:00 p. m.: Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director; Haydn: The Seasons.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

Los Angeles Times
LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WEST
D. 966,293 SUN. 1,246,870

JUN 25 1972

MASSACHUSETTS: Boston Symphony Orchestra Berkshire Festival, Lenox, July 1-Aug. 31. At Tanglewood. Eastern National Morgan Horse Show, Northampton, July 26-30.

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Despite threatening skies, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was greeted by a record turnout as it opened the 35th Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood during the weekend.

A total of 23,102 passed through the gates Friday, Saturday and Sunday as the annual summer music festival got underway.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200

JUL 3 1972

New England Newsclip

Over closer to the Atlantic at Lenox, Massachusetts, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, opens on June 30 with an All-Bach concert conducted by Music Director designate of the Symphony, Seiji Ozawa. Before the close of the season on August 20, listeners will be treated to 3 Mahler symphonies, all 4 Brahms symphonies, 4 Beethoven symphonies, Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum, Haydn's The Seasons and other works, and to a host of noted soloists.

MUSIC JOURNAL
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 16,719

JUN 1972

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUN 28 1972

For The Record

Theater Art Music

At The Theater

Colonie Coliseum, "The Rothchilds," with Theodore Bikel and Geraldine Brooks, through Sunday. Starting Thursday, "Company," with George Maharis and Vivian Blaine.

Williamstown Theater, Williamstown, Mass. "Mary Stuart," with Carol Teitel and Patricia Elliot, directed by Nikos Psacharopoulos. The Friedrich Schiller play will open Thursday.

Juilliard Acting Co. Spa Summer Theater, Saratoga Springs, "School for Scandal," Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Mac-Haydn Theater, Chatham, "Fiddler on the Roof," Friday through July 9.

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center. Today at 8:30 p.m., Billy Preston, Billy Joel and Dr. Hook. Thursday at 8:30 p.m., Humble Pie Show. Friday at 8:30 p.m., Don McLean Show. Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Melba Moore Show.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude with the Festival Chorus. 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Bach program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO Open Rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting Bach, Beethoven and Mozart; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Jacob's Pillow, Becket, Mass. Through Saturday, Dayton Ballet Company, directed by Josephine Schwarz; Morse Donaldson Dance Company.

Albany Institute of History and Art, 125 Washington Ave., Albany. Annual Regional Exhibition by Artists of the Mohawk-Hudson Region, through July 21.

University Gallery at SUNYA, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany. A special exihibtion in connection with the assembly of the International Association of Theater for Children and Youth—puppets, posters, programs, costumes, masks. Arranged primarily for production people.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

LET YOURSELF GO

A Medley of Events, Activities and Whimsy to Keep In Mind This Week

EDITED BY ANN SHANAHAN

—START THE SUMMER holidays with a treat. Take the kids to see the Mount Holyoke Summer Theatre's production of "Wind in the Willows," in the charming outdoor amphitheatre on the campus in South Hadley. The play will be performed Tuesday through Saturday this week at 10:30 each morning. Tickets, which are not expensive, are the same price for adults and children and are available at the door. So go see Mr. Badger, Mr. Toad, Ratty and Mole cavorting in this imaginative adaptation of the children's classic.

The season of adult plays in the tent-on-the-green at Mount Holyoke starts the following Tuesday evening with "you're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

—PLAN A VACATION. If you need some help, get a copy of "The Yankee Guide to the New England Countryside," (Yankee, Inc., $2.00. This is volume one, number one, of a kind of country store between covers, which its publishers (the same people who do Yankee Magazine and the Old Farmers Almanac) hope to continue and expand as seasons progress. The first issue, available at area book stores, contains a state by state calendar of New England events during the summer months and articles on such divers subjects as grist mills which still operate, working farms which offer down-to-earth vacations or ferry boats which still ply New England waterways. The ferry story is illustrated with a 1902 photo of the Hockanum Ferry as it lands on the Northampton shore. This attractive guide, packed with color pictures, drawing and maps, will give you ideas for motor trips, inns to stop at, stores to shop at and sights to see.

—BE SAFE AND sane about your holiday celebration. If you live in Easthampton, you can take advantage of a variety of weekend events planned for you by the July Fourth celebration Committee. The festivities will start Friday evening with the holiday smorgasboard and a ball at Pulaski Hall. (Reservations, which are limited, are being accepted through today by Mrs. Ferne Schranz and Mrs. Catherine Boucher.) Saturday's events will include movies at the Community Center in the morning and a field day in the afternoon. Also in the afternoon, there will be an art show in the Main Street park from 2 to 4, as well as an exhibit arranged by the Easthampton Historical Society at Memorial Hall during the same hours. A Sunday afternoon parade will assemble at 1:30 p.m. and march to Daley Field to be followed from 6 to 8 p.m. by a bike parade and contest, complete with prizes. At dusk the Jaycees are sponsoring the annual holiday fireworks display at Galbraith Field. Also planned for this fabulous fourth is a rock concert Monday evening and a block dance Tuesday evening.

—GET OUT YOUR baskets and go strawberry picking. The berries are ripe now and there are a number of area strawberry growers who will allow you to come into their field and load up at a very reasonable cost. Most don't permit children to pick because of the danger of trampling the berries.

Here is an elegant version of Strawberries Romanov for a rich and special dessert: Wash and hull one quart ripe strawberries. Put them in a bowl and sprinkle with sugar, if necessary. Add one cup freshly squeezed orange juice and 1 3 cup orange-flavored liquer. Let the berries stand for one hour. Transfer the berries to a chilled serving dish, draining off some of the liquid. Whip 1½ cups heavy cream and sweeten it with two tablespoons sugar. Spread the cream over the berries and decorate the dish with large unhulled strawberries.

—VISIT TANGLEWOOD. The concert season opens Friday with the weekend prelude at 7 p.m. and an all Bach program at 9 p.m. and closes August 20 after eight weekends filled with music. Saturday mornings the Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsals are open to the public, (tickets are available the morning of the rehearsal). Saturday evening concerts are at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30. You will enjoy picnicking on Tanglewood's lovely lawn before the performance and sitting either there or in the shed for the music. This weekend, in addition to the Bach program Friday, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 will be played Saturday evening and Haydn's "The Seasons," with Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale and the Tangelwood Festival Chorus is the program for Sunday afternoon.

If you can't get to the concerts in person, you can listen to them in stero on WFCR (88.5 FM). The station will broadcast all the Berkshire Festival concerts live this summer.

-STRIKE UP A correspondence. Kids looking for summer projects, especially if the sun is not going to shine, might be interested in writing to a pen pal. It's a good way to learn about other countries, other people, other customs, and it's always fun when the mailman has something for you. The International Friendship League in Boston has a list of 50,000 young people in foreign lands waiting to hear from young Americans. Requests from children in Japan and India are the most numerous, but 120 other countries are represented as well. When you write to the League include you name, age and address, any special interest you have and enclose a self-addressed envelope. The address is: Pen Pals, 40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass. 02108.

Another organization interested in introducing pen pals advertised briefly in the Gazette's classified section recently asking "pen friends in the U.S." to write the Pen Society (V. 63), Chorley, Lancs, England.

—GET SOME SPECIALIZE instruction. The Northampton Recreation Commission staff is sponsoring summer long clinics in golf, tennis and basketball for young people interested in learning or increasing a skill in these sports. The tennis clinicswill be held daily, two days a week at Look Park and three days at the Smith College courts. Children as young as six years old, who really want to learn how to play tennis, are encouraged to sign up for the clinic which will be taught by Bob Szlosek...The golf program will travel to each playground one day a week. Kids may bring a golf club of their own if they have one. Bob Parent will be giving instruction in all aspects of the game...Joe Mantegna, Hamp High basketball coach will be in charge of the basketball program, which will be conducted at all the playgrounds that have hoops for children in the mornings and for junior high and high school boys in the evenings. Sign-up and further information on all the clinics is at your nearest playground.

—TAKE A TRIP. For those who want to drive south, this is the week to visit the Elizabeth Park Rose Gardens in Hartford. We all need a bed of roses once in a while and these fabulous gardens are ablaze with a huge variety of colors in bed plantings and arches with paths, a shady summer house and benches. You can picnic on the lawn and the roses, which are reaching their peak now, provide a lush background for color photo buffs. Directions: take Route 91 south to Route 84 west, get off at the Asylum Avenuewest exit and take Asylum right into the park.

A trip north this weekend might include a stop at the Northeast Craft Fair at the Mt. Anthony Union High School in Bennington, Vermont. The work of some 400 American craftsmen will be featured and there will be demonstrations and items for sale. The fair will be open Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. There are a variety of ways to get to Bennington, depending on what you want to see. You can take the Mohawk Trail (Route 2) from Greenfield to Williamstown and then go north on Route 7; you can travel the Berkshire Trail (Route 9) from Northampton to Pittsfield and get on Route 7 there; or you can be more adventuresome and travel the back roads.

MR. TOAD (BRUCE STARIN) looks as though he is about to have one of the motor car mishaps which ultimately land him in jail in the Mount Holyoke Summer Theatre's production of "Wind in the Willows." The play will run tomorrow through Saturday at 10:30 each morning.

—GO BACK TO School. The Smith-Northampton Summer School will be registering all kinds of people for all kinds of classes through Wednesday, the school's opening day. Enrichment and remedial courses for kids in fourth through twelfth grades and many courses at interest to adults too, are being offered. With the exception of the typing classes and one in animated film making, which are filled, you can enroll in anything from math, history and languages to journalism, geology of the Connecticut River Valley and Historic Courtroom Trials. A course catalogue and further information about the six-week summer school is available at the office of the school's director Francis Gougeon at Northampton High School.

The enrollment fee for out-of-towners is slightly more than it is for Northampton residents, but all books and materials for the courses will be supplied without charge, to be turned in at the end of the summer. There are no academic qualifications necessary for courses.

—OTHER OFFERINGS: Registrations are now being accepted at the Easthampton Community Center for three 6-week long sets of sewing classes which will start the week of July 10. Mrs. Ruth Thouin will teach a beginners course for girls 14 through high school age, Tuesdays, an intermediate and advanced course for the same age group, Wednesdays and a class for young women Mondays. All classes will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Information about items to be made, material and equipment and the modest registration fee may be obtained at the Center. Enrollment is limited....The Wednesday night films at Forbes Library include "The Great Train Robbery," and Ben Turpin in "Yukon Jake," (1924). The program, which lasts approximately an hour, is shown free in the upstairs theatre at the library...The new issue of The Massachusetts Review, entirely devoted to women and entiled "Woman: An Issue," is currently in local book stores. A number of area women have contributed editorial, jounalistic, intellectal and artistic talents to this distinguished and diverse volume of the quarterly. The Massachusetts Review is published independently with the supprt and cooperation of the four area colleges and the University of Massachusetts.. Helen Hayes will recreate some of her most famous roles, and give her views on contemporary theatre in a Channel 57 program "Helen Hayes - Portrait of an Actress, American School," Thursday at 8:30 p.m. "Jesus Christ Superstar" is playing this week at Storrowton in West Springfield. Tonight through Friday performances will be at 8:30, Saturday at 7 and 10:15 p.m. and a matinee Wednesday at 2 p.m. Tickets are slightly more expensive for the weekend shows, slightly less expensive for the matinee and are available at the door...

There will be a family environmental walk on the ground of Arcadia Wildlife Sanctuary Sunday at 2 p.m. Robie Hubley sanctuary director, will lead the walk which is open to the public.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200

JUN 26 1972

New England Newsclip

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN.
D. 11,891

JUN 24 1972

New England Newsclip

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500

JUN 29 1972

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra And Chor Are Scheduled For All-Bach Program

The first weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood opens tomorrow evening (Friday, June 30) with an all-Bach program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

Following the performance of Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1 and 5, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will join the orchestra for Cantata No. 191. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy, with John Oliver directing.

The Weekend Prelude, which is free to ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert, is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday and features three Bach motets.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Seiji Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski takes over the baton Saturday evening, July 1 at 8:30 p.m. for a concert that includes: Bach's Suite no. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony no. 39 in E-flat.

Haydn's "The Season" will be heard Sunday afternoon, July 2 at 2 p.m. in the Shed. Soloists for this performance are Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy and Robert Hale. Seiji Ozawa directs the orchestra and John Oliver the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

BSO

Ozawa to open with Bach in his return to Lenox

Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, and Haydn will open the season at the Music Shed starting Friday, June 30.

Seiji Ozawa, music director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, will be on the podium to conduct an evening of Bach at 9 p.m.: Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2, and Cantata No. 191. The opening three selections demonstrate the composer as an orchestral writer, and the last is a good example of the chorale cantata as Bach perfected it.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, comprised of members from the greater Boston area, will sing a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. The chorus will be conducted by John Oliver, director of choral activities at Tanglewood. The prelude is offered at no extra charge to Friday evening ticket holders.

At 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minnesota Orchestra, will conduct Bach's Suite No. 3; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, played by pianist Claude Frank; and Mozart's Symphony No. 39. The selections are three of the best known and best written pieces for chamber orchestra.

An open rehearsal is held at 10:30 a.m. every Saturday.

At 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's The Seasons, with vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus. The Seasons has never been performed at Tanglewood, an ideal setting for the piece.

Ozawa, who has been appointed music director of the Boston Symphony, effective September 1973, also conducts the Japan Philarmonic Symphony. He made world-wide headlines June 8 by breaking imperial protocal in appealing without invitation to Emperor Hirohito to save the Japan Philarmonic from bankruptcy.

Skrowaczewski has conducted the BSO several times in recent years. He has toured with the French National Orchestra and Concertgebouw, based in Amsterdam, and was co-conductor with Eugene Ormandy on the Philadelphia Orchestra's 19666 tour of South America. He has conducted the Vienna Philarmonic Orchestra at the Salzburg Festival and has directed performances at the Vienna State and Metropolitan operas. His concerto for English horn was performed in New York in 1970.

Miss Curtin, an artist-in-residence at Tanglewood, is one of the most distinguished American sopranos. McCoy sang with the Robert Shaw Chorale before starting his solo career. His Saturday appearance will be his first with the BSO. Robert Hale is the leading baritone of the New York City Opera.

Seiji Ozawa

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUN 30 1972

CLEFS & ARPEGGIOS

by NANCY CURRAN

Imagine yourself looking at the Thames in London. It's dark, almost 10:30 on a Thursday night. To your left is a bridge with the streaking red-yellow lights of the London trains. Far to your right is a bridge lined with sightseers like yourself.

* * *

Across the river are the outlines of the old city hall, the more contemporary Royal Albert Hall and an ultra-modern office building looking like a giant mirror.

On the river are pleasure barges, with young people dancing on the upper decks, illuminated by strings of lights gaily strung from bow to stern. The barges and private craft swing around, causing light-catching rupples in the river, as they play among the piers of the bridges. A chest-high wall, grimed by the years, keeps everyone from falling into the river from the bank.

Bobbies look benevolently at young couples, at family groups, at tourists rubbing elbows conversationally with people from all over the world who have come to London for the Trooping of the Colours and the Queen's official birthday, June 3.

The talking ceases as if at a signal, when the first explosion spears the black velvet sky. You and 100,000 other people say "aaah" as the fireworks paint the sky with bright flashes of skyrockets. Ahead of you is the ubiquitous photographer, nameless and everywhere, missing the show until his film comes back. Londoners come out on the balconies of their elegant apartment buildings overlooking the river and the crowd-filled street. The colorful pyrotechnics make the office building come alive with scintillating reflections repeated in the river.

The Berkshire Festival returns this weekend to Lenox, Mass., at delightful Tanglewood. This evening at 7 will be the first production of the 1972 season. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will sing Motets of Bach.

* * *

Schenectadians will welcome the playing of Claude Frank on Saturday evening. A relative of the Tonks family of Schenectady, Frank spent many happy hours, he told me last year, practicing in the Tonks home after his family's complicated escape from wartime Europe.

WGY in its early years had a high quality of local broadcasting of music. "Voices Down the Wind" and other series featured the top musicians of the day, and Claude Frank was one of them, although he was just a young boy. Even then Frank was recognized as a gifted interpreter of Beethoven's works. Last year the Museum-Union College series booked Claude Frank, for an enjoyable concert at the chapel.

* * *

At Tanglewood Saturday evening, the 8:30 concert will be conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. The program will consist of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, Bach's Suite No. 3 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

Of course, you will not overlook the late Friday evening concert at 9 p.m., a Bach Program led by Seiji Ozawa, one of the artistic directors of the Berkshire Festival. Gunther Schuller is the other, and Leonard Bernstein is the advisor. Osawa will conduct Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191.

Sunday at 2:30, a summer afternoon could be well spent with "The Seasons," with the festival chorus, Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy and Robert Hale.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

2 Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

Tanglewood — The Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival season opens tonight at 9 with Seiji Ozawa conducting a Bach program including the 2nd and 5th Brandenburg Concertos, Suite No. 2, and Cantata No. 191, with soloists including Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Robert Levin, harpsichord, Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Phyllis Curtin, soprano. your ticket also will get you into the Weekend Prelude at 7 when John Oliver conducts the Tanglewood Festival Chorus in three Bach motets. Saturday, July 1, at 8:30, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts Bach's Suite No. 3 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39, and Claude Frank is soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1. Sunday afternoon at 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale. "The Seasons" can also be heard in open rehearsal ($2.50 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund) Saturday morning at 10:30.

Faces — Saturday, 8 p.m. Boston Garden; tickets $6.50, $5.50, $4.50. Stan Kenton Orchestra Plus Four Freshmen, tonight and Saturday (two shows nightly) Holiday Inn, Rte. 1, Peabody, tickets $7 plus two-drink minimum.

New York Post
D. 623,245 SAT. 354,797

JUN 28 1972

Summer Music At Tanglewood

An all-Bach program will open the 1972 summer season of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday night at 9. Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood Artistic Director, will conduct the opening program.

The Boston Symphony will give 24 concerts during the season, on Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. There will be eight open rehearsals Saturday mornings at 10:30 a.m., and a series of seven "Tanglewood Tuesday Specials," including four "Popular Artists" concerts and an appearance by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

Brochures listing the complete programs for each of the season's concerts are available by calling (617) 266-1492. Tickets may be purchased in person or by mail from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUN 30 1972

New England Newsclip

LET YOURSELF GO

A Medley of Events, Activities and Whimsy to Keep In Mind This Week

EDITED BY ANN SHANAHAN

—START THE SUMMER holidays with a treat. Take the kids to see the Mount Holyoke Summer Theatre's production of "Wind in the Willows," in the charming outdoor amphitheatre on the campus in South Hadley. The play will be performed Tuesday through Saturday this week at 10:30 each morning. Tickets, which are not expensive, are the same price for adults and children and are available at the door. So go, see Mr. Badger, Mr. Toad, Ratty and Mole cavorting in this imaginative adaptation of the children's classic.

The season of adult plays in the tent-on-the-green at Mount Holyoke starts the following Tuesday evening with "you're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

—PLAN A VACATION. If you need some help, get a copy of "The Yankee Guide to the New England Countryside," (Yankee, Inc., ($2.00. This is volume one, number one, of a kind of country store between covers, which its publishers (the same people who do Yankee Magazine and the Old Farmers Almanac) hope to continue and expand as seasons progress. The first issue, available at area book stores, contains a state by state calendar of New England events during the summer months and articles on such divers subjects as grist mills which still operate, working farms which offer down-to-earth vacations or ferry boats which still ply New England waterways. The ferry story is illustrated with a 1902 photo of the Hockanum Ferry as it lands on the Northampton shore. This attractive guide, packed with color pictures, drawing and maps, will give you ideas for motor trips, inns to stop at, stores to shop at and sights to see.

—BE SAFE AND sane about your holiday celebration. If you live in Easthampton, you can take advantage of a variety of weekend events planned for you by the July Fourth celebration Committee. The festivities will start Friday evening with the holiday smorgasboard and a ball at Pulaski Hall. (Reservations, which are limited, are being accepted through today by Mrs. Ferne Schranz and Mrs. Catherine Boucher.) Saturday's events will include movies at the Community Center in the morning and a field day in the afternoon. Also in the afternoon, there will be an art show in the Main Street park from 2 to 4, as well as an exhibit arranged by the Easthampton Historical Society at Memorial Hall during the same hours. A Sunday afternoon parade will assemble at 1:30 p.m. and march to Daley Field to be followed from 6 to 8 p.m. by a bike parade and contest, complete with prizes. At dusk the Jaycees are sponsoring the annual holiday fireworks display at Galbraith Field. Also planned for this fabulous fourth is a rock concert Monday evening and a block dance Tuesday evening.

—GET OUT YOUR baskets and go strawberry picking. The berries are ripe now and there are a number of area strawberry growers who will allow you to come into their field and load up at a very reasonable cost. Most don't permit children to pick because of the danger of trampling the berries.

Here is an elegant version of Strawberries Romanov for a rich and special dessert: Wash and hull one quart ripe strawberries. Put them in a bowl and sprinkle with sugar, if necessary. Add one cup freshly squeezed orange juice and 1 3 cup orange-flavored liquer. Let the berries stand for one hour. Transfer the berries to a chilled serving dish, draining off some of the liquid. Whip 1½ cups heavy cream and sweeten it with two tablespoons sugar. Spread the cream over the berries and decorate the dish with large unhulled strawberries.

—VISIT TANGELWOOD. The concert season opens Friday with the weekend prelude at 7 p.m. and an all Bach program at 9 p.m. and closes August 20 after eight weekends filled with music. Saturday mornings the Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsals are open to the public, (tickets are available the morning of the rehearsal). Saturday evening concerts are at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30. You will enjoy picnicking on Tanglewood's lovely lawn before the performance and sitting either there or in the shed for the music. This weekend, in addition to the Bach program Friday, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 will be played Saturday evening and Haydn's "The Seasons," with Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale and the Tangelwood Festival Chorus is the program for Sunday afternoon.

If you can't get to the concerts in person, you can listen to them in stero on WFCR (88.5 FM). The station will broadcast all the Berkshire Festival concerts live this summer.

-STRIKE UP A correspondence. Kids looking for summer projects, especially if the sun is not going to shine, might be interested in writing to a pen pal. It's a good way to learn about other countries, other people, other customs, and it's always fun when the mailman has something for you. The International Friendship League in Boston has a list of 50,000 young people in foreign lands waiting to hear from young Americans. Requests from children in Japan and India are the most numerous, but 120 other countries are represented as well. When you write to the League include you name, age and address, any special interest you have and enclose a self-addressed envelope. The address is: Pen Pals, 40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass. 02108.

Another organization interested in introducing pen pals advertised briefly in the Gazette's classified section recently asking "pen friends in the U.S." to write the Pen Society (V. 63), Chorley, Lancs, England.

—GET SOME SPECIALIZE instruction. The Northampton Recreation Commission staff is sponsoring summer long clinics in golf, tennis and basketball for young people interested in learning or increasing a skill in these sports. The tennis clinics will be held daily, two days a week at Look Park and three days at the Smith College courts. Children as young as six years old, who really want to learn how to play tennis, are encouraged to sign up for the clinic which will be taught by Bob Szlosek...The golf program will travel to each playground one day a week. Kids may bring a golf club of their own if they have one. Bob Parent will be giving instruction in all aspects of the game...Joe Mantegna, Hamp High basketball coach will be in charge of the basketball program, which will be conducted at all the playgrounds that have hoops for children in the mornings and for junior high and high school boys in the evenings. Sign-up and further information on all the clinics is at your nearest playground.

—TAKE A TRIP. For those who want to drive south, this is the week to visit the Elizabeth Park Rose Gardens in Hartford. We all need a bed of roses once in a while and these fabulous gardens are ablaze with a huge variety of colors in bed plantings and arches with paths, a shady summer house and benches. You can picnic on the lawn and the roses, which are reaching their peak now, provide a lush background for color photo buffs. Directions: take Route 91 south to Route 84 west, get off at the Asylum Avenue west exit and take Asylum right into the park.

A trip north this weekend might include a stop at the Northeast Craft Fair at the Mt. Anthony Union High School in Bennington, Vermont. The work of some 400 American craftsmen will be featured and there will be demonstrations and items for sale. The fair will be open Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. There are a variety of ways to get to Bennington, depending on what you want to see. You can take the Mohawk Trail (Route 2) from Greenfield to Williamstown and then go north on Route 7; you can travel the Berkshire Trail (Route 9) from Northampton to Pittsfield and get on Route 7 there; or you can be more adventuresome and travel the back roads.

MR. TOAD (BRUCE STARIN) looks as though he is about to have one of the motor car mishaps which ultimately land him in jail in the Mount Holyoke Summer Theatre's production of "Wind in the Willows." The play will run tomorrow through Saturday at 10:30 each morning.

—GO BACK TO School. The Smith-Northampton Summer School will be registering all kinds of people for all kinds of classes through Wednesday, the school's opening day. Enrichment and remedial courses for kids in fourth through twelfth grades and many courses at interest to adults too, are being offered. With the exception of the typing classes and one in animated film making, which are filled, you can enroll in anything from math, history and languages to journalism, geology of the Connecticut River Valley and Historic Courtroom Trials. A course catalogue and further information about the six-week summer school is available at the office of the school's director Francis Gougeon at Northampton High School.

The enrollment fee for out-of-towners is slightly more than it is for Northampton residents, but all books and materials for the courses will be supplied without charge, to be turned in at the end of the summer. There are no academic qualifications necessary for courses.

—OTHER OFFERINGS: Registrations are now being accepted at the Easthampton Community Center for three 6-week long sets of sewing classes which will start the week of July 10. Mrs. Ruth Thouin will teach a beginners course for girls 14 through high school age, Tuesdays, an intermediate and advanced course for the same age group, Wednesdays and a class for young women Mondays. All classes will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Information about items to be made, material and equipment and the modest registration fee may be obtained at the Center. Enrollment is limited....The Wednesday night films at Forbes Library include "The Great Train Robbery," and Ben Turpin in "Yukon Jake," (1924). The program, which lasts approximately an hour, is shown free in the upstairs theatre at the library...The new issue of The Massachusetts Review, entirely devoted to women and entiled "Woman: An Issue," is currently in local book stores. A number of area women have contributed editorial, jounalistic, intellectal and artistic talents to this distinguished and diverse volume of the quarterly. The Massachusetts Review is published independently with the supprt and cooperation of the four area colleges and the University of Massachusetts.. Helen Hayes will recreate some of her most famous roles and give her views on contemporary theatre in a Channel 57 program "Helen Hayes - Portrait of an Actress, American School," Thursday at 8:30 p.m. "Jesus Christ Superstar" is playing this week at Storrowton in West Springfield. Tonight through Friday performances will be at 8:30, Saturday at 7 and 10:15 p.m. and a matinee Wednesday at 2 p.m. Tickets are slightly more expensive for the weekend shows, slightly less expensive for the matinee and are available at the door...

There will be a family environmental walk on the ground of Arcadia Wildlife Sanctuary Sunday at 2 p.m. Robie Hubley sanctuary director, will lead the walk which is open to the public.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUN 26 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra And Chorus Are Scheduled For All-Bach Program

The first weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood opens tomorrow evening (Friday, June 30) with an all-Bach program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

Following the performance of Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1 and 5, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will join the orchestra for Cantata No. 191. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy, with John Oliver directing.

The Weekend Prelude, which is free to ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert, is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday and features three Bach motets.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Seiji Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski takes over the baton Saturday evening, July 1 at 8:30 p.m. for a concert that includes Bach's Suite no. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony no. 39 in E-flat.

Haydn's "The Season" will be heard Sunday afternoon, July 2 at 2 p.m. in the Shed. Soloists for this performance are Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy and Robert Hale. Seiji Ozawa directs the orchestra and John Oliver the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CONN.
D. 11,891
JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500
JUN 29 1972

Ozawa to open with Bach in his return to Lenox

Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, and Haydn will open the season at the Music Shed starting Friday, June 30.

Seiji Ozawa, music director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, will be on the podium to conduct an evening of Bach at 9 p.m.: Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2, and Cantata No. 191. The opening three selections demonstrate the composer as an orchestral writer, and the last is a good example of the chorale cantata as Bach perfected it.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, comprised of members from the greater Boston area, will sing a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. The chorus will be conducted by John Oliver, director of choral activities at Tanglewood. The prelude is offered at no extra charge to Friday evening ticket holders.

At 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minnesota Orchestra, will conduct Bach's Suite No. 3; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, played by pianist Claude Frank; and Mozart's Symphony No. 39. The selections are three of the best known and best written pieces for chamber orchestra.

An open rehearsal is held at 10:30 a.m. every Saturday.

At 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's The Seasons, with vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus. The Seasons has never been performed at Tanglewood, an ideal setting for the piece.

Seiji Ozawa

Ozawa, who has been appointed music director of the Boston Symphony, effective September 1973, also conducts the Japan Philarmonic Symphony. He made world-wide headlines June 8 by breaking imperial protocal in appealing without invitation to Emperor Hirohito to save the Japan Philarmonic from bankruptcy.

Skrowaczewski has conducted the BSO several times in recent years. He has toured with the French National Orchestra and Concertgebouw, based in Amsterdam, and was co-conductor with Eugene Ormandy on the Philadelphia Orchestra's 19666 tour of South America. He has conducted the Vienna Philarmonic Orchestra at the Salzburg Festival and has directed performances at the Vienna State and Metropolitan operas. His concerto for English horn was performed in New York in 1970.

Miss Curtin, an artist-in-residence at Tanglewood, is one of the most distinguished American sopranos. McCoy sang with the Robert Shaw Chorale before starting his solo career. His Saturday appearance will be his first with the BSO. Robert Hale is the leading baritone of the New York City Opera.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,931
JUN 30 1972

CLEFS & ARPEGGIOS

by NANCY CURRAN

Imagine yourself looking at the Thames in London. It's dark, almost 10:30 on a Thursday night. To your left is a bridge with the streaking red-yellow lights of the London trains. Far to your right is a bridge lined with sightseers like yourself.

* * *

Across the river are the outlines of the old city hall, the more contemporary Royal Albert Hall and an ultra-modern office building looking like a giant mirror.

On the river are pleasure barges, with young people dancing on the upper decks, illuminated by strings of lights gaily strung from bow to stern. The barges and private craft swing around, causing light-catching rupples in the river, as they play among the piers of the bridges. A chest-high wall, grimed by the years, keeps everyone from falling into the river from the bank.

Bobbies look benevolently at young couples, at family groups, at tourists rubbing elbows conversationally with people from all over the world who have come to London for the Trooping of the Colours and the Queen's official birthday, June 3.

The talking ceases as if at a signal, when the first explosion spears the black velvet sky. You and 100,000 other people say "aaah" as the fireworks paint the sky with bright flashes of skyrockets. Ahead of you is the ubiquitous photographer, nameless and everywhere, missing the show until his film comes back. Londoners come out on the balconies of their elegant apartment buildings overlooking the river and the crowd-filled street. The colorful pyrotechnics make the office building come alive with scintillating reflections repeated in the river.

The Berkshire Festival returns this weekend to Lenox, Mass., at delightful Tanglewood. This evening at 7 will be the first production of the 1972 season. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will sing Motets of Bach.

* * *

Schenectadians will welcome the playing of Claude Frank on Saturday evening. A relative of the Tonks family of Schenectady, Frank spent many happy hours, he told me last year, practicing in the Tonks home after his family's complicated escape from wartime Europe.

WGY in its early years had a high quality of local broadcasting of music. "Voices Down the Wind" and other series featured the top musicians of the day, and Claude Frank was one of them, although he was just a young boy. Even then Frank was recognized as a gifted interpreter of Beethoven's works. Last year the Museum-Union College series booked Claude Frank, for an enjoyable concert at the chapel.

* * *

At Tanglewood Saturday evening, the 8:30 concert will be conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. The program will consist of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, Bach's Suite No. 3 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

Of course, you will not overlook the late Friday evening concert at 9 p.m., a Bach Program led by Seiji Ozawa, one of the artistic directors of the Berkshire Festival. Gunther Schuller is the other, and Leonard Bernstein is the advisor. Osawa will conduct Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191.

Sunday at 2:30, a summer afternoon could be well spent with "The Seasons," with the festival chorus, Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy and Robert Hale.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

Tanglewood — The Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival season opens tonight at 9 with Seiji Ozawa conducting a Bach program including the 2nd and 5th Brandenburg Concertos, Suite No. 2, and Cantata No. 191, with soloists including Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Robert Levin, harpsichord, Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Phyllis Curtin, soprano. your ticket also will get you into the Weekend Prelude at 7, when John Oliver conducts the Tanglewood Festival Chorus in three Bach motets. Saturday, July 1, at 8:30, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts Bach's Suite No. 3 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39, and Claude Frank is soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1. Sunday afternoon at 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale. "The Seasons" can also be heard in open rehearsal ($2.50 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund) Saturday morning at 10:30.

Faces — Saturday, 8 p.m. Boston Garden; tickets $6.50, $5.50, $4.50. Stan Kenton Orchestra Plus Four Freshmen, tonight and Saturday (two shows nightly) Holiday Inn, Rte. 1, Peabody, tickets $7 plus two-drink minimum.

New York Post
D. 623,245 SAT. 354,797
JUN 28 1972

Summer Music At Tanglewood

An all-Bach program will open the 1972 summer season of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday night at 9. Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood Artistic Director, will conduct the opening program.

The Boston Symphony will give 24 concerts during the season, on Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. There will be eight open rehearsals Saturday mornings at 10:30 a.m., and a series of seven "Tanglewood Tuesday Specials," including four "Popular Artists" concerts and an appearance by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

Brochures listing the complete programs for each of the season's concerts are available by calling (617) 266-1492. Tickets may be purchased in person or by mail from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUN 30 1972
New England Newsclip

LET YOURSELF GO

A Medley of Events, Activities and Whimsy to Keep In Mind This Week

EDITED BY ANN SHANAHAN

—START THE SUMMER holidays with a treat. Take the kids to see the Mount Holyoke Summer Theatre's production of "Wind in the Willows," in the charming outdoor amphitheatre on the campus in South Hadley. The play will be performed Tuesday through Saturday this week at 10:30 each morning. Tickets, which are not expensive, are the same price for adults and children and are available at the door. So go see Mr. Badger, Mr. Toad, Ratty and Mole cavorting in this imaginative adaptation of the children's classic.

The season of adult plays in the tent-on-the-green at Mount Holyoke starts the following Tuesday evening with "you're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

—PLAN A VACATION. If you need some help, get a copy of "The Yankee Guide to the New England Countryside," (Yankee, Inc., ($2.00. This is volume one, number one, of a kind of country store between covers, which its publishers (the same people who do Yankee Magazine and the Old Farmers Almanac) hope to continue and expand as seasons progress. The first issue, available at area book stores, contains a state by state calendar of New England events during the summer months and articles on such divers subjects as grist mills which still operate, working farms which offer down-to-earth vacations or ferry boats which still ply New England waterways. The ferry story is illustrated with a 1902 photo of the Hockanum Ferry as it lands on the Northampton shore. This attractive guide, packed with color pictures, drawing and maps, will give you ideas for motor trips, inns to stop at, stores to shop at and sights to see.

—BE SAFE AND sane about your holiday celebration. If you live in Easthampton, you can take advantage of a variety of weekend events planned for you by the July Fourth celebration Committee. The festivities will start Friday evening with the holiday smorgasboard and a ball at Pulaski Hall. (Reservations, which are limited, are being accepted through today by Mrs. Ferne Schranz and Mrs. Catherine Boucher.) Saturday's events will include movies at the Community Center in the morning and a field day in the afternoon. Also in the afternoon, there will be an art show in the Main Street park from 2 to 4, as well as an exhibit arranged by the Easthampton Historical Society at Memorial Hall during the same hours. A Sunday afternoon parade will assemble at 1:30 p.m. and march to Daley Field to be followed from 6 to 8 p.m. by a bike parade and contest, complete with prizes. At dusk the Jaycees are sponsoring the annual holiday fireworks display at Galbraith Field. Also planned for this fabulous fourth is a rock concert Monday evening and a block dance Tuesday evening.

—GET OUT YOUR baskets and go strawberry picking. The berries are ripe now and there are a number of area strawberry growers who will allow you to come into their field and load up at a very reasonable cost. Most don't permit children to pick because of the danger of trampling the berries.

Here is an elegant version of Strawberries Romanov for a rich and special dessert: Wash and hull one quart ripe strawberries. Put them in a bowl and sprinkle with sugar, if necessary. Add one cup freshly squeezed orange juice and 1 3 cup orange-flavored liquer. Let the berries stand for one hour. Transfer the berries to a chilled serving dish, draining off some of the liquid. Whip 1½ cups heavy cream and sweeten it with two tablespoons sugar. Spread the cream over the berries and decorate the dish with large unhulled strawberries.

—VISIT TANGELWOOD. The concert season opens Friday with the weekend prelude at 7 p.m. and an all Bach program at 9 p.m. and closes August 20 after eight weekends filled with music. Saturday mornings the Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsals are open to the public, (tickets are available the morning of the rehearsal). Saturday evening concerts are at 8:30, Sunday afternoons at 2:30. You will enjoy picnicking on Tanglewood's lovely lawn before the performance and sitting either there or in the shed for the music. This weekend, in addition to the Bach program Friday, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 will be played Saturday evening and Haydn's "The Seasons," with Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, Robert Hale and the Tangelwood Festival Chorus is the program for Sunday afternoon.

If you can't get to the concerts in person, you can listen to them in stero on WFCR (88.5 FM). The station will broadcast all the Berkshire Festival concerts live this summer.

-STRIKE UP A correspondence. Kids looking for summer projects, especially if the sun is not going to shine, might be interested in writing to a pen pal. It's a good way to learn about other countries, other people, other customs, and it's always fun when the mailman has something for you. The International Friendship League in Boston has a list of 50,000 young people in foreign lands waiting to hear from young Americans. Requests from children in Japan and India are the most numerous, but 120 other countries are represented as well. When you write to the League include you name, age and address, any special interest you have and enclose a self-addressed envelope. The address is: Pen Pals, 40 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass. 02108.

Another organization interested in introducing pen pals advertised briefly in the Gazette's classified section recently asking "pen friends in the U.S." to write the Pen Society (V. 63), Chorley, Lancs, England.

—GET SOME SPECIALIZE instruction. The Northampton Recreation Commission staff is sponsoring summer long clinics in golf, tennis and basketball for young people interested in learning or increasing a skill in these sports. The tennis clinics will be held daily, two days a week at Look Park and three days at the Smith College courts. Children as young as six years old, who really want to learn how to play tennis, are encouraged to sign up for the clinic which will be taught by Bob Szlosek...The golf program will travel to each playground one day a week. Kids may bring a golf club of their own if they have one. Bob Parent will be giving instruction in all aspects of the game...Joe Mantegna, Hamp High basketball coach will be in charge of the basketball program, which will be conducted at all the playgrounds that have hoops for children in the mornings and for junior high and high school boys in the evenings. Sign-up and further information on all the clinics is at your nearest playground.

—TAKE A TRIP. For those who want to drive south, this is the week to visit the Elizabeth Park Rose Gardens in Hartford. We all need a bed of roses once in a while and these fabulous gardens are ablaze with a huge variety of colors in bed plantings and arches with paths, a shady summer house and benches. You can picnic on the lawn and the roses, which are reaching their peak now, provide a lush background for color photo buffs. Directions: take Route 91 south to Route 84 west, get off at the Asylum Avenue west exit and take Asylum right into the park.

A trip north this weekend might include a stop at the Northeast Craft Fair at the Mt. Anthony Union High School in Bennington, Vermont. The work of some 400 American craftsmen will be featured and there will be demonstrations and items for sale. The fair will be open Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. There are a variety of ways to get to Bennington, depending on what you want to see. You can take the Mohawk Trail (Route 2) from Greenfield to Williamstown and then go north on Route 7; you can travel the Berkshire Trail (Route 9) from Northampton to Pittsfield and get on Route 7 there; or you can be more adventuresome and travel the back roads.

MR. TOAD (BRUCE STARIN) looks as though he is about to have one of the motor car mishaps which ultimately land him in jail in the Mount Holyoke Summer Theatre's production of "Wind in the Willows." The play will run tomorrow through Saturday at 10:30 each morning.

—GO BACK TO School. The Smith-Northampton Summer School will be registering all kinds of people for all kinds of classes through Wednesday, the school's opening day. Enrichment and remedial courses for kids in fourth through twelfth grades and many courses at interest to adults too, are being offered. With the exception of the typing classes and one in animated film making, which are filled, you can enroll in anything from math, history and languages to journalism, geology of the Connecticut River Valley and Historic Courtroom Trials. A course catalogue and further information about the six-week summer school is available at the office of the school's director Francis Gougeon at Northampton High School.

The enrollment fee for out-of-towners is slightly more than it is for Northampton residents, but all books and materials for the courses will be supplied without charge, to be turned in at the end of the summer. There are no academic qualifications necessary for courses.

—OTHER OFFERINGS: Registrations are now being accepted at the Easthampton Community Center for three 6-week long sets of sewing classes which will start the week of July 10. Mrs. Ruth Thouin will teach a beginners course for girls 14 through high school age, Tuesdays, an intermediate and advanced course for the same age group, Wednesdays and a class for young women Mondays. All classes will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Information about items to be made, material and equipment and the modest registration fee may be obtained at the Center. Enrollment is limited....The Wednesday night films at Forbes Library include "The Great Train Robbery," and Ben Turpin in "Yukon Jake," (1924). The program, which lasts approximately an hour, is shown free in the upstairs theatre at the library...The new issue of The Massachusetts Review, entirely devoted to women and entiled "Woman: An Issue," is currently in local book stores. A number of area women have contributed editorial, jounalistic, intellectal and artistic talents to this distinguished and diverse volume of the quarterly. The Massachusetts Review is published independently with the supprt and cooperation of the four area colleges and the University of Massachusetts.. Helen Hayes will recreate some of her most famous roles and give her views on contemporary theatre in a Channel 57 program "Helen Hayes - Portrait of an Actress, American School," Thursday at 8:30 p.m. "Jesus Christ Superstar" is playing this week at Storrowton in West Springfield. Tonight through Friday performances will be at 8:30, Saturday at 7 and 10:15 p.m. and a matinee Wednesday at 2 p.m. Tickets are slightly more expensive for the weekend shows, slightly less expensive for the matinee and are available at the door...

There will be a family environmental walk on the ground of Arcadia Wildlife Sanctuary Sunday at 2 p.m. Robie Hubley sanctuary director, will lead the walk which is open to the public.

...TTE
MASS.
New England Newsclip

REGISTER
TORRINGTON, CON
D. 11,891

JUN 24 1972
New England Newsclip

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra And Chorus Are Scheduled For All-Bach Program

The first weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood opens tomorrow evening (Friday, June 30) with an all-Bach program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

Following the performance of Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1 and 5, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will join the orchestra for Cantata No. 191. Soloists are Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy, with John Oliver directing.

The Weekend Prelude, which is free to ticket-holders for the 9 p.m. concert, is scheduled for 7 p.m. Friday and features three Bach motets.

The summer's first Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place July 1 at 10:30 a.m. Seiji Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski takes over the baton Saturday evening, July 1 at 8:30 p.m. for a concert that includes Bach's Suite no. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony no. 39 in E-flat.

Haydn's "The Season" will be heard Sunday afternoon, July 2 at 2 p.m. in the Shed. Soloists for this performance are Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy and Robert Hale. Seiji Ozawa directs the orchestra and John Oliver the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

JUN 29 1972

Ozawa to open with Bach in his return to Lenox

Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, and Haydn will open the season at the Music Shed starting Friday, June 30.

Seiji Ozawa, music director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, will be on the podium to conduct an evening of Bach at 9 p.m.: Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2, and Cantata No. 191. The opening three selections demonstrate the composer as an orchestral writer, and the last is a good example of the chorale cantata as Bach perfected it.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, comprised of members from the greater Boston area, will sing a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. The chorus will be conducted by John Oliver, director of choral activities at Tanglewood. The prelude is offered at no extra charge to Friday evening ticket holders.

At 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minnesota Orchestra, will conduct Bach's Suite No. 3; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, played by pianist Claude Frank; and Mozart's Symphony No. 39. The selections are three of the best known and best written pieces for chamber orchestra.

An open rehearsal is held at 10:30 a.m. every Saturday.

At 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's The Seasons, with vocalists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus. The Seasons has never been performed at Tanglewood, an ideal setting for the piece.

Seiji Ozawa

Ozawa, who has been appointed music director of the Boston Symphony, effective September 1973, also conducts the Japan Philarmonic Symphony. He made world-wide headlines June 8 by breaking imperial protocal in appealing without invitation to Emperor Hirohito to save the Japan Philarmonic from bankruptcy.

Skrowaczewski has conducted the BSO several times in recent years. He has toured with the French National Orchestra and Concertgebouw, based in Amsterdam, and was co-conductor with Eugene Ormandy on the Philadelphia Orchestra's 19666 tour of South America. He has conducted the Vienna Philarmonic Orchestra at the Salzburg Festival and has directed performances at the Vienna State and Metropolitan operas. His concerto for English horn was performed in New York in 1970.

Miss Curtin, an artist-in-residence at Tanglewood, is one of the most distinguished American sopranos. McCoy sang with the Robert Shaw Chorale before starting his solo career. His Saturday appearance will be his first with the BSO. Robert Hale is the leading baritone of the New York City Opera.

New York Post
D. 623,245 SAT. 354,797

JUN 28 1972

Summer Music At Tanglewood

An all-Bach program will open the 1972 summer season of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday night at 9. Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood Artistic Director, will conduct the opening program.

The Boston Symphony will give 24 concerts during the season, on Fridays at 9 p.m., Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. There will be eight open rehearsals Saturday mornings at 10:30 a.m., and a series of seven "Tanglewood Tuesday Specials," including four "Popular Artists" concerts and an appearance by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops.

Brochures listing the complete programs for each of the season's concerts are available by calling (617) 266-1492. Tickets may be purchased in person or by mail from the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 01240.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,951

JUN 30 1972

CLEFS & ARPEGGIOS

by NANCY CURRAN

Imagine yourself looking at the Thames in London. It's dark, almost 10:30 on a Thursday night. To your left is a bridge with the streaking red-yellow lights of the London trains. Far to your right is a bridge lined with sightseers like yourself.

* * *

Across the river are the outlines of the old city hall, the more contemporary Royal Albert Hall and an ultra-modern office building looking like a giant mirror.

On the river are pleasure barges, with young people dancing on the upper decks, illuminated by strings of lights gaily strung from bow to stern. The barges and private craft swing around, causing light-catching rupples in the river, as they play among the piers of the bridges. A chest-high wall, grimed by the years, keeps everyone from falling into the river from the bank.

Bobbies look benevolently at young couples, at family groups, at tourists rubbing elbows conversationally with people from all over the world who have come to London for the Trooping of the Colours and the Queen's official birthday, June 3.

The talking ceases as if at a signal, when the first explosion spears the black velvet sky. You and 100,000 other people say "aaah" as the fireworks paint the sky with bright flashes of skyrockets. Ahead of you is the ubiquitous photographer, nameless and everywhere, missing the show until his film comes back. Londoners come out on the balconies of their elegant apartment buildings overlooking the river and the crowd-filled street. The colorful pyrotechnics make the office building come alive with seintillating reflections repeated in the river.

The Berkshire Festival returns this weekend to Lenox, Mass., at delightful Tanglewood. This evening at 7 will be the first production of the 1972 season. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus will sing Motets of Bach.

* * *

Schenectadians will welcome the playing of Claude Frank on Saturday evening. A relative of the Tonks family of Schenectady, Frank spent many happy hours, he told me last year, practicing in the Tonks home after his family's complicated escape from wartime Europe.

WGY in its early years had a high quality of local broadcasting of music. "Voices Down the Wind" and other series featured the top musicians of the day, and Claude Frank was one of them, although he was just a young boy. Even then Frank was recognized as a gifted interpreter of Beethoven's works. Last year the Museum-Union College series booked Claude Frank, for an enjoyable concert at the chapel.

* * *

At Tanglewood Saturday evening, the 8:30 concert will be conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. The program will consist of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, Bach's Suite No. 3 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

Of course, you will not overlook the late Friday evening concert at 9 p.m., a Bach Program led by Seiji Ozawa, one of the artistic directors of the Berkshire Festival. Gunther Schuller is the other, and Leonard Bernstein is the advisor. Osawa will conduct Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191.

Sunday at 2:30, a summer afternoon could be well spent with "The Seasons," with the festival chorus, Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy and Robert Hale.

Tanglewood — The Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival season opens tonight at 9 with Seiji Ozawa conducting a Bach program including the 2nd and 5th Brandenburg Concertos, Suite No. 2, and Cantata No. 191, with soloists including Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Robert Levin, harpsichord, Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Phyllis Curtin, soprano. your ticket also will get you into the Weekend Prelude at 7, when John Oliver conducts the Tanglewood Festival Chorus in three Bach motets. Saturday, July 1, at 8:30, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts Bach's Suite No. 3 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39, and Claude Frank is soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1. Sunday afternoon at 2, Ozawa conducts Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale. "The Seasons" can also be heard in open rehearsal ($2.50 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund) Saturday morning at 10:30.

Faces — Saturday, 8 p.m. Boston Garden; tickets $6.50, $5.50, $4.50. Stan Kenton Orchestra Plus Four Freshmen, tonight and Saturday (two shows nightly) Holiday Inn, Rte. 1, Peabody, tickets $7 plus two-drink minimum.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUN 30 1972

Tanglewood Opens Tonight With Symphony

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Osawa will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all Bach program starting at 9 p.m. today to open the 1972 season of the Lenox, Mass. music center.

Included in this evening's performance will be the Brandenburg Concertos No. 2 and 5, Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo."

Soloists will include Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Doriat Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silverstein, violin; Robert Devin, harpsichord; Phyllis Curtin, soprano and Seth McCoy, tenor.

The Tanglewood festival chorus will also be heard with John Silverstein the director. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. with Claude Frank, piano soloist, in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

In the Sunday afternoon concert, Ozawa will again conduct in a program that will present "The Seasons," by Haydn.

Soloists will include Phyllis Curtain, McCoy and bass Robert Hale.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUN 30 1972
New England Newsclip

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Ozawa Conducts Haydn's 'The Seasons'

By DOROTHY STOWE

LENOX, Mass. — All forces, both of nature and of man, worked together yesterday afternoon for a performance of moving fervor and grace, as Tanglewood Festival Chorus and Boston Symphony, Seiji Ozawa conducting, presented Haydn's "The Seasons."

Haydn was not entirely happy with the subject of this oratorio, which he was more or less coerced into doing as a follow-up to "The Creation." He grumbled that in the latter the characters were angels; in "The Seasons," they were peasants.

Yet he was remarkably well fitted temperamentally to write of peasants; and his recreation of their year's joys and sorrows, their landscapes, their activities, often hit the musical nail directly on the head in depiction of emotion and scene.

The work, though long, is never tiresome, due to skillful balance of the heavy and light, the playful and powerful, and the interesting alaternation of solos, ensembles and choruses.

It was gratifying to hear evertying in ideal focus, as Ozawa employed his special genius for the music of the classic era in eliciting clarity and precision from his forces. The somewhat reduced orchestra accompanied the large chorus with perfect balance.

The excellent soloists included Phyllis Curtin, this year's Artist-in-residence, who sang with her usual simple conviction and unimpeachable style, particularly in the florid "Welche Labung," and the song of the clever peasant girl.

Seth McCoy brought his smooth and agile tenor to the part of Lucas, and Simon was sung by Robert Hale, whose rich bass voice carried resonantly. His Winter aria, "Hier steht der Wand'rer nun," was a mature example of lieder.

The chorus, prepared by John Oliver, sang with distinction throughout. One might single out for special mention the "Ewiger Gott" which closed the spring section so nobly. Also beautifully done were the Hunting scene with its wonderful horn solos, and the lilting harvest Ode to Joy, with zither and bagpipe effects, in which Haydn did real tone painting. The warmth of the sun is in this music, and the lusty vitality of a Breugel painting.

Hayden's musical expression and philosophy reached a thrilling apex in the final trio and double chorus, "Dann bricht der grosse Moegan an!" (Then Comes the Great Dawn). The final fugue, "Lead us by Thy hand, O God, Give us strength and courage," was brilliantly and feelingly executed.

It is heartening to report that Ozawa seems to have come fully of age. He is a man of joy in music, and it is apparant that he is loved in Boston, as evidenced by the resounding ovation from the floor, but more significantly, from the stage. It appears he may be on the way to a long and distinguished tenure in Boston.

Sunday's Concert at Tanglewood Contains Special Communication

By RICHARD CONWAY

Sunday's concert at Tanglewood was something special. It is rare, of course, that the Boston Symphony Orchestra ever gives a really poor performance. It is one of the world's great orchestras, and one invariably hears highly artistic performances of fine music.

There are times, though, when there seems to be a particularly special communication between and among conductor, musicians, and audience. It was that way Sunday.

The music was Haydn's "The Seasons." And the oratorio that the aging and ill composer did not really want to write, and which took him three years in the working, is truly one of his masterpieces.

It describes the changing seasons of the year as seen through the eyes of a farmer, his daughter, and a peasant. The chorus represents the rest of the peasantry.

"The Seasons" is thus really a summation of Haydn's thought—not only musically, but in his whole attitude toward life. The score abounds with marvelously descriptive music. We see with Haydn the wonder and awe of nature. (The storm section, for instance.) And we share with him the robust joy of life.

Haydn, although he worked for the aristocracy for most of his life, never lost sight of the nobility that is in the common man. And one can literally breathe the fresh air of the rustic countryside listening to his music.

Conductor Seiji Ozawa played his forces beautifully. His conducting was absolutely clear and descriptive and with but one noticeable flaw, he maintained the balance between and among his musicians.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus sang with full-throated gusto. They had obviously been well prepared by director John Oliver. Their German diction was crisp and clean. The choral balance and blend was outstanding. (What resonant men's voices that chorus has!) Oliver uses what we used to call the "fruit basket" formation; that is, the various voice parts are scattered about, rather than standing all together. When you have the singers who can do this, the results are far more satisfying than grouping them. And Oliver does have the singers!

A fine trio of soloists—Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Robert Hale, bass; and Seth McCoy, tenor—portrayed the roles of daughter, farmer, and peasant respectively. The voices were nicely matched for their ensemble work.

Hale's big, rich voice seemed especially right for the Haydn work. The leading bass of the New York City Opera sang with great clarity and sensitivity.

Miss Curtin brought vibrant life to her role. She was particularly fine in the playful "An honest village maiden."

McCoy was good, too, but his voice was covered at times by the orchestra—at least where we were sitting it did not come through with the clarity of the others. This is the one balance problem we mentioned above.

In a fine performance such as this one was, it is difficult to pick out one or two things and say that this was the best. But certainly the Hunt and the Wine sections, marvelously rousing choruses, were sung with a joyous abandon that belied the absolute precision needed to bring them off successfully. Oh, but they did stir the blood.

And there was strength in the final affirmation of simple faith which closes the work. It was an immensely satisfying performance, and the audience applauded loud and long.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

Record gate at Tanglewood JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Campers, music lovers drawn to Berkshire holiday weekend

By JAMES V. WALSH

Music, theater and the holiday spirit outshone the so-so weather this weekend and drew a surprisingly large number of tourists into the Berkshires.

From the evening-clothes set to the humble camper, they came to enjoy the Independence Day weekend in such disparate settings as the Windsor Lake campgrounds, which was filled to overflowing, and Tanglewood, which opened for the summer with an all-time attendance record.

Gate counters at the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra counted a weekend total of 23,102, a new high for an opening program at the Lenox music shed.

The performance of two Beethoven concertos Saturday night drew 7,837 music lovers, the largest single crowd in the series of four Tanglewood events. The next largest flock was 7,655 who attended the performance of the Haydn oratorio, "The Seasons", yesterday afternoon.

And all this happened despite the periodically-threatening weather.

John V. Geary, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, was at a loss to explain why the July 4th influx was running at between 3 to 4 per cent ahead of last year.

"I thought I'd die when it was raining Friday night," Mr. Geary said, "but then I took a ride down Route 7 Saturday morning, and all I saw were 'No Vacancy' signs."

He said his agency was placing out-of-staters coming for the Tanglewood program as far north as Williamstown because of the lodging problem.

"It was a pleasant surprise, especially in view of the weather we've been having," he said. "Thank God it finally broke."

Attendance at the opening show of the Williamstown Summer Theatre tapered off after the record sell-out crowd Thursday night but was strong nevertheless.

The cast played "Mary Stuart" to near capacity houses both Friday and Saturday nights, to bring the weekend total to about 1,400.

Restaurants were also bustling, and the crowds appeared to have caught some establishments off guard.

John F. Treadway, innkeeper at the Williams Inn, said Saturday night was especially busy and kept the hard-pressed kitchen working diligently.

"I don't know why, but it seems we got much more out of a July 4th weekend this year than usual," he puzzled, noting that the rooms were also filled.

Scenery-lovers were less conspicuous, largely because of the hazy atmosphere and uncertain weather prospects.

Nevertheless, a modestly large crowd of 1,900 sightseers traveled to the summit of Mt. Greylock over the weekend, with about 1,200 of those concentrated during the sunshine hours Sunday afternoon.

Joseph Garceau, a Department of Natural Resources ranger stationed at the mountain summit, said haze and fog settled in thickly other times and discouraged tourists.

Historic Valley Park on the shores of Windsor Lake was more successful, registering an overflow number of campers, many of whom came to stay from Saturday through tomorrow.

Mrs. Joseph Graveline, co-supervisor of the 100-site campground, said 120 families checked in during the weekend despite the threat of a dank and dark stay.

About 75 per cent of them, she said, are from other states and virtually all took today off from work to string out their vacation to four days.

Mr. Geary felt that, based on the tourist boom this weekend, the coming July weekends promise to be "real humdingers."

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 3 1972

All Bach Concert

Tanglewood Opens With Ozawa, Bach

By EDWARD FRENCH

Other Review on Page 7B

Summer has officially come to the Berkshires. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sejia Ozawa conducting, launched the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with an all Bach program Friday evening.

In spite of far from ideal weather, a marked contrast to last year's beautiful first weekend, the audience was large, knowledgeable and enthusiastic.

THE GENEROUS sampling of the eipsic cantor's work included the F major and D major Brandenburg Concertos, the Suite No. 2 in B minor with solo flute and the Cantata No. 191, Gloria in excelsis Deo. Soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver director assisted in this work.

Mr. Ozawa's readings of the Brandenburg concertos had the clarity of form and line and rhythmic vitality so essential to a realization of Bach's inspiration. The tempi were well chosen and the soloists, all first chair members of the orchestra displayed the superb technical skill and artistry we have come to expect.

To all intents and purposes Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor could properly be called a concerto for flute and orchestra because the flute part is dominant and has the kind of florid writing that tess the technical and musical resources of the soloist.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer's total command of her instrument was brilliantly demonstrated in this performance.

WE ESPECIALLY enjoyed the choral work in the Bach Cantata 191. The voices were young and there was an appealing freshness to the sound of the women's voices in particular.

The difficult solo portions of this work were capably handled by Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy.

Saturday night found Stanislaw Skrowaczewski on the podium and Claude Frank, a long time Tanglewood favorite, as soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 in C major.

Mr. Frank's inspired performance of this delightful concerto was for many of us the high point of this initial weekend.

He has always been known for his excellence in the Beethoven piano literature, but Saturday night his performance of this concerto was incandescent from beginning to end. His technique was brilliant and facile in the outer movements and the lovely slow movement was poetry incarnate.

It would seem that Mr. Frank's playing inspired both conductor and orchestra as the best orchestral playing of the evening was in the concerto accompaniment. Here there was a dynamic subtlety and expressiveness not so apparent in Mozart's E flat Symphony or Bach's D major Suite.

SUNDAY afternoon the Tanglewood charm was in full evidence. Finally the weather was bright and sunny, the puddles were pretty well dried up and the famous lawn was pleasant again.

Musically the afternoon was devoted to Haydn's second great oratorio, "The Seasons." the vitality and spontaneity of this score is remarkable considering that the composer was sixty nine years old when he completed it.

To this listener the most striking feature of the performance was the understanding and sympathy for this central European music that Seija Ozawa displayed.

He underscored Haydn's warmth, humor, nobility and especially his genius for pictorial tone painting.

The work has four divisions, each with its appropriate atmosphere and color. As a whole it is much livelier and less ponderous than most oratorios.

THE PERFORMANCE of the Tanglewood chorus, prepared by John Oliver was an aural delight. The blend was skillful, there was plenty of dynamic variety and even in the loudest sections the sound was never strident.

Soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Seth McCoy, tenor, and Robert Hale, bass, shared a wealth of melodious arias and recitatives as well as duets and trios.

BSO Opener Melts Old Gate Records

By R. C. HAMMERICH
Union Staff

LENOX — At least twice yesterday afternoon robins dropped from a nest over the sound-reflecting panels above the heads of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival Chorus at Tanglewood and soared gracefully out over the 7665-member audience into the sunshine.

It was significant. The sun was warm, the air balmy and the music and countryside beautiful.

The combination, in spite of threatening clouds Friday and Saturday, induced Tanglewood's loyal followers to set an attendance record for the opening weekend of the 35th Berkshire Festival.

The gate counters rang up a count of 23,102 itemized as follows: 5586 for the Friday night Bach program, 2014 for the Saturday morning open rehearsal, 7837 for the Saturday night program and 7655 for yesterday's performance of Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons."

It had seemed Saturday night, after experiencing one of the most beautifully-played concertos I ever heard in the great shed at Tanglewood, that Sunday's program couldn't be anything but an anti-climax.

Such was not the case; it now seems more likely that the rest of the Tanglewood season might be an anti-climax after "The Seasons."

Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducted an inspired performance of that masterpiece.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, conductor of the Minnesota Orchestra, was guest conductor Saturday night, and Claude Frank solo pianist. Frank has long been one of my favorite pianists, especially with Mozart's concertos. He is, I believe, under-rated by the general public.

Saturday he played Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 (which was composed second). It, like No. 2, could have been composed by Mozart; they are so much in the same style.

Frank played it with wondrous gentleness and affection. Even the vigorous sections were handled with the grace of a broken-field ball carrier who needs only half his skill to avoid his tacklers.

There was no pounding, only vitality; no

See TANGLEWOOD OPENER
Page 5

CONDUCTOR SEIJI OZAWA

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Opener Melts Gate Records

Continued From Page 1

soft spots, only lacy delicacy; no sentiment, only emotion. He played superlatively.

And there was a beautiful bonus that welled up out of the middle movement: the solo clarinet work contributed by Harold Wright.

The Bach suite (No. 3 in D) and Mozart symphony (No. 39, K.543) were not as impressive in Skrowaczewski's hands as was his accompaniment for the piano concerto.

The Minnesota conductor is a competent leader who is properly careful of the precision and clarity needed for the classical programs he usually asks the Boston Symphony Orchestra to play at Tanglewood, but the Bach and Mozart Saturday were not inspiring — not like Frank's Beethoven.

Yesterday, however, the program was a joy from start to finish. "The Seasons" is a complicated oratorio because there are so many dialogues among soloists and chorus, short, intermingled passages in the libretto that gave the composer many opportunities for variety of vocal and instrumental combinations and for inventive sound effects.

Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, and the orchestra's music director designate to follow William Steinberg next year, led his forces with a boyish buoyancy, dancing and bounding on the podium without recourse to the score lying unopened on the music stand in front of him.

The chorus, a group of about 120 spread across the back of the stage, was crisper than any other on the same stage in my memory; its note and phrase articulation (not words) were unusually precise, an attribute for which the rehearsal director, John Oliver, must take most credit, even though he has been ill.

But, of course, the late rehearsals with Ozawa last week, and his podium style also were responsible for the chorus's success in establishing the basic, joyous atmosphere of gemutlichkeit that pervaded the afternoon.

The orchestra also, of course, contributed to the happiness, but this oratorio (which probably would be staged more often if it weren't so difficult) was written primarily for voices.

The soloists were Phyllis Curtin, whose soprano was clear and cool; Seth McCoy, whose tenor was clear and warm; and Robert Hale, whose bass was pleasing, apparently effortless and delivered with unusual clarity of diction.

"The Seasons" is a real gem of about 100 minutes in four sections; it has lyrical beauty, thrusting drama and humor. It ought to be heard more often.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

B. Sym.

Sunday, July 9

Pianist Garrick Ohlsson joined conductor Seiji Ozawa and the Boston Symphony to produce an enjoyable, if not flawless Sunday concert.

The program was well designed. Haydn's wit in the playful Symphony no. 60 in C, originally composed as incidental music for the Regnard comedy "Le Distrait," was given a beautifully controlled, yet joyously musical interpretation by Mr. Ozawa. It proved to be a perfect appetizer to the main course, Garrick Ohlsson's tasteful, businesslike, and understated reading of the Beethoven 3rd piano concerto in C minor. Mr. Ozawa was a worthy accompanist to Mr. Ohlsson's approach, and the two achieved some moving moments: the coda of the opening movement, the dialogue between piano and winds in the Largo, and the fugato of the witty Rondo, to name several.

While Mr. Ozawa was on top of Mr. Ohlsson's every nuance, the orchestra, particularly the violins, seemed somewhat sluggish in the Beethoven. This was an omen for what was to come after intermission.

Ravel's "Mother Goose" suite, in spite of its frequent lush sonorities, demands the same fastidious care in instrumental execution as the Haydn which was done so well. Aside from some lovely episodes, as in "Beauty and the Beast," generally sloppy playing marked by ragged attacks and inconsistent phrasing prevented the work from ever really jelling.

John Hinners

2 Directors Score With Symphony For First Weekend at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Baroque and classic works played by a modified Boston Symphony Orchestra of 60 players attracted audiences totalling 23,102 to the Berkshire Music Festival's first weekend at Tanglewood.

Conducting in totally opposite styles were demonstrative Seiji Ozawa, incoming regular conductor of the Boston Symphony, Friday night and yesterday afternoon, and quietly efficient Stanislaw Skrowaczewski of the Minnesota Orchestra, Saturday night.

Greatest impact was made by the performance of Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons," yesterday by the orchestra, Tanglewood Chorus of 125 mixed voices, and soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Seth McCoy, tenor, and Robert Hale, bass.

It's difficult to imagine a more structurally delineated account of the Haydn, into which poured a good quota of sentiment, pictorial references and general ebullience.

In Miss Curtin's case, these qualities were more enhancing than the quality or use of her voice.

Picturesque Style

As usual, Ozawa directed in detail with few references to his score. Behind his picturesque style, it was evident that he kept a firm grip on manifold instrumental and choral strands, while allowing his soloists all the freedom they had a right to expect.

The chorus sang with excellent schooling and an affinity for the composer's emotional responses to nature. Wide contrasts in temperament were achieved in such as "Come, Gentle Spring" and the stirring stag hunt song from the autumn sequence.

Pronunciation of the German was excellent.

Most of Miss Curtin's efforts were pitchworthy, but recitatives and arias were generally thin in quality. Hale sang with enough tonal substance to project. Passagework was fluent in "The Ploughman," and he maintained aliveness of spirit. McCoy benefited his role with a clear, steady lyrical voice.

Paino soloist Claude Frank would have been the hero of Saturday night's concert except for Skrowaczewski's crystaline results in Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E flat.

The orchestra gave Skrowaczewski the purest of melody, precise rhythmic obedience and details that were inseparable from the baton.

Radiant tone was dispensed in the andante and the minuet was lightsome but vital in its dance genre.

After a slightly shaky start Bach's Third Suite emerged as a compact product with constand underscoring of melody.

Overture had a tinge of harshness in trumpets but retained its noble character. Skrowaczewski brought the tempo into high gear — no problem for violin soloists Joseph Silverstein and Alfred Krips.

Seiji Ozawa

Music Reviews

PROGRAMS

Saturday Night

Stanislaw Skowaczewski, conductor
Suite No. 3 in D major . . . . . Bach
Piano Concerto No. 1 . . . . Beethoven
C major, Claude Frank, pianist
Symphony No. 39 in E flat, ... Mozart
K.543

Sunday Afternoon

Seiji Ozawa, conductor
The Seasons . . . . . Haydn
Boston Symphony
Tanglewood Festival Chorus
Phyllis Curtin, soprano
Seth McCoy, tenor
Robert Hale, bass

The famous "Air" was played with rare richness by strings in all ranges and the ensuing dances had vitality and excellent note production.

Ups and Downs

Following a sensitively-toned, stimulating orchestral introduction, Frank embarked on a performance of Beethoven's First Piano Concerto that had its ups and downs.

Except for technical accidents in the cadenzas, Frank was generally reliable. Phrasing was sculptured and there were few incidents of keyborad pounding.

The pianist's approach was academic rather than emotional. Results were routinely traditional. In the slow movement, however, melody was made to sing with warmth, and the concluding rondo had sparkle and marvelous cooperation from conductor and orchestra.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977
JUL 3 1972
New England Newsclip

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264

JUL 5 1972 New England Newsclip

Festivals off to a soggy start

By Louis Snyder

Lenox, Mass.

"Hail, O sun, hail! The source of light and life. All voices praise thee, Nature praises thee . . ." sang the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, and not a moment too soon. It had been a dreary, sodden weeekend. When the Berkshires started to dry out under the Sunday afternoon warmth, this full-throated thank-you embodied in Haydn's earthy cantata, "The Seasons," spoke wholeheartedly for everyone in that north-southwest corner where Massachusetts and Connecticut meet. At least three festivals shared a common drenching – the Boston Symphony's at Tanglewood, the Berkshire String Quartet's at Music Mountain, Falls Village (Conn.), and Yale University's summer division at Norfolk.

To begin at the end, on Sunday afternoon, the skies were clear, the Tanglewood grass carpet was green and velvety, and the view of the hills beyond Stockbridge Bowl was as usual, unparalleled. More than 7,000 listeners were there to hear the first Tanglewood performances of Haydn's "Die Jahreszeiten" ("The Seasons"), a paean to nature's mixed bag of blessings from April (Der Fruhling) through March (Der Winter), under Seiji Ozawa, with John Oliver's extraordinary Festival Chorus, and three engaging vocal soloists – Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and Robert Hale – to bring the points home.

As probably everyone knows, "The Seasons" is a folksy, open-hearted song and dance rhythmic appreciation of spring, summer, fall, and winter as expressed by farmer Simon (bass-baritone Hale), country lass Hanne (soprano Curtin), and peasant swain Lukas (tenor McCoy), cushioned on a multifarious and comfortable bed of vocal and orchestral sound. From beginning to end, it is ingenuous, audibly charming, and possibly, before it is over, a little bland for all its unqualified cheeriness – an unfettered reminder of the days before insect control, grape boycotts, and "hunter, go home." Soloists, orchestra, and chorus joined Mr. Ozawa in making this an open-hearted, uncomplicated rendition, acclaimed by an audience of 7,660-plus.

Mr. Ozawa's similar results with the same chorus on Friday evening in Bach's Cantata No. 191, "Gloris in Excelsis Deo," came at the end of an evening of Bach which was otherwise something less than distinguished. Despite the ever brilliant participation in two Brandenburg Concertos (No. 2 in F and No. 5 in D), and the Suite No. 2 in B minor of Doriot Dwyer, flute; Armando Ghitalla, trumpet, Joseph Silverstein, violin, Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Robert Levin, harpsichord, the chamber orchestral frame was limp and formless – a disappointing way to begin the summer.

On Saturday in Connecticut, the elements were somewhat kinder to the Berkshire Quartet in a matinee concert of works by Haydn (Opus 76, No. 5 in D), Ravel (in F), and Schubert's mighty Quintet in C major for two Violins, (Urico Rossi, Leonard Felsberg), Viola (Richard Skerlong), and two Cellos (Fritz Magg and guest Donald Rothmuller). The Haydn and the Ravel, barring a few intonation problems, made ideal summer afternoon listening in this friendly, intimate setting. The Schubert, a rather formidable piece to tackle, did not quite achieve the rather overwhelming grandeur a thoroughly impeccable performance might have given it. A good sized group filled the airy, paneled hilltop hall – a unique chamber music mecca.

A few miles away, Yale in Norfolk began its summer music festival Saturday evening, with the East Coast premiere of Carlisle Floyd's "Of Mice and Men," adapted by the composer from John Steinbeck's novel and play. (It will be repeated July 7 at 8:30).

The performers, a fine student orchestra under Gustav Meier's direction, and the fresh-voiced principals, more aware in the subtleties of singing than of acting, did well by Mr. Floyd's well wrought score. The production, simply set and well lit by Michael H. Yeargan, and directed with perhaps an excess of energy by James Crabtree, fitted well into the rustic Music Shed which is essentially a concert hall rather than a theater.

The power and simplicity of Steinbeck's classic story of two migrant ranch workers in their pathetic attempt to realize a dream of small dimensions, is, for all its earthiness, the stuff of tragedy. And of course music is a great ennobler. However, on one hearing, it scarcely seemed that the saga of Lennie and George needed Mr. Floyd's help, however adept, to make its heart-rending effect. The trios and duets emerged more as a concession to form that content, and one felt the need for musical writing that grew more out of the protagonists' characters than the fabric of events in which they were involved.

A large audience responded flatteringly to performance and composer.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Crowd at Tanglewood

By DOROTHY STOWE

LEE, Mass. — B was for Bach, for beginning, and for Boston Symphony at Tanglewood last night, as the orchestra, with Seiji Ozawa conducting, began its 35th Berkshire Festival season. And a surprisingly large crowd of 5600 hard core devotes turned up, some even huddling on a more than damp lawn.

If one were to color the scene, the background would have to be black and grey; but from the stage radiated tones of pastel delicacy, as Ozawa led an all-Bach program featuring a variety of solo instruments.

Ozawa himself was a pleasant surprise last night. It is as if his appointment as Boston Symphony's Musical Advisor has freed him to be his old sincere self. Gond are many of the aggravating mannerisms which formerly hampered his conductorial style, and a great joy to inspire his charges.

Only a part of the orchestra performed in the two Brandenburg Concertos presented, which were originally scored for few instruments.

First Nighter

In the Concerto No. 2 the solo group consisted of Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Joseph Silverstein violin, Armando Ghitalla trumpet, and Ralph Gomberg, oboe.

After a bouncing Allegro, the soloists performed an Andante of great serenity, permeated by the soothing orderliness which we cherish in Bach, conveying the sense of God in his heaven above and beyond life's daily grind and tribulations.

The Allegro assai featured virtuoso trumpet playing by Ghitalla, who coped with a tremendous number of notes, many of them very high, with exemplary control and artistic restraint.

In the familiar Concerto No. 5, Mrs. Dwyer and Silverstein were again soloists with Robert Levin, harpsichordist. The small-voiced instrument did not carry emphatically, but once our ears were attuned to its slight sound it made a wonderful appeal. Levin is an impressive artist, whose cadenzas in the fast movements were stunningly executed.

Mrs. Dwyer was a busy lady last night, as she appeared for a third time as soloist in the Suite No. 2 in B Minor for flute and orchestra.

This series of dance forms provided a showcase for her accurate technique and unfailingly tasteful style. But in technical ability and feeling she didn't project quite enough soloistic authority to really grip the imagination. Only in the final Badinerie did she fully take charge.

The Cantata No. 191, "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," is a paean of joy adapted from the Gloria of the B Minor Mass. The large festival chorus (John Oliver, director) and orchestra gave a fresh and exultant performance, under Ozawa's sure hand. As soloists soprano Phillis Curtin and tenor Seth McCoy fulfilled their assignments effectively.

On Sunday's concert, Ozawa will conduct Haydn's "The Seasons," with the Chorus and Miss Curtin, McCoy and Robert Hale as soloists.

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D. 195,032

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens as Ozawa conducts Bach

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Tanglewood 1972 began Friday night with Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of music by Bach. That is really impossible for Tanglewood. The proper number of performers is too small to fill the shed convincingly, and when there are enough for the Shed, they are too many for the music.

Ozawa's performances last year of the Magnificat and the 6th Brandenburg Concerto were tours de force by an exceedingly musical man handicapped by conditions and partly by some of the choices he made. The musicality won out though, and that concert was fun.

This year's opening, however, was disappointing. The dances in the B minor suite for flute and strings had humor and a nice lilt; on the other hand, the slow part of the overture was close to unintelligible, and most of the playing in the 2d and 5th Brandenburgs was long stretches of unarticulated joggling. Dorio Anthony Dwyer played the suite inventively and with taste. The Brandenburg soloists, who adequately filled in their parts in an undistinguished framework, were Mrs. Dwyer, Armando Ghitalla, trumpet, Ralph Gomburg, oboe; Joseph Silverstein, violin ; and Robert Levin, harpsichord.

I found Levin's playing of the cadenza in No. 5 distractingly fussy, and I want in any case to make the wicked suggestion that if the piece is to be done in so vast a space, it might go better with a piano.

The program also included a Christmas cantata of Bach's, No. 191, which turned out to be the "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," "Domine Deos," and "Cumsancto Spiritu" of the B minor Mass, the last two set to the words of the doxology and with the music somewhat reshaped.

The Tanglewood Chorus sang well except for the squeaking of the sopranos on their high A, but it was too large, for the Bach and for the orchestra, and Ozawa did little except cheer things along. The tempi for the first chorus were badly judged, too, with "Et in Terra Pax" too slow in relation to an already excessively slow "Gloria in excelsis Deo." The solo singing of Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy was inelegant and sounded strained.

Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducted Saturday night, and he, too, had Bach on his program, the suite number 3 in D Major. There he had two thing going for him: one is that this suite is more orchestral in style than the chamber-musical pieces of the night before, but the other and more important being that Skrowaczewski seemed really to have thought out the interpretation. His style, it was sometimes more baroque than Ozawa's and often more romantic, but what made it good was the vigilant intelligence that had something happening all the time.

The same sense of something always at work informed to an even greater degree the marvelous performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 in C major in which Claude Frank was the soloist. Last summer I greatly enjoyed its performance by Christoph Eschenbach with Ozawa — the brilliant, giddily, playful, quick movements more than the not - much - beyond - pretty Largo — but Saturday offered the greater pleasure of hearing the work played but a grown up. It was not so funny, and thereby much funnier. Frank's playing was comment and variation more than exposition, but the witty and perceptive detail was seem always in the context of longer lines and larger issues.

Frank, by the way, is one of the few pianists who play the 3rd and largest of the cadenzas Beethoven wrote for the first movement, one composed many years later and really outrageously large, adventuresome, and dangerous, and he wowed the house with it just as he did in playing the concerto here seven years ago. For Frank's brilliant and mature playing, Skrowaczewski and the orchestra provided a superb framework, both springy, big, and alive.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549

JUL 2 1972

Music: Tanglewood's Start Is Soggy

By ALLEN HUGHES
Special to The New York Times

LENOX, Mass., July 1— Since the Boston Symphony Orchestra is powerless to control the weather, it cannot be blamed for the soggy, cheerless atmosphere in which its 35th Berkshire Festival began at Tanglewood last night.

And with an attendance of 5,586 for the opening despite the unfavorable conditions, the management had no cause for morning-after blues in regard to box-office receipts.

All went well enough then if the concert itself was not taken into account. It was another and less fortunate matter. The subject was Bach, and Seiji Ozawa, artisitc director of the festival and music director-elect of the orchestra, was in charge.

On the basis of the performances one would have to assume that Bach does not rank high on Mr. Ozawa's list of specialties.

Tentative Beginnings

He managed with seemingly little effort to lead a relatively small ensemble of the Boston Sympothy virtuosos through run-throughs of the second and fifth Brandenberg concertos and the Suite No. 2 in B minor that had about as little personality and style as could be imagined in this day and age.

The performances sounded as though Mr. Ozawa had no interest in the works as expressive artistic creations, found no stylistic or technical challenge in them and had not bothered to reherse them carefully.

The players jogged through the pieces competently, and that was about it. The tentativeness of the beginnings of some of the movements was clearly Mr. Ozawa's fault, not theirs.

The soloists in the Brandenberg Concerto No. 5 were Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Joseph Silyverstein, violin; both members of the orchestra, and Robert Levin, harpsichord, who was engaged for the occasion.

Mr. Levin seemed more concerned about style than the others, but the amplification of the harpsichord was not sufficient to produce proper balance, and he could not be heard as clearly as he should have been.

Miss Dwyer was soloist in the Suite in B minor, and she and Mr. Silverstein were joined by Armando Ghitalla, trumpet, and Ralph Gomberg, oboe, in the Brandenberg Concerto No. 2.

Ozawa Comes to Life

The final work was the Cantata No. 191, "Gloria in Excelsius Deo," an adaptation of three movements from the "Gloria" of the Mass in B minor.

For this, the orchestra was joined by the large Tanglewood Festival Chorus, of which John Oliver is the director, and two soloists, Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Seth McCoy, tenor.

With the increased forces and the greater complexity of the music, Mr. Ozawa came to life and led a vital and convincing interpretation.

This made for a satisfying conclusion to the concert but it did not resolve the fundamental questions relating to the Berkshire Festival's commitment and responsibility to Bach. In this day of enlightment and expertise in regard to Bach's works, it is shocking to hear them done so indifferently here.

The festival will continue tonight with Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducting a Bach-Mozart-Beethoven program featuring Claude Frank as soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 and tomorrow afternoon with Mr. Ozawa conducting Haydn's "The Seasons."

Among other conductors scheduled to appear here this summer are Bruno Maderna (July 8 and 21), William Steinberg (July 14 and 15), Leonard Bernstein (July 22), Eugene Ormandy (July 28 and 29) and Colin Davis (Aug. 11, 12 and 13).

The contemporary music week presented in cooperation with the Fromm Music Foundatio will run from Aug. 4 through 10 and will begin with a concert of works by works by Copland, Ruggles, Stravinsky and Wourinen led by Michael Tilson Thoms.

The Berkshire Festival will end on Aug. 20 with Mr. Ozawa conducting Mahler's gigantic Symphony No. 8.

Newsday
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
D. & SUN. 427,270

JUL 3 1972

MUSIC

Tanglewood: Soggy but satisfying

By Al Cohn

Lenox, Mass.—Aside from the fact that I hit my wife between the eyes with what was actually a very small rock, the opening weekend at Tanglewood was a remarkable success.

The recent rains did not bypass the Berkshires by any means, and the condition of the countryside when we arrived Friday was, in a word, muddy. Spreading out on the lawn for opening night of the Berkshire Music Festival required an airtight raft and a large umbrella. (What the evening really called for was two good tickets for the shed.) Besides the intermittent showers, the music was Bach, and perhaps not the most joyous Bach at that. The 5,586 souls who showed up (not to mention the Boston Symphony) truly qualify as music lovers.

The remarkable success took place at the concerts yesterday and Saturday night, but a share of the credit must go to the preceding rotten weather, which kept the crowds from reaching the Jones Beach proportions of recent years. For once, the area motels and guest houses were caught with their vacancy signs hanging out. ("The ink I'm using is red because that's what we're in," our innkeeper told us.) With the traffic lighter, one could actually eat dinner and get to the concert in time without using a helicopter.

Best of all, the sun showed up Saturday afternoon. The lawn, while a bit damp, no longer resembled right field at Shea Stadium and the evening concert couldn't have been more pleasurable. Even Bach was in a better mood (Suite No. 3 in D is, as the program notes say, "Poignantly lovely").

As for the performances, surely Stanislaw Skrowaczewski and Claude Frank must rank high among this country's underrated musicians. The former conducted the Boston with a hand that was equally deft for Bach, Beethoven and Mozart. Not even the rock music that drifted over from an all too nearby beer parlor could detract from the light, precisely-handled 39th Symphony. And Frank showed the sensitivity and technique that can make Beethoven's First Piano Concerto an exciting experience.

Yesterday's bright, sunny weather brought enough of a crowd to make the weekend's total of 23,102 the biggest opening weekend audience in nine years, but again there was a noticeable shortage of crying babies and preoccupied poker players. The program was devoted to Haydn's "The Seasons." Everyone watched attentively as Seiji Ozawa's hair kept perfect time with the music and soprano Phyllis Curtin led a distinguished cast of singers through this thoroughly appropriate tribute to all kinds of weather.

And so, neither floods nor mud nor dark of winter can stay Tanglewood from its appointed annual season, for which we should be grateful. But take heed: Bigger weekends with more popular programs are ahead, and unless you enjoy camping out with the mosquitos, make reservations well in advance, and bring sandwiches. I would tell you how I happened to hit my wife in the head with a rock, but she's coming up the path now, and she is carrying something in her hand, and she is not smiling . . . /II

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 3 1972

High Tanglewood Standard Set By Soloist Claude Frank

By BILL RICE

Claude Frank was heard as piano soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday evening in the second concert of the initial weekend of the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducted the permormance, which set a high standard for all concerts to follow during the summer, from both an orchestral and soloistic standpoint.

Frank was heard in Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 1 in C, a work which was actually the second piano concerto written by the composer. Somehow, it was published first, At any rate, it is a composition with strong ties to the classical style of Mozart, and while not considered by some musicologists to be the best of Beethoven's first three classically oriented concerto's, it did, at the hands of Mr. Frank, become a work of exceptional beauty.

Frank soon won his audience over completely, not with flamboyant technique, but with a secure command of his instrument and a musical interpretation which brought more important things to the surface.

Sensitive Touch

The young soloist has a sensitive touch and nimble dexterity which allows the most rapid of passages to be played with deceptive ease, while at the same time subtle nuances in the music are brought out with crystal clarity.

If anyone had doubts about the pianists technical ability they were soundly dispelled in the cadenza at the end of the first movement, a cadenza which with its chromaticism, frequent modulations and changes in mode, pointed to the Beethoven of the future.

Swirling two-handed passages concluding the brilliant cadenza were played so smoothly, it seemed only a harpist could match Frank's command of these few measures.

A light moment in the concert came at the end of the movement. Just when it appeared no one would applaud in between the movements (doesn't someone always?), a loud "Bravo" was heard from the back of the Tanglewood shed. The call caught Frank off guard and he broke up in spite of himself. A thunderous applause followed, for the "bravo," even if ill-timed, was well deserved.

Ovation

When the applause died down, Frank played the slow movement with firm resolution. He was called back several times at the conclusion of the work by a five-minute standing ovation.

The concert opened with Bach's Suite no. 3 in D. The somewhat abbreviated version of the Boston Symphony (the full orchestra arrives in two weeks) gave an exceptional account of itself in this well known work, with fugal passages being crisply played, basses and cellos moving lightly, and strings in general blending nicely with the harpsichord, played by Robert Levin.

Armando Ghitalla, while not listed as a soloist for this performance as he was in Friday evening's performance of Bach's Brandenburg concerto no. 2, added much to the suite, playing the miniature "baroque" trumpet with consummate taste, keeping with the instruments invaluable high register in perfect balance with the whole.

The suites Air contains melody of such beauty, one has to wonder what inspired Bach to write it.

The final dances of the suite were played with a delightful relaxation that enhanced the music's festivity.

Conductor Skrowaczewski is of Polish descent and is currently director of the Minnesota Orchestra. At Tanglewood he showed himself to be a precise, business-like conductor of the "no nonsense" school. He led the orchestra through a fine reading of Mozart's "Symphony no. 39 in E flat" to bring the concert to a fitting close. What composer sounds better in an outdoor setting than Mozart?

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 3 1972

Kite Magazine July 7, 1972

Tanglewood Opens In (Hardly) A Blaze of Glory

By Milton Zapolski

Friday evening's first performance this summer by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood left much to be desired. Seiji Ozawa led the reduced orchestra in a J.S. Bach program including the second and fifth Brandenburgs, the second suite, and the cantata number 191. The common denominator was inadaquacy of interpretation coupled with occasional flashes of inspiration.

Soloists for the Second Brandenburg Concerto were Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; and Ralph Gomberg, oboe, Dwyer's flute otten eclipsed the piccolo-trumpet since the latter was played so softly and ineffectually even though this piece is a showcase for the high instrument and Ghitalla usually plays more loudly than anyone. Only the show movement was at all interesting, and even this was marred by poor phrasing.

Phrasing a Travesty

The Fifth Brandenburg offered Mrs. Dwyer again on flute, this time accompanied with Joseph Silverstein, violin and Robert Levin, harpsichord. Throughout the harpsichord could not be heard loudly nor clearly, and in fact one had to strain to hear the notes at all. If one did not know this music beforehand, he would not have been able to tell what was being played.

Ozawa's phrasing was once again a complete travesty. Never have I heard the wonderful first movement theme rendered so heavy-handedly and unsupple. The forced accents that accompanied the simple descending line were stressed out of all proper proportion and one was left with a boring sewing-machine type of phrasing for the remainder. Clearly, Ozawa has never assimilated Bach's style. Topping it off, when the harpsichord cadenza began, Levin took off on a tangent, purposely losing the basic pulse and over-interpreting Bach's brilliant writing.

Awkward Pyrotechnics

At every cadence, Levin slowed down as if to ritard to a conclusion, but instead of giving the music more romantic rubato, it made the pyrotechnics sound awkward and lagging in all the wrong places, thereby voiding emotional inertia as well as encouraging structural discontinuity. The other soloists did better with their parts.

After intermission the Second Suite was given a much more idiomatic reading than spoiled the first half. Dwyer's flute playing was beautiful and exemplary throughout, especially her vital phrasing of the brisk polonaise that captivated in addition to being stylistically perfect.

Full Chamber Compliment

The program closed with the Cantata 191, subtitled "Gloria in excelcis Deo" and consisting of two choral movements surrounding a vocal duet. For this piece, Ozawa

More on next page

augmented the orchestra beyond a dozen members to full chamber complement and utilized the entire Tanglewood Festival Chorus. This year the choir sounds much better than last, as evidenced in part by the noble and uplifting spirit they imparted to the final chorus. Singing the duet were soprano Phyllis Curtin and tenor Seth McCoy. Their interlude was characterized by lovely vocal tone, ideal balance, and phrasing that made one take notice. The audience applauded just as loudly after the cantata as after the Brandenburgs, indicating most of the audience knows nothing about Bach or (as Charles Ives put it) I have my ears on wrong.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 4 1972

'The Seasons' Brings Some Excitement

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

For a piece of music that Franz Josef Haydn wrote with the utmost reluctance, "The Season's is a revelation.

Seiji Ozawa conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on a beautiful Sunday afternoon in this work and the results were varied but the variation was from competent to inspiring.

THE WORK was written when Haydn was getting old; he was sick and when he finished it he was astounded that it was a triumph. He took three years to do it and it struggled both with the music and with the librettist, Baron Van Sweiten, who had done the libretto for "The Creation" which was a success from the moment of its premiere.

But if Haydn is a great creator, "The Seasons" easily shows why. The very best expressions of a considerable talent are all present in this work. It has vitality, nobility, a fine melodic sense, and, an impressive command of his technical and musical materials.

THE CHORUS, of course, was the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, prepared by John Oliver, and they did a fine job in a work that is arduous and long. The soloists, were Phyllis Curtin soprano, Seth McCoy, tenor, and Robert Hale, bass.

Curtin, who has given many of us a great deal of pleasure over the years, had her problems this day. It is perhaps too harsh at this stage to make a definitive comment, but the voice is beginning to hoot, and there is a shrill quality that indicates that the voice is perhaps beyond its full bloom. She is, nonetheless a professional, so she did the job with that inherent competence that is implicit in the word professional.

PHYLISS CURTIN

McCOY SOUNDS better every year. His particular vocal metier is oratorio work and he does a lot of it with results that are increasingly effective.

Hale, a young bass from the New York City Center Opera, has some good sounds in a restricted range. His problem in this type of music is his tendency, shared by many singers, to stop and listen to himself which plays havoc with the meter. Ozawa, more than once had to prod him gently to keep the beat going.

THERE WERE some genuinely exciting moments. The last chorus that concludes the first movement "Spring" dubbed the "God of Light" is a fine and moving peice that is Haydn at his most effective. Considering his place between Bach and Beethoven (although he could not have known) Haydn is surely oen of the authentic geniuses in Western music.

There was an audience of some size both on the lawn and in the shell and on this sunny and placid Sunday of a New England summer, they were well pleased and well served.

PASTE OVER

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

As I Hear It

The golden mean

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

IT HAS BEEN an established tradition at Tanglewood since the Koussevitzky days to start the season's schedule with a week or two of Bach and Mozart. It is fitting for many reasons and this year's adherence to that policy has an especial spice for it presents conductors younger and less mature, only by experience, than Koussevitzky, Munch and Leinsdorf.

There has been an apochryphal legend that a conductor must be venerable to conduct the classics. Young men get the spirit of the romantics naturally but it was supposed to take long distillation to be able to do the simple things well. The way of wisdom between extremes, sufficiency without excess, was supposed to be the measure of maturity. In other words, the goal was the golden mean, the 'aurea mediocritas' which Horace wrote, in Cowper's translation,

He that holds fast to the golden mean, and lives contentedly between the little and the great
Feels not the wants that pinch the poor
Nor plagues that haunt the rich man's door.

The inception of a composition can come about in four ways: voluntary, suggested, requested or commissioned. From this point of view Bach's influences are the most transparent. He occupied posts during most of his career in which it was his duty and assignment to produce Gebrauchsmusik-music, that is, for use on special occasions.

* * * *

IN THE CASE of a painter, who gets a general commission or who starts from an autochthonous inspiration, the "message" may contain instructions: to do a miniature or a mural. We accept without questioning as faits accomplis the immortal canvases of the masters. I have no idea if scholars in the genre may have been of the opinion that "The Night Watch" might have been equally effective had it been a few feet shorter in either or both dimensions. I know there are opinions that some movements of the Mahler or Bruckner symphonies would have had just as much impact had they been shorter. But when conductors make "cuts" in performances, purists protest and authorities comment expansively.

Part of the genius of both Bach and Mozart was their built-in sense of the golden mean. How to start a suite or a symphony or where first to apply brush to canvas may be a dilemma for a layman, but instinct and judgment possibly guide a composer's or an artist's hand as surely and infallibly as a homing pigeon senses his orientation.

It is no less a problem to know when to stop. Would that some politicians and preachers could apply to their orations that instinct which guided Vermeer to know when he had applied the conclusive terminal brush stroke.

* * * *

BACH and Mozart possessed a sense of the golden mean. Their musical construction most often conformed to the dimensions of classic temples or shrines, using acquired knowledge progressively with their natural good taste. Like an architect, they had a genius for adapting the exigencies of the plan to the site. The classic Greek temples were fortunately constructed of enduring materials but their historic virtues derive from the formula to which their architects adhered of making the number of columns of the portico in proportionate relationship to the number on the side colonnades. The resultant harmony, truthfulness and grace are equally evident in Bach and Mozart.

No one has ever, in the intervening 250 years, surpassed Bach in writing FOR the violin. Since he wrote the sonatas and partitas for violin solo, countless composers have written music to be played ON the violin but no one has exceeded Bach's grasp of the potentialities of the instrument and utilized them so fully. "The" chaconne, to be sure, has been transposed for piano but it may be said fairly that the "solos" can only be fully realized on the instrument for which they were written. Of course, operatic arias CAN be played ON a violin, so can Chopin nocturnes, many kinds of music submit pretty well to transvestism.

* * * *

IF A COMPOSER finds a sequence of notes, or of harmonies, which he finds viable, he may still have to determine whether to use it as an orchestral theme, in a vocal or an instrumental line or in a work for a chamber music group. Chances are, however, that the flower is already visualized when a phrase germinates in a Bach or a Mozart. Velasquez may have experimented with different colors for the apparel of "Juan de Pareja" and then again he may not. He may have seen the whole picture before he approached the canvas.

Very few possess a sense of the golden mean.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

PAGE ONE

Berkshire concerts, theatre events off to bullish start despite weather

By JOHN A. SCHWEIZER

Despite threats of gloomy weather, many cultural events got off to a record-breaking start this past weekend with large turnouts even before the skies cleared Saturday afternoon.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra began its 35th season at Tanglewood with a total three-day attendance of 23,102, the largest opening weekend ever for the Berkshire Festival.

The Williamstown Theatre sold out its season's opening night Thursday for the first time in its 18-year history as 500 persons attended the production of "Mary Stuart."

Berkshire Theatre

"And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little" attracted capacity audiences to the Stockbridge Playhouse Saturday and Sunday. Approximately 430 persons attended each performance.

"We're off to a very good start," commented James O'Hearn, manager of the Berkshire Theatre Festival's Stockbridge Playhouse. "We were about one-third capacity for Friday night's preview, and extraordinarily well-attended Saturday and Sunday. The season certainly looks good."

5,586 Friday

A spokesman at Tanglewood said the turnout there could be an indicator of a strong season. "Season ticket sales are very, very much up," she reported.

Even with overcast skies, Tanglewood attendance Friday night was 5,586, and at the Saturday morning rehearsal it was 2,014. Some 7,837 persons attended the Saturday night performance. Yesterday's figure was 7,665.

The nearby Lenox Arts Center drew less than had been anticipated by its box office, but Blood, Sweat & Tears, the jazz-rock group, still attracted 1,364 Saturday and 1,488 Sunday to the outdoor concerts. Three performances of "The Mother of Us All" drew capacity audiences totaling 375 Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

"The season looks very strong to us," commented Mark Durand, mananger of the Williamstown Theatre, reporting a three-performance attendance of about 1,350 for "Mary Stuart."

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, which opened the previous weekend, said its attendance for two performances Saturday totaled roughly 600.

"A good weekend despite the weather," noted publicist Karen Rosenbloom.

Traffic Congestion

As usual, the greatest concentration of people was in the Lenox-Stockbridge area, where congestion occurs whenever both Tanglewood and Lenox Arts Center schedule concerts.

Stockbridge Police Chief William J. Obanhein, however, said he had no reports of accidents or other mishaps in connection with the events at the two places.

"There was a lot of traffic, but no problems," he said.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289

JUN 29 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood opens with shed concert

This week, the summer's first Saturday morning open rehearsal will take place at Tanglewood at 10:30 a.m. when artistic director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in music for the following day's concert. Open rehearsals are at the same hour every Saturday, and the admission charge for visitors is $2.50, which benefits the Orchestra Pension Fund.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski conducts the orchestra in a concert that includes Bach's Suite no. 3, Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 1 with soloist Claude Frank, and Mozart's Symphony no. 39 in E-flat.

Ozawa will conduct Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Shed, presenting Haydn's The Seasons. Soloists will be soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, bass Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, director John Oliver.

CUE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
W. 244,000

JUL 15 1972

SUMMER CIRCUIT

JOURNAL
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
S. 207,211

JUL 2 1972 New England Newsclip

MUSIC

PROVIDENCE (Temple of Music, Roger Williams Park) — The Herman Toro Concert Band offers a free holiday concert Tuesday, the Fourth of July at 7 p.m. Soloists: baritone Louis Pezzullo and contralto, Mrs. Josephine DeRotto.

WARWICK (Warwick Musical Theater, Route 2)—Jim Nabors performs Monday through Saturday. Curtain: 8:30 p.m. Monday through Friday; 7 and 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX (Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood) — Seiji Ozawa conducts Haydn's The Seasons at 2:30 p.m. today.

LENOX (Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood) — The Boston Symphony Chamber Players offer a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. Friday, to be followed by a Mozart program conducted by Seiji Ozawa at 9 p.m.

LENOX (Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood) — Bruno Maderna is the guest conductor Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

AMERICAN BALLET THEATRE—At the New York State Theater, the company's ... has ... fina... D.C... ... with ... of ... alre... retu... roste... most... a vo... terec... favo... open... but ... comp... it wo... The ... Alvin ... danc... Ellin... comp... gran... danc... part... days... setti... of t... do ... origi... shou... danc... Marl... who... mag... lowi... pany... "Gis... perf... End... styli... and... wer... as ... bea... wor... the... pea... ess... mo... clas... gee... anc... fab... us ... ten... see... clea... of t... and ... stages.

—STANLEY NEWMAN

JACK BONUS—Upstairs at Max's Kansas City. Black vocal styles sell, but mainly when they come from white mouths. There is a certain irony, then, in the little game where young white singers who want to make money sing black, while many black singers who want to make money sing white. Could there be something wrong with that? Jack Bonus, a young New York white, has developed a soul ballad style of great power. His references to Otis Redding are many, but at times Bonus is overly stylized, as if the style decided to sing a few bars on its own and the hell with the singer. At times he Uncle Toms it a bit—too much artificial funk. But despite these faults I find him one of the better soul-inclined white singers, similar to Van Morrison but often more true to the roots than is Morrison. Bonus writes most of his own songs, plays flute and a very mellow sax, and for the Max's engagement he was backed by a small combo.

—MIKE JAHN

THE CALL OF THE ANGRY OWL—At the Playwrights' Workshop Club. Emil Belasco is a name one hopes to hear again, because he is a playwright of real talent. His "Owl" lacks sufficient dramatic action and character development as a full-length work, which accounts for its unfortunate tediousness. But Belasco has a true gift for language, and he has created a genuinely moving situation—a Puerto Rican farmer, once a fierce political rebel, has lost his mind over the death of his son in Vietnam. Unable to function, he constantly re-lives his political arguments with his dead son, who rejected his father's political activism and chose, instead, nationalism and militarism. The ideological debate is pertinent and stirring, and would be far more dramatically powerful if the father were not so far gone in his madness. Shelly Desai is good in the role, but he fails to enlarge on the one-note tone of madness, just as director Ford Hovis fails to modulate the overall tone of the play. John Michal Herzfeld, however, is thoroughly appealing as the son. Flawed as it is, the play is certain indication that we should be hearing more of Emil Belasco in the future.

—MARILYN STASIO

TANGLEWOOD/BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL—At Lenox, Mass. The powers that be at this oldest and most famous American music festival are faced each year with the problem of balancing sure-fire crowd-pleasers, like Beethoven's Ninth or Bernstein conducting Brahms, with more varied and venturesome programs essential to the Festival's integrity, like Mahler's monumental Eighth Symphony —scheduled for the season's closing Sunday (August 20)—or Haydn's oratorio "The Seasons," given on the season's first Sunday afternoon. Seiji Ozawa, Artistic Director of the Festival and Music Director-elect of the resident Boston Symphony, marshalled expert forces—the Orchestra; the 100-plus Tanglewood Festival Chorus; and soloists Phyllis Curtin, Seth McCoy, and especially Robert Hale, a stalwart of our New York City Opera, to give this exceedingly beautiful, rarely heard work a performance elegant yet forceful, varied with the seasons yet all of one piece. With the lawns verdant from June's rains and the skies bright and clear, the large (but far from overflow) crowd was treated to a perfect marriage of work, performance, and setting—exactly what a day at Tanglewood should always be.

—S.N.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUN 27 1972 New England Newsclip

1/8-beat rest only for Miss Curtin

When soprano Phyllis Curtin, who owns a home in Great Barrington, appears as soloist in the Bach Cantata No. 191 for the opening concert Friday evening at Tanglewood, it will be her third appearance as feature soloist at the opening concert of a major music festival, all within the space of nine days.

Miss Curtin sang with the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra under conductor Roberto Benzi for the recent opening of the Temple University Music Festival in Ambler, Pa. The program featured the Bachianas Brasileiras No. 5 by Hector Villa Lobos and arias from Verdi's opera "Otello."

Today, the soprano is with the Chicago Symphony conducted by Istran Keetesz for the opening of its summer festival in Ravinia. Miss Curtin will sing Benjamin Britten's "War Requiem," a work she sang when it made its United States premiere with the Boston Symphony.

In addition to her Friday appearance, Miss Curtin will be soprano soloist in Haydn's "The Seasons," to be performed Sunday at Tanglewood with Seiji Ozawa as conductor.

Miss Curtin graduated from Wellesley College with a degree in political science. She received her first formal voice training in Boston, and made her debut in the music world at the Berkshire Music Festival. She is married to Eugene Cook, a free-lance photographer and writer. The couple purchased their home in Great Barrington, which was built by the Burghardt family in the late 1700s, in 1965.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUN 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Overtones

By RICHARD CONWAY

A reminder to contemporary music enthusiasts that tonight in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union on the University of Massachusetts campus, a group of professional musicians from the five college area, calling themselves the Old Chapel Contemporary Music Ensemble, will present a concert of avant - garde works. The program begins at 8.

John Holland, one of the composers whose works will be performed, tells me that there will be two more concerts in the series. There have been no specific dates set for these though.

* * *

Listening to Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, play the Prokofieff "Sonata for Flute and Piano, Opus 94" at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center last Sunday, brought to mind a recent conversation with Joanne Tanner, flutist with the Springfield Symphony.

There evidently is quite a renewal of interest in the flute. Its use in much popular music is given a good deal of the credit for this.

At any rate, Mrs. Tanner said that she had had an unusually large number of calls recently requesting information and-or instruction on the instrument.

* * *

Prescott Barrows, who conducted that fine choral concert sponsored by the Springfield Chapter of the American Guild of Organists last month, tells me that the response to that program was so encouraging the guild definitely plans to do another next year.

Arthur Honegger's "King David" will be the major work performed.

* * *

Word comes from yet another country concerning the encouragement and promotion of string playing in the commonwealth.

William Gaver, of the University of Massachusetts music department, says that on Oct. 11, the university will host its first annual String Symposium. This comes in the wake of the recent String Jamboree, sponsored by the Western Massachusetts Music Educators Association and held in Longmeadow, and the Suzuki Violin Festival held in Springfield a couple of weeks ago.

Gaver said that invitations had been made to three schools to actively participate. All string students and teachers, however, were invited to attend.

There would be clinics in the morning, and performance and dialogue in the afternoon.

Beethoven big draw at Tanglewood

Seiji Ozawa, Music Director Designate of Tanglewood

The summer festival music season opened officially Friday night with the first concert amid the fresh scents and cooling greens of Tanglewood's 210 acres in the Berkshire hills.

It began with the sweet, stirring, soothing Brandenburg Concertos, in this case Nos. 2 and 5, and the Suite No. 2 and Cantata No. 191, with Seiji Ozawa leading the boys and girls through the Bach scene with the aplomb of a Sidney Greenstreet. He is now Music Director Designate, this young lion-maned conductor, and he's never been in better control of his talent.

Next week Ozawa turns to Mozart. Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Ann Hobson will play the Concerto for flute and harp, giving these two demure members of the orchestra a chance to show their considerable talents. The Bassoon Concerto will follow, starring Sherman Walt, and the Friday night concert will conclude with the Haffner Serenade.

Three Mahler symphonies will be heard on consecutive Sundays with young James Levine doing the Sixth; Michael Tilson Thomas the Fifth, and Ozawa, leading the Eighth.

Brahms won't be neglected. All four symphonies are scheduled. July 22 Leonard Bernstein comes back to conduct Nos. 2 and 4. Colin Davis does No. 3 on Aug. 12, and Bruno Maderna does No. 1 on July 21.

Then comes Beethoven with William Steinberg (hopefully) doing Symphonies No. 1, 5, 6, and 9, and Ozawa doing No. 4, all on a beautiful all-Beethoven weekend beginning July 14.

This weekend has generated more excitement in the Massachusetts hills than anything else Tanglewood has done in years. Reports are that accommodations are so difficult to secure that some ticket holders are commuting from as far as 30 miles away. One motel owner asked plaintively what the fuss was all about? This middle July weekend used to be his weakest, he said.

The fuss is about Beethoven.

Choral works won't be neglected this season. In addition to the mighty Beethoven Ninth, the schedule includes Verdi's Four Sacred Pieces, the Berlioz Te Deum — both to be conducted by Colin Davis — and Haydns The Seasons, and Mahler's Symphony No. 8.

The cast this season is overwhelming. Karel Ancerl, Eugene Ormandy, and Stanislaus Skrowaczewski join the conductors mentioned above. Piano soloists include Gina Bachauer doing the Beethoven No. 4, John Browning doing the Prokofiev No. 3, Mischa Dichter doing the Brahms No. 2, Alicia de Larrocha the Schumann, Peter Serkin the Beethoven Triple Concerto and Choral Fantasy, Alexis Weissenberg the Chopin, Earl Wild the Stravinsky Concerto for piano and winds, Claude Frank the Beethoven No. 1, and Garrick Ohlsson the Beethoven No. 3.

What a lineup!

There are a number of good recent recordings you might take along — if you have a portable player — and listen to in your motel room while waiting for the concerts to begin.

Telefunken has undertaken a majestic project: the recording of all of Bach's cantatas. Nicholas Harnoncourt and his Concentus Musicus, and Gustav Leonhardt and his Consort will take several years to compile and record these magnificent works. One of the first to come out records three listed as BWV 9, BWV 10, and BWV 11 (SKW 3½). It makes one religious just listening.

An interesting recording by the London Symphonic Band under John Snashall is a collection of Mozart suites from his great operas recorded by Columbia (M 31310). To reduce to pure listening enjoyment the sounds of the Abduction, for instance, or the Marriage of Figaro, is grand enough. To listen to a fine band as smooth as silk perform these pieces is a bonus and a novelty.

Alicia de Larrocha will be performing on July 23 with the Schumann piano concerto. This is a great artist. Listen to her do the Chopin Concerto No. 2 and you'll see why. She does it with L'Orchestre de la Suisse Romande, led by Sergiu Commissiona on London (CS 6733).

The Mahler cycle to be given at Tanglewood led me to a recent pair put out by RCA (LSC-3107 and LSC-7066). Eugene Ormandy, who will conduct at Tangewood leads the Philadelphia Orchestra in the First and Second Symphonies, a superb performance.

The Classics

Mark Stuart

The Record
HACKENSACK, N. J.
D. & SUN. 147,389

JUL 2 1972

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Bach's Music Was Played Well

By RICHARD CONWAY

It was the music of J. S. Bach last night at the opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood. For the gourmet, it was a serving of something from, each of Bach's specialties, prepared to please anyone's tonal tastes.

Actually, the evening had not originally been planned to include such a variety. But, die to an unfortunate illness, it turned out that way.

The Weekend Prelude program was to have been three Bach motet's sung by the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under the direction of John Oliver. Mr. Oliver, however, was taken ill, and Berj Zamkochian, organist - in - residence at Boston College, stepped in to play a program of organ works by the Keipzig genius.

Zamkochian played the "Toccata and fugue in D minor, S. '65", the "Concerto No. 2 in A minor, S. 593", the chorale prelude "O Mensch, bewein' dein' Sunde gross, S. 622", and the "Prelude an fugue in A minor, S. 543".

Without a Score

With the exception of the chorale prelude, Zamkochian played without benefit of score. The technical difficulties at manuals and pedals were played with an ease and assurance that belied their demands. It was a fitting beginning to an evening of Bach's music, for one can hear the organist in practically everything the St. Thomas cantor ever wrote.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its season with three orchestral works by Bach: Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 2 an 5, and the "Suite No. 2 in B minor, S. 1067".

Conductor Seiji Ozawa, who often rivals Bernstein in athletic conducting, wisely let the music speak for itself. With such fine artists as Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Robert Levin, harpsichord; and Joseph Silverstein, violin; making up the concertino group in the Brandenburgs, one need only maintain the balance between and among the instruments, and allow them to interact with each other. These artists know what to do with the Baroque style.

Brilliant Playing

Special mention should be made of the brilliant pianissimo playing in the upper register of the Baroque trmpet by Ghitalla, in the No. 2, and the remarkable harpsichord work in the No. 5, by Robert Levin.

The "Suite No. 2 in B minor" is really close to being a concerto for flute and orchestra. Mrs. Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, put on a tremendous display of technical and musical artistry.

Bach's "Cantata No. 191 'Gloria in excelsis Deo'" closed the evening's concert. It was sung with a joyous — almost reckless — abandon by the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, with Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Seth McCoy, tenor, as soloists.

The cantata is an exuberant work, as are the Brandenburgs and the Suite giving the lie to those who claim that Bach's music is dry, dull, and pedantic. Rather, it throbs with life, propelled forward by an insistent pulse that provides the foundation on which Bach builds his rich rhythmic and melodic invention.

It was given that kind of performance last night.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Friday, June 30

A dampish evening did not prevent a large turnout for Friday's opening all-Bach program at Tanglewood. Conductor Seiji Ozawa led his forces with restraint and sensitivity through the second and fifth Brandenburgs, the Suite no. 2 in B minor, and Cantata 191, "Gloria in excelsis Deo."

But the evening's standouts were the orchestra's principal flutist, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and harpsichordist, Robert Levin. Miss Dwyer contributed so much to the sheer musicality of the evening that one hesitates to pinpoint any single example. Certainly the opening fugue, florid "double," and breathtaking "Bandinerie" in the Suite were noteworthy. The harmonic tension and supple line she achieved with the fine partnership of violinist Silverstein and oboist Gomberg in the andante of the second Brandenburg were overwhelming.

Mr. Levin's sole work in the demanding fifth was spectacular. Aided by a beautiful Carl Fudge instrument, Mr. Levin played with clarity, imagination, and flawless technique. His solo cadenza was thrilling though the rubato was a trifle excessive.

In Cantata 191 the festival chorus was not up to par. The tone was forced, lines were muddy, and the ensemble unresponsive. An adequate rendering of the duet "Gloria Patri" was turned in by soprano, Phyllis Curtin, and tenor, Seth McCoy.

An organ recital by Berj Zamkochian replaced the festival chorus in the weekend prelude. Mr. Zamkochian made an unsuccessful stab at a Bach

John Hinners

Saturday, July 1

Saturday's concert was conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, the distinguished musical director of the Minnesota Orchestra. The Bach Suite in D.S. 1068, which opened the program, was given a clean, well-defined performance. Of particular interest was the exciting harpsichord continuo playing of Robert Levin.

The Beethoven First Piano Concerto was rather a disappointment. Mr. Skrowaczewski's accompaniment was extremely tasteful, emphasizing the Mozartean nature of this work. The solo playing of pianist Claude Frank was, however, not of the quality of the orchestra's work. In the first movement the pianist seemed ill at ease; his performance was characterized by sloppy attacks, dropped notes and a poorly-executed cadenza.

Matters improved somewhat in the second movement, but we could have done with less keyboard histrionics and more tasteful, accurate playing. The third movement fared about as well as the first, although the interesting cadenza (attributed to Beethoven) included snatches of that composer's F-major piano sonata.

Fortunately, this was not the end of the concert; Mozart's Symphony 39 in E-flat concluded the program, and this turned out to be the high point of the evening. The conductor's reading was idiomatic — graceful, elegant, crisp — and the orchestra responded with some of the most simply gorgeous classical playing we can ever remember hearing.

Franklin G. Coleman

Sunday, July 2

Seiji Ozawa's performance Sunday was the Franz Josef Hayden oratorio The Seasons. Soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy, bass Robert Hale, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and harpsichordist Robert Levin joined Mr. Ozawa and the BSO to create an exciting afternoon of music.

One could exhaust all possible superlatives when describing the quality, the taste and the excitement of this performance — it was simply first-rate.

The soloists were truly sensational; Miss Curtin, in particular, was a joy to hear and to watch. She certainly is one of the most intelligent singers around today, and she conveys the meaning of an aria or recitative in a way that few singers can.

Messrs. McCoy and Hale are not to be slighted, however; indeed, the latter's "shepherd" aria in "Summer" and the former's exquisite singing in the "Winter" section were very fine. The three soloists achieved a fine sense of ensemble when singing together, also — often a rare thing under such circumstances.

The well-trained choral forces sang with great conviction, excellent diction and spirit. Ozawa's ability to infuse everyone in sight with his incredible sense of musical style and performance drama was everywhere evident. This was truly music-making of the highest order!

Franklin G. Coleman

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Orchestra's House Organist Performs on Short Notice

John Olivern who was to have conducted the festival chorus singing three of Bach's motets for the 7 p.m. prelude concert, reported in ill, and the orchestra's house organist, Berj Zamkochian, filled in with a 45-minute Bach organ program on short notice.

He played the D Minor Toccata and Fugue, which everyone knows by sound, if not by name, Concerto No. 2, a chorale prelude and the Prelude and Fugue in A Minor.

Tanglewood's organ has an unusual sound, its higher register can be as reedy as a little portable organ and as muffled as one of those old, giants of the movie houses.

It is generally light, however, and airy and transparent, a quality which gives it a spaciousness appropriate to the setting and serves as a distinct advantage when the weather is as heavy as it is this weekend.

Best on the program for me was the closing prelude and fugue because they offer the organist several solo opportunities to display his fancy footwork on the bass pedals and because the fugue is especially agile and dancing.

Tonight Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minnesota (formerly Minneapolis) Orchestra, will conduct the orchestra in a program including Bach's Suite No. 3 in D, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 with Claude Frank, soloist, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 3 1972

Masters and Musicians Open Tanglewood 1972 Season in Style

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Tanglewood Music Festival opened on Friday; and although the weather was threatening it did not rain. On Saturday and Sunday the weather cleared altogether, so for another year in this beautiful place all is well and in order.

The opening program was all Johann Sebastian Bach as is the custom. At the 7 p.m. Prelude, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, under John Oliver's direction, presented three Motets Later at 9 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducted the Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 2 in F and 5 in D. The Suite No. 2 in B Minor and the Cantata No. 191 "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" completed the evening.

THERE ARE six of these Brandenburg Concerti Grossi and the two that were performed are probably the most popular. Particularly the No. 5 by any standards is musically and otherwise the most outstanding of them all. It is for the small orchestra and three solo instruments, flute, violin, and harpsichord. The later has a continuing role in all of the six, (as continuo), but in the Fifth it is to the front as soloist and there is much to do.

Robert Levin, a young and intense lad, played very well indeed, particularly his unaccompanied cadenza near the end of the first movement. He has 65 five rapid and demanding bars all to himself and Levin was quite the master of the situation technically and musically.

It is a fact, however, that this type of chamber music does not find the Shed properly amenable for its style and flavor. The intimate subtleties that are there are difficult to project in the large perimeter of the Shed.

LEVIN, DURING the ensemble work, could not be heard at all at times and this from a front section.

The soloists otherwise, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, Joseph Silverstein, violin, Armando Ghitalla, trumpet, and Ralph Gomberg, oboe, need no introduction to the partisans of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They are all to a man, (and woman) first class players, and after one has heard them as soloists there need be no further conjecture as to the quality of the Orchestra itself.

In the Cantata the solo singers were Phyliss Curtin, soprano and longtime favorite and teacher here at the Berkshire Music School, and Seth McCoy, tenor.

THE TANGLEWOOD Festival Chorus as always was up to the mark musically. This is a young ensemble but the youth brings with it mixed blessings. The young ladies, with their clear and, yes, innocent sound, are a pleasure to listen to. Not in evidence is the fifty year old wobble with which so many large choruses are afflicted. But that same youth is less felicitous for the male voices. Here is where maturity is needed and although there is no question that the boys are giving it a good whack, their tone is thinner and does not project.

On Saturday the traditionalists had an orgy. Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart. What else is there in this life? Indeed, familiar as it all was, the music will never loose that quality to crank up the emotions, to thrill, and, of course, that is the primary reason that these works will be with us until our sun explodes.

The Bach Suite No. 3 in D, Beethoven's First Piano Concerto, and Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E Flat were conducted by the man from Minnesota, Stanislaw Skrowaczewski. The soloist in the Beethoven 1 was Claude Frank.

LET US not dissemble or beat about the bush, Frank came to play and that he did. He was in fine form right on the go and when he finally romped through that bright Rondo he took the audience right along with him. This Rondo is Beethoven at his happiest. As our soul brothers in the jazz dodge would have it, it swings. At any rate the way Frank played it it did.

Skrowaczewski is a competent conductor but, except for the Beethoven, his conducting was workmanlike, again competent, but no more. Perhaps but no more. Perhaps we have been spoiled over the years by all the great ones, but that dynamic tension that separates the great from the near great was no enough in evidence.

But carperies and nits aside, Tanglewood is open again and sing we all huzzah!

SEIJI OZAWA

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525

JUL 5 1972

New England Newsclip

In Concert

Sounds in the Berkshires–Tanglewood Opens

By Peter M. Knapp

Yes, the other end of the state has been wet, too, and just several hours before Friday's opening of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, there was another mighty downpour that left the grounds steamy and sodden Fortunately, there was no rain during the opening weekend's three concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and attendance was surprisingly high.

By Sunday the sun decided to come and the Tanglewood grounds looked like summer again as 7,665 came to hear Seiji Ozawa lead the Boston Symphony and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus in Haydn's "Die Jahreszeiten" ("The Seasons"). Some may have been apprehensive of the warning during the "Summer" section, "See, how threateningly the dark clouds lower, menacing the plain below!" But Haydn's thunderstorm took place only on stage.

The 1801 oratorio had not been given before at Tanglewood (nor in fact has it been heard very often in Boston), which is odd for such an attractive work celebrating the wonders of nature and man's relation to nature. A natural, one would think, for the leafy outdoors setting, with the inevitable birds flying through the shed occasionally.

Sound Effects

The work, in four sections, of course, with choral passages alternating with recitatives, arias and solo ensembles, abounds with some of Haydn's best melodic ideas and pictorial sound effects. Ozawa's edition turned out more late 19th century than early, full-bodied in sound and generous in volume.

There were far too many choristers for clarity and many a detail became swamped in sound. The massed choral sound was impressive in the homophonic passages, but let the line shift from the vertical to the horizontal, and the interweaving of voices got pretty thick. And it was a good thing libretti were passed out (or maybe not so good when the page turning sounded like a librarian's convention), for few words were distinguishable.

Why conductors make problems for themselves with huge choruses of this kind is inexplicable. Even such a well-schooled chorus as the Tanglewood ensemble is going to sacrifice clarity for weight and mass with so many voices.

Effective

Yet even with these problems, the performance was often effective and certainly enthusiastic. There were a number of admirable details and hearty episodes which are, after all, appropriate to the Brueghel-like musical landscape Haydn depicted.

The soloists were soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy and bass Robert Hale. McCoy provided the most consistently interesting singing. He has a light, uncluttered voice of reasonable volume and projects a good deal of personality. And his diction was the best of the trio.

Hale has a darkish, resonant, somewhat grainy bass — a solid singer in a part that doesn't give great range for the singer's art. Miss Curtin, unfortunately, seems to be losing her vocal resources. The intonation is precarious and can be downright unpleasant. She hit many bad notes and vanished in the lower register and seemed not the singer she used to be.

Saturday night's program, attended by 7,837, was conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, music director of the Minnesota Orchestra. The Polish-born conductor, sporting a pink shirt under his white jacket, had his conventional program of Bach, Beethoven and Mozart well under control and the music-making was of a high order.

Skrowaczewski had particularly close rapport with pianist Claude Frank, the splendid soloist in Beethoven's First Piano Concerto. It was an expansively-paced performance on a sensible scale, yet alert and vital. Both conductor and soloist displayed personal touches beyond the conventional. It all seemed to flow so easily.

Familiar And Popular

Frank is a familiar and popular soloist at Tanglewood — a musician of classical balance and interpretive insight. Among the many fine qualities of this performance were his sense of the many gradations of staccato (often echoed in the orchestra), the graceful expression of the second movement, and the bouncy wit of the rondo.

The program opened with a curiously effective reading of the Bach Suite No. 3 in D. Skrowaczeki's tempi were quite fast from beginning to end, but at least consistently so. The formal French overture section seemed quite romantic, with lush instrumental sound and more 19th century than baroque treatment of the dotted rhythms, then the vivace section whizzed by at something like a superpresto. Yet even at this driving pace the playing was tidy and effective.

Later, there were even some appogiature introduced at phrase-endings, and the famous Air was beautifully handled in the rise and fall of its melodic contours. It wasn't really 18th century Bach, but a consistently interesting up-dated version with more than the usual spunk the BSO brings to this score.

To conclude, there was a smooth and deft performance of Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E-flat — another Tanglewood standby. Happy sounds on a summer night.

Friday Bach

Friday night's opening concert was an all-Bach program conducted by Ozawa. 5,586 attended on a cool, damp evening that must have made string playing hazardous.

Ozawa opened with the Second and Fifth Brandenburg Concerti, with soloists from the orchestra — Armando Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Joseph Silverstein, violin, in No. 2, and harpsichordist Robert Levin joining Mrs. Dwyer and Silverstein in No. 5.

The former concerto could have used fewer strings, greater contrast in dynamics and between the various forces, and a tempo allowing more flexibility than Ozawa's quick ones. While most of the notes were in place, the piece needed greater profile and greater definition of Bach's deft interplay. Ghitalla's light, quick, high trumpet part was a bright spot in this Bach with no bite.

Far better — and the event of the evening — was Brandenburg No. 5 in which harpsichordist Levin properly took command. Here, the string accompaniment was thankfully thinned out to accommodate the intimate scale, and the harpsichord was given an amplification boost. (Whether it was enough to carry out to the lawn, I can't say; certainly playing chamber music in such a large volume as the Tanglewood shed is a contradiction.)

Levin's playing was thoroughly brilliant, as we have come to anticipate from him, especially in the cadenza to the first movement, of course, with its forest of notes and rapid passagework — though Levin was equally impressive for the improvisatory quality of his playing as for his agility. In the slow movement his sense of rhythm, timing and inflection provided the platform for a true sense of action and reaction among the solo trio.

After intermission, Mrs. Dwyer, who had a busy night of solos, was the featured artist in the Suite No. 2 in b minor, which settled into the right groove after an awkward account of the overture's dotted rhythms. For her part, Mrs. Dwyer played with her customary aplomb and technical security.

The program ended with the Cantata No. 191, "Gloria in excelsis Deo," an adaptation of three movements from the B minor Mass. It is a properly festive work for a summer festival, with massed voices, trumpets, timpani and organ. But The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, spread wall to wall, added too many voices to the mix and much of the time definition of the parts was lost. Soprano Phyllis Curtin and tenor Seth McCoy were the soloists in the "Gloria Patri" duet, but most of it sounded like Ormandy Bach.

Claude Frank

Seiji Ozawa

INFORMATION OBSCURED

72

Music Review

Exuberance at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST weekend of the Tanglewood season came to an exuberant close yesterday afternoon with the performance of Joseph Haydn's oratorio "The Seasons" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Seiji Ozawa, the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, trained by John Oliver, and with soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy and bass Robert Hall as soloists.

"The Seasons" is essentially an effervescent oratorio. There are no emotional obstacles to be overcome, no political nor military problems which beset the three protagonists whom Haydn charges with the musical narration. At best there is a storm or two, not unlike Beethoven's Pastoral symphony. Haydn drags the sun above the horizon for what in German is the Summer "Morgendammerung" and which his librettist Baron Van Swieten translated as the "morning-twilight," and he introduces Winter by depicting its thick fogs by means of a lugubrious dirge. Otherwise the whole work, taking two hours and a quarter even with many short and judicious cuts, is bright and cheerful and the vigorous and alert response of the chorus compounded the lithe power and youthful robustness Ozawa stimulated.

The score abounds with opportunities for the soloists, all of which were discharged with distinction. One of Miss Curtin's most effective arias was the florid "O What Comfort" in "Spring" allotted to Hanne. McCoy as the young countryman had a mellifluous role all the afternoon and Hale as Hanne's father rounded out the outstanding trio.

The orchestration enlivens the musical action much more than a mere accompaniment and is a happy combination of spontaneity and simplicity. After innumerable inspired pages Haydn's cruse, inexhaustible like the Widow's, still was able to proliferate a stunning fugue for the conclusion of the oratorio and, instead of possibly ending with depleted reserves, he ends with the most rejoiceful utterance of the day.

Whitestone

Conductors Skrowaczewski (left) and Ozawa

* * *

THE SEASON got off Friday night to soggy going on the parking lots and foggy going on the concert stage. It was never quite apparent that Ozawa had a plan in mind for his four Bach works. His tempos were tentative and perfunctory and there seemed to be little awareness of balance. The soloists in the main were proper enough, although Armando Ghitalla did his trumpet in F with virtuosic scintillation in the second Brandenburg concerto and Ralph Gomberg's oboe and Joseph Silverstein's violin were sources of tonal gratification.

In the fifth Brandenburg, Doriot Dwyer and Silverstein were joined by harpsichordist Robert Levin for the solos. There was no poise to the tempo of the first allegro and in the long keyboard cadenza Levin took exagerated liberty. We are used to agogic stress but do not hear distortions with impassivity. If his design was to give proportions to his solo, no one can fault his purpose but the long spells of repose from which it was not obvious that he intended to emerge tried our acceptance tautly. And then to whiz to the other limit of velocity in which he was undeniably extremely capable was of questionable logic.

The B minor suite is the nearest thing to a theme song that Tanglewood and Dwyer maintain. The Badinerie is a specialité de la maison and, as always before, it brought down the house. Credit for this might well be divided between Bach and the soloist. Ozawa here chose a cheerful bounce instead of the breakneck speed Munch used to take.

The Cantata "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" enlisted the huge Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. The two soloists were Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Seth McCoy, tenor. It was a phlegmatic closing to a late evening.

STANISLAW Skrowaczewski, the first of the season's guest conductors, took over the program Saturday evening with another Bach suite, the No. 3 in D, the E flat Mozart symphony, (K543) and, in between, the Beethoven piano concerto No. 1 with Claude Frank as soloist.

Skrowaczewski disclosed many assets. One which deserves greater emulation is his practice of going from one movement to the succeeding one, especially in Bach and Mozart, without a wait. In multimovement works of a later vintage it may be advisable to allow the atmosphere of one movement to dissolve and become dissipated before resuming the normal sequence, but in the aforementioned works there is a compatibility which fits and joins between the terminus of one and the inception of the following, which becomes pleasant and logical as Saturday's conductor decided.

Moreover, Skrowaczewski gave each of the half-dozen Bach movements a character and did as well in the Mozart. One of the most difficult short idioms in music occurs at the top of the opening ascent of the Mozart andante. Skrowaczewski tried several spacings, none exactly to his satisfaction evidently, and not all the orchestra's comprehensive receptivity.

Claude Frank has played the Beethoven first concerto on this stage before with tremendous success. Saturday night he exceeded what many of us had already accepted as the apogee for that work. There was zest and spirit in the brisk allegro and superlative taste in the largo in which clarinetist Harold Wright matched him in legato roundness and in the rondo finale sparks of abandoned delight flew from the keyboard.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

AMERICAN
WATERBURY, CONN.
D. 40,675

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

23,102 Attend Premiere Of Tanglewood Concerts

Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Lenox, Mass., attracted the largest opening weekend audiences in its 35-year history this weekend. A total of 23,102 people attended the concerts in the beautiful Berkshire Hills, sitting in the music shed and on the somewhat soggy lawns.

The weekend's concerts were devoted to music for small chamber orchestra, because many of the Boston Symphony members are still in Boston playing in the Esplanade concerts.

Friday evening's concert consisted of four works by Bach—two Brandenburg concertos (No. 2 in F and No. 5 in D), followed by the Suite No. 2 in B minor and the Cantata No. 191. Conductor Seiji Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Festival, led the orchestra in his customary sprightly style.

Featured soloists for the Brandenburgs were first desk performers Armondo Ghitalla, trumpet; Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and Robert Levin, harpsichord. Levin had a chance to display his virtuosity in an extended cadenza for solo harpsichord in the Brandenburg No. 5. Since most of the music of the Baroque period leaves the details of the continuo to the discretion of the performer, there is ample room for a skilled harpsichordist to display his talent. Levin's improvisation was warmly received by the audience, although to this critic it seemed almost too elaborate and somewhat out of character with the rest of the piece. Another outstanding solo performance was that given by flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer in the charming Suite No. 2.

A special feature of this weekend was the presence of the 120-odd member Tanglewood Festival Chorus, directed by John Oliver. The chorus performed brilliantly both in the Bach Cantata Friday evening and in Haydn's Die Jahreszeiten (The Seasons) on Sunday afternoon. Neither the cantata nor the Haydn piece had ever been performed at Tanglewood before, and it was a thrill to hear them. Phyllis Curtin, soprano, and Seth McCoy, tenor, were featured soloists in both pieces, and they were joined by Robert Hale, bass, in the Haydn.

Saturday evening's concert of works by Bach, Beethoven, and Mozart was conducted by Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, who is music director of the Minnesota Orchestra (formerly the Minneapolis Symphony), and who has conducted the Boston Symphony on several occasions in recent years.

The Bach Suite No. 3 in D, with its lovely and familiar air, is always a pleasure to hear, and it was beautifully performed. The Beethoven work was the Piano Concerto No. 1 in C, featuring pianist Claude Frank. This concerto, which, despite its number, is actually the second Beethoven wrote, is very close in feeling to Mozart. Claude Frank, who has appeared many times with the Boston, once again treated the audience to a stirring performance.

The final work on Saturday night's program was Mozart's Symphony No. 39 in E flat (K. 543). This is one of the last three symphonies Mozart wrote and is the only one with an introductory adagio movement. Unlike most of Mozart's works, there is no evidence that he was commissioned or paid for writing this one. It was apparently written for his own and audiences' pleasure. The enthusiastic response of Saturday's Tanglewood audience proved he achieved his purpose.

Mozart fans will find much to interest them in next weekend's Tanglewood concerts. Friday evening will be devoted entirely to works of Mozart: His piano music in the Weekend Prelude concert at 7 p.m., and the Concerto for Flute and Harp, the Bassoon Concerto, and the Haffner Serenade in the 9 p.m. concert, conducted by Ozawa. Saturday night's concert at 8:30 p.m., conducted by Bruno Maderna, will feature works by Gabrieli-Maderna, Earle Brown, and Ives, as well as another Mozart work, the "Jupiter" Symphony. Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa will return to conduct Haydn's Symphony No. 47, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 (with pianist Garrick Ohisson), and Ravel's "Ma Mer L'Oye."

S.C.M.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 3 1972

At the Concert

Tanglewood Opens With Ozawa, Bach

By EDWARD FRENCH

Other Review on Page 7B

Summer has officially come to the Berkshires. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Sejia Ozawa conducting, launched the 1972 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood with an all Bach program Friday evening.

In spite of far from ideal weather, a marked contrast to last year's beautiful first weekend, the audience was large, knowledgeable and enthusiastic.

THE GENEROUS sampling of the eipsic cantor's work included the F major and D major Brandenburg Concertos, the Suite No. 2 in B minor with solo flute and the Cantata No. 191, Gloria in excelsis Deo. Soprano Phyllis Curtin, tenor Seth McCoy and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver director assisted in this work.

Mr. Ozawa's readings of the Brandenburg concertos had the clarity of form and line and rhythmic vitality so essential to a realization of Bach's inspiration. The tempi were well chosen and the soloists, all first chair members of the orchestra displayed the superb technical skill and artistry we have come to expect.

To all intents and purposes Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor could properly be called a concerto for flute and orchestra because the flute part is dominant and has the kind of florid writing that tess the technical and musical resources of the soloist.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer's total command of her instrument was brilliantly demonstrated in this performance.

WE ESPECIALLY enjoyed the choral work in the Bach Cantata 191. The voices were young and there was an appealing freshness to the sound of the women's voices in particular.

The difficult solo portions of this work were capably handled by Phyllis Curtin and Seth McCoy.

Saturday night found Stanislaw Skrowaczewski on the podium and Claude Frank, a long time Tanglewood favorite, as soloist in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1 in C major.

Mr. Frank's inspired performance of this delightful concerto was for many of us the high point of this initial weekend.

He has always been known for his excellence in the Beethoven piano literature, but Saturday night his performance of this concerto was incandescent from beginning to end. His technique was brilliant and facile in the outer movements and the lovely slow movement was poetry incarnate.

It would seem that Mr. Frank's playing inspired both conductor and orchestra as the best orchestral playing of the evening was in the concerto accompaniment. Here there was a dynamic subtlety and expressiveness not so apparent in Mozart's E flat Symphony or Bach's D major Suite.

SUNDAY afternoon the Tanglewood charm was in full evidence. Finally the weather was bright and sunny, the puddles were pretty well dried up and the famous lawn was pleasant again.

Musically the afternoon was devoted to Haydn's second great oratorio, "The Seasons." the vitality and spontaneity of this score is remarkable considering that the composer was sixty nine years old when he completed it.

To this listener the most striking feature of the performance was the understanding and sympathy for this central European music that Seija Ozawa displayed.

He underscored Haydn's warmth, humor, nobility and especially his genius for pictorial tone painting.

The work has four divisions, each with its appropriate atmosphere and color. As a whole it is much livelier and less ponderous than most oratorios.

THE PERFORMANCE of the Tanglewood chorus, prepared by John Oliver was an aural delight. The blend was skillful, there was plenty of dynamic variety and even in the loudest sections the sound was never strident.

Soloists Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Seth McCoy, tenor, and Robert Hale, bass, shared a wealth of melodious arias and recitatives as well as duets and trios.

Boston Globe July 24th

Tanglewood: Ozawa conducts BSO in Haydn

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Why can't the Boston Symphony Orchestra Inc. take music as seriously as it takes itself? The concert presented at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon was not something for it to be proud of. The program was Haydn's oratorio, "The Seasons," but someone, presumably Seiji Ozawa, who conducted, decided to make it a "seasons" for people who really don't have time for that sort of thing. So he cut, hacked, snipped, gashed, did some pasting, and once even composed in order to bridge a harmonic chasm of his own making which even he then found intolerable.

It was sad and ugly. Obviously and to begin with, there are beautiful things in "The Seasons" which we could not hear, and they included among many others such sublime achievements in musical landscape paintings as the introduction to "summer" with its depiction of morning twilight until the moment of the first cock crow, or the E major cavatina in which, with muted strings and a few notes on the flute and oboe, the tenor makes us feel a world lamed in noonday heat.

But the problem of cuts takes you beyond the loss of this or that passage. It is a question of shape, and in a strongly composed piece an omitted passage need not be extraordinary in itself for its omission to do harm. For instance, any competent musician could have written the nine bars of recitative that come between the opening chorus of "Spring" and the first aria. When they are left out, we don't miss them as musical poetry or as compositional invention, but we do miss what Haydn put them there to do. We need a little air space between the chorus and the aria.

As awesome as any thunderstorm is the wait that goes before it, and a performance of Haydn's Summer Storm that omits most of that heaviness of waiting takes away the space in which the storm exists, and thereby makes the storm smaller.

One more example: most of the music of the fantastic, proto-Mahlerian drinking chorus which brings "Autumn" to the end has a simple surface and texture. It grows and grows in energy — something Haydn manages chiefly through the immense and unexpected strides of the harmony — and culminates in a great C major shouting riot which is physically the most unbuttoned music ever written up that time. But Haydn, just before he reels into his C major and those beating tambourines and triangles and kettle drums, puts in an episode in which everything suddenly goes contrapuntal and syncopated. It is complicated, and, again apart form how marvelous it is in itself with all that textural and rythmic energy, the contrast which that one complicated minute provides is a vital source of the vigor and humor of the ending. Ozawa left it out.

I don't understand what it was all for. Granted, "The Seasons" is a long piece, but other conductors have given it whole and have lived, and so have their audiences. If the Berkshire Festival's Artistic Director (and the Boston Symphony's future Music Director) really feels that his Tanglewood audience can't take it — which, by the way, is a very insulting statement to make to an audience — then he would do better just to leave out one whole season. Drastic, I know, but at least clean. That Ozawa thinks "The Seasons" a weak work which should be cut on its own demerits, so to speak, is a possibility I hate to consider even momentarily.

Given the choices Ozawa made with his blue pencil, the possibility of achieving a structurally powerful interpretation hardly existed anyway, but beyond that, the performance was disappointing in its persistent lack of response to poetic and pictorial suggestion in words and music. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, prepared by John Oliver, made a healthy sound, but the choral movements mostly made a rather untransparent effect.

The soloist, Phyllis Curtin, soprano, Seth McCoy, tenor, and Robert Hale, bass, were fair, none very imaginative nor vivid in their handling of the German text, and all in trouble when flexibility and speed were caleld for. There was some fine orchestral work (when it could be clearly heard), and for the third concert in a row Robert Levin contributed distinguished playing of the harpsichord continuo.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499
JUL 2 1972 New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEWOOD

All-Mozart Program

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony harpist Ann Hobson.

Next will follow a performance of the bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony principal bassoonist Sherman Walt.

Following intermission, the concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 8, "Haffner."

Soloist in this performance will be Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169
JUN 25 1972

..... MUSIC .....

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, 7 p.m. at Tanglewood, Lenox Mass. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. And at 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Seiji Ozawa conducing a Brahms program.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 7 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

CLAUDE FRANK & LILIAN KALLIR pianos

MOZART

Fugue in C minor for two pianos K. 426

Andante and five variations in G for piano, four hands, K. 501

Sonata in D for two pianos K. 448

Allegro con spirito
Andante
Molto allegro

Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir play Steinway pianos

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony, with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

POST
WALLINGFORD, CONN.
W. 7,920
JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Mozart concert at Tanglewood

Music by Mozart will be featured at the Friday, July 7, concert program at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. The 9 p.m. Mozart concert will be preceded by the weekend prelude at 7 p.m.

On Saturday, July 8, the Berkshire Festival will present selections by Ives and Mozart's "Jupiter Symphony" at 8:30 p.m.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m., featuring selections by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

It Pays to Advertise In the POST

FREE PRESS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
W. 1,890
JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

For music lovers, the 1972 Berkshire Music Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a MUST.

The 1972 season at Tanglewood, in Lenox, began officially last week with opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Festival is the country's oldest major festival of music. It has been at Tanglewood since 1937.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives concerts in Tanglewood's spacious Music Shed for eight weekends each summer. This year's concerts will be launched on Friday with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the orchestra, Seiji Ozawa.

Sunday, Ozawa will conduct Hydn's "The Seasons." He will open the second weekend July 7 with an All-Mozart program.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms I for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUL 9 1972

MUSIC MAKERS

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M.; Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Merodith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte, Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Suffer, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 8:30 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano.
Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) ..Haydn
Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven
Mother Goose .....Ravel
Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor.
Symphonies Nos. 6 and 8 ..Beethoven
Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Joannine Crader, Joanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus.
Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven
LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet, Saturday, 6 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Manin Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 19th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Preist, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, in works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Filene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499
JUL 2 1972 New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEWOOD

All-Mozart Program

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony harpist Ann Hobson.

Next will follow a performance of the bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony principal bassoonist Sherman Walt. Following intermission, the concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 8, "Haffner."

Soloist in this performance will be Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169
JUN 25 1972

..... MUSIC .....

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, 7 p.m. at Tanglewood, Lenox Mass. Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director. And at 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Seiji Ozawa conducing a Brahms program.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 7 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

CLAUDE FRANK & LILIAN KALLIR pianos

MOZART

Fugue in C minor for two pianos K. 426

Andante and five variations in G for piano, four hands, K. 501

Sonata in D for two pianos K. 448

Allegro con spirito
Andante
Molto allegro

Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir play Steinway pianos

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

POST
WALLINGFORD, CONN.
W. 7,920
JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Mozart concert at Tanglewood

Music by Mozart will be featured at the Friday, July 7, concert program at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. The 9 p.m. Mozart concert will be preceded by the weekend prelude at 7 p.m.

On Saturday, July 8, the Berkshire Festival will present selections by Ives and Mozart's "Jupiter Symphony" at 8:30 p.m.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m., featuring selections by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

It Pays to Advertise In the POST

FREE PRESS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
W. 1,890
JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

For music lovers, the 1972 Berkshire Music Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are a MUST.

The 1972 season at Tanglewood, in Lenox, began officially last week with opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer academy for advanced study of music.

Founded in 1934, the Berkshire Festival is the country's oldest major festival of music. It has been at Tanglewood since 1937.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra gives concerts in Tanglewood's spacious Music Shed for eight weekends each summer. This year's concerts will be launched on Friday with an all-Bach concert conducted by the music director designate of the orchestra, Seiji Ozawa.

Sunday, Ozawa will conduct Hydn's "The Seasons." He will open the second weekend July 7 with an All-Mozart program.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUL 9 1972

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M., Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Meredith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte, Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Sutter, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 2:30 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano.
Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) . Haydn
Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven
Mother Goose . . . . . Ravel
Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor.
Symphonies Nos. 6 and 5....Beethoven
Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Jeannine Crader, Joanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus.
Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven
LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet. Saturday, 6 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Manan Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 19th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Preist, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, new works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Filene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

Attach these Tanglewoodian scenes to your sunglasses so you can keep tonight's setting when you're at home watching your phonograph reproduce the Tanglewood performances of these stars:

Seiji Ozawa, here June 30, July 2, 7, 9, 16 and August 18, 20; William Steinberg, July 14, 15; Peter Serkin, July 16; Eugene Ormandy, July 28, 29; Alexis Weissenberg, August 18; Misha Dichter, August 19.

RCA Records and Tapes

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 2 1972 New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEWO

All-Mozart F

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwye Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Next will follow performance of the concerto in B-flat with Boston Symphony p bassoonist Sherman

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000

JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 7 1972 at 9 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

SEIJI OZAWA conductor

MOZART

Concerto in C for flute and harp K. 299

Allegro
Andantino
Rondeau: allegro

DORIOT ANTHONY DWYER flute
ANN HOBSON harp

first performance at the Berkshire Festival

Bassoon concerto in B flat K. 191

Allegro
Andante ma adagio
Rondo: tempo di minuetto

SHERMAN WALT bassoon

intermission

Serenade no. 7 in D K. 250 'Haffner'

Allegro maestoso – allegro molto
Andante
Menuetto & trio
Rondeau: allegro
Menuetto galante & trio
Andante
Menuetto – trio 1 – trio 2
Adagio
Allegro assai

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 26

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & RCA RECORDS

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549

JUL 9 1972

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M.; Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Meredith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cost Fan Tutte, Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Sutter, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 8:30 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano. Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) ..Haydn Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven Mother Goose .....Ravel Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor. Symphonies Nos. 6 and 9 ...Beethoven Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Jeannine Crader, Jeanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus. Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven

LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet. Saturday, 6 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Menan Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 19th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Preist, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, in works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Filene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 2 1972

New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEW

All-Mozart F

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwye Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Next will follow formance of the concerto in B-flat with Boston Symphony p bassoonist Sherman

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000

JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

THE FRIENDS OF MUSIC AT

TANGLEWOOD

Tanglewood is good to its friends here's how good . . .

$1000 Benefactor — Free Berkshire Music Center Concerts/Tent Membership/Parking Privileges/Rehearsal Pass/Named Fellowship

$500 Patron — Free BMC Concerts/Tent Membership/Parking Privileges/Rehearsal Pass/Named Fellowship (associate)

$250 Sustaining — Free BMC Concerts/Tent Membership/Parking Privileges/Rehearsal Pass

$100 Sponsor — Free BMC Concerts/Tent Membership/Parking Privileges

$50 Donor — Free BMC Concerts/Tent Membership

$25 Family Member — Free BMC Concerts (entire family)

$15 Individual Member — Free BMC Concerts (individual only)

The Friends of Music at Tanglewood are hundreds of people concerned with keeping beautiful music in the Berkshires. Not only do the Friends help bring famous conductors and soloists to Tanglewood for the Berkshire Festival concerts, but they also provide the critical support for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's training institution for tomorrow's great musicians. Further information about becoming a Friend of Music at Tanglewood, and about Berkshire Music Center events is available from the TANGLEWOOD FRIENDS OFFICE located at the Main Gate.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE / THE COUNCIL OF TANGLEWOOD FRIENDS

Curtis R. Buttenheim
Co-Chairman

William A. Selke
Vice-Chairman

Mrs Stephen V. C. Morris
Co-Chairman

Mary Scott Riley
Secretary & Co-ordinator

BUSINESS
James R. Sloane Chairman
William H. McAlister Jr Vice-Chairman

MEMBERSHIP
Mrs James G. Garivaltis Chairman
Mrs Samuel Boxer Vice-Chairman

COMMUNITY RELATIONS
Mrs Morton L. Weiss Chairman

John Nadeau Vice-Chairman

SPECIAL EVENTS
Mrs Curtis R. Buttenheim Chairman
Mrs Richard W. Marcure Vice-Chairman
Mrs John Church Hospitality Chairman

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 1 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms I for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549

JUL 9 1972

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M., Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Meredith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte, Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Sutter, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 8:30 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano.
Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) ..Haydn
Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven
Mother Goose .....Ravel
Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor.
Symphonies Nos. 4 and 8 ...Beethoven
Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Jeannine Crader, Jeanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus.
Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven
LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet. Saturday, 6 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Manan Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 19th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Preist, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, in works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Fliene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499
JUL 2 1972
New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEWO

All-Mozart F

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwye Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Next will follow formance of the concerto in B-flat with Boston Symphony p bassoonist Sherman

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60 followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Saturday July 8 1972 at 8.30 pm

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

BRUNO MADERNA conductor

G. GABRIELI	Ricercare (arr. Maderna)
EARLE BROWN	†Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble
IVES	†Tone roads no. 1
	†Tone roads no. 3
	The unanswered question
	†Scherzo (Over the pavements)
intermission
*MOZART	Symphony no. 41 in C K. 551 'Jupiter'
	Allegro vivace Andante cantabile Menuetto: allegretto – trio Molto allegro

†first performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 28

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & *RCA RECORDS

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 1 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUL 9 1972

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M.; Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Meredith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte. Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Sutter, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 8:30 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano. Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) ..Haydn Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven Mother Goose ..... Ravel Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor. Symphonies Nos. 6 and 8 ...Beethoven Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Jeannine Crader, Jeanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus. Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven

LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet. Saturday, 8 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Manan Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 19th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Priest, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, in works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Filene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499
JUL 2 1972
New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEWO

All-Mozart F

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwye Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Next will follow formance of the concerto in B-flat with Boston Symphony p bassoonist Sherman

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60 followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

Deutsche Grammophon

Boston Symphony Orchestra

2530 160

2530 145

2707 054 (2 LP's)

2530 137

2530 048

2530 102

2530 078

2530 038

2530 103

Deutsche Grammophon Records, MusiCassettes and 8-Track Stereo Cartridges are distributed in the USA by Polydor Incorporated; in Canada by Polydor Records Canada Ltd.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 1 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms I for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUL 9 1972

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M.; Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Meredith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte. Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Sutter, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 9:00 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano.
Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) ..Haydn
Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven
Mother Goose .....Ravel
Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor.
Symphonies Nos. 6 and 8 ....Beethoven
Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Jeannine Crader, Jeanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus.
Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven
LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet. Saturday, 6 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Manan Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 17th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Preist, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, in works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Filene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499
JUL 2 1972
New England Newsclip

AT TANGLEWO

All-Mozart F

LENOX — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwye Boston Symphony Ann Hobson.

Next will follow formance of the concerto in B-flat with Boston Symphony p bassoonist Sherman

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 7 1972

All-Mozart Program Tonight By Symphony At Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony, with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again Monday in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 7 1972

Tanglewood To Open With Mozart Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7th at 9:00 p. m. in the huge music shed.

Free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 o'clock concert will be Friday's weekend prelude which will present pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallier in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 a. m. Ozawa will be wielding the baton in the second of the orchestra's open rehearsals. These open rehearsals, held each Saturday morning, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor, and soloists preparing for the coming concerts. Proceeds of the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

On Saturday evening at 8:30 Bruno Maderna will be the conductor and the feature of the program will be a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter".

Sunday's afternoon program will see Seiji Ozawa again on the podium. The concert opens with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson in Beethoven's piano rconcerto no. 3. After intermission the the program concludes with Ravel's "Mother Goose".

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Sunday July 9 1972 at 2.30 pm

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

SEIJI OZAWA conductor

HAYDN — Symphony no. 60 in C 'Il distratto'

Adagio – allegro di molto
Andante
Menuet & trio
Presto
Adagio
Prestissimo

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

*BEETHOVEN — Piano concerto no. 3 in C minor op. 37

Allegro con brio
Largo
Rondo: allegro

GARRICK OHLSSON

*RAVEL — Ma mère l'oye (Mother Goose)

Pavane de la Belle au bois dormant
(Pavane of the sleeping beauty)
Petit Poucet (Tom Thumb)
Laideronette, impératrice des Pagodas
(The ugly little empress of the Pagodas)
Les entretiens de la Belle et de la Bête
(The conversation between Beauty and the Beast)
Le jardin féerique (The fairy garden)

Garrick Ohlsson plays the Steinway piano

The program notes for this afternoon's concert begin on page 31

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & *RCA RECORDS

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 7 1972

Ozawa Will Direct Tanglewood Concert

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 9 p.m., at Tanglewood.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for Flute and Harp, with soloists being Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the Boston Symphony, and harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, with Sherman Walt the soloist.

Tonight's performance will conclude with the Haffner Symphony with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, the soloist.

Bruno Maderna will conduct July 8 at 8:30 in a concert including his own arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, Earle Brown's Available Forms I and Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 2, the Unanswered Question, and Scherzo. Also on the program will be Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony.

Ozawa will conduct again July 9 in a 2:30 p.m. concert in a program featuring Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Piano Concerta No. 3 and Ravel's Mother Goose. Garrick Ohlsson will be piano soloist.

Tonight's concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude concert at 7 p.m. featuring Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in a twin piano recital.

Ozawa will conduct an open rehearsal in the shed July 8 at 10:30 a.m.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 1 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

An evening of Mozart

Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at 9 p.m. next Friday in the Music Shed. The concert will open with a first performance at Tanglewood of the Concerto in C for flute and harp. Next will follow a performance of the Bassoon Concerto in B-Flat. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner."

The Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-Minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and Five Variations in G for Piano Four Hands, K. 501; Sonata in D. for Two Pianos, K. 448.

Bruno Maderna will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, July 8. The concert will open with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available Forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone Roads No. 1, Tone Roads No. 3, the Unanswered Question and Scherzo (Over the Pavements). The concert will conclude with Mozart's Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Ozawa will conduct at 2 p.m. Sunday. The concert will open with the first performance by the BSO of Hayden's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

The New York Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
D. 846,132 S. 1,407,549
JUL 9 1972

PENNSYLVANIA

PHILADELPHIA—Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia Orchestra, all concerts, 8:30 P.M.; Monday, Michael Tilson Thomas, conductor, Jan Peerce, tenor. Tuesday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, all symphonic program. Thursday, Mr. Thomas, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano.

AMBLER—Temple University Music Festival, today, 7:30 P.M., Pittsburgh Pops, Meredith Willson, conductor. Wednesday, 8:30, Melba Moore and Cab Calloway. Next Sunday, 7:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos, Pittsburgh Pops, Lehman Engel, conductor. Campus Theater, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30, Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte, Thursday, 8:30, concert-lecture on Bach's Brandenburg Concertos with Pittsburgh Chamber Orchestra, Leon Fleisher, conductor, Milton Suther, lecturer.

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX—Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Boston Symphony Orchestra, today, 9:00 P.M., Seiji Ozawa, conductor, Garrick Ohlsson, piano.
Symphony No. 60 (Il distratto) . . Haydn
Piano Concerto No. 3 .....Beethoven
Mother Goose ..... Ravel
Friday, weekend prelude, 7 P.M., Boston Symphony Chamber Players in all-Beethoven program. 9 P.M., William Steinberg, conductor.
Symphonies Nos. 6 and 3 . . Beethoven
Saturday, 8:30, Mr. Steinberg, conductor, singers Jeannine Crader, Jeanne Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale, Tanglewood Festival Chorus.
Symphonies Nos. 1 and 9 ....Beethoven
LENOX—Lenox Arts Center, today, 11 A.M., Concord String Quartet. Saturday, 6 P.M., Pete Seeger. Next Sunday, 11 AM., Sushil Mukherjee, bamboo flute, Terrence Hall, marimba, Manan Mehta, tabla.

PITTSFIELD — South Mountain Concerts, Saturday, 3 P.M., Metropolitan Opera Studio presents Vienna to Broadway.

CAMBRIDGE — Harvard Summer School concert, Monday, 8:30, Burden Hall, Business School, program of 19th-century chamber music.

VERMONT

MARLBORO—Marlboro Music Festival, today and next Sunday, 3 P.M., Saturday, 8:30 P.M. Chamber music concerts with orchestra, smaller ensembles and soloists.

CASTLETON COLLEGE—Adirondack-Champlain Festival, Performing Arts Center, Wednesday, 8:15 P.M., Tom Paxton, folksinger.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER — Hopkins Center, Dartmouth College, Bentley Theater, today, 8 P.M., electronic music concert.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

KENNEDY CENTER—Concert Hall, Friday and Saturday, 8:30 P.M., National Symphony, James de Preist, conductor, Daniel Heifetz, violin, all-Beethoven program.

VIRGINIA

VIENNA—Wolf Trap Farm Park, Tuesday, 8:30 P.M., Wolf Trap American University Academy Orchestra, Izler Solomon, conductor, Beverly Sills, soprano, in works by Toch, Massenet, Thomas, Handel-Beecham, Bellini, Donizetti, Bizet. Wednesday, 8:30, Dave Brubeck Quartet with Gerry Mulligan, Chris Brubeck and the Heavenly Blue. Thursday and Friday, 8:30, Paul Anka Show, with Filene Center Orchestra. Saturday, 8:30, Ferrante and Teicher, duo-pianos.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 5 1972 New England Newsclip

Ozawa and Maderna Are Featured During BFC Second Weekend

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all - Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.

The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony Harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p. m. in the Shed (free to ticket - holders of the 9 p. m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday, July 8 at 10:30 a. m., Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second open rehearsal. Tickets for these open rehearsals are on sale the morning of the concert at the Festival ticket office. These open rehearsals offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Saturday, July 8 at 8:30 p. m. in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony. The concert opens with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' "Tone Roads No. 1," "Tone Roads No. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo (Over the Pavement"). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony No. 41 "Jupiter."

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday, July 9 at 2:30 p. m. in the Shed. The concert opens with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's piano concerto No. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Ravel's "Mother Goose."

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289
JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood in 2nd weekend

Tomorrow (Friday) at 9 p.m., Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program to launch the second weekend of the season at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Concerts are being presented in the Shed.

Opening the concert will be a first performance at the Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp, with soloists BSO principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and the orchestra harpist Ann Hobson. Following will be the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat with BSO soloist Sherman Walt. After intermission, the program closes with Serenade no. 7, "Haffner," with solist Joseph Silverstein, orchestra concertmaster.

Tomorrow (Friday) the Prelude will be at 7 p.m. in the Shed, and free to ticketholders of the 9 p.m. concert. Presented will be pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor, K 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four-hands, K 501; and Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday at 10:30 a.m., Mr. Ozawa rehearses the orchestra in the season's second Open Rehearsal. Tickets are on sale the morning of the event at the regular box office. Proceeds go into the orchestra pension fund.

At 8:30 Saturday evening in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the BSO, opening with Mr. Maderna's arrangement of Gabrielli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1 and no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). Concluding number will be Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter."

Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Mr. Ozawa leads the orchestra in the Shed, opening with the first performance by the BSO of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson presenting Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. After intermission, the concert closes with Ravel's "Mother Goose."

ITEM
LYNN, MASS.
D. 34,202
JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

The PERFORMING ARTS

The music chambers are rooms in fabled nineteenth century mansions. The genres: ballet, chamber music, opera and film. The seaside setting is as titillating as the rare works being performed. The experience is Newport 1972.

Highlighting this year's 17-day Newport Music Festival sponsored by the Rhode Island Arts Foundation are over 50 outstanding artists, performances of 19th century music for the first time in the 20th century and a new film series by Sir Kenneth Clark: "Pioneers of Modern Painting."

Among distinguished artists appearing are: concert pianists: Raymond Lewenthal, Flavio Varani, Virginia Eskin, and Peter Basquin; The Bergson Trio; The Lark Woodwind Quintet; The Festival Double String Quartet; cellist, George Ricci and concert violinist, Henryk Kowalski.

Two evenings of ballet will feature the Joffrey II Ballet and the Boston Ballet Company. Artists of the Metropolitan Opera Studio will perform in the American premier of Cesa Cui's salon opera, "Le Fils Du Mandarin."

Two cruise concerts on Narragansett Bay are scheduled for July 29 and Aug. 12 and Kenneth Clark's painting cycle of six 55-minute color films makes its New England debut.

Write Festival, 23 Bridge Street, Newport, R.I., 02840.

* * *

Seiji Ozawa, Artistic Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood conducts an all-Mozart program Friday at 9 p.m. in the Tanglewood Shed in Lenox. A first performance at the Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Doriot A. Dever on flute and harpist Ann Hobson will open the program. The Bassoon Concerto in B-flat features BSO principal bassoonist Sherman Walt.

Rounding out the concert is the Serenade No. 7 known as the "Haffner Serenade." Joseph Silverstein will solo. A weekend prelude in the shed at 7 p.m. (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart. A fugue, andante and sonata will be featured.

Each Saturday at 10:30 p.m. Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The open rehearsals provide a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloist preparing Festival concert music. Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the shed Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare" and Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble.

Also on the program are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads No. 1," "Tone Roads No. 3," "The Unanswered Question" and "Scherzo Over the Pavements." The concert concludes with Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony (No. 41.)

Sunday, July 9 at 2:30 p.m. Ozawa conducts Hayden's Symphony No. 60 "Il Distratti"; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 and "Mother Goose" by Ravel.

* * *

Also in the Berkshires next week for six performances at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee are Matteo and the Indo-American Dance Company along with the Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre. The ethnic dance troupe and humor-fantasy mime theatre open Tuesday and continue through Saturday.

* * *

The Northshore Strawhatters will present a series of six Friday evening band concerts on the Northshore Shopping Center mall starting July 7 and concluding Aug. 11. Concert time is 6:30 p.m. Marches, musical comedies, dixieland and dance band hits will be conducted by Richard Boisvert.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405
JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BSO To Perform Mozart's Works

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7, 7 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concert in C for flute and harp with soloists flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and harpist Ann Hobson, both of the Boston Symphony.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt.

Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade no. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Prelude at 7 p.m.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday morning, July 8 at 10:30 a.m. Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second Open Rehearsal. These rehearsals offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the Berkshire Festival Concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed

The concert opens with his arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1, Tone roads no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41 "Jupiter".

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 9 at 3:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Ravel's Mother Goose.

ADVOCATE
STAMFORD, CONN.
D. 32,000
B. Symphony
JUN 29 1972 New England News

News Of Area Art Happenings

Tanglewood Festival.

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will feature conductors Seiji Ozawa, and Bruno Maderna with soloists symphony members, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute; Ann Hobson, harp; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and pianist Garrick Ohlsson.

Friday Weekend Prelude presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir at 9 p.m.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285
JUL 5 1972 New England Newsclip

Ives music at Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday at 9 p.m. in the Shed, Lenox, Mass.

The concert includes a first performance at the Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with Boston Symphony soloists and a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 Ozawa will rehearse the Symphony in the summer's second open rehearsal.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed Brudo Maderna will conduct the orchestra in a performance including music by Charles Ives.

Ozawa will conduct the Symphony Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Shed, opening with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

74

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 5 1972 New England Newsclip

Ozawa and Maderna Are Featured During BFC Second Weekend

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all - Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday, July 7 at 9 p. m. in the Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox.

The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony Harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p. m. in the Shed (free to ticket - holders of the 9 p. m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday, July 8 at 10:30 a. m., Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second open rehearsal. Tickets for these open rehearsals are on sale the morning of the concert at the Festival ticket office. These open rehearsals offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Saturday, July 8 at 8:30 p. m. in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony. The concert opens with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' "Tone Roads No. 1," "Tone Roads No. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo (Over the Pavement"). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony No. 41 "Jupiter."

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday, July 9 at 2:30 p. m. in the Shed. The concert opens with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's piano concerto No. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Ravel's "Mother Goose."

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 3 1972

A Weekend of Concerts At Berkshire Festival

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes a concert of music for two pianos; Seiji Ozawa conducting an all-Mozart program; Bruno Maderna conducting the symphony in modern works; and Ozawa conducting another concert of music by Haydn, Beethoven and Ravel.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. Friday with pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir presenting a variety of works by Mozart for two pianos.

At 9 p.m. Ozawa, Tanglewood's artistic director, conducts Mozart's "Concerto in C" for flute and harp, his "Bassoon Concerto in B Flat" and his "Serenade No. 7, Haffner." Soloists for the evening include Doriot Anthony Dwyer on flute; Ann Hobson on harp; Sherman Walt on bassoon and Joseph Silverstein on violin.

Ozawa will also conduct the symphony in an open rehearsal beginning at 10:30 a.m. July 8. Music to be rehearsed is unspecified.

Maderna leads the symphony at 8:30 p.m. that evening in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare," followed by Earle Brown's "Available forms one for chamber ensemble." Also to be performed are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads no. 1," "Tone Roads no. 3," "The Unanswered Question," and "Scherzo." The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's "Symphony no. 41."

Ozawa takes over the baton again at 2:30 p.m. July 9 in a performance including Haydn's "Symphony no. 60," followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's "Piano Concerto no 3." Ravel's "Mother Goose" will conclude the performance.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289

JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood in 2nd weekend

Tomorrow (Friday) at 9 p.m., Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program to launch the second weekend of the season at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Concerts are being presented in the Shed.

Opening the concert will be a first performance at the Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp, with soloists BSO principal flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and the orchestra harpist Ann Hobson. Following will be the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat with BSO soloist Sherman Walt. After intermission, the program closes with Serenade no. 7, "Haffner," with solist Joseph Silverstein, orchestra concertmaster.

Tomorrow (Friday) the Prelude will be at 7 p.m. in the Shed, and free to ticketholders of the 9 p.m. concert. Presented will be pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor, K 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four-hands, K 501; and Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday at 10:30 a.m., Mr. Ozawa rehearses the orchestra in the season's second Open Rehearsal. Tickets are on sale the morning of the event at the regular box office. Proceeds go into the orchestra pension fund.

At 8:30 Saturday evening in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the BSO, opening with Mr. Maderna's arrangement of Gabrielli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1 and no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). Concluding number will be Mozart's Symphony no. 41, the "Jupiter."

Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Mr. Ozawa leads the orchestra in the Shed, opening with the first performance by the BSO of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson presenting Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. After intermission, the concert closes with Ravel's "Mother Goose."

ITEM
LYNN, MASS.
D. 34,202

JUL 3 1972 New England Newsclip

The PERFORMING ARTS

The music chambers are rooms in fabled nineteenth century mansions. The genres: ballet, chamber music, opera and film. The seaside setting is as titillating as the rare works being performed. The experience is Newport 1972.

Highlighting this year's 17-day Newport Music Festival sponsored by the Rhode Island Arts Foundation are over 50 outstanding artists, performances of 19th century music for the first time in the 20th century and a new film series by Sir Kenneth Clark: "Pioneers of Modern Painting."

Among distinguished artists appearing are: concert pianists: Raymond Lewenthal, Flavio Varani, Virginia Eskin, and Peter Basquin; The Bergson Trio; The Lark Woodwind Quintet; The Festival Double String Quartet; cellist, George Ricci and concert violinist, Henryk Kowalski.

Two evenings of ballet will feature the Joffrey II Ballet and the Boston Ballet Company. Artists of the Metropolitan Opera Studio will perform in the American premier of Cesa Cui's salon opera, "Le Fils Du Mandarin."

Two cruise concerts on Narragansett Bay are scheduled for July 29 and Aug. 12 and Kenneth Clark's painting cycle of six 55-minute color films makes its New England debut.

Write Festival, 23 Bridge Street, Newport, R.I., 02840.

* * *

Seiji Ozawa, Artistic Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood conducts an all-Mozart program Friday at 9 p.m. in the Tanglewood Shed in Lenox. A first performance at the Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Doriot A. Dever on flute and harpist Ann Hobson will open the program. The Bassoon Concerto in B-flat features BSO principal bassoonist Sherman Walt.

Rounding out the concert is the Serenade No. 7 known as the "Haffner Serenade." Joseph Silverstein will solo. A weekend prelude in the shed at 7 p.m. (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart. A fugue, andante and sonata will be featured.

Each Saturday at 10:30 p.m. Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The open rehearsals provide a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloist preparing Festival concert music. Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the shed Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in his own arrangement of Gabrieli's "Ricercare" and Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble.

Also on the program are Charles Ives' "Tone Roads No. 1," "Tone Roads No. 3," "The Unanswered Question" and "Scherzo Over the Pavements." The concert concludes with Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony (No. 41.)

Sunday, July 9 at 2:30 p.m. Ozawa conducts Hayden's Symphony No. 60 "Il Distratti"; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 and "Mother Goose" by Ravel.

* * *

Also in the Berkshires next week for six performances at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee are Matteo and the Indo-American Dance Company along with the Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre. The ethnic dance troupe and humor-fantasy mime theatre open Tuesday and continue through Saturday.

* * *

The Northshore Strawhatters will present a series of six Friday evening band concerts on the Northshore Shopping Center mall starting July 7 and concluding Aug. 11. Concert time is 6:30 p.m. Marches, musical comedies, dixieland and dance band hits will be conducted by Richard Boisvert.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BSO To Perform Mozart's Works

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7, 7 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concert in C for flute and harp with soloists flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and harpist Ann Hobson, both of the Boston Symphony.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt.

Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade no. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Prelude at 7 p.m.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday morning, July 8 at 10:30 a.m. Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second Open Rehearsal. These rehearsals offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the Berkshire Festival Concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed

The concert opens with his arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1, Tone roads no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41 "Jupiter".

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 9 at 3:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Ravel's Mother Goose.

ADVOCATE
STAMFORD, CONN.
D. 32,000

JUN 29 1972 New Engl. News

News Of Area Art Happenings

Tanglewood Festival.

The second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will feature conductors Seiji Ozawa, and Bruno Maderna with soloists symphony members, Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute: Ann Hobson, harp; Sherman Walt, bassoon; Joseph Silverstein, violin; and pianist Garrick Ohlsson.

Friday Weekend Prelude presents [illegible] Frank and Lilian K[illegible] p.m.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285

JUL 5 1972 New England Newsclip

Ives music at Tanglewood

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday at 9 p.m. in the Shed, Lenox, Mass.

The concert includes a first performance at the Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with Boston Symphony soloists and a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30 Ozawa will rehearse the Symphony in the summer's second open rehearsal.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed Brudo Maderna will conduct the orchestra in a performance including music by Charles Ives.

Ozawa will conduct the Symphony Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Shed, opening with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto No. 3. The concert will conclude with Ravel's Mother Goose.

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

JUN 29 1972 New England Newsclip

Mozart program in 2nd BSO Tanglewood concert

LENOX, Mass. — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday, July 7 at 9 p.m. in the Shed.

The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony Harpist Ann Hobson. Next follows a performance of the Bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt.

Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's weekend prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in c-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday morning at 10:30 Seiji Izawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second open rehearsal. Tickets for the open rehearsals are on sale the morning of the concert at the festival ticket office at a cost of $2.50 each. The Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning at 10:30, offer a relaxed look at the orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Saturday, July 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony. The concert opens with Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1, Tone roads no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony No. 41 "Jupiter."

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Shed. The concert opens with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with "Mother Goose."

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 5 1972

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Claude Frank, Lillian Kallir; at 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Seiji Ozawa in an all-Mozart program. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., open rehearsal; 8:30 p.m., the orchestra directed by Bruno Maderna; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Seiji Ozawa conducts Haydn, Beethoven, Ravel.

Eight Step Coffee House, 14 Willett St., Albany. Today at 9 p.m., Lee and Carrie Pierce, English ballads and contemporary folk, with guitar, autoharp, mountain dulcimer.

Lenox card includes Maderna

LENOX, Mass. — The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, ~~July 21~~ at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21 will present pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital.

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the festival ticket office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Berkshire Festival Mozart Program Set

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony Harpist Ann Hobson. Next follows a performance of the Bassoon concerto in B - flat with soloist Boston Symphony Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade no. 7, "Haffner". Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket - holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in C-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday morning, July 8 at 10:30 a.m., Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second Open Rehearsal. Tickets for these Open Rehearsals are on sale the morning of the concert at the Festival Ticket Office. These Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m., offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the Berkshire Festival Concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Saturday evening, July 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony. The concert opens with Mr. Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1, Tone roads no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41 "Jupiter".

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 9 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed.

CITY POST
MARLBORO, MASS.
W. 3,300

JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

STAR
NORTHBORO, MASS.
W. 1,700

JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Talking Tanglewood

By Cathy Chapman

The "Silver Eagle" will wing its way to Tanglewood via the super and not so super-highways, Sunday, July 9 with 36 or 46 persons aboard depending on who acts fast enough to obtain reservations.

The trip to Tanglewood for an afternoon of music is a repeat. Last year a busload of "Friends" and their friends made the trip to the shrine of music in the Berkshires to hear Leonard Bernstein conduct. The program was most enjoyable, but, unfortunately the bus "balked" "fussed" and "fumed" at making the trip. Evidently it had planned a quiet weekend in the parking lot with a spanking new busette parked in lot 17. Ah! such is life for buses and busettes.

This year with the cooperation of the "Silver Eagle" a bus equipped with the accoutrements of finer living the Friends of the Marlboro Public Library and their guests will hear Seiji Ozawa conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "~~Haydn Symphony No~~ 47," "Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3", with Garrick Ohlasson, also Ravel's "Ma mere l'Oye."

Reservations for the bus trip which includes the price of admission and free tonic are still available. Everybody brings picnic lunches. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Toni Paternoster at 481-1390 or contact the Marlboro Public Library.

Later in the summer August 19 to be exact the Friends will travel to Jacob's Pillow for the 1972 Dance Festival which is in its 40th year. Luis Rivera and Company along with Takako Askawa and David Hatch Walker will be among the performing artists at this festival. Reservations for this trip can be made now by contacting Mrs. Paternoster or the library.

If you were aboard the "Silver Eagle" last summer when the Friends skimmed their way over the highways to Stratford-on-Avon in Connecticut you simply must know how great it was!

The trip to Tanglewood promises to be as great this year, but, in order to be part of the happy throng quick action is necessary. Hope you will be among the lucky ones!

BANNER
BENNINGTON, VT.
D. 6,000

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

CONN.
JUL 6 1972 New England Newsclip

Berkshire Has Busy Week-end

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa conducts an all-Mozart program at the opening concert of the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday evening, July 7 at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and Boston Symphony Harpist Ann Hobson.

Next follows a performance of the Bassoon concerto in B-flat with soloist Boston Symphony Principal Bassoonist Sherman Walt. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of the Serenade no. 7, "Haffner." Soloist in this performance is Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. in the Shed (free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert) presents pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart: Fugue in c-minor for two pianos, K. 426; Andante and five variations in G for piano four hands, K. 501; Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448.

Saturday morning, July 8 at 10:30 a.m., Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony in the summer's second Open Rehearsal. Tickets for these Open Rehearsals are on sale the morning of the concert at the Festival Ticket Office at a cost of $2.50 each. These Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m., offer a relaxed look at the Orchestra, conductor and soloists preparing music for the Berkshire Festival Concerts. The proceeds from the sale of seats benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Saturday evening, July 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony. The concert opens with Mr. Maderna's arrangement of Gabrieli's Ricercare, followed by Earle Brown's Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble. Next is a performance of Charles Ives' Tone roads no. 1, Tone roads no. 3, The unanswered question, and Scherzo (Over the pavements). The concert concludes with a performance of Mozart's Symphony no. 41 "Jupiter."

Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 9 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with the first performance by the Boston Symphony of Haydn's Symphony no. 60, followed by Garrick Ohlsson performing Beethoven's Piano concerto no. 3. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Ravel's Mother Goose.

TELEGRAPH
NASHUA, N. H.
D. 69,493

JUL 1 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Will Feature Boston Symphony Orchestra

LENIX, Mass. — Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa will conduct an all-Mozart program July 7 at 9 p.m. to open the second weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The concert will open with a first performance at the Berkshire Festival of the Concerto in C for flute and harp with soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist with the orchestra and Ann Hobson, Boston Symphony harpist. Also to be performed will be the Bassoon Concerto in B-flat with Sherman Walt, principal Bassoonist as soloist.

Following intermission, the concert will conclude with a performance of the Serenade No. 7, the "Haffner." Soloist for this work will be Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein.

Friday's Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. the Shed will feature pianists Claude Frank and Lillian Kallir in music for two pianos by Mozart.

Saturday morning at 10:30, Ozawa will rehearse the Boston Symphony in the summer's second open rehearsal. These rehearsals, held each week, offer a relaxed look at the preparation of the music heard during the festival concerts. The proceeds from open rehearsal concerts benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Bruno Maderna will conduct the orchestra at Saturday night's performance. The concert, starting at 8:30 will include works by Babrieli, Earle Brown, and Charles Ives. It will conclude with a performance of Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony.

The final concert of the weekend will be held Sunday starting at 2:30 p.m. Ozawa will lead the symphony in performances of Hayden, Beethoven and Ravel. Soloist for the Beethoven Piano Concerto will be Garrick Ohlsson.

76

Concert Review

Tanglewood's Second Week

BY MARTHA deB. BEAVER

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox was illuminated by an all-Mozart program for both the Friday evening Weekend Prelude at 7 and the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra's concert at 9, directed by Seisi Ozawa. Clear weather, though still retaining a bit of dampness, contributed to the pleasure of the audience, its total of 6,009 setting a record for opening night of the series' second weekend concerts.

Claude Frank and his wife Lillian Kallir opened the Weekend Prelude with a Fugue in C minor for two pianos, K.426, composed by Mozart in 1783, after a close study of Bach's works, which shows his great assimilation and use of this technique. Unfortunately, only the fugal themes stood out in vivid clarity, the development lost in cloudy tones created by injudicious pedaling. (This was also noticeable in Frank's playing last week of the Beethoven first concerto's third movement). It is a point we have seldom associated with this pianist's usually explicit musicianship.

For the "Andante and five variations in G major for four hands, K.501", a 1786 work, Miss Kallir assumed the treble position, but in no manner the dominant, for the variations are delightfully shared by the two pianists. In spite of the rhythmic and modulatory variety we found a lack of tonal color which would have added to the work's pleasing diversity.

The closing and familiar Sonata in D major for two pianos, (1781) K.448, redeemed the program, Miss Kallir's rather overly brilliant tone tempered but still animated, Frank displaying his customary reflective interpretation, both beautifully balanced, in the delicious interchange of melodic lines and figures similarly executed but personally distinctive.

Pleasurable anticipation was in no sense diminished with the performance of the 9:00 program, opening with the premiere of Mozart's Concerto in C for flute and harp, K.299, singularly played by Doriot Antony Dwyer and Ann Hobson. Written in Paris for the Duc de Guines and his daughter, whom the composer considered excellent players of the flute and harp, respectively, its formal yet simplistic elegance, set mainly in the middle to upper register, was entrancingly displayed by the soloists and musicians, with Seiji Ozawa controlling and coordinating all for the most musically effective development.

For the first time, we felt a closer rapport between Ozawa and the orchestra players, a more restrained control by the director and recognition of these mainly seasoned musicians, with a real sense of unified definition between the two unities. As always, one admired the unique personal grace of Ozawa (even likening it to Mozart's), the sharply defined movements of his hands suggesting the sculptural lines of Japanese paper art.

As delectable as the flute and harp concerto, if not more so, was that in B flat for bassoon, K.191, one of two extant, although the authenticity of the second is much doubted.

Written at the age of 18, when Mozart was establishing himself as a mature independent composer, it has irresistible appeal, and particularly as performed by Sherman Walt. The delicacy of phrasing and nicety of balance between orchestra and bassoon was never undermined by Ozawa's sensitive directions.

After a spirited orchestral introduction (the tempo was admirably established) Walt immediately showed his facile technique in the beginning ornamental runs and wide tonal range; these are interrupted by a minor interchange between orchestra and bassoon, original themes returning and ending the movement with that incomparable Mozartean blend of elegance and energy.

Similarity to the saxophone was especially noticeable in the persuasive lyricism of the tenderly conceived second movement, its overall mood of serenity and peace in perfect contrast to the sprightly finale, an inimitable Rondo in tempo di minuetto, bold and jaunty, (never stately) ending ebulliently after an extended coda of great difficulty, which in hands of these masterly musicians was not evident.

Of provocative and continual interest, the final work, not often heard, was one of many such by the composer, the Serenade No. 7 in D, K.250, another youthful masterpiece, in nine extended sections, commissioned by Siegmund Haffner for his daughter's wedding.

Distinguishing the work are an Andante and Rondo highlighting the principal violin; here Joseph Silverstein displayed his inimitable talents, a caressing tone, never faltering placement and technique that encompasses any demands. The cadenzas were his own, varied, brief and finely conceived.

Ozawa contained the Serenade in its lengthy display, allowing each its full measure of value and clarification, delighting in the parodied second minuet, bringing grave contemplation to the Adagio preceding the completely contrasted finale, Allegro Assai, alternating forte and piano, forceful and pleading, sections.

It was a fully satisfying evening as Mozart's music usually promises, and the audience appreciated with prolonged applause.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 10 1972
New England Newsclip

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 8 1972
New England Newsclip

Imaginative Choices Friday Set High Standard at Tanglewood

By RICHARD CONWAY

Some unusual programming and an unlikely "hero" marked the beginning of the second weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood Friday night.

The unusual programming began with the Weekend Prelude, when husband and wife team Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir presented a fine program of duo piano music by Mozart. (In fact, the entire evening was devoted to the music of the great Classical composer.)

The duo pianists played the "Fugue in C minor for two pianos, K. 426"; the "Andante and five variations in G for piano, four hands, K. 501"; and the "Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448."

For the regular concert, conductor Seiji Ozawa chose the "Concerto in C for flute and harp, K. 299"; the "Bassoon concerto in B flat, K. 191"; and the "Serenade No. 7 in D, K. 250 'Haffner' ".

The unlikely "hero" of this rather unusual programming was bassoonist Sherman Walt. Largely due to our public school training, I suppose, we generally think of the bassoon as the orchestra's clown, not to be taken very seriously. But Mozart's Concerto gives the bassoonist a fine chance to display considerable technical artistry and expressive playing.

Just Superb

Walt turned in a superb performance. He held the audience literally spellbound with his virtuosity. For us, the second movement andante was a masterpiece of control, phrasing, and articulation. The audience called Walt back for several bows, and one couldn't help but notice the look of immense satisfaction on conductor Ozawa's face.

The "Concerto for flute and harp" is a pleasant enough work, easy to hear. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, and Ann Hobson, harp, gave it a workman - like performance, but really uninspired. We felt that Mrs. Dwyer played much better in the Bach works last week.

After intermission, the orchestra returned for the "Haffner" Serenade. Originally composed for, and played at, the wedding of merchant Haffner's daughter, the music is really rather ideal for the Tanglewood surroundings. One needn't listen for anything of any great depth.

Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster Joseph Silverstein was solo violinist for the Serenade, and he turned in his usual, first-rate job. Silverstein does not draw a big tone from his instrument, but he plays with impeccable sensitivity and musicianship. Following his fine work in the second, third, and fourth movements of the "Haffner," he received well-deserved applause from the audience, and the work was stopped while he took his bows.

Friday's concert was a welcome change from the usual. We think there is room for more of this kind of imaginative programming.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

Mostly Music

BY WILLIAM P. MERRILL

Tanglewood: Ozawa tops in Mozart program

Any write-up of an evening at Tanglewood must necessarily include further description besides one of the music which took place. For Tanglewood is a total experience. The open air, the beautiful surroundings, the fellowship of music lovers on the lawn, combined with the superb artistry of the Boston Symphony Orchestra take music out of the sterile atmosphere of the concert hall and put it in a unique and thoroughly refreshing environment. Friday night was our first time down this season, an event looked forward to since early Spring.

To begin with, we took the scenic route down: Route 43 to N.Y. 22 over 295 through Richmond and arriving at Tanglewood via the Lenox Road in 45 minutes. This route, while perhaps a little longer, completely avoids Pittsfield with its annoying traffic lights, and with sparse traffic gets you there by way of some beautiful scenery.

Essential to the Tanglewood experience is the picnic consumed upon the lawn, be it gourmet or simple. A party of epicures in our vicinity was seen to partake of a first course of crabmeat, followed by lobster, and then baba au rhum. Each course was accompanied by the appropriate wine, and the feast ended with champagne. Of course by the time the concert had started, they were all asleep, so we recommend lighter fare. French bread, cold cuts, cheese, fresh fruit, and Almaden Chablis did us just fine.

As this was a Friday night concert, it began with the Weekend Prelude, a bonus tossed in for us locals who can make it to the Shed before the city folk. Pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir played works by Mozart for two pianos and piano, four hands. The airiness of the music combined with the joviality of atmosphere made for an excellent introduction to the main events of the evening.

Seiji Ozawa led the Boston Symphony in impeccable performances of Mozart's Concerto for Flute and Harp, K.299; Concerto for Bassoon, K.191; and Seranade in D, K.250, the "Haffner". The Flute and Harp Concerto does not by any means reflect Mozart's legendary disdain for the former instrument. There is sincerity in the writing supported by great spirit in the performance. A note on Mr. Ozawa's conducting. He worked with livliness and precision, bringing out the charm and delicacy inherent in Mozart. Among the new generation of conductors, his selection as the future music director of the BSO is a fortunate one.

The Bassoon Concerto, always a pleasure to hear, is a virtuoso work, which in the words of Alfred Einstein, is "unmistakably conceived for a wind instrument, a real bassoon concerto, which can not be arranged, say, for violincello." The soloist was Sherman Walt, principal bassoon of the BSO. The work received a standing ovation at its conclusion.

The Haffner seranade was composed in 1776 for the wedding of the daughter of Sigmund Haffner, Burgomaster of Salzburg. Six years later, the Burgomaster again commissioned a work from Mozart, this time commemorating the elevation of his son to the nobility, and it is the latter work which is forbearer of the famed Haffner symphony. The earlier seranade played Friday night suffers from a lack of cohesiviness. Its nine movements, each of which are delightful in themselves, might better have been suited to concert performance if they had ended in four. Concert Master Joseph Silverstein performed the concerto parts brilliantly.

Mozart Music Offered at Tanglewood

Sherman Walt, first bassoonist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was soloist at Tanglewood Friday night as the orchestra played a bassoon concerto by Mozart.

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — One of the beauties of Mozart was that he treated lightweight music with great respect.

The first half of Friday's program at Tanglewood offered two cases in point: the Concerto for Flute and Harp (K.299) and the Concerto for Bassoon (K.191).

Both are light, unpretentious, amiable, transparent music full of lyrical beauty. They have the stamp of garden-party pleasure on them, without a moment of frivolity.

The conductor was Seiji Ozawa, and the soloists were Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, Ann Hobson, harpist, and Sherman Walt, bassoonist, all members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 25 other members of which served as accompanists.

Walt was soloist for the bassoon concerto several times with the orchestra on its trip to Europe 15 months ago. It is a challenge for a soloist, requiring virtuoso agility with a difficult instrument.

The audience responded with enthusiasm; it recognized a fine performance and also, of course, the passages of pure, beautiful tone that came out of that apparently awkward instrument during the melodic middle movement.

There were unusual rumbles of talk between movements, indicating that members of the audience were telling each other what a remarkably nice instrument the bassoon is.

Mrs. Dwyer and Miss Hobson also demonstrated beautifully the delicacy of the flute-harp concerto, although the flute was at something of a disadvantage; the harp had a large volume.

In fact, the whole ensemble was a bit out of balance, for my taste. There were 14

violins, four violas, two cellos, and one doublebass and two each of horn and obo, which probably is what Mozart asked for; but in the shed, with its reflecting walls, there was a lack of bass.

After intermission the orchestra played Mozart's longest serenade, "The Haffner," with half - size orchestra (about 50 members).

It is Mozart's symphonic serenade, also, and would last more than an hour if all the original repeats were played. They weren't Friday.

It was composed as bonafide garden - party music on commission for big wedding, and its perennial popularity is further proof of Mozart's respect for light music he probably expected to be played only once or twice.

Boston's orchestra plays this sort of music with precision and flexibility.

The gate count was 6009, which a spokesman said was "the highest second - weekend Friday - night attendance on record."

A delightful program was offered for the 7-o'clock prelude program (which can be attended each Friday by early ticket holders for the 9 p.m. concert).

Claude Frank and his wife, Lilian Kalloc both pianists of international stature, played two of Mozart's duets for two pianos and one for four hands on one piano.

The program can be called delightful not only because that is a good word to describe Mozart's sunnier pieces, like these, but also because this husband and wife obviously are not professionally competitive, or at least, there was no evidence of it on stage.

Their teamwork was impeccable; only once during the whole 40 minute program did I hear one of them hit his-her half of a chord a fraction ahead of the other, and there was a suspicion that that might have been the way Mozart wrote it.

They moved the music faster and slower, louder and softer with a loving togetherness that was reflected in the mood of the sound.

And, of course, their technical command of the keyboard was equal to their sensitivity of Mozart.

The pieces were Fugue for Two Pianos (K.426), Andante and Five Variations for Piano, Four Hand (K.501), and Sonata for Two Pianos (K.448).

Tonight Bruno Maderna will conduct the orchestra with his own arrangement of Gabriili's "Ricercare", five twentieth century pieces by Gabrieli's "Ricercare," five and Mozart's last symphony, "Jupiter," (K.551).

Tomorrow Ozawa will conduct the orchestra with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto with Garrick Ohlson as soloist and Ravel's ballet suite "Mother Goose."

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 8 1972
New England Newsclip

Concert Review

Tanglewood's Second Week

BY MARTHA deB. BEAVER

The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox was illuminated by an all-Mozart program for both the Friday evening Weekend Prelude at 7 and the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra's concert at 9, directed by Seisi Ozawa. Clear weather, though still retaining a bit of dampness, contributed to the pleasure of the audience, its total of 6,009 setting a record for opening night of the series' second weekend concerts.

Claude Frank and his wife Lillian Kallir opened the Weekend Prelude with a Fugue in C minor for two pianos, K.426, composed by Mozart in 1783, after a close study of Bach's works, which shows his great assimilation and use of this technique. Unfortunately, only the fugal themes stood out in vivid clarity, the development lost in cloudy tones created by injudicious pedaling. (This was also noticeable in Frank's playing last week of the Beethoven first concerto's third movement). It is a point we have seldom associated with this pianist's usually explicit musicianship.

For the "Andante and five variations in G major for four hands, K.501", a 1786 work, Miss Kallir assumed the treble position, but in no manner the dominant, for the variations are delightfully shared by the two pianists. In spite of the rhythmic and modulatory variety we found a lack of tonal color which would have added to the work's pleasing diversity.

The closing and familiar Sonata in D major for two pianos, (1781) K.448, redeemed the program, Miss Kallir's rather overly brilliant tone tempered but still animated, Frank displaying his customary reflective interpretation, both beautifully balanced, in the delicious interchange of melodic lines and figures similarly executed but personally distinctive.

Pleasurable anticipation was in no sense diminished with the performance of the 9:00 program, opening with the premiere of Mozart's Concerto in C for flute and harp, K.299, singularly played by Doriot Antony Dwyer and Ann Hobson. Written in Paris for the Duc de Guines and his daughter, whom the composer considered excellent players of the flute and harp, respectively, its formal yet simplistic elegance, set mainly in the middle to upper register, was entrancingly displayed by the soloists and musicians, with Seiji Ozawa controlling and coordinating all for the most musically effective development.

For the first time, we felt a closer rapport between Ozawa and the orchestra players, a more restrained control by the director and recognition of these mainly seasoned musicians, with a real sense of unified definition between the two unities. As always, one admired the unique personal grace of Ozawa (even likening it to Mozart's), the sharply defined movements of his hands suggesting the sculptural lines of Japanese paper art.

As delectable as the flute and harp concerto, if not more so, was that in B flat for bassoon, K.191, one of two extant, although the authenticity of the second is much doubted.

Written at the age of 18, when Mozart was establishing himself as a mature independent composer, it has irresistible appeal, and particularly as performed by Sherman Walt. The delicacy of phrasing and nicety of balance between orchestra and bassoon was never undermined by Ozawa's sensitive directions.

After a spirited orchestral introduction (the tempo was admirably established) Walt immediately showed his facile technique in the beginning ornamental runs and wide tonal range; these are interrupted by a minor interchange between orchestra and bassoon, original themes returning and ending the movement with that incomparable Mozartean blend of elegance and energy.

Similarity to the saxophone was especially noticeable in the persuasive lyricism of the tenderly conceived second movement, its overall mood of serenity and peace in perfect contrast to the sprightly finale, an inimitable Rondo in tempo di minuetto, bold and jaunty, (never stately) ending ebulliently after an extended coda of great difficulty, which in hands of these masterly musicians was not evident.

Of provocative and continual interest, the final work, not often heard, was one of many such by the composer, the Serenade No. 7 in D, K.250, another youthful masterpiece, in nine extended sections, commissioned by Siegmund Haffner for his daughter's wedding.

Distinguishing the work are an Andante and Rondo highlighting the principal violin; here Joseph Silverstein displayed his inimitable talents, a caressing tone, never faltering placement and technique that encompasses any demands. The cadenzas were his own, varied, brief and finely conceived.

Ozawa contained the Serenade in its lengthy display, allowing each its full measure of value and clarification, delighting in the parodied second minuet, bringing grave contemplation to the Adagio preceding the completely contrasted finale, Allegro Assai, alternating forte and piano, forceful and pleading, sections.

It was a fully satisfying evening as Mozart's music usually promises, and the audience appreciated with prolonged applause.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 10 1972
New England Newsclip

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 8 1972
New England Newsclip

Imaginative Choices Friday Set High Standard at Tanglewood

By RICHARD CONWAY

Some unusual programming and an unlikely "hero" marked the beginning of the second weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood Friday night.

The unusual programming began with the Weekend Prelude, when husband and wife team Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir presented a fine program of duo piano music by Mozart. (In fact, the entire evening was devoted to the music of the great Classical composer.)

The duo pianists played the "Fugue in C minor for two pianos, K. 426"; the "Andante and five variations in G for piano, four hands, K. 501"; and the "Sonata in D for two pianos, K. 448."

For the regular concert, conductor Seiji Ozawa chose the "Concerto in C for flute and harp, K. 299"; the "Bassoon concerto in B flat, K. 191"; and the "Serenade No. 7 in D, K. 250 'Haffner' ".

The unlikely "hero" of this rather unusual programming was bassoonist Sherman Walt. Largely due to our public school training, I suppose, we generally think of the bassoon as the orchestra's clown, not to be taken very seriously. But Mozart's Concerto gives the bassoonist a fine chance to display considerable technical artistry and expressive playing.

Just Superb

Walt turned in a superb performance. He held the audience literally spellbound with his virtuosity. For us, the second movement andante was a masterpiece of control, phrasing, and articulation. The audience called Walt back for several bows, and one couldn't help but notice the look of immense satisfaction on conductor Ozawa's face.

The "Concerto for flute and harp" is a pleasant enough work, easy to hear. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute, and Ann Hobson, harp, gave it a workman - like performance, but really uninspired. We felt that Mrs. Dwyer played much better in the Bach works last week.

After intermission, the orchestra returned for the "Haffner" Serenade. Originally composed for, and played at, the wedding of merchant Haffner's daughter, the music is really rather ideal for the Tanglewood surroundings. One needn't listen for anything of any great depth.

Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster Joseph Silverstein was solo violinist for the Serenade, and he turned in his usual, first-rate job. Silverstein does not draw a big tone from his instrument, but he plays with impeccable sensitivity and musicianship. Following his fine work in the second, third, and fourth movements of the "Haffner," he received well-deserved applause from the audience, and the work was stopped while he took his bows.

Friday's concert was a welcome change from the usual. We think there is room for more of this kind of imaginative programming.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

Mostly Music

BY WILLIAM P. MERRILL

Tanglewood: Ozawa tops in Mozart program

Any write-up of an evening at Tanglewood must necessarily include further description besides one of the music which took place. For Tanglewood is a total experience. The open air, the beautiful surroundings, the fellowship of music lovers on the lawn, combined with the superb artistry of the Boston Symphony Orchestra take music out of the sterile atmosphere of the concert hall and put it in a unique and thoroughly refreshing environment. Friday night was our first time down this season, an event looked forward to since early Spring.

To begin with, we took the scenic route down: Route 43 to N.Y. 22 over 295 through Richmond and arriving at Tanglewood via the Lenox Road in 45 minutes. This route, while perhaps a little longer, completely avoids Pittsfield with its annoying traffic lights, and with sparse traffic gets you there by way of some beautiful scenery.

Essential to the Tanglewood experience is the picnic consumed upon the lawn, be it gourmet or simple. A party of epicures in our vicinity was seen to partake of a first course of crabmeat, followed by lobster, and then baba au rhum. Each course was accompanied by the appropriate wine, and the feast ended with champagne. Of course by the time the concert had started, they were all asleep, so we recommend lighter fare. French bread, cold cuts, cheese, fresh fruit, and Almaden Chablis did us just fine.

As this was a Friday night concert, it began with the Weekend Prelude, a bonus tossed in for us locals who can make it to the Shed before the city folk. Pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir played works by Mozart for two pianos and piano, four hands. The airiness of the music combined with the joviality of atmosphere made for an excellent introduction to the main events of the evening.

Seiji Ozawa led the Boston Symphony in impeccable performances of Mozart's Concerto for Flute and Harp, K.299; Concerto for Bassoon, K.191; and Seranade in D, K.250, the "Haffner". The Flute and Harp Concerto does not by any means reflect Mozart's legendary disdain for the former instrument. There is sincerity in the writing supported by great spirit in the performance. A note on Mr. Ozawa's conducting. He worked with livliness and precision, bringing out the charm and delicacy inherent in Mozart. Among the new generation of conductors, his selection as the future music director of the BSO is a fortunate one.

The Bassoon Concerto, always a pleasure to hear, is a virtuoso work, which in the words of Alfred Einstein, is "unmistakably conceived for a wind instrument, a real bassoon concerto, which can not be arranged, say, for violincello." The soloist was Sherman Walt, principal bassoon of the BSO. The work received a standing ovation at its conclusion.

The Haffner seranade was composed in 1776 for the wedding of the daughter of Sigmund Haffner, Burgomaster of Salzburg. Six years later, the Burgomaster again commissioned a work from Mozart, this time commemorating the elevation of his son to the nobility, and it is the latter work which is forbearer of the famed Haffner symphony. The earlier seranade played Friday night suffers from a lack of cohesiviness. Its nine movements, each of which are delightful in themselves, might better have been suited to concert performance if they had ended in four. Concert Master Joseph Silverstein performed the concerto parts brilliantly.

Mozart Music Offered at Tanglewood

Sherman Walt, first bassoonist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was soloist at Tanglewood Friday night as the orchestra played a bassoon concerto by Mozart.

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — One of the beauties of Mozart was that he treated lightweight music with great respect.

The first half of Friday's program at Tanglewood offered two cases in point: the Concerto for Flute and Harp (K.299) and the Concerto for Bassoon (K.191).

Both are light, unpretentious, amiable, transparent music full of lyrical beauty. They have the stamp of garden-party pleasure on them, without a moment of frivolity.

The conductor was Seiji Ozawa, and the soloists were Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, Ann Hobson, harpist, and Sherman Walt, bassoonist, all members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 25 other members of which served as accompanists.

Walt was soloist for the bassoon concerto several times with the orchestra on its trip to Europe 15 months ago. It is a challenge for a soloist, requiring virtuoso agility with a difficult instrument.

The audience responded with enthusiasm; it recognized a fine performance and also, of course, the passages of pure, beautiful tone that came out of that apparently awkward instrument during the melodic middle movement.

There were unusual rumbles of talk between movements, indicating that members of the audience were telling each other what a remarkably nice instrument the bassoon is.

Mrs. Dwyer and Miss Hobson also demonstrated beautifully the delicacy of the flute-harp concerto, although the flute was at something of a disadvantage; the harp had a large volume.

In fact, the whole ensemble was a bit out of balance, for my taste. There were 14

violins, four violas, two cellos, and one doublebass and two each of horn and obo, which probably is what Mozart asked for; but in the shed, with its reflecting walls, there was a lack of bass.

After intermission the orchestra played Mozart's longest serenade, "The Haffner," with half - size orchestra (about 50 members).

It is Mozart's symphonic serenade, also, and would last more than an hour if all the original repeats were played. They weren't Friday.

It was composed as bonafide garden - party music on commission for big wedding, and its perennial popularity is further proof of Mozart's respect for light music he probably expected to be played only once or twice.

Boston's orchestra plays this sort of music with precision and flexibility.

The gate count was 6009, which a spokesman said was "the highest second - weekend Friday - night attendance on record."

A delightful program was offered for the 7-o'clock prelude program (which can be attended each Friday by early ticket holders for the 9 p.m. concert).

Claude Frank and his wife, Lilian Kalloc both pianists of international stature, played two of Mozart's duets for two pianos and one for four hands on one piano.

The program can be called delightful not only because that is a good word to describe Mozart's sunnier pieces, like these, but also because this husband and wife obviously are not professionally competitive, or at least, there was no evidence of it on stage.

Their teamwork was impeccable; only once during the whole 40 minute program did I hear one of them hit his-her half of a chord a fraction ahead of the other, and there was a suspicion that that might have been the way Mozart wrote it.

They moved the music faster and slower, louder and softer with a loving togetherness that was reflected in the mood of the sound.

And, of course, their technical command of the keyboard was equal to their sensitivity of Mozart.

The pieces were Fugue for Two Pianos (K.426), Andante and Five Variations for Piano, Four Hand (K.501), and Sonata for Two Pianos (K.448).

Tonight Bruno Maderna will conduct the orchestra with his own arrangement of Gabriili's "Ricercare", five twentieth century pieces by Gabrieli's "Ricercare," five and Mozart's last symphony, "Jupiter," (K.551).

Tomorrow Ozawa will conduct the orchestra with Haydn's Symphony No. 60, Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto with Garrick Ohlson as soloist and Ravel's ballet suite "Mother Goose."

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 8 1972
New England Newsclip

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUL 10 1972

New England Newsclip

THEATER / ARTS

Bruno Maderna conducts; BSO offers 4 Ives works

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — The Italian composer Bruno Maderna, who is in charge of contemporary music activities at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, was guest conductor at the Boston Symphony's Saturday evening concert. In the big Music Shed, the 20th century usually isn't much heard from, but Maderna's program included four short pieces by Charles Ives as well as "Available Forms I" by Earle Brown. It was, moreover, "Available Forms" that produced the evenings's longest and loudest ovation (with a few boos mixed in).

The material of "Available Forms" is 20-some short musical statements for chamber ensemble. The conductor is free to begin with any of these and proceed to any others in any order, making repetitions or omissions at will. In a limited liability proposition of that sort, the effectiveness of the piece as a whole depends on the skill, which here I think means intuition plus a little bit of luck, of the conductor. The local effectiveness depends on the composer because the short statements themselves are, except for the possibility of varying the dynamics, all worked out. Brown's musical gestures are simple but charming, and their timbres run through a pleasant combination of delicate and edgy, with a touch sometimes of soft croak and rasp.

Saturday's version provided 10 minutes of fun, sagging a bit toward the end (one manic-but-muted bit of oratory from the solo trombone came round rather too often). As to the sensuous, emotional and intellectual receivers to which music can appeal, "Available Forms" speaks only to the first, but that genuinely. Brown applauded enthusiastically, but paid no heed to the conductor's attempts to find him in the audience. He ended up taking no bow, fair enough perhaps for a composer who did not really finish composing his piece.

"The Unanswered Question" is a work where Ives had a striking poetic idea and an interesting compositional and sonorous plan, and then also the patience and technique to turn all that into a coherent piece of music. "Tone Roads" numbers 1 and 3, as well as the Scherzo, "Over the Pavements," which completed the Ives group at Saturday's concert, are for me among the majority of his pieces which do not take the final and crucial step from fascinating and original ideas to professional and lucid execution. The performances, to be sure, were of no help — there cannot have been enough rehearsal time — and there were too many violinists playing too inaccurately in the chamber-musical "Tone Roads." And from what parish house did the BSO borrow the bizarrely untuned piano for "Over the Pavements?"

Maderna began the concert with his transcription for two quartets, each of bassoon, horn, trumpet, and trombone, of a Gabrieli Ricercare, played with sour intonation and a general sense of uncertainty.

He ended with Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony, of which his performance was interesting and not completely successful. It was interesting in two respects. One came out of Maderna's concern for an emphasis on Mozart's rhythmic and polyphonic complexities. Not merely the spectacular and famous show in the coda of the finale, but also touches like the simultaneous fanfares at two different tempi in the last bars of the first movement. The other proceeded from Maderna's notion of reading the "Jupiter" as though it were the first Beethoven symphony, one, that is, designed as a cumulative structure in which everything builds toward a climactic finale. If any Mozart symphony can be read that way, it is the "Jupiter," but in making his point, Maderna had to underplay the first movement drastically and almost perversely, and while he said some interesting things about the "Jupiter," he ended up telling not quite the whole truth about it.

It was an unsuccessful performance, in part because, given an unusual interpretation, some very quick tempi, and a determination not to subdivide the beat, there had not been enough rehearsal, and also because it was singularly colorless.

I think Maderna had the strings leave off their mutes in the Andante, but in any case the string sound had no lustre or brilliance in the unmuted movements, nor any mystery in the muted ones.

Tanglewood Program Both Traditional And Modern

By BILL RICE

Saturday evening's concert in the second weekend of music of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., could hardly be called ordinary. Heard were works dating from the 16th century "golden age of brass," to the present, with compositions in the program to delight both the traditionalist and most progressive listener.

The most unusual work heard was also the newest, Earle Brown's Available Forms I for Chamber Orchestra. Brown is currently a composer in residence at the Berkshire school and penned the work heard Saturday in 1961.

Scored for an unusual number of mallot instruments, considering the size of the orchestra used, Available Forms uses marimba, xylophone and vibraphone plus tympani and orchestra bells. But the work is most interesting from the standpoint of direction.

Complex Score

Bruno Maderna, Saturday evening's conductor, had in front of him a score of six sections on separate pages, as well as a chart with a sliding indicator.

Maderna adjusted the chart during the piece to indicate which section the orchestra should play, and with the use of finger signals indicated which segment of the section should be heard. Traditional "three or four to a measure" conducting was absent, though Maderna did indicate entrances and dynamics with chopping jabs and circular motions.

The process gives an unusual range of freedom to the conductor, but an accurate opinion of the music could probably come only after several listenings, as the work is never heard exactly the same way.

The music often comes in spurts and spasms with sections of the orchestra tumbling in on top of one another, with toots, peeps or slides from individual instruments often closing a fragment.

Ives' Works

Coming on the heels of the Brown composition, a series of four pieces by Charles Ives, though severely atonal in their own right, sounded as tame as Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata. All of the Ives' works were written in, or prior to, 1915.

The first, Tone Roads No. 1, had a dry texture and seemed devoid of the tensions we expect from dodecaphonic writing.

In Tone Roads no 3 the tonal quality of the instruments at hand was more fully explored.

In The Unanswered Question, the third section, we again had an unusual situation on the podium. This time conductor Maderna stood motionless while concertmaster Joseph Silverstein conducted the strings with his bow from his chair. Maderna's only function was to occasionally cue the brasses and woodwinds.

Beautiful Chords

This section consisted of slowly and beautifully changing chord progressions in the strings, with trumpets interrupting with a haunting phrase which was as far from the strings in tonality as could be. Jagged answerings from the woodwinds also colored the section.

The fourth section, Sherzo (Over the Pavements), began with a surging motor motion initially generated by piano. The motion soon becomes bogged down in a tangle of orchestral cross rhythms. This section was often grandiose in it's boldness, sometimes a bit pompous, sometimes ponderous. It concluded with a humorous and very tonal oom-pa-pa in it's final gasp.

Opening the program was a Bruno Maderna arrangement of a Giovanni Gabrieli Ricercare. This was most satisfying if not exciting, listening.

The Saturday evening concert again closed with Mozart, this time his Jupiter symphony.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 10 1972

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 10 1972

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 10 1972

Mozart, Modern Masters Make Tanglewood a Marvel

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

The very high standards for which Tanglewood has been a symbol for years were maintained and then some on both Friday and Saturday evenings.

Friday the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Seiji Ozawa presented an all Mozart program. The works were the Concerto for flute and harp in C, K. 299; Bassoon Concerto in B Flat, K. 191; Serenade No. 7 in D K 250, 'Haffner.'

OZAWA LIKES Mozart, in fact, one impression is that he likes Mozart better than Bach. This impression is fixed if one compares the opening program last week which was all-Bach with the one Friday. This by no means is meant to imply that Ozawa was less than meticulous in the Bach, but that he gave a very real sense of involvement with these three subtle and gentle works of Mozart.

The Concerto In C for flute and harp presented as soloists Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flute and Ann Hobson, harp. Miss Dwyer has for some time augmented the activities in Boston and Tanglewood with her most musical and impeccable manner with the flute. Miss Hobson was an able accomplice in all respects in this work; particularly the Andantino with its lovely melody was, for the two of them, a delightful exersise.

Sherman Walt, bassoon, was just fine in the Concerto in B Flat.

This instrument, often used for comedic effect in the orchestra, is here extended to the ultimate and Walt made it seem easy. Technically it's demands are excessive, and in this respect Walt was in total command. But what raised this performance beyond the merely good was the first-rate musicality and artistry of the soloist. The subtlety with which he played the last note of the final cadence of the Andante, the quiet and sure fashion with which he let the sound withdraw and end, was most evocative.

The final work, the Serenade No. 7 was made whole by the performance of Joseph Silverstein, the concertmaster of the BSO. We have eulogized Silverstein considerably in the past, and we have no reason now to react differently. He is a fine and versatile fiddle player well on a par with more famous concert players and in many cases, superior.

Saturday Bruno Maderna, whose name is calculated to make old ladies shake and murmer, children to shriek and fall down, strong men to blanch and tremble, took the podium for a program which was about as eclectic as one could imagine.

Consider: Ricercare, by Giovanni Gabrieli, a turn of the 16th Century composer; Earle Brown, "Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble" (1961); Charles Ives, "Tone Roads No. 1 and 3, "The Unanswered Question," and "Over the Pavements"; and Mozart Symphony No. 41 in C K. 551.

IT IS A MEASURE of Maderna's ability that he made this program work and work very well. He is himself a composer of the atonal school, and much like Pierre Boulez, has avowed purpose in life is to bring today's audiences knicking and screaming out of the 19th Century. Well, he is a very effective instrument for doing so.

No two performances of "Available Forms 1" can be identical. The score consists of six unbound pages with either four or five events on page and the conductor is at liberty to begin with any event on any page and go from there to any other event on that or any other page, making repetitions or omissions at will. This information is provided by the notes and the composer and there is very little I can add. The only proper method of assessment is to hear it yourself and make up your own mind. I have.

The Ives, particularly the "Unanswered Question" was for me, moving and very evocative. The three separate voices in the work consists of a solo trumpet, a woodwind quartet and, to one side, a string orchestra.

Ives, with his entirely original musical mind and his completely heuristic musical style, combines all the elements that could be found in the mainstream of his time and adds some strikingly new applications of his own. The results are completely original and often smack of true genius.

It might seem strange, but Maderna for all his devotion to the contemporary sound and method is a very good conductor of Mozart. His reading of the Symphony No. 41 was a model of precision and mobility. He really understands Mozart and it showed. Of course it is strange only on the face of it, any musician of Maderna's sensibilities would be his very nature of Mozart.

Mozart Magic Felt at Tanglewood

By EDWARD FRENCH

There was a liberal helping of tonal magic at Tanglewood Friday evening thanks to an assortment of Mozart's sunniest inspirations.

This wonder-working began with the Weekend Prelude featuring Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music by Mozart for four hands at one and two keyboards.

PERFECTLY molded phrases, impeccable technic and delicately balanced sonorities gave the Sonata in D, K.448 a vitality and finish rarely encountered. This same loving care was given to the Variations in G and Fugue in C minor.

Seiji Ozawa conducted a program designed to exploit the solo capabilities of four members of the Boston ensemble. Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Anne Hobson were soloists in the Concerto in C for Flute, Harp and Chamber Orchestra. This light and graceful work was performed with a technical fluency and style that enhanced its entertaining charm.

The cadenzas written by Robert Levin, harpsichordist of the orchestra, revealed a remarkable understanding of Mozarty's style and thematic procedures.

SHERMAN WALT was soloist in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat. Technically and tonally he achieved miracles with his instrument, so often considered the "clown" of the orchestra. The slow movement was unusually expressive and the fast ones gracefully fluent.

Thanks to Mr. Ozawa's perceptive conducting, the orchestral accompaniments Mozart's style and thematic were ideal complements to the soloists.

The major work was the rather lengthy "Haffner" Serenade in D, K 25.0. It is unusual in that it contains a full fledged violin concerto (Andante, Menuetto, Rondeau) within the seven sectioned work.

Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein played the solo part with his customary perfection of technic, lovely tone and graceful style. Throughout the concert the orchestra displayed a subtlety of nuance and perfection of ensemble found only in the finest chamber music groups.

Bruno Maderna made his first appearance on the podium this season Saturday evening. His way with 20th century music was persuasively demonstrated in his reading of a far out piece by Earle Brown, current artist in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, and three pieces by Charles Ives whose music is much in evidence these days.

MR. BROWN'S "Available Forms 1" impressed us as being cut from much the same cloth as the work of George Crumb and Ligetti. It seems quite static and utilizes a large battery of percussion instruments. The structure call for a sustained slow series of mildly dissonant chords alternated with short scurrying passage.

The Ives' works are highly individual, sturdy, atonal and have attention gripping momentum. Mr. Maderna's reading of these was lucid and convincing. We especially enjoyed the mood established in "The Unanswered Question" and the boisterous vitality of the Scherzo.

Mr. Maderna's command of the classic idiom was convincingly demonstrated in a magnificent reading of Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony. The structure was clearly defined, the tonal texture was transparent and lovely and the marvelous Finale had the headlong impetuosity of an element unchained.

SUNDAY afternoon found Tanglewood at its golden best. Seiji Ozawa was back in command and favored us with superb readings of an unfamiliar Haydn Symphony known as "Il Distratto", and the always exquisite "Mother Goose" Suite by Ravel.

The Haydn work was originally written as incidental music for the comedy "Le Distrait" (the absent-minded) by Jean Regnard. The music is delightfully zany and full of surprises. The Presto, a wonderful assortment of Balkan folksongs taken at headlong speed was an orchestral tour de force. The rhythms had an infectious lilt, passage work was beautifully articulated and the overall sound was superb.

The Mother Goose Suite was Ravel at his descriptive best, the orchestration providing a multitude of delicate tonal colorings. This is music Ozawa has made his own and the orchestra responded in kind.

Beethoven's C minor Piano Concerto had the young American virtuoso Garrick Ohlsson as soloist. We thought his first movement on the fast side resulting in some blurred passages. The Adagio was expressive and tonally lovely and the Rondo while slower than the traditional tempo had a definite rhythmic bite. The cadenzas had the necessary virtuoso flair. However our personal conviction is that Mr. Ohlsson is a very talented pianist, but not yet a great one.

SEIJI OZAWA
Perceptive Conducting

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638
JUL 10 1972

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169
JUL 11 1972

Ohlsson Exhibits Football Finesse

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Garrick Ohlsson is a big young man. As big; say, as the standard pro tight end. And some of this size projects into the manner in which he plays piano.

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, (the small one, the big one comes next weekend) under the direction of Seiji Ozawa combined with Ohlsson in the Beethoven Piano Concerto No 3 in C Minor.

OHLSSON IS a strong and competent player, but that is about all he is. His playing simply does not measure up to the top rank player one hears today in considerable numbers. His technique is sound enough but it is mechanical and he does not use it in tandem with that great sense of musical phrasemaking that separates the men and the boys in the arena of inspired music making.

The DeLarrochas, the Franks, the Gileles, the Ashkenazys and Presslers, to name just a few, all have this innate feeling for the suave legato line but with Ohlsson it is not enough in evidence.

HE IS an affable and engaging young man nonetheless. At one point in a descending scale, he hit a minor clam and in an ingenuous display of humanity, he grimaced sadly.

For openers, we were served that rarely performed Haydn Simphony No 60 in C "Il Distratto." It is good Haydn which means good muic even if one one is unaware that it is also a musical joke. Haydn quite deliberately tossed in what were for those times musical aberrations even to the point of having the orchestra stop in the Finale and retune the G string which had been in F.

OZAWA AND the BSO are quite at home in such programmatic works as Ravel's "Ma Mere L'oye" (Mother Goose).

Like much of Ravel's work, it is an orchestration of a piece written originally for piano, in this case for four hands. He orchestrated this one himself with all the unique and authentic colors from his musical palette.

This is charming music, descriptive of course, so descriptive that the auditor can easily accept the musical portraits that are being painted even without program notes. Or, without the ballet for which this work was orchestrated. As a musical suite it stands quite easily by itself and the performance that Ozawa and his troops accorded it certainly helped in all respects.

Kite Magazine July 20th

Maderna Conducts at Tanglewood

By Milton Zapolski

Bruno Maderna guest-conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this past Saturday in a varied program featuring music old and new. In a way, the pieces on the first half were about Sound, specifically the nature of it. First we heard Maderna's arrangement of Gabrielli's Ricercare for two antiphonal brass choirs. Each quartet of instruments would echo the other or provide imitative harmony in the manner of a round, or canon. With the exception of some poor intonation and almost inaudible playing by the first horn the piece sounded very enjoyable (although the middle was less good than either the end or the very beginning) and made one wonder what this music sounded like in Gabrielli's day, bouncing around from band to band in the almost overresonant acoustic of Venice's Saint Mark's Cathedral.

Modern Music

Earl Brown's Available Forms Number One continued the concert. This is an aleatory, or chance, piece that depends on which numbers (from one to six) the conductor flashes before the orchestra. Depending on the conductor's "inspiration" (mood is a more logical word) the orchestra responds by instantly playing one of six completely composed mini-pieces that, when taken together and in combinations, comprise the complete finished performance. Needless to say, the work never sounds the same way twice. The building blocks of this piece were somewhat interesting in themselves; for example number five was for sarcastic and/or snarly muted lower brass; numbers one and two included piano or celeste, etc. Seen as a whole though, the music is like a series of orchestral impressions where one senses, for example, the "essence" of light metallic high percussion (glockenspiels and triangle) and that is all. It's sort of like the modern paintings of just one color: the idea is to get involved in one abstract magnification and perceive it as an artistic entirety. Of course the magnification under consideration must at least be interesting to be of any pragmatic aesthetic value to the observer, and it was in precisely this area of communication that Brown's music left one seeking more substance.

Ives Featured

The highlight of the first half were four Ives selections grouped like a small symphony. The Tone Roads One and Three which were offered first have been labeled Ives' anticipation of serialism, or 12-tone music. Personally, I did not discern any tone-rows, but rather the typically complex Ivesian blend of harmonies and free counterpoint. The Third Road began with bells and reminded one of the From the Steeples and the Mountains. The Unanswered Question formed the third movement, and for the occasion Concertmaster/Assistant Conductor Joseph Silverstein led the string orchestra in the chord progressions representing eternal silence. Silverstein's wrist movements were extremely supple, and he conducted with his bow in clear, articulated movements that elicited continuity and distinctiveness from his players even though a second violin dropped a B-natural one bar too soon just before the second reiteration of the question. Maderna conducted the trumpet and wind quartet equally brilliantly: one of his more interesting effects was the trumpet's repeating the question louder at each reappearance the first four times (but why not the other two?). Ives's playful Over the Pavements scherzo closed the first half. Here the orchestra sounded humorous and fascinating and left the audience with a real positive feeling.

Second Half

After intermission Mozart's Jupiter Symphony was given. Maderna observed repeats in all movements but the andante, a rather bad idea owing to the fact that architecturally these repeats hinder the normal symmetry of the music; since the repeats generally last twice as long as any development section or recap. It is the same as seeing a vaulting arch with one column twice as massive as the other. Besides, Maderna does not conduct the second time around with the fervor he gets the first time; you'd think the sheer drop in intensity would impress upon the conductor his fundamental out-of-phaseness with regard to repeats. Another thing he did badly was his choice of tempi for the inner movements, which went much too quickly to give the music proper breathing room. Maderna's tempi fluctuated constantly in the slow movement, the triplet-figures for horns becoming repeatedly harder to articulate properly as the tempo increased. At times the outer movements sounded very good though, for Mozart's brisk music should have a quickstep feeling about it. Even so, Maderna could have been more sensitive with wind and ostentatious horn parts although he got sounds in the fugal section that sounded really nice.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BSO

Friday, July 7

The chill evening air of the Berkshires greeted a large audience at Tanglewood for an all-Mozart program. This may account for the less than perfect start of the concert directed by Seiji Ozawa. Mozart's Concerto in C (K200) for flute and harp opened the program with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, and Ann Hobson, harpist, as soloists.

In the opening movement one had difficulty hearing the harp, and the balance between the solo instruments and orchestra was confusing. The second movement, an andantina, was given an interpretation similar to music of the romantics. It really did not sound like Mozart. However, in the third movement, marked rondeau: allegro, the small ensemble again provided a deliberate reading of the score.

What we could hear of Miss Hobson's playing, especially the cadenzas, was impressive. Doriot Anthony Dwyer's artistry is well known and her playing of the first order.

The concert gained momentum and excitement with the bassoon concerto in B flat. Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist, was more than able to manage the technical difficulties of a work for which he seems to have great affection. Mr. Walt's tone was clear and lovely throughout.

The final offering was the Serenade No. 7 in D Major, (K250), composed as part of the wedding celebration of Elizabeth Haffner, daughter of a Salzburg burgomeister. Quite naturally the prevailing mood of this music is joyful and Ozawa elicted from the orchestra a glorious, rich sound.

One of the highlights of this concert was the playing of the solo violin part by Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, a very careful, sensitive musician who lets the music sing for itself without intruding himself into it. As a result, one comes away from the concert with a profound respect for the score.

It was an evening filled with new musical experiences in which the soloists gave inspiring performances. Ozawa, whose leadership was impressive, communicated affection and rapport with the orchestra and music.

Meredith and William Penfield

Saturday, July 8

Bruno Maderna's program Saturday evening was inventive, exciting and controversial; the audience, while small, was very enthusiastic, and, generally speaking, had every reason to be.

Maderna began with his own transcription of a Ricercare of Giovanni Gabrieli as arranged for pairs of trumpets, horns, bassoons and trombones. Not only did the superb performance give one a chance to hear some of the fine BSO instrumentalists individually, but it also evoked visions of San Marco and the antiphonal choral and instrumental music the composer performed there.

A truly fascinating work followed: the "Available forms 1" of the contemporary American composer Earle Brown. Composed with the aleatory principle of freedom of choice in performance, no two performances of this work are likely to be exactly the same.

Maderna has recorded this work for RCA (VICS-1239), but we felt the live performance had much more life and humor; the reader is referred to the recording for an idea of the work's potential, however. The work was very well-received, indeed.

Four pieces by the late Connecticut composer Charles Ives ended the first half of the program. These are all experimental pieces dating from the period 1906-15; the first two, Tone Roads Nos. 1 and 3, received interesting performances, but "The Unanswered Question" and "Over the Pavements" were the high-points of the evening.

Concertmaster Silverstein conducted the string choir, which represents the "Silence of the Druids," while Maderna directed the trumpet, which asks the "Question," and the woodwind quartet argues over the "Invisible Answer." The score calls for a quartet of flutes, but an oboe and a clarinet were used to good advantage in this performance. The Scherzo "Over the Pavements" is completely atonal, save for the last two bars in C major; this drew hearty laughter from the audience.

The latter half of the program was devoted to a reading of the Mozart "Jupiter Symphony," with all the repeats observed. This was not the clean, delicate, idiomatic Mozart-playing Mr. Skrowaczewski offered the week before; instead, it was rather Romantic Mozart, with extreme tempi, lots of rubato, not heavy-handed yet not elegant, either.

We were pleased with the first movement but felt the others were a bit uneven; the "Andante cantabile" called for in the second movement seemed more like a singing "run" than a "walk," and much detail was omitted in the rapid tempi of movements 3 and 4.

Still, some of the lines which Maderna emphasized are rarely heard in other performances, and he put the virtuoso playing of the BSO to an impressive test. We do encourage more concert-goers to watch for future Maderna visits. They're never dull evenings!

Franklin G. Coleman

Mozart Magic Felt at Tanglewood

By EDWARD FRENCH

There was a liberal helping of tonal magic at Tanglewood Friday evening thanks to an assortment of Mozart's sunniest inspirations.

This wonder-working began with the Weekend Prelude featuring Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir in music by Mozart for four hands at one and two keyboards.

PERFECTLY molded phrases, impeccable technic and delicately balanced sonorities gave the Sonata in D, K.448 a vitality and finish rarely encountered. This same loving care was given to the Variations in G and Fugue in C minor.

Seiji Ozawa conducted a program designed to exploit the solo capabilities of four members of the Boston ensemble. Doriot Anthony Dwyer and Anne Hobson were soloists in the Concerto in C for Flute, Harp and Chamber Orchestra. This light and graceful work was performed with a technical fluency and style that enhanced its entertaining charm.

The cadenzas written by Robert Levin, harpsichordist of the orchestra, revealed a remarkable understanding of Mozarty's style and thematic procedures.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,633

JUL 10 1972

SHERMAN WALT was soloist in the Bassoon Concerto in B flat. Technically and tonally he achieved miracles with his instrument, so often considered the "clown" of the orchestra. The slow movement was unusually expressive and the fast ones gracefully fluent.

Thanks to Mr. Ozawa's perceptive conducting, the orchestral accompaniments Mozart's style and thematic were ideal complements to the soloists.

The major work was the rather lengthy "Haffner" Serenade in D, K 25.0. It is unusual in that it contains a full fledged violin concerto (Andante, Menuetto, Rondeau) within the seven sectioned work.

Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein played the solo part with his customary perfection of technic, lovely tone and graceful style. Throughout the concert the orchestra displayed a subtlety of nuance and perfection of ensemble found only in the finest chamber music groups.

Bruno Maderna made his first appearance on the podium this season Saturday evening. His way with 20th century music was persuasively demonstrated in his reading of a far out piece by Earle Brown, current artist in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, and three pieces by Charles Ives whose music is much in evidence these days.

MR. BROWN'S "Available Forms 1" impressed us as being cut from much the same cloth as the work of George Crumb and Ligetti. It seems quite static and utilizes a large battery of percussion instruments. The structure call for a sustained slow series of mildly dissonant chords alternated with short scurrying passage.

The Ives' works are highly individual, sturdy, atonal and have attention gripping momentum. Mr. Maderna's reading of these was lucid and convincing. We especially enjoyed the mood established in "The Unanswered Question" and the boisterous vitality of the Scherzo.

Mr. Maderna's command of the classic idiom was convincingly demonstrated in a magnificent reading of Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony. The structure was clearly defined, the tonal texture was transparent and lovely and the marvelous Finale had the headlong impetuosity of an element unchained.

SUNDAY afternoon found Tanglewood at its golden best. Seiji Ozawa was back in command and favored us with superb readings of an unfamiliar Haydn Symphony known as "Il Distratto", and the always exquisite "Mother Goose" Suite by Ravel.

SEIJI OZAWA
Perceptive Conducting

The Haydn work was originally written as incidental music for the comedy "Le Distrait" (the absent-minded) by Jean Regnard. The music is delightfully zany and full of surprises. The Presto, a wonderful assortment of Balkan folksongs taken at headlong speed was an orchestral tour de force. The rhythms had an infectious lilt, passage work was beautifully articulated and the overall sound was superb.

The Mother Goose Suite was Ravel at his descriptive best, the orchestration providing a multitude of delicate tonal colorings. This is music Ozawa has made his own and the orchestra responded in kind.

Beethoven's C minor Piano Concerto had the young American virtuoso Garrick Ohlsson as soloist. We thought his first movement on the fast side resulting in some blurred passages. The Adagio was expressive and tonally lovely and the Rondo while slower than the traditional tempo had a definite rhythmic bite. The cadenzas had the necessary virtuoso flair. However our personal conviction is that Mr. Ohlsson is a very talented pianist, but not yet a great one.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 148,169

JUL 11 1972

Ohlsson Exhibits Football Finesse

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Garrick Ohlsson is a big young man. As big; say, as the standard pro tight end. And some of this size projects into the manner in which he plays piano.

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, (the small one, the big one comes next weekend) under the direction of Seiji Ozawa combined with Ohlsson in the Beethoven Piano Concerto No 3 in C Minor.

OHLSSON IS a strong and competent player, but that is about all he is. His playing simply does not measure up to the top rank player one hears today in considerable numbers. His technique is sound enough but it is mechanical and he does not use it in tandem with that great sense of musical phrasemaking that separates the men and the boys in the arena of inspired music making.

The DeLarrochas, the Franks, the Gileles, the Ashkenazys and Presslers, to name just a few, all have this innate feeling for the suave legato line but with Ohlsson it is not enough in evidence.

HE IS an affable and engaging young man nonetheless. At one point in a descending scale, he hit a minor clam and in an ingenuous display of humanity, he grimaced sadly.

For openers, we were served that rarely performed Haydn Sumphony No 60 in C "Il Distratto." It is good Haydn which means good muic even if one one is unaware that it is also a musical joke. Haydn quite deliberately tossed in what were for those times musical aberrations even to the point of having the orchestra stop in the Finale and retune the G string which had been in A.

OZAWA AND the BSO are quite at home in such programmatic works as Ravel's "Ma Mere L'oye" (Mother Goose).

Like much of Ravel's work, it is an orchestration of a piece written originally for piano, in this case for four hands. He orchestrated this one himself with all the unique and authentic colors from his musical palette.

This is charming music, descriptive of course, so descriptive that the auditor can easily accept the musical portraits that are being painted even without program notes. Or, without the ballet for which this work was orchestrated. As a musical suite it stands quite easily by itself and the performance that Ozawa and his troops accorded it certainly helped in all respects.

Kite Magazine July 20th

Maderna Conducts at Tanglewood

By Milton Zapolski

Bruno Maderna guest-conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this past Saturday in a varied program featuring music old and new. In a way, the pieces on the first half were about Sound, specifically the nature of it. First we heard Maderna's arrangement of Gabrielli's Ricercare for two antiphonal brass choirs. Each quartet of instruments would echo the other or provide imitative harmony in the manner of a round, or canon. With the exception of some poor intonation and almost inaudible playing by the first horn the piece sounded very enjoyable (although the middle was less good than either the end or the very beginning) and made one wonder what this music sounded like in Gabrielli's day, bouncing around from band to band in the almost overresonant acoustic of Venice's Saint Mark's Cathedral.

Modern Music

Earl Brown's Available Forms Number One continued the concert. This is an aleatory, or chance, piece that depends on which numbers (from one to six) the conductor flashes before the orchestra. Depending on the conductor's "inspiration" (mood is a more logical word) the orchestra responds by instantly playing one of six completely composed mini-pieces that, when taken together and in combinations, comprise the complete finished performance. Needless to say, the work never sounds the same way twice. The building blocks of this piece were somewhat interesting in themselves; for example number five was for sarcastic and/or snarly muted lower brass; numbers one and two included piano or celeste, etc. Seen as a whole though, the music is like a series of orchestral impressions where one senses, for example, the "essence" of light metallic high percussion (glockenspiels and triangle) and that is all. It's sort of like the modern paintings of just one color: the idea is to get involved in one abstract magnification and perceive it as an artistic entirety. Of course the magnification under consideration must at least be interesting to be of any pragmatic aesthetic value to the observer, and it was in precisely this area of communication that Brown's music left one seeking more substance.

Ives Featured

The highlight of the first half were four Ives selections grouped like a small symphony. The Tone Roads One and Three which were offered first have been labeled Ives' anticipation of serialism, or 12-tone music. Personally, I did not discern any tone-rows, but rather the typically complex Ivesian blend of harmonies and free counterpoint. The Third Road began with bells and reminded one of the From the Steeples and the Mountains. The Unanswered Question formed the third movement, and for the occasion Concertmaster/Assistant Conductor Joseph Silverstein led the string orchestra in the chord progressions representing eternal silence. Silverstein's wrist movements were extremely supple, and he conducted with his bow in clear, articulated movements that elicited continuity and distinctiveness from his players even though a second violin dropped a B-natural one bar too soon just before the second reiteration of the question. Maderna conducted the trumpet and wind quartet equally brilliantly: one of his more interesting effects was the trumpet's repeating the question louder at each reappearance the first four times (but why not the other two?). Ives's playful Over the Pavements scherzo closed the first half. Here the orchestra sounded humorous and fascinating and left the audience with a real positive feeling.

Second Half

After intermission Mozart's Jupiter Symphony was given. Maderna observed repeats in all movements but the andante, a rather bad idea owing to the fact that architecturally these repeats hinder the normal symmetry of the music; since the repeats generally last twice as long as any development section or recap. It is the same as seeing a vaulting arch with one column twice as massive as the other. Besides, Maderna does not conduct the second time around with the fervor he gets the first time; you'd think the sheer drop in intensity would impress upon the conductor his fundamental out-of-phaseness with regard to repeats. Another thing he did badly was his choice of tempi for the inner movements, which went much too quickly to give the music proper breathing room. Maderna's tempi fluctuated constantly in the slow movement, the triplet-figures for horns becoming repeatedly harder to articulate properly as the tempo increased. At times the outer movements sounded very good though, for Mozart's brisk music should have a quickstep feeling about it. Even so, Maderna could have been more sensitive with wind and ostentatious horn parts although he got sounds in the fugal section that sounded really nice.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 13 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

BSO

Friday, July 7

The chill evening air of the Berkshires greeted a large audience at Tanglewood for an all-Mozart program. This may account for the less than perfect start of the concert directed by Seiji Ozawa. Mozart's Concerto in C (K200) for flute and harp opened the program with Doriot Anthony Dwyer, flutist, and Ann Hobson, harpist, as soloists.

In the opening movement one had difficulty hearing the harp, and the balance between the solo instruments and orchestra was confusing. The second movement, an andantina, was given an interpretation similar to music of the romantics. It really did not sound like Mozart. However, in the third movement, marked rondeau: allegro, the small ensemble again provided a deliberate reading of the score.

What we could hear of Miss Hobson's playing, especially the cadenzas, was impressive. Doriot Anthony Dwyer's artistry is well known and her playing of the first order.

The concert gained momentum and excitement with the bassoon concerto in B flat. Sherman Walt, principal bassoonist, was more than able to manage the technical difficulties of a work for which he seems to have great affection. Mr. Walt's tone was clear and lovely throughout.

The final offering was the Serenade No. 7 in D Major, (K250), composed as part of the wedding celebration of Elizabeth Haffner, daughter of a Salzburg burgomeister. Quite naturally the prevailing mood of this music is joyful and Ozawa elicted from the orchestra a glorious, rich sound.

One of the highlights of this concert was the playing of the solo violin part by Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, a very careful, sensitive musician who lets the music sing for itself without intruding himself into it. As a result, one comes away from the concert with a profound respect for the score.

It was an evening filled with new musical experiences in which the soloists gave inspiring performances. Ozawa, whose leadership was impressive, communicated affection and rapport with the orchestra and music.

Meredith and William Penfield

Saturday, July 8

Bruno Maderna's program Saturday evening was inventive, exciting and controversial; the audience, while small, was very enthusiastic, and, generally speaking, had every reason to be.

Maderna began with his own transcription of a Ricercare of Giovanni Gabrieli as arranged for pairs of trumpets, horns, bassoons and trombones. Not only did the superb performance give one a chance to hear some of the fine BSO instrumentalists individually, but it also evoked visions of San Marco and the antiphonal choral and instrumental music the composer performed there.

A truly fascinating work followed: the "Available forms 1" of the contemporary American composer Earle Brown. Composed with the aleatory principle of freedom of choice in performance, no two performances of this work are likely to be exactly the same.

Maderna has recorded this work for RCA (VICS-1239), but we felt the live performance had much more life and humor; the reader is referred to the recording for an idea of the work's potential, however. The work was very well-received, indeed.

Four pieces by the late Connecticut composer Charles Ives ended the first half of the program. These are all experimental pieces dating from the period 1906-15; the first two, Tone Roads Nos. 1 and 3, received interesting performances, but "The Unanswered Question" and "Over the Pavements" were the high-points of the evening.

Concertmaster Silverstein conducted the string choir, which represents the "Silence of the Druids," while Maderna directed the trumpet, which asks the "Question," and the woodwind quartet argues over the "Invisible Answer." The score calls for a quartet of flutes, but an oboe and a clarinet were used to good advantage in this performance. The Scherzo "Over the Pavements" is completely atonal, save for the last two bars in C major; this drew hearty laughter from the audience.

The latter half of the program was devoted to a reading of the Mozart "Jupiter Symphony," with all the repeats observed. This was not the clean, delicate, idiomatic Mozart-playing Mr. Skrowaczewski offered the week before; instead, it was rather Romantic Mozart, with extreme tempi, lots of rubato, not heavy-handed yet not elegant, either.

We were pleased with the first movement but felt the others were a bit uneven; the "Andante cantabile" called for in the second movement seemed more like a singing "run" than a "walk," and much detail was omitted in the rapid tempi of movements 3 and 4.

Still, some of the lines which Maderna emphasized are rarely heard in other performances, and he put the virtuoso playing of the BSO to an impressive test. We do encourage more concert-goers to watch for future Maderna visits. They're never dull evenings!

Franklin G. Coleman

MISSING
PAGE(S)

INFORMATION OBSCURED

81

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 20,500

JUL 2 1972

BEETHOVEN PROGRAMS at nearby Tanglewood in the Berkshires are traditional. This summer, William Steinberg will direct an open rehearsal of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 and Symphony No. 9 on two separate occasions on July 15—at 10:30 a.m. and 8:30 p.m.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 12 1972

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; at 9 p.m., the orchestra in an all Beethoven program under the direction of William Steinberg; Sunday, all Beethoven program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 8 1972

New England Newsclip

Week of July 16

MUSIC: Tanglewood: July 16: Seiji Ozawa, Beethoven Program, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin, Symphony No. 4, Choral Fantasy: Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, July 21: Weekend Prelude with Earl Wild, Bruno Maderna, Gabriel/Maderna's Motet, Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and winds, Earl Wild, Brahms' Symphony No. 1, July 22: Leonard Bernstein, Brahms Program, Symphony No. 4, Symphony No. 2

Tanglewood Beethoven Program Set

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will open today with William Steinberg conducting the Boston Symphony in an all Beethoven program, consisting of symphonies No. 6 and 5, beginning at 9 p.m.

The regular concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. featuring the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin performing the works of Beethoven.

On Saturday at 8:30 p.m., two more Beethoven Symphonies will be heard, the first and ninth. Jeannie Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale will be the soloists with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus also in the performance. Steinberg will again be the conductor.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Sunday afternon concert, beginning at 2:30 p.m. On the program are Beethoven's Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin, soloists, Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 and Choral Fantasy.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 14 1972

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
D. 4,000

JUL 13 1972

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 20,500

JUL 9 1972

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 14 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS
PETER SERKIN piano

BEETHOVEN

Trio for piano, clarinet and cello in B flat op. 11

Allegro con brio
Adagio
Theme from Joseph Weigl's comic opera
L'amor marinaro (Pria ch'io l'impegno), and variations: allegretto

PETER SERKIN piano
HAROLD WRIGHT clarinet
JULES ESKIN cello

Piano trio in E flat op. 70 no. 2

Poco sostenuto – allegro ma non troppo
Allegretto
Allegretto ma non troppo
Finale: allegro

PETER SERKIN piano
JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin
JULES ESKIN cello

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS RECORD EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON AND RCA RECORDS

19

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 14 1972

AT TANGLEWOOD — Jeannine crader will make a first-time appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at Tanglewood. She will sing in a program of Beethoven music conducted by music director William Steinberg.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656

JUL 11 1972

TWO B'S. Two B's will be present Friday when William Steinberg conducts the Boston Symphony in its concert at 9 p.m. at the Berkshire Music Festival's home at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The program will be comprised of two of Beethoven's symphonies, the Fifth and Sixth.

Berkshire Festival Salute to Beethoven

LENOX

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven.

Concerts begin Friday, July 14, with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with soloists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello. The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. Friday, July 14 in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6, and Symphony no. 5.

Saturday, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Tickets are $2.50, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office the morning of the rehearsal. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

In the Shed

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday, July 15 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday, July 16 at 2:30 in the Shed, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein violin, Jules Eskin cello, and Peter Serkin piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUL 13 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Presents 3rd Week Of Music

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven. The concerts Friday evening, July 13, begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, Op. 11 with soloists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, Op. 70, No. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello. The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, who is retiring from his post as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. that evening (July 14) in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony No. 6, and Symphony No. 5.

Saturday morning, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed.

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 15, at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony No. 1, and Symphony No. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanne Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday afternoon, July 16, at 2:30, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein violin, Jules Eskin Cello, and Peter Serkin piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony No. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000

JUL 14 1972

Beethoven Music At Tanglewood This Week

William Steinberg and Seiji Ozawa will be in command of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend at Tanglewood when all three concerts will be devoted to the music of Beethoven.

Friday evening's prelude, starting at 7:00 p. m., will feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players in a program of chamber music with Peter Serkin.

At 9:00 p. m. Friday William Steinberg will conduct as the orchestra presents two Beethoven Symphonies, No. 6 and No. 5.

On Saturday evening, with Steinberg again wielding the baton, two more of Beethoven's symphonies will be played, No. 1 and No. 9. Soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will be heard. This concert starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Sunday afternoon Seiji Ozawa will return to the podium to conduct three more Beethoven compositions, the Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin; the 4th Symphony; and the Festival Chorus.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 14 1972

Beethoven Events Set At Festival

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will open today with William Steinberg conducting the Boston Symphony in an all Beethoven program, consisting of symphonies No. 6 and 5, beginning at 9 p.m.

The regular concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. featuring the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin performing the works of Beethoven.

On Saturday at 8:30 p.m., two more Bethoven Symphonies will be heard, the first and ninth. Jeannie Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale will be the soloists with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus also in the performance. Steinberg will again be the conductor.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Sunday afternon concert, beginning at 2:30 p.m. On the program are Beethoven's Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin, soloists, Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 and Choral Fantasy.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 20,500

JUL 2 1972

BEETHOVEN PROGRAMS at nearby Tanglewood in the Berkshires are traditional. This summer, William Steinberg will direct an open rehearsal of Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 and Symphony No. 9 on two separate occasions on July 15—at 10:30 a.m. and 8:30 p.m.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUL 13 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Presents 3rd Week Of Music

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven. The concerts Friday evening, July 13, begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, Op. 11 with soloists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, Op. 70, No. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello. The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, who is retiring from his post as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. that evening (July 14) in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony No. 6, and Symphony No. 5.

Saturday morning, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed.

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 15, at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony No. 1, and Symphony No. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanne Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday afternoon, July 16, at 2:30, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein violin, Jules Eskin Cello, and Peter Serkin piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony No. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 12 1972

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Boston Symphony Chamber Players; at 9 p.m., the orchestra in an all Beethoven program under the direction of William Steinberg; Sunday, all Beethoven program under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 14 1972

AT TANGLEWOOD — Jeannine crader will make a first-time appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at Tanglewood. She will sing in a program of Beethoven music conducted by music director William Steinberg.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 20,400

JUL 8 1972

New England Newsclip

Week of July 16

MUSIC: Tanglewood: July 16: Seiji Ozawa, Beethoven Program, Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, Peter Serkin, Symphony No. 4, Choral Fantasy: Peter Serkin, Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director, July 21: Weekend Prelude with Earl Wild, Bruno Maderna, Gabriel/Maderna's Motet, Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and winds, Earl Wild, Brahms' Symphony No. 1, July 22: Leonard Bernstein, Brahms Program, Symphony No. 4, Symphony No. 2

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 14 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS
PETER SERKIN piano

BEETHOVEN

Trio for piano, clarinet and cello in B flat op. 11

Allegro con brio
Adagio
Theme from Joseph Weigl's comic opera L'amor marinaro (Pria ch'io l'impegno), and variations: allegretto

PETER SERKIN piano
HAROLD WRIGHT clarinet
JULES ESKIN cello

Piano trio in E flat op. 70 no. 2

Poco sostenuto – allegro ma non troppo
Allegretto
Allegretto ma non troppo
Finale: allegro

PETER SERKIN piano
JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin
JULES ESKIN cello

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS RECORD EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON AND RCA RECORDS

19

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656

JUL 11 1972

TWO B'S. Two B's will be present Friday when William Steinberg conducts the Boston Symphony in its concert at 9 p.m. at the Berkshire Music Festival's home at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The program will be comprised of two of Beethoven's symphonies, the Fifth and Sixth.

Tanglewood Beethoven Program Set

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will open today with William Steinberg conducting the Boston Symphony in an all Beethoven program, consisting of symphonies No. 6 and 5, beginning at 9 p.m.

The regular concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. featuring the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin performing the works of Beethoven.

On Saturday at 8:30 p.m., two more Beethoven Symphonies will be heard, the first and ninth. Jeannie Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale will be the soloists with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus also in the performance. Steinberg will again be the conductor.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Sunday afternon concert, beginning at 2:30 p.m. On the program are Beethoven's Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin, soloists, Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 and Choral Fantasy.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 14 1972

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
D. 4,000

JUL 13 1972

KINGSTON, N. Y.
FREEMAN
D. 20,500

JUL 9 1972

Berkshire Festival Salute to Beethoven

LENOX

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven.

Concerts begin Friday, July 14 with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with soloists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello. The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. Friday, July 14 in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6, and Symphony no. 5.

Saturday, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Tickets are $2.50, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office the morning of the rehearsal. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

In the Shed

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday, July 15 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday, July 16 at 2:30 in the Shed, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein violin, Jules Eskin cello, and Peter Serkin piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000

JUL 14 1972

Beethoven Music At Tanglewood This Week

William Steinberg and Seiji Ozawa will be in command of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend at Tanglewood when all three concerts will be devoted to the music of Beethoven.

Friday evening's prelude, starting at 7:00 p. m., will feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players in a program of chamber music with Peter Serkin.

At 9:00 p. m. Friday William Steinberg will conduct as the orchestra presents two Beethoven Symphonies, No. 6 and No. 5.

On Saturday evening, with Steinberg again wielding the baton, two more of Beethoven's symphonies will be played, No. 1 and No. 9. Soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will be heard. This concert starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Sunday afternoon Seiji Ozawa will return to the podium to conduct three more Beethoven compositions, the Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin; the 4th Symphony; and the Festival Chorus.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 14 1972

Beethoven Events Set At Festival

The third weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., will open today with William Steinberg conducting the Boston Symphony in an all Beethoven program, consisting of symphonies No. 6 and 5, beginning at 9 p.m.

The regular concert will be preceded by a weekend prelude at 7 p.m. featuring the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with Peter Serkin performing the works of Beethoven.

On Saturday at 8:30 p.m., two more Bethoven Symphonies will be heard, the first and ninth. Jeannie Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale will be the soloists with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus also in the performance. Steinberg will again be the conductor.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Sunday afternon concert, beginning at 2:30 p.m. On the program are Beethoven's Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin, soloists, Beethoven's Symphony No. 4 and Choral Fantasy.

82

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 14 1972

CLEFS & ARPEGGIOS

by NANCY GURRAN

Eastward Ho

Trekking to Tanglewood, we find the weekend's conductor to be William Steinberg, its composer Beethoven. The 7 p.m. prelude tonight will be by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players and Peter Serkin.

Saturday you may hear an open rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. The Evening concert, at 8:30 will be Symphonies No. 1 and 9, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanne Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale.

Seiji Ozawa will direct Sunday's 2:30 concert the Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin.

Special Events

It's still ballet season at SPAC; but music is far from neglected, Tonight you may hear dancing to "The Goldberg Variations" and "The Concert," by the New York City Ballet. Saturday's matinee will have Tschiaikovsky's Suite No. 2.

A great blue banner with the interwoven initials I. S. was transported to SPAC honoring the late Igor Stravinsky when his music is danced by the ballet. Tuesday and Wednesday will be all-Stravinsky programs.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 12 1972
New England Newsclip

To Perform

JEANNINE CRADER will be singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood for the first time Saturday at 8:30 p.m. She will sing in the Beethoven program conducted by Music Director William Steinberg.

To Conduct

William Steinberg will be conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Friday at 9 p.m. and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. He will be conducting the first two concerts of the Beethoven series.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Works By Beethoven To Be Played By BSO Over Weekend

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven.

The concerts Friday evening, July 14, begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin. They will perform the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with soloists Serkin, Harold Wright, clarinet, and Jules Eskin, cello. In the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Jules Eskin, cello will be heard.

The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m., Friday evening, July 14, in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6 and Symphony no. 5.

Saturday morning, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the BSO at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Robert Hale is one of the soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Saturday evening, July 15, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Hale is leading baritone of the New York City Opera. — Photo from Tanglewood

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 15 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader, soprano, Joanna Simon, alto, Dean Wilder, tenor, Robert Hale, bass, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday afternoon, July 16 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein, violin, Jules Eskin, cello, and Peter Serkin, piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

BSO Devotes Program Entirely to Beethoven

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven.

The concerts Friday begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with soloists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello.

The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. Friday in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6, and Symphony no. 5.

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Tickets are on sale at the Featival ticket office the morning of the rehearsal. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein violin, Jules Eskin cello, and Peter Serkin piano.

Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638
JUL 12 1972

AT TANGLEWOOD — William Steinberg will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood at 9 p.m. Friday, and at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, in the opening two concerts of the Beethoven series. Mr. Steinberg was co-founder of the Palestine Orchestra, now the Israel Philharmonic, and also assisted in the formation and training of the NBC Symphony Orchestra. He has been music director of the Buffalo and London Philharmonic Orchestras and also the principal guest conductor of The New York Philharmonic. Currently, Mr. Steinberg serves as music director of both the Boston and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestras.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUN 24 1972

Boston Stereo Concert Sunday On WFLY

The fourth stereo concert in WFLY's summer Boston Symphony presentations will mark the final appearance of William Steinberg as the orchestra's music director.

This Sunday from 9 to 11 p.m. on WFLY, Mr. Steinberg will conduct a program of Wagner's musical works.

He opens the program with the second act of "Tristan Und Isolde". Soloists will be James King as Tristan, Eileen Farrell as Isolde, Nell Rankin as Brangane, Robert Hale as King Marke, Jan Davies as Kurwenal and Dean Wilder as Melot.

Mr. Steinberg also conducts Wotan's Farewell and the Magic Fire Music from "Die Walkure" with Robert Hale as Wotan. The concert closes with Brunnhilde's immolation from "D'e Gotterdammerung," with Eileen Farrell as Brunnhilde.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 14 1972

Beethoven Music At Tanglewood This Week

William Steinberg and Seiji Ozawa will be in command of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend at Tanglewood when all three concerts will be devoted to the music of Beethoven.

Friday evening's prelude, starting at 7:00 p. m., will feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players in a program of chamber music with Peter Serkin.

At 9:00 p. m. Friday William Steinberg will conduct as the orchestra presents two Beethoven Symphonies, No. 6 and No. 5.

On Saturday evening, with Steinberg again wielding the baton, two more of Beethoven's symphonies will be played, No. 1 and No. 9. Soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will be heard. This concert starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Sunday afternoon Seiji Ozawa will return to the podium to conduct three more Beethoven compositions, the Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin; the 4th Symphony; and the Festival Chorus.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285
JUL 11 1972
New England Newsclip

Beethoven concert

This weekend's concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to Beethoven. The weekend prelude at 7 p.m. Friday, free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert, will feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with soloist Peter Serkin.

William Steinberg will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 9 in the shed. The concert will be Beethoven's Symphonies 6 and 5.

Steinberg will again conduct the Boston Symphony Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the shed. The concert will include a performance of the Symphonies 1, and 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, and Robert Hale.

Sunday afternoon at 2:20 in the shed, Seiji Ozawa will conduct the orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano. Symphony No. 4 will follow and concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and orchestra.

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934
JUL 14 1972

CLEFS & ARPEGGIOS

by NANCY CURRAN

Eastward Ho

Trekking to Tanglewood, we find the weekend's conductor to be William Steinberg, its composer Beethoven. The 7 p.m. prelude tonight will be by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players and Peter Serkin.

Saturday you may hear an open rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. The Evening concert, at 8:30 will be Symphonies No. 1 and 9, with the Festival Chorus and soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanne Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale.

Seiji Ozawa will direct Sunday's 2:30 concert the Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin.

Special Events

It's still ballet season at SPAC, but music is far from neglected, Tonight you may hear dancing to "The Goldberg Variations" and "The Concert," by the New York City Ballet. Saturday's matinee will have Tschiaikovsky's Suite No. 2.

A great blue banner with the interwoven initials I. S. was transported to SPAC honoring the late Igor Stravinsky when his music is danced by the ballet. Tuesday and Wednesday will be all-Stravinsky programs.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 12 1972
New England Newsclip

To Perform

JEANNINE CRADER will be singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood for the first time Saturday at 8:30 p.m. She will sing in the Beethoven program conducted by Music Director William Steinberg.

To Conduct

William Steinberg will be conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Friday at 9 p.m. and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. He will be conducting the first two concerts of the Beethoven series.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Works By Beethoven To Be Played By BSO Over Weekend

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven.

The concerts Friday evening, July 14, begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin. They will perform the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with soloists Serkin, Harold Wright, clarinet, and Jules Eskin, cello. In the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Jules Eskin, cello will be heard.

The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m., Friday evening, July 14, in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6 and Symphony no. 5.

Saturday morning, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the BSO at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Robert Hale is one of the soloists with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Saturday evening, July 15, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Hale is leading baritone of the New York City Opera. — Photo from Tanglewood

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 15 at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader, soprano, Joanna Simon, alto, Dean Wilder, tenor, Robert Hale, bass, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday afternoon, July 16 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein, violin, Jules Eskin, cello, and Peter Serkin, piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 13 1972
New England Newsclip

BSO Devotes Program Entirely to Beethoven

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven.

The concerts Friday begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with soloists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello.

The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. Friday in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6, and Symphony no. 5.

Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Tickets are on sale at the Featival ticket office the morning of the rehearsal. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

William Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, Seiji Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Joseph Silverstein violin, Jules Eskin cello, and Peter Serkin piano.

Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638
JUL 12 1972

AT TANGLEWOOD — William Steinberg will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood at 9 p.m. Friday, and at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, in the opening two concerts of the Beethoven series. Mr. Steinberg was co-founder of the Palestine Orchestra, now the Israel Philharmonic, and also assisted in the formation and training of the NBC Symphony Orchestra. He has been music director of the Buffalo and London Philharmonic Orchestras and also the principal guest conductor of The New York Philharmonic. Currently, Mr. Steinberg serves as music director of both the Boston and the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestras.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUN 24 1972

Boston Stereo Concert Sunday On WFLY

The fourth stereo concert in WFLY's summer Boston Symphony presentations will mark the final appearance of William Steinberg as the orchestra's music director.

This Sunday from 9 to 11 p.m. on WFLY, Mr. Steinberg will conduct a program of Wagner's musical works.

He opens the program with the second act of "Tristan Und Isolde". Soloists will be James King as Tristan, Eileen Farrell as Isolde, Nell Rankin as Brangane, Robert Hale as King Marke, Jan Davies as Kurwenal and Dean Wilder as Melot.

Mr. Steinberg also conducts Wotan's Farewell and the Magic Fire Music from "Die Walkure" with Robert Hale as Wotan. The concert closes with Brunnhilde's immolation from "D'e Gotterdammerung," with Eileen Farrell as Brunnhilde.

RAVENA, N. Y.
NEWS-HERALD
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
W. 2,000
JUL 14 1972

Beethoven Music At Tanglewood This Week

William Steinberg and Seiji Ozawa will be in command of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend at Tanglewood when all three concerts will be devoted to the music of Beethoven.

Friday evening's prelude, starting at 7:00 p. m., will feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players in a program of chamber music with Peter Serkin.

At 9:00 p. m. Friday William Steinberg will conduct as the orchestra presents two Beethoven Symphonies, No. 6 and No. 5.

On Saturday evening, with Steinberg again wielding the baton, two more of Beethoven's symphonies will be played, No. 1 and No. 9. Soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus will be heard. This concert starts at 8:30 o'clock.

Sunday afternoon Seiji Ozawa will return to the podium to conduct three more Beethoven compositions, the Triple Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin; the 4th Symphony; and the Festival Chorus.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285
JUL 11 1972
New England Newsclip

Beethoven concert

This weekend's concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be devoted to Beethoven. The weekend prelude at 7 p.m. Friday, free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert, will feature the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with soloist Peter Serkin.

William Steinberg will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 9 in the shed. The concert will be Beethoven's Symphonies 6 and 5.

Steinberg will again conduct the Boston Symphony Saturday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the shed. The concert will include a performance of the Symphonies 1, and 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, and Robert Hale.

Sunday afternoon at 2:20 in the shed, Seiji Ozawa will conduct the orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano. Symphony No. 4 will follow and concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and orchestra.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUL 14 1972

New England Newsclip

THIS WEEK—William Steinberg will be conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood tonight at 9 and tomorrow at 8.30 p.m. He will conduct first two concerts of the Beethoven series. He is Music Director of Boston Symphony Orchestra and Pittsburgh Symphony.

William Steinberg

Steinberg, Bernstein next at Tanglewood

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood is devoted entirely to the music of Beethoven. The concerts July 14 begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Shed and features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B-flat, op. 11 with solists Peter Serkin piano, Harold Wright clarinet, and Jules Eskin cello, and the Piano trio in E-flat, op. 70, no. 2 with Peter Serkin piano, Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin cello.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 July 14 in the Shed. The concert is devoted to a performance of two Beethoven symphonies: Symphony no. 6, and Symphony no. 5.

Saturday morning, July 15, Tanglewood Artistic Director Seiji Ozawa rehearses the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10.30 a.m. in the Shed.

Mr. Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, July 15 at 8.30 in the Shed. The concert includes a performance of the Symphony no. 1, and Symphony no. 9 with soloists Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon alto, Dean Wilder tenor, Robert Hale bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, director.

Sunday afternoon, July 16 at 2.30 Mr. Ozawa conducts the Orchestra in a performance of the Triple concerto in C for violin, cello, and piano with soloists Mr. Silverstein violin, Mr. Eskin cello, and Mr. Serkin piano. Next is a performance of the Symphony no. 4, and, concluding the concert, a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Peter Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chrous.

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9 in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10.30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8.30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2.30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's "Sonata a 7," and "Sonata a 10," Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

THE COURIER-NEWS
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
D. 53,566

JUL 14 1972

Beethoven weekend at Tanglewood; Lake George Opera Festival opens

Although music lovers can find a wealth of summer listening in the immediate North Jersey area, there are some for whom at least one weekend must be spent at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

If the music of Beethoven appeals, then this is the weekend. The prelude concert this evening features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin. William Steinberg, retiring as music director of the Boston Symphony at the conclusion of the Tanglewood season, will conduct. The concert will be devoted to two Beethoven symphonies, No. 6 and No. 5.

Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood artistic director, will conduct the third Saturday morning open rehearsal of the symphony orchestra at 10:30. William Steinberg again conducts Saturday evening. Symphonies No. 1 and 9 will be heard with soloists Jeannine Crader, soprano; Joanna Simon, alto; Dean Wilder, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver directing.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with Mr. Ozawa conducting, there will be a performance of the Triple Concerto in C for violin, cello and piano with soloists Joseph Wilverstein, violin, Jules Eskin, cello and Mr. Serkin, piano. Symphony No. 4 is on the program which concludes with a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for piano, chorus and orchestra.

Seiji Ozawa

Also worth consideration is the Lake George Opera Festival season which opened this week with "The Three Penny Opera."

Its summer season consists of 37 performances—four full stage productions by the Lake George resident company, a Mozart gala, the Eastern premiere of a production by the Center Opera of Minnesota and three new Opera-on-the-Lake cruises.

Most of the performances will be at the Opera Festival Auditorium at Glens Falls but six have been scheduled at the Performing Arts Center of the State University of New York at Albany.

The three opera-on-the-lake cruises will take place Sunday evenings, July 30, Aug. 6 and Aug. 13. The cruises will last two hours and will present a quartet of singers from the Festival's resident company singing popular favorites from a variety of the world's great operas.

William Steinberg

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 8 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Chamber Players open Beethoven weekend, Fiedler will start Tuesday specials

The third weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood will be devoted entirely to music of Beethoven. The concerts Friday evening, July 14 begin with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Music Shed and features the Boston Symphony Chamber Players with pianist Peter Serkin performing the Trio for Piano, Clarinet, and Cello in B-Flat, Opus 11, with other soloists Harold Wright, clarinet, and Jules Eskin, cello; and the Piano Trio in E-Flat, Opus 70, No. 2 with Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Eskin, cello. The Weekend Prelude, held each weekend two hours before the Friday evening concert, is free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

William Steinberg, retiring from his post as music director of the B.S.O. at the conclusion of the 1972 Tanglewood season, will conduct the orchestra at 9 in the Shed. The concert will be comprised of performances of two Beethoven symphonies: No. 6 and No. 5.

Seiji Ozawa, Tanglewood artistic director, will rehearse the orchestra at the summer's third Saturday morning Open Rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Shed. Tickets will be $2.50, on sale at the Festival ticket office the morning of the rehearsal. Proceeds will benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Steinberg again conducts the Boston Symphony at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. The orchestra will perform Symphony No. 1 and Symphony No. 9, with soloists Jeannine Crader, soprano; Joanna Simon, alto; Dean Wilder, tenor; Robert Hale, bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus under the direction of John Oliver.

Seiji Ozawa will conduct the Orchestra at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in a performance of the Triple Concerto in C for Violin, Cello, and Piano with soloists Silverstein, violin, Eskin, cello, and Serkin, piano. A performance of Symphony No. 4 will follow. The concert will conclude with a performance of the Choral Fantasia in C for Piano, Chorus, and Orchestra with piano soloist Serkin, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus.

Three concerts will highlight the 1972 series of Tanglewood Tuesday Specials, beginning with the annual appearance of Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops at 8:30 p.m. August 1 in the Shed. Other special events will include a special Festival of Contemporary Music concert honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation at 8:30 p.m. August 8 in the Shed, and finally, on August 15, Tanglewood-on-Parade.

The concert by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops features an evening of the music of Lerner and Loewe with soloists soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, directed by John Oliver. The concert will include music from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon," and "Gigi."

The Festival of Contemporary Music concert will feature Elliott Carter conducting members of the Berkshire Music Center in his Double Concerto for Piano, Harpsichord, and Orchestra, and Luciano Berio conducting his Circles for Soprano, Harp, and Two Percussionists. The concert also will include newly commissioned works by Gunther Schuller, Tanglewood artistic director for the Berkshire Music Center, and Bruno Maderna. The Fromm Music Foundation sponsors Tanglewood's Festival of Contemporary Music which runs this year from Aug. 4 through 10.

Tanglewood-on-Parade begins at 2:00 p.m. August 15 with concerts all afternoon featuring ensembles of Berkshire Music Center students. Highlight of the day is the gala concert by the combined Boston Symphony and Berkshire Music Center Orchestras at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed. Michael Tilson Thomas will conduct the orchestra in music that includes Handel's Royal Fireworks Music, and Tchaikovsky's 1812 Overture, complete with cannons and fireworks over the Stockbridge Bowl.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUL 16 1972

New England Newsclip

Beethoven Music At Tanglewood, Traditional Beauty

By RICHARD HAMMERICH

WILLIAM STEINBERG

LENOX — The annual Beethoven weekend at Tanglewood is somehow profoundly humbling. It is a happening again this weekend.

Universal Value

There are those who downgrade it as commercial because it is so successful at the box office. But there must be some kind of universal value in Beethoven's symphonies.

Their appeal transcends all variables, except, of course, quality of performance. We have to stand in awe of the mysterious compulsion that draws listeners back to them endlessly.

Heaven knows that the Fifth and Sixth ("Pastoral") Symphonies are well known, and nearly everyone knows what the full - sized Boston Symphony Orchestra sounds like. And most serious music lovers are acquainted with William Steinberg's conducting style.

9539 Listeners

What then could have brought 9539 listeners to Tanglewood last night except the prospect of once again experiencing a musical sensation automatically understood regardless of age or origin or education.

Don't forget; this music is already 200 years old. What kind of magic does it have? Steinberg and the orchestra gave it a standard, traditional performance (there is really no alternative, any more), and the audience cheered.

Of course, one difference is that the musicians are alive. They do not sound like a stereophonic machine. They pulse with tension and release, and they offer a range of dynamic expression impossible from a machine, even tape.

And admittedly the opening phrase of the Fifth Symphony, the famous dit - dit - dit - dah, has become trite, but how many of us can hum the other themes in the Fifth?

Certainly the combination of Beethoven's symphonies, a first -class, full - sized orchestra and a traditionalist conductor will produce a predictable round.

The sound at Tanglewood was as predicted, but only those who sat and listened really know what it sounded like, and yet, it was Beethoven's Fifth and Sixth again ... beautifully, but again, nevertheless.

But the seven p.m. prelude program was a different kind of Beethoven — a connoisseru's Beethoven, and there were about 3000 early listeners in the shed for it. Or perhaps they were all sports fans because no basketball or soccer team can demonstrate a kind of teamwork that is more interdependent, more precise, more continuously surprising in its give and take than a first class chamber group — which is what we had Friday evening.

Peter Serkin at the piano and Jules Eskin with his cello were joined first by Harold Wright and his clarinet for Beethoven's trio in B flat opus 11, and second by Joseph Silverstein with his violin for the trio in E flat opus 70, No. 2.

The first, a young work, was full of open candor and friendliness, and the second, written when Beethoven was 38 and more than half deaf, showed much more breadth and depth, more complexity, more substance, more satisfying in the long run, but no less pleasing.

All of it was infused with warmth and affection, largely because of a personal, intimate approach of the players and because of the soft, sensitive, non-aggressive tones they draw from the machines they play.

For the regular concertgoer, this kind of chamber music has become more reliably satisfying than the common symphonies, like the fifth and sixth, because of their constant repetition.

Tonight at 8:30 Steinberg will conduct Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 before intermission and No. 9 after. The fourth movement will offer the Tanglewood Festival Chords and four solists, Jeannine Crader, soprano; Joanna Simon, alto; Dean Wilder, tenor; and Robert Hale, bass.

Tomorrow Seiji Ozawa will conduct another Beethoven program; the Triple Concerto (for piano, violin, cello, and orchestra), Symphony No. 4 and the Fantasy for Piano, Chorus, and Orchestra, with Peter Serkin, pianist.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

53

Beethoven Pieces Draw Large Friday Crowd

By RICHARD CONWAY

There is surely some kind of magic in the name of Beethoven. Perhaps it is just that somehow we have been conditioned to equate symphonic music with his name.

Maybe it's just that it was a beautiful night up in the Berkshires. Or maybe that a number of tickets had been sold under the auspices of the Mount Holyoke College Alumnae Council to benefit their scholarship fund.

The latter two may have helped. But I think the large audience came to hear the music of Beethoven. And they were not disappointed.

Prelude Crowd

An extraordinary crowd was on hand for the 7 o'clock Weekend Prelude. Guest artist Peter Serkin, pianist, joined with Harold Wright, clarinetist, and Jules Eskin, cellist, for a fine performance of the master's "Trio for piano, clarinet, and cello in B flat, op. 11". Serkin then teamed with Joseph Silverstein, violinist, and Eskin again in an equally strong performance of the "Piano trio in E flat, op. 70, no. 2".

There was a rather remarkable empathy among the musicians, especially so when one realizes that these particular men do not play together in ensemble all the time, such as a touring string quartet does, for instance.

At any rate, the two works were extremely successful, and set the stage for the larger accomplishments to come.

For the regular 9 o'clock concert, conductor William Steinberg chose two highly contrasting Beethoven symphonies, "No. 6 in F," and the famous "No. 5 in C minor."

Beethoven loved to walk in the woods and countryside around Vienna. He did much of his composing there. And in his sixth symphony, called the "Pastoral," he expresses in musical terms his feeling for the country.

Dr. Steinberg gave it a beautiful reading last night. Conducting with more clarity than we have seen him do the last few times, he played his orchestra in a relaxed, unhurried way, allowing the work to breathe, and capturing the moods and atmospheres of Beethoven's music.

Individual lines were allowed to sing, and Steinberg brought out some exquisite dynamic contrasts. There were some especially breath - taking pianissimos last night. And Steinberg drew out some stunning crescendos. We recall ones in the first and second movements in particular.

Dr. Steinberg, now in his seventies, is ending his work as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend. (He will conduct the monumental Beethoven Ninth tonight.) And, as if calling on all his superb musicianship for a "last hurrah", he followed the memorable Sixth with a dramatic reading of the Fifth.

Despite some poor woodwind work, the performance was exciting and electric. Again, Steinberg achieved the remarkable dynamic contrasts. There was strong rhythmic definition. He captured the high drama of this most well - known of all symphonic works. The audience was intent on every sound, nuance, and gesture.

It was a performance of Beethoven well worth hearing.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 15 1972

New England Newsclip

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 17 1972

William Steinberg Gives Beethoven Insight He Deserves

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

The always fascinating confrontation between the old guard and the new, the continuing and inevitable phenomenon which occurs with each generation has always been worthy of scrutiny.

Friday and Saturday evenings at Tanglewood it was the Old Guard as represented by William Steinberg. The new had already been in the lists, notably Ozawa and Maderna.

STEINBERG, 76, is square-in that direct line of European, indeed, German-trained conductors, that have served concertgoers so well for over 100 years.

Karl Muck, George Szell, Mengelberg, Furtwangler, Klemperer, Walter, Koussevitsky, and Ormany are some of the others.

Although the young Turks inevitably reflect some of this tradition, (it would be impossible for them not to), their approach to the great works of great composer, is, without question, marked by considerably less awe and reverence, indeed, less respect, than that of the breed.

This is neither good nor bad on the face of it. Perhaps a reappraisal is in order in the traditional repertory, a house cleaning, a clearing of the air.

PERHAPS. But when four Beethoven symphonies, Nos. 1, 4, 5 and 9 are conducted with the insight and clarity of concept with which Steinberg did the job this weekend, one could ask for little more.

With the exception of Ormandy in this country, it is now too rare to hear these perhaps overly familiar works given such a high and impeccable reading as this fine Boston Symphony Orchestra ensemble did under Steinberg's direction.

Under the young men, the notes are all in place, they are not at all frivolous about it, but what they might lack is that long and scholarly apprenticeship during the middle years when others, like Szell and Walter were falling asleep in the small hours, a dog eared and heavily marked score of the 9th lying open at the Finale.

The balances, the sonorities, the thoughtful and immaculate unity and coherence of the musical ideas and concepts are so firmly in hand with a musician-scholar like Steinberg.

THE YOUNGSTERS have talent, oh so much talent, no mistake about that, but they are cursed with that urgency, that sense of immediate gratification that so many of us are heir to, that the subtleties and depths of such profound works are often left unplumbed.

The orchestra plays it so well too, with this firm and assured father figure tugging and pushing and cajoling them, making them better than they are. With no theatrical flair but with consummate control, Steinberg, that grey eminence, leads the players and everything is as it should be.

It is inevitable, things will change, but it will be a less enriching place, this world of music, if, for a realization of the genus of Beethoven, for example, that long and arduous apprenticeship that Steinberg was willing to serve is eschewed for the flash and fire of the the show biz set. There is room for both.

If this is all to esoteric and ivory-towerish, how about this fact? Steinberg and the Boston Symphony, playing Beethoven, drew almost 15,000 people Saturday night. This should impress even the most pragmatic agency or management type.

The Record
HACKENSACK, N. J.
& SUN. 147,389

JUL 23 1972

Old Ludwig still has pull

The Classics

Mark Stuart

It was the old boy's last performance as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. William Steinberg chose as his swan song the Beethoven Ninth. Into his performance he put more youth, more vigor, more zest, more meaning, and more control than any conductor on the scene today half his age. It was a superb exhibition.

First about the weekend. It was an all Beethoven setting, and if you wonder if old Ludwig still has pulling power consider the following:

1. There wasn't a motel with a vacancy anywhere in the Berkshire area from Williamstown to Egremont, and most were sold out as early as May 1.

2. There were 9,000 people admitted Friday night. About a third of the audience that had tickets in advance couldn't get into the grounds at Tanglewood until Steinberg was halfway through the second movement of the Pastoral Symphony, his first number.

3. For the first time in recent memory the parking lots on the Tanglewood grounds were full. Friday night the lineup of cars trying to reach the concert grounds stretched into the center of Lenox for at least an hour after the concert began, and the concert began 20 minutes later than its scheduled 9 p.m. Saturday night the crush was just as bad, but many ticket holders avoided Friday's problems by arriving sooner and getting settled as early as 4:30 p.m. for the 8:30 start. Sunday afternoon the line of cars trying to get into the grounds stretched in one direction from the parking lot through Lenox all the way to Route 7 near the Cranwell School; that's at least three miles.

4. Every ticket for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday was sold. Several tickets became available Saturday night after 8 p.m. from ticket buyers who failed to pick them up. These were snapped up in minutes. The grass-sitters filled three quarters of the area near the shed.

The Friday night lineup had, besides the Pastoral, the Fifth and the verve with which Steinberg endowed this familiar piece gave it new meaning.

Saturday night was a special treat. In addition to a superb reading of the Ninth, Steinberg chose to open the evening with the First. The listeners had an opportunity to hear the beginning and the end of the master's progression to greatness. It was instructive; it was also awe-inspiring.

Steinberg won the audience with his costume before he even lifted his baton. He emerged on this most sweltering night with a bagel jacket version of a tuxedo coat. It was white in back and black in front, with white piping adding a cheery touch. The coat was made with half sleeves, but the maestro added his own fashion note by wearing his regular cuff-linked dress shirt with long sleeves. The double sleeve effect gave him the look of Uncle Harry getting ready to go out for lox and bagels on a Sunday morning.

The Ninth was endowed with a fervor that was transcendental. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus under John Oliver was superb. The orchestra responded to the excitement of the evening with its own nostalgic backbreaking effort as a farewell present to Steinberg.

One disappointment was the lackluster performance of the solosists. Jeannine Crader tended to shout instead of sing her soprano part. Joanna Simon couldn't be heard. Dean Willer was unimpressive. The only one who rose to the occasion was Robert Hale, a bass whose work at the New York City Opera we've applauded before. He rang out clearly, a prepossessing voice that takes command.

But the evening was Steinberg's. He'll be back next summer as guest conductor. Watch him if you can. See him shed his years, his infirmities, and his aches to become young again before your eyes. Long life to him.

Kite MAGAZINE July 20 1972

Classical Music — Ninth Genuinely Fabulous

By Milton Zapolski

At first glance a Beethoven program conducted by William Steinberg would hardly seem worth the bother of attending, but astute concertgoers familiar with psychological profiles of orchestras must have known that Steinberg's last concert as Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra would be a major event. Although the Steinberg-BSO liaison has suffered serious communicative difficulties through the recent present, the orchestra's polite disposition and social consciousness would never condone less than perfect behavior for such a culminating event. Thus those who bet on this concert to be a success really won. The others who came just to hear Beethoven's sublime Ninth Symphony were treated to something special and unusual: a great performance.

concert opener

The program began with the First Symphony, which received an acceptable if undistinguished reading. Steinberg did not work hard encouraging the orchestra to play, and the parts he did emphasize seemed contextually out of phase. He got interesting effects in the inner movements though, and his treatment of the finale's introduction was most illuminating: one really felt the gradual addition of single notes to build the main theme, and the provacative softness and crescendo of the E-natural in the fourth addition sequence proved delightful as well as inspired.

second half

Regarding the Ninth Symphony, Steinberg lacked raw power at times (a curiosity since his conducting style is overbearing and almost Prussian in an ugly-cum-military way) but was able to sustain a momentous performance by highlighting unusual details and having such a responsive and knowledgeable orchestra to lead. The first movement opened dramatically and evolved interestingly, especially during the fugue, but never got overwhelmingly intense until the very end when it was almost too late.

The scherzo was marvelous. Steinberg brought to it a quality with which he's not generally associated, namely humor. Certain brass parts (notably the first fairly loud part and each recurrance) exhibited healthy guffaws and the interesting wind writing sounded benignly funny at times, especially in the big proclamations terminating same. Timpanist Everett Firth was very good in his contributions throughout.

sensitive adagio

With the adagio Steinberg opted for a brisker tempo once he started but the orchestra held him back, thankfully, and thereby expanded the heavenly sounds by slightly prolonging instead of hastily rushing through them. About a third through the violins became incredibly beautiful-sounding, and their sheer sweetness and exquisite tone was in certain ways the peak of the evening. Charles Kavoloski's sensitive horn playing was really great too, a vast improvement over the previous principal's.

finale towering

It seems unlikely the long introduction to the finale will ever be played better. Steinberg brought out fabulous textures, phrased the bass-line recitatives most musically (practically everyone else pulls them out of shape by over-interpreting) and recapped the themes of earlier movements in an intellectual and emotional way. His treatment of the rest was never less than good and more often than not was outstanding. Felicitous details emerged that are always overlooked, and the construction (especially the mighty double-fugue) left nothing to be desired.

The vocal quartet, consisting of Jeanine Crader, soprano; Joanna Simon, mezzo; Dean Wilder, tenor, and Robert Hale, bass; was only average. Robert Hale sang loudly and clearly but his German pronunciation was atrocious and he breathed in all the wrong spots. Tenor Wilder had a smaller voice by comparison but was extremely musical, breathing and phrasing superbly. For example he saved his biggest voice for last in the "Froh! Froh!" section, a judicious move that allowed the music to grow and flourish. Too bad other singers lack his good taste and firm musical instincts. Both females sang horribly flat.

Festival Chorus superb

The chorus was excellent in the extreme, contributing a very full tone that did not sacrifice tenderness and mystery when it was called for (as in the second "Uber sternen" section) while being a knockout in all other respects. It was a shame Steinberg's severly heavy underlining of the "All men will be brothers" sounded more grave than prophetically beautiful, but viewed over-all the conductor did a truly fine job or got simply superb results, for this was a Ninth to remember.

AT TANGLEWOOD

Beethoven Weekend Breaks Records

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Well, Beethoven has done it again — helped the Boston Symphony Orchestra set another attendance record at Tanglewood.

The new one is 41,337 customers for a weekend of three concerts and an open rehearsal. All of the music played was composed by Beethoven.

The figures were 9539 Friday night, 4434 at the Saturday morning open rehearsal, 14,841 for the Saturday-night performance of the first and ninth symphonies, and 12,513 yesterday afternoon.

William Steinberg conducted Friday and Saturday, his only appearances at Tanglewood this summer;

Seiji Ozawa conducted yesterday, his fifth appearance. He will return Aug. 18 and 20 to end the season.

The concert yesterday didn't reach the heights of the Saturday-night performance of the ninth symphony largely because the program didn't have the same kind of substance.

Yesterday there was the "Triple" concerto (for piano, violin, cello and orchestra, Op. 56) to begin, Symphony No. 4 before intermission, and the Fantasy for Piano, chorus and orchestra, Op. 80, to wind it up.

None of them have the size and guts to be found in the ninth symphony. The concerto, with Joseph Silverstein's violin, Jules Eskin's cello and Peter Serkin's piano, is like chamber music . . . full of beauty, but small in scale.

Ovation from Listeners

The symphony, composed almost as a diversion while the famous fifth was half done, also is small-scaled when set beside the fifth. It is loaded with gentle serenity and light-hearted exuberance, however, and came over that way Sunday.

The fantasy, played at Tanglewood in 1965 with Serkin's father, Rudolf, at the piano, is an odd mixture of conflicting moods including pianistic virtuosity, simple nursery tunes, pretentious orchestration, and choral excitement.

It brought an ovation for Ozawa, however, and for Serkin.

The chorus, which again displayed a precision and dynamism rare among choruses, provided its own foot-stamping applause for its rehearsal director, John Oliver, when he was brought out for a bow.

There were some really beautiful moments in the performance of the ninth symphony Saturday night and some exciting ones — and some rough spots — and of course, there are those uncomfortable passages of churning rhetoric in the first and fourth movements.

Most of the beautiful passages came during the slow third movement. Boston's vaunted string section put out those liquid melodies with loving care.

The second movement, usually a source of pulsing excitement because of the momentum of its repetitive patterns, was relentless rather than a source of tension.

The general feeling until the chorus came in for the final movement was one of benign, latent strength.

But the chorus seemed to wake up the whole world, and Steinberg took advantage of the lively, incisive excitement Oliver had trained into it. The piece came alive, and the air moved and jumped with a power which brought the audience to its feet.

Soloists were Jeannine Crader, soprano, who came close to shrillness a couple of times; Joanna Simon, a beautiful contralto whose dark tones were buried; Dean Wilder, whose tenor was pleasant but not strong enough; and Robert Hale, whose strong, mellow bass voice easily supported the requirements of the most important solo role.

The Sunday morning chamber music session in the theater offered a duet for flute and percussion, a quintet for piano and strings and Beethoven's late string quartet of Opus 127, a formidable work which the youthful students from the Berkshire Music Center played neatly but weakly.

Next week, the fourth this season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will play Friday with Earl Wild, piano soloist, under Bruno Maderna, conductor; Saturday with two Brahms symphonies under Leonard Bernstein, and Sunday afternoon with Alicia De Larrocha, piano soloist, under Karel Ancerl, conductor.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER & RECORD AMERICAN
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 312,885
JUL 18 1972
New England Newsclip

Hot Tanglewood Uninspired

By ELLEN PFEIFER
Music Critic

The combination of Beethoven's greatest hits and sunny humid weather produced one of the most jammed weekends in memory around the Lenox-Lee-Pittsfield area last week. Every hotel, motel and guest house was filled, traffic jams clogged streets throughout the day, and the Boston Symphony broke all attendance records with 14,851 people crowding the grounds at Tanglewood to hear the 9th Symphony.

By Sunday, the heat, the crowds and attempts of police to handle the cars had made everyone irritable. I, for one, was snapped at by an usher for "leaning" on the restraining rope which prevents latecomers entering the Shed. That, after spending what seemed like hours trying to find a parking place.

If there is any justice at all, the struggle just to get to Tanglewood should have been rewarded by spectacular playing. It wasn't. (Although the temperature plus repertory that could be played in one's sleep probably didn't contribute much to the players' motivation.)

• Concert Review

The program, Sunday, probably contained the most esoteric music of the weekend, the Triple Concerto, Choral Fantasy, and Symphony No. 4. Which gives you some idea of just how unusual the programming was on Friday and Saturday.

The concerto, a real piece of exotica as far as the concerto repertory is concerned, is a fascinating example of not too memorable material handled with dazzling technique and fitted to an unwieldy group of solo instruments — violin, cello and piano. The Fantasy, for chorus, orchestra and piano, is a funny piece with lots of going-nowhere, undistinguished music which suddenly takes shape and begins to work during the last-half choral section, which is sort of a trial run for the choral music of the Ninth Symphony.

The performances, conducted by William Steinberg on Saturday night and by Seiji Ozawa on Sunday, were routine, although the orchestra sounded surprisingly coarse on Saturday.

It was the old slick BSO that played on Sunday though, but without the subtleties of dynamics or nuance which give real distinction, definition and beauty to music, whether familiar or unknown.

Peter Serkin, Joseph Silverstein, and Jules Eskin were the soloists in the Concerto.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638
JUL 17 1972

At the Concert

Tanglewood Weekend Draws 41,000

By EDWARD FRENCH

The first appearance at Tanglewood this season of the full Boston Symphony, the presence of William Steinberg on the podium on Friday and Saturday evenings and all programs including the Prelude devoted to Beethoven attracted a total of over 41,000 music lovers. Who said classical music was dead?

Friday evening William Steinberg elected to pair the Sixth and Fifth Symphonies. We have never heard more definitive performances of these contrasting works.

The Sixth Symphony (Pastoral) according to Beethoven's own statement is more an expression of feelings than a painting.

Tonally the orchestra never sounded better as Maestro Steinberg emphasized the lyric beauties in this pastoral score. It was the conception of a man who has loved and performed Beethoven for many years and desires to pass on the results of his study and affection.

THE IMPACT of the Fifth Symphony was tremendous. The symmetry and drive of the first movement, the flow of the Andante and the excitement of the Finale were completely revealed in Mr. Steinberg's authoritative reading. The orchestra never played better.

Saturday we heard the First Symphony in C major and the Monn master's ultima thule in the symphonic field, the Ninth Symphony. The early work had a youthful simplicity and grace that made it a splendid contrast to the complexities and overwhelming power of the Ninth.

Mr. Steinberg's conception of this was remarkable for its sweep as well as attention to detail. Every sixteenth note was in its proper place, sonorities again were marvelously balanced, but best of all there was a feeling of spontaneity to the performance that made the work come alive.

The solo quartet of Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder and Robert Hale coped valiantly with this demanding music.

FOR MANY OF us the superb Tanglewood Chorus, prepared by John Oliver was the predominant element in the "Ode to Joy" Finale. William Steinberg took the closing of the Finale at a faster tempo than is traditional, but it seemed logical and oh, how effective!

It was an overwhelming musical happening for the 14,000 plus filling the vast shed and lawn.

Sunday afternoon Seiji Ozawa conducted a lively performance of the "Triple" Concerto with Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin and Peter Serkin. Mr. Serkin's pianistic talents were also displayed in the Choral Fantasy, a work that is a lot of fun but without much substance.

Mr. Ozawa reading of the lovely B flat Symphony lived up to Berlioz's description; "it is generally lively, nimble, joyous or of a heavenly sweetness.

Mr. Serkin's pianism was more fully exploited in the two Beethoven trios heard in Friday's Prelude. It was superb chamber music.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200
JUL 18 1972
New England Newsclip

Music Review

Beethoven At Tanglewood

BY MARTHA deB. BEAVER

This past weekend's attendance created an all-time high for the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox. The reason?

Perhaps the combination of all-Beethoven works, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, William Steinberg, Seiji Ozawa, and balmy though dewy-damp weather which somehow always seems more bearable among those sky-piercing pines and eternally resplendent lawns of this mucically endowed establishment.

Friday evening's concert, a precise and contained performance of Beethoven's sixth and fifth symphonies in the no-nonsense yet inspired hands of music director William Steinberg, drew 9,539 listeners, Saturday's open rehearsal 4,434. (The rehearsal always reviews Sunday afternoon's program.)

Even with Pete Seegar attracting his special crowd to Lenox the same night, Saturday saw 14,851 Beethoven advocates braving the traffic hazards and foggy mists, and ecstatically applauding Steinberg's succinct directing of the first and ninth symphonies.

Soprano Jeannine Crader, contralto Joanna Simon, tenor Dean Wilder, bass Robert Hale, and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus admirably trained by John Oliver, surmounted the score's challenge with stunning technical and interpretative evocation.

A symphony in which Beethoven extended his compositional and inspirational skills to the utmost, the ninth calls for tremendous fortitude from instrumental and vocal musicians, as well as the director, who anneals and illuminates each movement's structure.

This Steinberg is eminently equipped to do; and without obvious physical or emotional strain, he produced a tightly knit performance that, as one listener remarked at the final fanfare, sent chills up and down one's spine.

Many Beethoven biographers and critics pass over or mention with slightly disparaging comment, as a youthful and not especially worthy work, the great master's "Triple Concerto for violin, piano and cello" in C major, Op. 56.

It was the opening number on Sunday afternoon's sectionally unbalanced program, conducted by Seiji Ozawa.

We find it an irresistible work, refined and subtle in its simplistic structure and devious development, (like that double dactyl in the first movement taken from the cello and repeated in unison by the horns), and the marked maneuvering of the unusually elegant polka rhythms in the last.

Although principal cellist Jules Eskin's resonant tone, in some sections of the first movement due to the required register and melodic passages, was not always equal to Silverstein's sinuously silky strings, tonal balance and style among the three soloists was sustained with aptly imitative and integrated quality.

Pianist Peter Serkin vitalized the performance through an empathic intensity that alternately expanded and contracted with the score's dynamic demands. The winds and brass were superb.

Ozawa's telling interpretation of the Concerto manifested itself in both pronounced and lyrical sweeps in which themes alternating in true concerto grosso style between soloists and orchestra stood out with intriguing clarity.

By the time the fourth movement of the fourth symphony, (another adolescent but perfectly proportioned work, serenely elevated, a miracle of repetition without monotony) commenced, the inherent joyous humor began to pall, both listeners and performers attempting to sustain interest after such a lengthy (though interrupted between movements in each number by applause and tuning of strings) first section.

How much more effective and more satisfying it would have been overall, if the brief and enchanting Fantasy for piono, chorus and orchestra in C minor had been programmed at this point instead of after intermission.

It didn't obliterate the lyric passion of the symphony's Adagio, however, idyllic and lightsome at times but with a dark undercurrent of descending string passages where Ozawa concentrated his attention on the eloquent winds and brass.

Joy and delight were reasserted with a sublime rendition of the Choral Fantasy, in a slightly superficial sense, perhaps, a miniature prototype of the ninth's choral finale, sections even foreshadowing the sparkling flow of Schubert's "Trout" Quintet, with Serkin again providing sensitive and proper inprovisatory styled solos.

Perhaps after all it was the fitting and frothy finish with which to top off two fulsome courses. We would have liked a second helping.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

JEANNINE CRADER

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN

Hearing Beet(hoven)

ALL FOR BEETHOVEN — The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox drew record crowds, offering a weekend of Beethoven. According to Globe music critic Michael Steinberg, "there haven't been such traffic jams since the fall of France."

Despite such minor inconveniences, however, good music and delightful weather fulfilled all the expectations of just under 15,000 people on Saturday and some 12,500 on Sunday. There was also a successful Weekend Prelude on Friday evening. (Photos by Jack Sheahan)

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
AND EVENING Globe
JUL 18 1972
New England Newsclip

41,000 Flock to Hear Weekend of Beethoven at Lenox

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Music Review

LENOX — The music of Beethoven played by the full forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Seiji Ozawa and William Steinberg in his final appearance as music director of the orchestra, brought 41,337 persons to Tanglewood for the third weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Tanglewood's press office, declared this to be the largest weekend attendance since the 1950s.

Steinberg will serve as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony next season, and Ozawa will serve as music adviser until the 1973-1974 season, when he takes ovir as regular conductor.

As with so many departing Boston Symphony conductors, Steinberg chose Beethoven's Ninth Symphony as his "swan song," Saturday night. That audience numbered 14,851, causing a parking problem because of Tanglewood's lesser parking space this summer.

A Special Occasion

It was a great Ninth Symphony. And a special occasion.

The orchestra stood when Steinberg came on stage and joined in the heavy applause. When the program was over, he was recalled time and again to an ovation.

The real mark of the orchestra's respect, however, was the utmost effort the men made to create a musical Tanglewood at its golden best.

It wasn't easy. Saturday night was miserable with humidity. The players discarded their coats and Steinberg wore a lightweight sports jacket.

Superb Performance

An orchestra can make or break a conductor. Steinberg was never a podium athlete, but at this stage he makes his wishes known with minimum physical effort. Saturday night, he even used a special built podium with a bench for resting.

Both Beethoven symphonies (One and Nine) were superbly disciplined and played with verve. The final movement of Symphony One had moments of rhythmic separation, but the shimmering passages and great swells of the Ninth were set on fire by the merest gesture from podium.

Almost devoid of physical drama, Steinberg projected the Ninth's power with underlying emotion, rather than the work's structural magnitude, length or even its frequent interludes of raging bombast.

The arch example was the usually precipitous scherzo which Steinberg held back to a conservative pace without lessening its impact one iota.

. . . With Singing to Match

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus of 150 voices (students of the Berkshire Music Center) sang Schilller's "Ode to Joy" in the finale as if all mankind was at stake.

Not only was it tonally opulent, but these young singers had a conviction that only an intimate knowledge of the German text (at least in translation) could have ordained.

Robert Hale had the biggest success of the four soloists. It began with his initial proclamation and spread to the solo quartet and chorus.

Jeannine Crader sang the merciless soprano score with determination, penetration and a firm grip on the soaring range.

The voices of Joanna Simon, contralto, and Dean Wilder, tenor, blended unevenly in quartet matters but had good tonal quality as individuals.

Through it all the emotionally calm craftsman, Steinberg, controlled the massive structure, giving only cues that this great orchestra needs, and doing it all from memory.

PROGRAMS
ALL BEETHOVEN

Saturday Night
William Steinberg, conductor
Symphony No. 1 in C major, Opus 21
Symphony No. 9 in D minor, Opus 125
Jeannine Crader, soprano
Joanna Simon, contralto
Dean Wilder, tenor
Robert Hale, bass
Tanglewood Festival Chorus

Sunday Afternoon
Seiji Ozawa, conductor
Concerto for piano, violin and cello in C, Opus 56
Peter Serkin, piano
Joseph Silverstein, violin
Jules Eskin, cello
Symphony No. 4 in B flat major, Opus 60
Fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra in C minor, Opus 80
Peter Serkin, piano
Tanglewood Festival Chorus

Which is not to suggest that Ozawa's conducting yesterday afternoon was second-rate. The man has already performed wonders in refining the orchestra's tone and achieving the kind of obeisance that comes from mutual respect.

It was lesser-known Beethoven, however. Using a reduced orchestra of strings and winds, he brought sensitive balances in Beethoven's Triple Concerto to expose solo expertise.

Soloists were Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Jules Eskin, cello — both first desk players with the orchestra — and pianist Peter Serkin.

It certainly wasn't rote playing, nor was it without some rather glaring flaws from both string instruments.

From all three one also heard agile technique, euphonious tone, notably from piano and cello, and overall competence. Eskin inaughurated the slow movement with a gorgeously hued tone, leading to a brilliantly played rondo by all three.

Ozawa's handling of the Fourth Symphony was even more to be admired.

Instead of seeking a grandiloquence and pomposity that some conductors try to impose, Ozawa sought to transmit no more than the symphony's gentle, peaceful, sentimental qualities.

We might except the finale. If that tempo was Ozawa's idea of "allegro ma non troppo," heaven help the orchestra that faces an Ozawa "presto."

He did rightfully build a dramatic atmosphere in the introduction and gave affectionate treatment to the violins' religious chant in the slow movement.

The Fantasy for Piano and Chorus, Opus 80, was a somewhat adventurous but unpretentious close to an otherwise historic weekend.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

July 21, 1972

40,000 Enjoy Remarkable Week-End of Music Events

By JERRY BEN-ASHER
(Jewish News Music Critic)

TANGLEWOOD, Mass. — The King is very much alive. Long live the new King!

William Steinberg — the eminent conductor whom the nazis dismissed from his posts in 1933, the courageous man who founded the Jewish Culture League in Frankfurt and who finally left Germany in 1936 to help organize the Palestine Orchestra (now the Israel Philharmonic) — made his last appearance as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood recently.

Seiji Ozawa — student of Charles Munch whose charisma has sparkled in guest appearances from Tokyo to Vienna, harbinger of a new era for the staid Boston ensemble — as artistic director was preparing his own accession to the post of musical advisor this fall, then to music director during the 1973-74 season.

Some 40,000 ticketholders jammed the Music Shed and scrambled for blanket space on the beautifully-manicured lawns of Tanglewood during three days of the music by Ludwig van Beethoven.

Steinberg conducted the "Sixth" and "Fifth" symphonies on Friday and the "First" and "Ninth" Saturday night.

On Sunday afternoon Ozawa led the orchestra and soloists in the "Triple Concerto in C" for piano, violin and cello, the "Fourth Symphony," and the "Fantasy" for piano, chorus and orchestra in C Minor, op. 80.

Other Goodies

There were other goodies. At a weekend prelude on Friday, Peter Serkin, Jules Eskin and Harold Wright played the "B flat Clarinet Trio," op. 11; and Serkin, Joseph Silverstein and Eskin joined in the "E flat Trio" op. 70, for piano, violin and cello.

On Saturday morning Ozawa's rehearsal of the next day's program provided a bonus for the captivated audience that filled a good portion of the Shed.

An effete snob might cavil at Steinberg's popular programing. Four constantly played symphonies are a bit much. But this music triggers an osmotic process: the pores become supersaturated, it penetrates the bloodstream. The listener becomes exhilarated. There is never too much Beethoven.

Steinberg is the prototype of the central European conductor. He stands erect and almost expressionless, only a flick of finger or rise of clenched fist encouraging dramatic emphasis.

Great Mastery

Subtlety, the careful delineation of contour, the efflorescence of great climaxes as integral parts of the whole — all of these characterized the maestro's direction of the symphonies.

No musical creation would more fittingly honor Steinberg's retirement than the "Ninth Symphony." From the pervasive dignity of its opening bars it was obvious that the performance would be a memorable one.

There were defects: one inopportune entry by an oboe marred the lovely second movement, and the chorus could have blended with greater unity.

But the lovely song of the cello and the wrenched cry of the trumpet in the first movement, the glowing descending bassoon figure in the second movement, the glorious cries of cello, oboe and flute in the third, lent increasing excitement as the work approached its finale.

(See MUSIC — Page 37)

reader permit the comment that one man's gruel may be another's feast?

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169
JUL 18 1972

Beethoven, Steinberg and Ozawa Pack Tanglewood

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Well Well. Beethoven, William Steinberg, Seiji Ozawa, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew 37,000 music lovers for three concerts over the weekend.

No Van Cliburn, no Lenny, no Joan Sutherland and no Rubenstein. Just meat and potatoes all the way and the audience loved every minute of it.

STEINBERG who had conducted Beethoven's 1, 5, 6 and 9 symphonies was making his last appearance as music director of the BSO and I can assure you that for music of this type he will be missed.

Ozawa led the troops Sunday afternoon for the Triple Concerto, the Symphony No. 4 in B Flat, and the flashy and theatrical Choral Fantasy.

SOLOLOIST in triple were two first chairmen, Joseph Silverstien, violin and Jules Eskin, cello, with Peter Serkin, piano.

The work was done with competnece, of course, but not much more. For whatever reason, (the humidity was very high) Eskin had his problems both with intonation and meter. He very nearly made up for it with his work on the limpid Largo movement where he laid down a fine legato line. Overall there were too many loose ends which made it difficult to achieve the unity and cohesiveness of the piece.

THE 4TH SYMPHONY was much better in excution but with the sounds of the Steinberg performance still fresh in the ear, the reading was not nearly in the same class. This orchestra cannot play badly, but like any other they have good days and not so good days and almost always the difference comes from the podium.

The Choral Fantasy has everything in it but the baby's bassinet. Brass Choirs, woodwind choirs, string quartets, pyrotechnic on the piano (again played by Peter Serkin) the large Tanglewood Festival Chorus, soloists and, to top it all, the melodic ripoff from one of the Top Twenty Pop Tunes, the variations on the theme from the 9th, the "Ode To Joy."

LET US NOT play the role of pedant and mention the relative value of the piece as music. No, let us freely admit that this work is a crowd pleaser from beginning to end. And it certainly pleased the 12,000 odd (and I mean odd) members of this happy audience.

One extra-musical note.

After this large crowd had left, many of whom had picnicked on the grounds there was virtually none of the unpleasant detritus and debris commonly attendant to such a large gathering.

The people that come here love this beautiful place and, by gum, they take care of it. The lush green of the lawns was almost clear of junk. Bravo, I say, bravo indeed.

Hearing Beet(hoven)

ALL FOR BEETHOVEN — The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox drew record crowds, offering a weekend of Beethoven. According to Globe music critic Michael Steinberg, "there haven't been such traffic jams since the fall of France."

Despite such minor inconveniences, however, good music and delightful weather fulfilled all the expectations of just under 15,000 people on Saturday and some 12,500 on Sunday. There was also a successful Weekend Prelude on Friday evening. (Photos by Jack Sheahan)

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
AND EVENING Globe
JUL 18 1972
New England Newsclip

41,000 Flock to Hear Weekend of Beethoven at Lenox

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Music Review

LENOX — The music of Beethoven played by the full forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Seiji Ozawa and William Steinberg in his final appearance as music director of the orchestra, brought 41,337 persons to Tanglewood for the third weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Tanglewood's press office, declared this to be the largest weekend attendance since the 1950s.

Steinberg will serve as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony next season, and Ozawa will serve as music adviser until the 1973-1974 season, when he takes ovir as regular conductor.

As with so many departing Boston Symphony conductors, Steinberg chose Beethoven's Ninth Symphony as his "swan song," Saturday night. That audience numbered 14,851, causing a parking problem because of Tanglewood's lesser parking space this summer.

A Special Occasion

It was a great Ninth Symphony. And a special occasion.

The orchestra stood when Steinberg came on stage and joined in the heavy applause. When the program was over, he was recalled time and again to an ovation.

The real mark of the orchestra's respect, however, was the utmost effort the men made to create a musical Tanglewood at its golden best.

It wasn't easy. Saturday night was miserable with humidity. The players discarded their coats and Steinberg wore a lightweight sports jacket.

Superb Performance

An orchestra can make or break a conductor, Steinberg was never a podium athlete, but at this stage he makes his wishes known with minimum physical effort. Saturday night, he even used a special built podium with a bench for resting.

Both Beethoven symphonies (One and Nine) were superbly disciplined and played with verve. The final movement of Symphony One had moments of rhythmic separation, but the shimmering passages and great swells of the Ninth were set on fire by the merest gesture from podium.

Almost devoid of physical drama, Steinberg projected the Ninth's power with underlying emotion, rather than the work's structural magnitude, length or even its frequent interludes of raging bombast.

The arch example was the usually precipitous scherzo which Steinberg held back to a conservative pace without lessening its impact one iota.

. . . With Singing to Match

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus of 150 voices (students of the Berkshire Music Center) sang Schiller's "Ode to Joy" in the finale as if all mankind was at stake.

Not only was it tonally opulent, but these young singers had a conviction that only an intimate knowledge of the German text (at least in translation) could have ordained.

Robert Hale had the biggest success of the four soloists. It began with his initial proclamation and spread to the solo quartet and chorus.

Jeannine Crader sang the merciless soprano score with determination, penetration and a firm grip on the soaring range.

The voices of Joanna Simon, contralto, and Dean Wilder, tenor, blended unevenly in quartet matters but had good tonal quality as individuals.

Through it all the emotionally calm craftsman, Steinberg, controlled the massive structure, giving only cues that this great orchestra needs, and doing it all from memory.

PROGRAMS
ALL BEETHOVEN

Saturday Night
William Steinberg, conductor
Symphony No. 1 in C major, Opus 21
Symphony No. 9 in D minor, Opus 125
Jeannine Crader, soprano
Joanna Simon, contralto
Dean Wilder, tenor
Robert Hale, bass
Tanglewood Festival Chorus

Sunday Afternoon
Seiji Ozawa, conductor
Concerto for piano, violin and cello in C, Opus 56
Peter Serkin, piano
Joseph Silverstein, violin
Jules Eskin, cello
Symphony No. 4 in B flat major, Opus 60
Fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra in C minor, Opus 80
Peter Serkin, piano
Tanglewood Festival Chorus

Which is not to suggest that Ozawa's conducting yesterday afternoon was second-rate. The man has already performed wonders in refining the orchestra's tone and achieving the kind of obeisance that comes from mutual respect.

It was lesser-known Beethoven, however. Using a reduced orchestra of strings and winds, he brought sensitive balances in Beethoven's Triple Concerto to expose solo expertise.

Soloists were Joseph Silverstein, violin, and Jules Eskin, cello — both first desk players with the orchestra — and pianist Peter Serkin.

It certainly wasn't rote playing, nor was it without some rather glaring flaws from both string instruments.

From all three one also heard a gile technique, euphonious tone, notably from piano and cello, and overall competence. Eskin inaughurated the slow movement with a gorgeously hued tone, leading to a brilliantly played rondo by all three.

Ozawa's handling of the Fourth Symphony was even more to be admired.

Instead of seeking a grandiloquence and pomposity that some conductors try to impose, Ozawa sought to transmit no more than the symphony's gentle, peaceful, sentimental qualities.

We might except the finale. If that tempo was Ozawa's idea of "allegro ma non troppo," heaven help the orchestra that faces an Ozawa "presto."

He did rightfully build a dramatic atmosphere in the introduction and gave affectionate treatment to the violins' religious chant in the slow movement.

The Fantasy for Piano and Chorus, Opus 80, was a somewhat adventurous but unpretentious close to an otherwise historic weekend.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169
JUL 18 1972

Beethoven, Steinberg and Ozawa Pack Tanglewood

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Well Well. Beethoven, William Steinberg, Seiji Ozawa, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew 37,000 music lovers for three concerts over the weekend.

No Van Cliburn, no Lenny, no Joan Sutherland and no Rubenstein. Just meat and potatoes all the way and the audience loved every minute of it.

STEINBERG who had conducted Beethoven's 1, 5, 6 and 9 symphonies was making his last appearance as music director of the BSO and I can assure you that for music of this type he will be missed.

Ozawa led the troops Sunday afternoon for the Triple Concerto, the Symphony No. 4 in B Flat, and the flashy and theatrical Choral Fantasy.

SOLOLOIST in triple were two first chairmen, Joseph Silverstien, violin and Jules Eskin, cello, with Peter Serkin, piano.

The work was done with competnece, of course, but not much more. For whatever reason, (the humidity was very high) Eskin had his problems both with intonation and meter. He very nearly made up for it with his work on the limpid Largo movement where he laid down a fine legato line. Overall there were too many loose ends which made it difficult to achieve the unity and cohesiveness of the piece.

THE 4TH SYMPHONY was much better in excution but with the sounds of the Steinberg performance still fresh in the ear, the reading was not nearly in the same class. This orchestra cannot play badly, but like any other they have good days and not so good days and almost always the difference comes from the podium.

The Choral Fantasy has everything in it but the baby's bassinet. Brass Choirs, woodwind choirs, string quartets, pyrotechnic on the piano (again played by Peter Serkin) the large Tanglewood Festival Chorus, soloists and, to top it all, the melodic ripoff from one of the Top Twenty Pop Tunes, the variations on the theme from the 9th, the "Ode To Joy."

LET US NOT play the role of pedant and mention the relative value of the piece as music. No, let us freely admit that this work is a crowd pleaser from beginning to end. And it certainly pleased the 12,000 odd (and I mean odd) members of this happy audience.

One extra-musical note.

After this large crowd had left, many of whom had picnicked on the grounds there was virtually none of the unpleasant detritus and debris commonly attendant to such a large gathering.

The people that come here love this beautiful place and, by gum, they take care of it. The lush green of the lawns was almost clear of junk. Bravo, I say, bravo indeed.

Music

(Continued from Page 12)

The Ninth's choral movement was Beethoven's most daring adventure. It was to consumate a glorious union of instrument and voice.

The composer affirmed his credo with almost reckless abandon: "Alle Menschen werden Bruder."

The Boston orchestra's bass and cello sections whispered the opening of the "Ode to Joy," and masses of orchestral sound swelled as from a great organ.

After a searing soprano phrase, a burst of vocal joy erupted, an awesome whisper concentrated the tension, and the finale hammered forward with knife-like thrust of trumpet. Polished performance or not, the finale sweeps all before it. Thunderous applause followed, with the audience, orchestra and chorus rising as one in final tribute to William Steinberg.

Startling Contrast

In appearance, temperament and style, Seiji Ozawa's contrast to Steinberg is startling. The still young conductor gushes excitement. He tosses his head, and the long black hair thrashes about. An internal force seems to press his face and body to express every emotional nuance.

Nevertheless, Ozawa is no exhibitionist. The emanations he projects come from his complete absorption in the music. Audiences and musicians will love him.

Ozawa's selections are not quite so often heard. The "Triple Concerto" harkens back to the baroque concerto grosso. On Sunday Peter Serkin, Joseph Silverstein and Jules Eskin confronted the difficult cello configurations with mixed results.

Though he played the lovely andante cantabile movement with langurous sweetness, his tempo and intonation in the demanding two other movements were nervous and inaccurate.

Ozawa's emphatic two final notes seemed to say: "Fine. We finished together."

It was that rough-hewn precursor of the "Ninth Symphony" — the "Chorale Fantasia" — that provided the excitement on Sunday afternoon. The "Fantasia" has been likened to a building whose girders show through the masonry.

The piano states a simple theme, develops it with improvisatory variation, begins to sound as though it is joining in a concerto, and then combines with orchestra and chorus in a "Schlusschor" of glowing joyfulness. "When speaks the magic sway of tones. . . glorious things must then take shape."

The audience responded with a modicum of delirium to Peter Serkin's performance. In reality, the young pianist has some distance to travel before his playing of the work approaches the grandeur and elan of his father, Rusolf Serkin.

But the "Fantasia" is a happy way to end three days of Beethoven. The thousands who streamed from the Tanglewood grounds hummed and whistled their own obbligato. It had been a grueling weekend for the Boston Symphony.

Might the compassionate reader permit the comment that one man's gruel may be another's feast?

Serkin and Silverstein performed effectively enough, but Jules Eskin confronted the difficult cello configurations with mixed results.

cello parts.

Music

TEL AVIV (JTA) — Gen. Chaim Laskoff, former Israel Army Chief of Staff, has been appointed ombudsman for the army, it was announced last week.

Laskoff is now an officer in complaints by or against servicemen and military institutions. His functions parallel those of Israel's civilian ombudsman who serves under the comptroller general.

plans for the building of a Chagall Museum in Jerusalem.

Mrs. Meir invited Chagall to visit Israel in the fall to choose a site for the new museum with Jerusalem's Mayor Teddy Kollek. It is anticipated that the painter will contribute several new works to the museum. Minister Peres said that a series of postage stamps reproducing Chagall's famous stained-glass portrait of the 12 Tribes of Israel will be printed before the end of the year.

We are pleased to announce the formation of the

Whitestone

SOLOISTS for tonight's Tanglewood performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony rehearse with William Steinberg and the Boston Symphony. From left, Jeannine Crader, Joanna Simon, Dean Wilder, Robert Hale.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 17 1972 New England Newsclip

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 17 1972 New England Newsclip

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Friday, July 14

The respect which the members of the Boston Symphony hold for the musicianship, discipline, and artistic integrity of musical director William Steinberg was evident in the performance they gave him on a muggy, buggy Friday evening. Two favorites, the Symphony no. 6 in F "Pastorale" and the Symphony no. 5 in C minor, began an all-Beethoven weekend which featured Mr. Steinberg in his final appearances as musical director of the venerable orchestra.

How many times has he conducted these two symphonies? Few conductors could give the impression they had recently mastered these pieces and produce the fresh, exquisitely shaped and detailed readings which Mr. Steinberg offered.

The Pastorale Symphony, for all its deceptively obvious drama and engaging tunefulness, is musically rich and demanding. This performance was nearly flawless, though the players let down a bit in the final movement.

Mr. Steinberg's impatience with an overlow house which was inclined to be noisy probably contributed to an erratic start in the C minor. Once the orchestra settled down, the symphony was revealed in its staggering dimensions as a masterpiece of deserved popularity.

The weekend prelude featured pianist Peter Serkin in two Beethoven trios: for piano, clarinet and cello in B flat, op. 11 and piano, violin and cello in E flat, op. 70, no. 2. Comparisons of the two works point up the refinements in chamber writing found in the opus 70: the subtler interplay, closer writing and tighter structure.

It is no reflection on the musicianship of clarinetist Harold Wright that the opus 70 was the more rewarding performance. Violinist Silverstein and cellest Eskin complemented Mr. Serkin's superlative ensemble piano work.

John Hinners

Saturday, July 15

Some 14,851 Beethoven enthusiasts flocked to Tanglewood for Saturday evening's performance — so many, in fact, that we were unable to get anywhere near the Shed before intermission, due to a mammoth traffic jam — consequently missing the First Symphony, altogether.

This was a particularly auspicious evening in that it was the last performance to be conducted by William Steinberg as Musical Director of the BSO, and so it was appropriate that Beethoven's Ninth Symphony be the chosen work.

The performance was a masterpiece of interpretive planning and understanding. Each movement had a distinct approach all its own; in particular, we liked the dynamic design in the second movement (the opening was played with more delicacy than one often hears, gradually building in intensity as the various instruments entered) and the exquisite calm of the third.

The Tanglewood Festival Chorus sang with the excellent diction and spirit one has come to expect, and the soloists gave convincing performances, especially Robert Hale, whose excellent singing in the Haydn "Seasons" was still fresh in our memory.

We would suppose that this symphony is everyone's favorite; we noticed young, long-haired heads and older heads with perhaps no hair at all nodding in time to the "Ode to Joy" theme of the fourth movement. This very enthusiastic audience brought Mr. Steinberg and the soloists back for many well-deserved curtain calls.

Franklin G. Coleman

Whitestone

THREE SMILING faces of pianist Peter Serkin, left, John Oliver, director of the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, and conductor Seiji Ozawa punctuated the end of an all-Beethoven weekend this Sunday at Tanglewood. Serkin was soloist in Choral Fantasy. A crowd of 12,513 persons was in attendance for yesterday's concert.

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Sunday, July 16

Sunday's program in the Beethoven weekend opened with a well-intended performance of the Triple Concerto, with Peter Serkin as pianist, Joseph Silverstein as violinist and Jules Eskin as 'cellist. We cannot remember seeing such care on the part of solo performers to achieve balance and phrasing in this work, but the hot, muggy weather seemed to take its toll on the intonation of the stringed instruments.

One exception to this was the absolutely stunning playing of Jules Eskin in the beginning of the second movement. The experience reinforced our views on why the 'cello is our favorite orchestral instrument.

Peter Serkin showed what a fine ensemble player he is in his sensitive reading of this work and his brilliant playing in the Choral Fantasy which ended the program demonstrated his considerable skill as a soloist.

About the latter piece it can be said that his work made what is a very disjointed piece come alive. It is said that this piece foreshadows the Ninth Symphony, but it sounds primitive when heard back-to-back with that great work, in our opinion.

Again some fine singing from the Tanglewood Chorus, with especially exciting work from some unidentified soloists. Ozawa showed himself to be a master accompanist in both these works, listening intently to the soloists in the Concerto and Mr. Serkin in the Fantasy, and following their interpretations closely.

Ozawa's reading of the Fourth Symphony, the middle item on the program, must have won that work some new advocates. Many are inclined to overlook the "even-numbered" Beethoven symphonies as inconsequential when compared to the supposedly more-forceful "odd-numbered" works, but this work has always been a favorite of ours, and was given an exciting, tasteful performance.

Many melodic lines were emphasized anew in this hearing, and it gave the audience a splendid opportunity to hear excellent bassoon, clarinet, horn, flute and oboe playing. As usual with Ozawa, an exciting, musical performance.

Franklin G. Coleman

All Beethoven Program Draws Enormous Audience to Tanglewood

By RICHARD CONWAY

There is no question about it. Beethoven reigns supreme among composers of symphonic music. (There are those who would omit the limiting term "symphonic".) However you may read it, no other composer draws such enormous audiences, or such tremendous audience response.

Yesterday, more than 12,000 people jammed into Tanglewood to hear the master's music. And the music, although very fine stuff, is not even among his most well - known works! No matter. The people came to hear Beethoven. And hear him they did.

Enthusiastic, dynamic, colorful conductor Seiji Ozawa played his orchestra in marvelous fashion. Ozawa's podium ballet - work is second only to that of Leonard Bernstein. This, of course, annoys the purists, who feel the music is sufficient unto itself, and that such theatrics call undo attention to the conductor. Perhaps. But when one watches Ozawa work, one is aware that the man is totally immersed in the music, literally reaching out and playing each of the instruments himself. He cares. And he gets response from his musicians. And therefore he gets response from his audience, who are truly made a part of the experience.

The concert, which began a little late due to the large crowd, opened with the "Concerto for piano, violin, and cello in C, op. 56." Joseph Silverstein, Jules Eskin, and Peter Serkin were the soloists.

The Concerto is really chamber music in dimension and is close to the concerto grosso style of the Baroque period. As they did in Friday night's Weekend Prelude program, Serkin, Silverstein, and Eskin displayed a fine sense of ensemble, performing with impeccable musicianship.

Ozawa played the orchestral balance beautifully, now generating excitement, now allowing the music to sing in long - breathed phrases. Eskin had a particularly beautiful cello passage in the second movement.

Beethoven's "Symphony no. 4 in B flat, op. 60" followed. Often lost between the dramatic and powerful Third and Fifth symphonies, this work has its own more quiet charm, not to mention wit and humor. There is an absolutely gorgeous second movement which is the crown of the work.

Again, Ozawa, who is always clear, always precise, enveloped his listeners in meaningful sound. He drew delicious pianissimos and dynamic fortes. He drew rhythmic excitement and languid lines. In his hands a work is always given shape and clarity.

After intermission, guest artist Peter Serkin returned, along with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, for a performance of the "Fantasy for piano, chorus, and orchestra in C minor, op. 80." Here Serkin had an opportunity to display pianistic virtuosity, and he did so. When the chorus finally entered, it did so with the sound, precision, and clarity we have come to expect from them this year. It is an unusually fine choral group, and director John Oliver has done a remarkable job of preparation.

Our columns from Tanglewood are beginning to sound something like a broken record, we suppose; but, so far, we have sensed an unusually high quality of performance taking place in the Music Shed. There has been an excitement, an electricity in the air. One awaits the week ends with enormous expectation.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

Whitestone

FAMED FILM ACTOR Edward G. Robinson and his wife, at left, heard the Beethoven program at Tanglewood Friday evening. The couple spent the weekend at the Williams Inn in Williamstown.

Music Review

Beethoven—Boston's box office bonanza

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

CONDUCTOR Seiji Ozawa and pianist Peter Serkin whipped up a furor of ecstatic enthusiasm yesterday afternoon in the concluding work of the third Tanglewood weekend, which was devoted solely to Beethoven.

The three concerts also set an all-time attendance record of 41,337. The first two were conducted by William Steinberg, who used the second evening as his valedictory as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is a stature to the Ninth Symphony which fits it for great occasions. Koussevitzky used it to inaugurate the Tanglewood Shed, and Munch in 1962 and Leinsdorf in 1969 played it to take formal leave of their Boston incumbency.

Five of the symphonies were played over the weekend. Yesterday the Fourth was played between the triple concerto and the fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra. Joseph Silverstein was the violinist, Jules Eskin the cellist, and Serkin the pianist for the concerto.

* * *

ESKIN carried the greatest burden and discharged it with conspicuous domination. When three such masters apply themselves to a work, no matter what the content of the score, they cannot fail to overwhelm their audience. But there is more tinsel and decoration in the concerto and in the piano part of the fantasy than meaningful message.

Beethoven made the acquaintance in 1808 of an inventor named Johann Maelzel, who made an ear trumpet which the composer used to mitigate his deafness. He next invented a musical chronometer which became known as a metronome. In 1817, Beethoven settled metronome-marks to his first eight symphonies, written from 1800 to 1814. For instance, the third movement of the First Symphony was given a mark of 108 to the dotted half. Steinberg exceeded that speed limit, as well as that of the final allegro molto, with scofflaw indifference. The 15-minute late start of the program could not have been any consideration.

In fact, if both conductors had not had such virtuoso musicians in their roster all the allegros would have come to grief. It is extremely improbable that the musicians in the orchestra which Beethoven conducted in the first decade of the 19th century could have executed the music at the tempos Steinberg and Ozawa set in their respective programs, especially with the articulation achieved by the Bostonians.

* * *

STEINBERG chose the First and Ninth for his Saturday program. The spark which had illuminated his first program was not so evident the next night, and there was an element of duty rather than a spring of radiance and magnificence in the reading. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, trained by John Oliver, performed with brisk power and wholesome tone. The vocal soloists were Jeannine Crader, soprano; Joanna Simon, contralto; Dean Wilder, tenor; and Robert Hale, bass. Hale declaimed his opening proclamation with heraldic vehemence.

Beethoven was less than considerate of the other three soloists, allotting them but meager assignments after an hour-long wait on stage while the three other movements are being played. Saturday, Wilder's voice was keenly effective. The ladies' voices suffered from adumbration on the one hand and forcing on the other.

* * *

THIS was the first weekend of the season in which the entire Boston orchestra took part, and their response to the dagger-sharp indications of their music director was alert and agile and reflected them at the top of their form. There was authority and penetration immediately apparent in Steinberg's beat, and nothing was tentative or equivocal. One might ask whether the Pastoral's first movement requires such rigid determination. One normally thinks of it as depicting the calm of nature and in its juxtaposition with the monumental Fifth as opposed to the latter's agitation.

Steinberg held a tight rein all evening, but it served him well in the lovely andante "at the brook's edge," where the songs that Beethoven heard in Vienna of the quail, the cuckoo and the nightingale, and, later in the Fifth, of the yellow-hammer, found live competition with the sparrows and starlings in the Tanglewood rafters.

Steinberg, without ostentatious gestures, made the construction of the Beethoven symphonies crystal clear. Once past the first Pastoral movement, where the winds had slight difficulties adjusting to his discipline, there was pure beatific sailing, flexible, graceful, lithe.

* * *

IN THE Fifth, Steinberg conveyed the spirit of a cosmic force, infusing it with energy and spirit and illuminating its endless lustrous details.

The record attendance, nearly 9,539 phenomenal by all previous Friday night standards at Tanglewood, is but a statistic. What attracted an audience in such numbers someone else may be able to explain, but the encouraging presence of so many young people suddenly discloses that while older music lovers may become blasé to the most familiar symphonies of Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky and others, there is always a new generation coming up to whom they are new and unfamiliar. All the lamentations foretelling the exhaustion of the orchestra and its literature are the product of a poll by someone not in touch with reality.

The opening four notes of the Beethoven Fifth Symphony are probably the best known phrase in music. Library shelves are full of exegetical revelations, of their origin, their meaning, or their significance, but one needs but to hear it played as with the majesty Steinberg asked of the Bostonians and all the explanatory notes become redundant. When the third movement, the scherzo, leads without pause into the final movement, Steinberg kept to a strict tempo, thereby missing an expansive exaltation which, it seems to me, is clearly demanded, but this is but a quibble.

These two symphonies, two of the greatest in all music, had their first performances on the same night in December 1808, in which they were a part of a four-hour program of a concert of all of Beethoven's music. Each one has been played at Tanglewood at least a dozen times over the years of the Berkshire festivals.

Berkshire Eagle
July 17, 1972

REFORMER
BRATTLEBORO, VT.
D. 8,000
JUL 19 1972
New England Newsclip

Music At Marlboro:

Disappointments And Highlights

By JOHN YOUNG

MARLBORO — Works of Beethoven and Schubert were offered Saturday evening at the Marlboro Music Festival.

Schubert's well-known "Trout" quintet began the evening with violinist Felix Galimir, violist Kim Kashkashian, 'cellist Yo-Yo Ma, double bassist Jack Kulowitch and pianist Walter Klien. This was frankly the most dissappointing performance that I've ever heard from members of the Marlboro Festival. Odd, too, that the "Trout" quintet, performed on Columbia records by different Marlboro personnel, was perhaps the finest recorded chamber music ever to emerge from the festival.

However, Saturday evening's ensemble presented a terribly glib, loosely conceived, rather sloppy and altogether uninteresting account of Schubert's lengthy quintet. Violinist Galimir's tone too often sounded more like wood against wood rather than bow against string. His tone was throughout far too harsh and his intonation inexcusably faulty. Pianist Walter Klien mumbled through the score, reading the notes, but giving the music about as much life as a piece of driftwood.

Klien's antiseptic, stagnant piano playing is far too polite for my taste, and he often chose unyieldingly strict tempi that restrained any feeling of spontanaiety, tension, or relaxation. It was grossly unimaginative playing characterized by phrasing that went backwards more often than it went forward, a plywood thin tone, and little if any musical variety.

As a whole, the group played as if they had no interest in what they were doing, and the result was general chaos. Only the 'cellist, Yo-Yo Ma, shone through with some life on occasion, although his tone became raspy in the lower register of his instrument.

Pablo Casals conducted Beethovens first symphony, concluding Saturday's program. It was a stunning performance, and though some might think it a too deliberate one, it emerged a musical gem. Casals, the expansionist, the inovator, is above all a lover of music. Casals' interpretation was organic in that it had a natural pulse, and a kind of breathing that had almost human qualities. The Marlboro Orchestra was wonderful, and proved once again that it is unbeatable.

On Sunday, at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., I had the opportunity to hear pianist Peter Serkin, a resident of Guilford, Vermont.

This all-Beethoven program began with a finely detailed performance of the Triple Concerto for violin, 'cello and piano. Violinist Joseph Silverstein and 'cellist Jules Eskin (both principal players in the Boston Symphony Orchestra) were assisted by Mr. Serkin and the Boston Symphony under the baton of Seiji Ozawa.

Though the hot weather made playing conditions somewhat unbearable, particularly for the string players, the trio nevertheless moved along with plenty of spirit and merited the loud applause that it received after the conclusion of the first movement.

A well-crafted, lively and just about perfect account of the fourth symphony followed, preceding the Choral Fantasy, the final work on the afternoon's program.

Peter Serkin was again the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Serkin was fabulous — his playing was brilliant, his tone luscious, and he gave plenty of attention to the tiny internal dramas which together make the Choral Fantasy the great masterpiece it is. He played with unmistakable taste, power, and imagination. Serkin's interpretation, besides being expansive, was grand in outline, thunderous in execution, clear and beautifully phrased.

Altogether, it was a monumental performance. The Berkshire Festival Chorus was spectacular, and the whole thing was approached with a sense of freedom which credits the title of the work.

For information about Tanglewood, write to the Friends of Music at Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Lenox, Mass.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 18 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 19 1972
New England Newsclip

The golden oldies still pack 'em in

By Dunn

"Golden oldies" are all the rage on commercial radio and at Tanglewood right now. On radio it means replaying the songs that were popular 10 to 15 years ago, the rock 'n' roll of Bill Haley and the Comets, the Penguins and Danny and the Juniors. At Tanglewood it means Beethoven.

The radio phenomenon has been attributed to two causes: First, that the 25-to-34-year-old group, riding high on a crest of affluence and suddenly aware that it is approaching "middle age," would like to return, nostalgically at least, to the good old high school times when there were no wars, no riots and nobody protesting anything. Secondly, there are those who maintain that the return to the "old" music is due to nothing more than a lack of creativity among the current composers. This is a calm waiting for a storm.

The Tanglewood phenomenon, culminating in the record-breaking crowd of 41,000 last weekend, is not so simply explained. The weather was nice and hot, William Steinberg is a Beethoven soul brother and the county was loaded with people. It all adds up to a large audience.

But of all these factors, the one constant is always Beethoven. Whenever Tanglewood programs dear Ludwig into a weekend, they are always sure of getting more than their share. Since his golden oldies were written some 150 years ago, it is not a matter of returning to the high school prom or evading war and rumors of wars.

Rather, it would seem that man's nature is never far from the genius of Beethoven's creations, that these works are an integral part of his makeup and that the continual desire to hear this music again and again is as natural as breathing or eating or dreaming.

Critics may chafe at the necessity of making orchestral distinctions each time they attend a Beethoven concert and they may yearn for more challenging fare, but the average listener is more than content to let the music bathe over him in soothing waves, to let the music stir him to zestful attention, to let the music bring him the peace and contentment that go with sensuous satisfaction. A look at any of the audiences at a Beethoven concert, especially as played with the expertise of the Boston Symphony, is proof enough that Beethoven lives.

And next year the audience will undoubtedly be augmented by some graduates of the 25-to-34-year-old group who will discover what golden really means.

JUL 18 1972
New England Newsclip

Overtones

Bos Symphony

By RICHARD CONWAY

Last week end's record crowds at the Berkshire Music Festival inspired one wag to tag it "Tanglewoodstock."

It really was something though. More than 9,000 Friday night, 14,000 Saturday night. And more than 12,000 on Sunday. The name of Beethoven seems to do it. (Evidently little Schroeder, pounding away at his toy piano, knows well beyond his years.)

We arrived in Lenox at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. It took us one hour to finally get into a parking lot. We hadn't hit traffic like that since last year's concert with Leonard Bernstein conducting. You'd have thought the Red Sox were playing Oakland for the championship of the American League. Some private parking areas a quarter of a mile away were charging up to $2.50 a car.

The start of the concert was delayed about 15 minutes. Even so, I had to hear the first movement of the "Triple Concerto" from outside of the Music Shed. And there was a fair - sized delay before the second movement while those with tickets found their seats.

The "Tanglewoodstock" bit is perhaps not all a gag at that. Maybe it's just our imagination, but we seem to be seeing more young people up there this year. And hearing snatches of their conversations as we walked around before the concerts and during intermission, we get the impression that they know what they are listening to and for.

Many of them may well go from Tanglewood to the Lenox Arts Center to listen to Blood, Sweat, and Tears, or to folksinger Pete Seeger, but they have evidently found in it all a total musical experience. That is no small achievement.

While on the subject of the Berkshire Music Festival, it should be noted that the quality and imagination of the programming remains rather unique. Comparing the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts with those of the Philadelphia Orchestra at Saratoga, one is immediately struck by the commercialism of the New York State run Performing Arts Center. For the most part, the music scheduled is not too many cuts above the Sunday - afternoon - at - the - park band concert. There are several exceptions, of course, but one does expect something more from the Philadelphia Orchestra.

And whatever happened to that proposed exchange between the Boston and Philadelphia Orchestras? Ormandy is guest conducting at Tanglewood in two weeks, but no word about the exchange that was to have taken place last summer. It was canceled ostensibly because of Ormandy's ill health. We still think it would be a good idea.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

Whitestone

FAMED FILM ACTOR Edward G. Robinson and his wife, at left, heard the Beethoven program at Tanglewood Friday evening. The couple spent the weekend at the Williams Inn in Williamstown.

Music Review

Beethoven—Boston's box office bonanza

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

CONDUCTOR Seiji Ozawa and pianist Peter Serkin whipped up a furor of ecstatic enthusiasm yesterday afternoon in the concluding work of the third Tanglewood weekend, which was devoted solely to Beethoven.

The three concerts also set an all-time attendance record of 41,337. The first two were conducted by William Steinberg, who used the second evening as his valedictory as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There is a stature to the Ninth Symphony which fits it for great occasions. Koussevitzky used it to inaugurate the Tanglewood Shed, and Munch in 1962 and Leinsdorf in 1969 played it to take formal leave of their Boston incumbency.

Five of the symphonies were played over the weekend. Yesterday the Fourth was played between the triple concerto and the fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra. Joseph Silverstein was the violinist, Jules Eskin the cellist, and Serkin the pianist for the concerto.

* * *

ESKIN carried the greatest burden and discharged it with conspicuous domination. When three such masters apply themselves to a work, no matter what the content of the score, they cannot fail to overwhelm their audience. But there is more tinsel and decoration in the concerto and in the piano part of the fantasy than meaningful message.

Beethoven made the acquaintance in 1808 of an inventor named Johann Maelzel, who made an ear trumpet which the composer used to mitigate his deafness. He next invented a musical chronometer which became known as a metronome. In 1817, Beethoven settled metronome-marks to his first eight symphonies, written from 1800 to 1814. For instance, the third movement of the First Symphony was given a mark of 108 to the dotted half. Steinberg exceeded that speed limit, as well as that of the final allegro molto, with scofflaw indifference. The 15-minute late start of the program could not have been any consideration.

In fact, if both conductors had not had such virtuoso musicians in their roster all the allegros would have come to grief. It is extremely improbable that the musicians in the orchestra which Beethoven conducted in the first decade of the 19th century could have executed the music at the tempos Steinberg and Ozawa set in their respective programs, especially with the articulation achieved by the Bostonians.

* * *

STEINBERG chose the First and Ninth for his Saturday program. The spark which had illuminated his first program was not so evident the next night, and there was an element of duty rather than a spring of radiance and magnificence in the reading. The Tanglewood Festival Chorus, trained by John Oliver, performed with brisk power and wholesome tone. The vocal soloists were Jeannine Crader, soprano; Joanna Simon, contralto; Dean Wilder, tenor; and Robert Hale, bass. Hale declaimed his opening proclamation with heraldic vehemence.

Beethoven was less than considerate of the other three soloists, allotting them but meager assignments after an hour-long wait on stage while the three other movements are being played. Saturday, Wilder's voice was keenly effective. The ladies' voices suffered from adumbration on the one hand and forcing on the other.

* * *

THIS was the first weekend of the season in which the entire Boston orchestra took part, and their response to the dagger-sharp indications of their music director was alert and agile and reflected them at the top of their form. There was authority and penetration immediately apparent in Steinberg's beat, and nothing was tentative or equivocal. One might ask whether the Pastoral's first movement requires such rigid determination. One normally thinks of it as depicting the calm of nature and in its juxtaposition with the monumental Fifth as opposed to the latter's agitation.

Steinberg held a tight rein all evening, but it served him well in the lovely andante "at the brook's edge," where the songs that Beethoven heard in Vienna of the quail, the cuckoo and the nightingale, and, later in the Fifth, of the yellow-hammer, found live competition with the sparrows and starlings in the Tanglewood rafters.

Steinberg, without ostentatious gestures, made the construction of the Beethoven symphonies crystal clear. Once past the first Pastoral movement, where the winds had slight difficulties adjusting to his discipline, there was pure beatific sailing, flexible, graceful, lithe.

* * *

IN THE Fifth, Steinberg conveyed the spirit of a cosmic force, infusing it with energy and spirit and illuminating its endless lustrous details.

The record attendance, nearly 9,539 phenomenal by all previous Friday night standards at Tanglewood, is but a statistic. What attracted an audience in such numbers someone else may be able to explain, but the encouraging presence of so many young people suddenly discloses that while older music lovers may become blasé to the most familiar symphonies of Beethoven, Brahms, Tchaikovsky and others, there is always a new generation coming up to whom they are new and unfamiliar. All the lamentations foretelling the exhaustion of the orchestra and its literature are the product of a poll by someone not in touch with reality.

The opening four notes of the Beethoven Fifth Symphony are probably the best known phrase in music. Library shelves are full of exegetical revelations, of their origin, their meaning, or their significance, but one needs but to hear it played as with the majesty Steinberg asked of the Bostonians and all the explanatory notes become redundant. When the third movement, the scherzo, leads without pause into the final movement, Steinberg kept to a strict tempo, thereby missing an expansive exaltation which, it seems to me, is clearly demanded, but this is but a quibble.

These two symphonies, two of the greatest in all music, had their first performances on the same night in December 1808, in which they were a part of a four-hour program of a concert of all of Beethoven's music. Each one has been played at Tanglewood at least a dozen times over the years of the Berkshire festivals.

Berkshire Eagle
July 17, 1972

REFORMER
BRATTLEBORO, VT.
D. 8,000

JUL 19 1972 New England Newsclip

Music At Marlboro:

Disappointments And Highlights

By JOHN YOUNG

MARLBORO — Works of Beethoven and Schubert were offered Saturday evening at the Marlboro Music Festival.

Schubert's well-known "Trout" quintet began the evening with violinist Felix Galimir, violist Kim Kashkashian, 'cellist Yo-Yo Ma, double bassist Jack Kulowitch and pianist Walter Klien. This was frankly the most dissappointing performance that I've ever heard from members of the Marlboro Festival. Odd, too, that the "Trout" quintet, performed on Columbia records by different Marlboro personnel, was perhaps the finest recorded chamber music ever to emerge from the festival.

However, Saturday evening's ensemble presented a terribly glib, loosely conceived, rather sloppy and altogether uninteresting account of Schubert's lengthy quintet. Violinist Galimir's tone too often sounded more like wood against wood rather than bow against string. His tone was throughout far too harsh and his intonation inexcusably faulty. Pianist Walter Klien mumbled through the score, reading the notes, but giving the music about as much life as a piece of driftwood.

Klien's antiseptic, stagnant piano playing is far too polite for my taste, and he often chose unyieldingly strict tempi that restrained any feeling of spontanaiety, tension, or relaxation. It was grossly unimaginative playing characterized by phrasing that went backwards more often than it went forward, a plywood thin tone, and little if any musical variety.

As a whole, the group played as if they had no interest in what they were doing, and the result was general chaos. Only the 'cellist, Yo-Yo Ma, shone through with some life on occasion, although his tone became raspy in the lower register of his instrument.

Pablo Casals conducted Beethovens first symphony, concluding Saturday's program. It was a stunning performance, and though some might think it a too deliberate one, it emerged a musical gem. Casals, the expansionist, the inovator, is above all a lover of music. Casals' interpretation was organic in that it had a natural pulse, and a kind of breathing that had almost human qualities. The Marlboro Orchestra was wonderful, and proved once again that it is unbeatable.

On Sunday, at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., I had the opportunity to hear pianist Peter Serkin, a resident of Guilford, Vermont.

This all-Beethoven program began with a finely detailed performance of the Triple Concerto for violin, 'cello and piano. Violinist Joseph Silverstein and 'cellist Jules Eskin (both principal players in the Boston Symphony Orchestra) were assisted by Mr. Serkin and the Boston Symphony under the baton of Seiji Ozawa.

Though the hot weather made playing conditions somewhat unbearable, particularly for the string players, the trio nevertheless moved along with plenty of spirit and merited the loud applause that it received after the conclusion of the first movement.

A well-crafted, lively and just about perfect account of the fourth symphony followed, preceding the Choral Fantasy, the final work on the afternoon's program.

Peter Serkin was again the soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Serkin was fabulous — his playing was brilliant, his tone luscious, and he gave plenty of attention to the tiny internal dramas which together make the Choral Fantasy the great masterpiece it is. He played with unmistakable taste, power, and imagination. Serkin's interpretation, besides being expansive, was grand in outline, thunderous in execution, clear and beautifully phrased.

Altogether, it was a monumental performance. The Berkshire Festival Chorus was spectacular, and the whole thing was approached with a sense of freedom which credits the title of the work.

For information about Tanglewood, write to the Friends of Music at Tanglewood, Berkshire Music Festival, Lenox, Mass.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 18 1972 New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 19 1972 New England Newsclip

The golden oldies still pack 'em in

By Dixon

"Golden oldies" are all the rage on commercial radio and at Tanglewood right now. On radio it means replaying the songs that were popular 10 to 15 years ago, the rock 'n' roll of Bill Haley and the Comets, the Penguins and Danny and the Juniors. At Tanglewood it means Beethoven.

The radio phenomenon has been attributed to two causes: First, that the 25-to-34-year-old group, riding high on a crest of affluence and suddenly aware that it is approaching "middle age," would like to return, nostalgically at least, to the good old high school times when there were no wars, no riots and nobody protesting anything. Secondly, there are those who maintain that the return to the "old" music is due to nothing more than a lack of creativity among the current composers. This is a calm waiting for a storm.

The Tanglewood phenomenon, culminating in the record-breaking crowd of 41,000 last weekend, is not so simply explained. The weather was nice and hot, William Steinberg is a Beethoven soul brother and the county was loaded with people. It all adds up to a large audience.

But of all these factors, the one constant is always Beethoven. Whenever Tanglewood programs dear Ludwig into a weekend, they are always sure of getting more than their share. Since his golden oldies were written some 150 years ago, it is not a matter of returning to the high school prom or evading war and rumors of wars.

Rather, it would seem that man's nature is never far from the genius of Beethoven's creations, that these works are an integral part of his makeup and that the continual desire to hear this music again and again is as natural as breathing or eating or dreaming.

Critics may chafe at the necessity of making orchestral distinctions each time they attend a Beethoven concert and they may yearn for more challenging fare, but the average listener is more than content to let the music bathe over him in soothing waves, to let the music stir him to zestful attention, to let the music bring him the peace and contentment that go with sensuous satisfaction. A look at any of the audiences at a Beethoven concert, especially as played with the expertise of the Boston Symphony, is proof enough that Beethoven lives.

And next year the audience will undoubtedly be augmented by some graduates of the 25-to-34-year-old group who will discover what golden really means.

JUL 18 1972 New England Newsclip

Overtones

By RICHARD CONWAY

Last week end's record crowds at the Berkshire Music Festival inspired one wag to tag it "Tanglewoodstock."

It really was something though. More than 9,000 Friday night, 14,000 Saturday night. And more than 12,000 on Sunday. The name of Beethoven seems to do it. (Evidently little Schroeder, pounding away at his toy piano, knows well beyond his years.)

We arrived in Lenox at 1:30 Sunday afternoon. It took us one hour to finally get into a parking lot. We hadn't hit traffic like that since last year's concert with Leonard Bernstein conducting. You'd have thought the Red Sox were playing Oakland for the championship of the American League. Some private parking areas a quarter of a mile away were charging up to $2.50 a car.

The start of the concert was delayed about 15 minutes. Even so, I had to hear the first movement of the "Triple Concerto" from outside of the Music Shed. Andf tnere was a fair - sized delay before the second movement while those with tickets found their seats.

The "Tanglewoodstock" bit is perhaps not all a gag at that. Maybe it's just our imagination, but we seem to be seeing more young people up there this year. And hearing snatches of their conversations as we walked around before the concerts and during intermission, we get the impression that they know what they are listening to and for.

Many of them may well go from Tanglewood to the Lenox Arts Center to listen to Blood, Sweat, and Tears, or to folksinger Pete Seeger, but they have evidently found in it all a total musical experience. That is no small achievement.

While on the subject of the Berkshire Music Festival, it should be noted that the quality and imagination of the programming remains rather unique. Comparing the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts with those of the Philadelphia Orchestra at Saratoga, one is immediately struck by the commercialism of the New York State run Performing Arts Center. For the most part, the music scheduled is not too many cuts above the Sunday - afternoon - at - the - park band concert. There are several exceptions, of course, but one does expect something more from the Philadelphia Orchestra.

And whatever happened to that proposed exchange between the Boston and Philadelphia Orchestras? Ormandy is guest conducting at Tanglewood in two weeks, but no word about the exchange that was to have taken place last summer. It was canceled ostensibly because of Ormandy's ill health. We still think it would be a good idea.

Herald American
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
S. 251,094
JUL 16 1972

BERKSHIRE STARS. Leonard Bernstein, left, and pianist Earl Wild are the stellar artists on tap Friday and Saturday at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Wild will solo with the Boston Symphony for Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Winds at the Friday, 9 p.m. program conducted by Bruno Moderna. Bernstein will be on the podium with the Boston Symphony for the Saturday 8:30 p.m. concert of Brahms' Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 21 1972

Weekend's Tanglewood Program Set

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens at 9 p.m. today in the Tanglewood Music Shed, with Bruno Maderna conducting.

The program will open with Gabrieli's La Battaglia, as arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra, with Earl Wild the piano soloist.

The weekend prelude will precede the main concert, beginning at 7 p.m., with Wild playing an all Chopin recital. The weekend prelude concerts are free to those attending the 9 p.m. concert.

Tanglewood adviser, Leonard Bernstein, conducts an all-Brahms concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m., in a program which includes Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl will lead the Boston Symphony with Alicia DeLarrocha the piano soloist. The program will include Gluck's Overture to Iphigenie en Aulide, Vejvanovsky's Sonata A 7 and Sonata A 10. Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 will also be on the program.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225
JUL 14 1972
New England Newsclip

NEXT WEEK—Leonard Bernstein will appear with Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday, July 22. He will conduct an all Brahms program, beginning at 8.30 p.m. Mr. Bernstein is currently Advisor to Tanglewood and has been associated with the Boston Symphony for many years.

Leonard Bernstein

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 21 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

EARL WILD piano

FRÉDÉRIC CHOPIN 1810-1849

Nocturne in C minor op. 48 no. 1

Ballade in G minor op. 23

Ballade in F minor op. 52

Berceuse in D flat op. 57

Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25

Polonaise in A flat op. 53

Earl Wild plays the Baldwin piano

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON AND RCA RECORDS

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 21 1972

Weekend's Tanglewood Concerts Set

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens at 9 p.m. today in the Tanglewood Music Shed, with Bruno Maderna conducting.

The program will open with Gabrieli's La Battaglia, as arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra, with Earl Wild the piano soloist.

The weekend prelude will precede the main concert, beginning at 7 p.m., with Wild playing an all-Chopin recital. The weekend prelude concerts are free to those attending the 9 p.m. concert.

Tanglewood adviser, Leonard Bernstein, conducts an all-Brahms concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m., in a program which includes Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl will lead the Boston Symphony with Alicia DeLarrocha the piano soloist. The program will include Gluck's Overture to Iphigenie en Aulide, Vejvanovsky's Sonata A 7 and Sonata A 10. Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 will also be on the program.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656
JUL 20 1972

MAESTRO. Karel Ancerl, music director of the Toronto Symphony, conducts the Boston Symphony in works by Gluck, Vejanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE COURIER-NEWS
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
D. 53,566
JUL 15 1972

ALL-CHOPIN piano recital will open the weekend activities at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Pianist Earl Wild will perform in the weekend prelude concert Friday at 7 p.m., followed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Festival Concerts at 9 p.m. Works by Gabrieli, Stravinsky and Brahms will be played. The Boston Symphony will rehearse Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. in "open rehearsal," in preparation for its all-Brahms concert that evening at 8:30 p.m. conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 16 1972
New England Newsclip

LEONARD BERNSTEIN conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all Brahms program Saturday at 8:30.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 20 1972
New Englar Newsc

Bernstein to conduct at Saturday rehearsal

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, according to an announcement today. The rehearsal, which begins at 10:30 a.m., will probably consist of Mr. Bernstein's program for Saturday night, Brahms' 2nd and 4th symphonies.

JEWISH ADVOCATE
BOSTON, MASS.
24,500
JUL 13 1972
New Englanc Newscli

Maderna and Bernstein at Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7 and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22, at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are on sale the morning of the Open Rehearsal. Proceeds benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22, at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23, at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000
JUL 20 1972
New Englar Newsc

Berkshire Weekend Program

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2

Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Cluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

Herald American
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
S. 251,094
JUL 16 1972

BERKSHIRE STARS. Leonard Bernstein, left, and pianist Earl Wild are the stellar artists on tap Friday and Saturday at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Wild will solo with the Boston Symphony for Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Winds at the Friday, 9 p.m. program conducted by Bruno Moderna. Bernstein will be on the podium with the Boston Symphony for the Saturday 8:30 p.m. concert of Brahms' Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 21 1972

Weekend's Tanglewood Program Set

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens at 9 p.m. today in the Tanglewood Music Shed, with Bruno Maderna conducting.

The program will open with Gabrieli's La Battaglia, as arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra, with Earl Wild the piano soloist.

The weekend prelude will precede the main concert, beginning at 7 p.m., with Wild playing an all Chopin recital. The weekend prelude concerts are free to those attending the 9 p.m. concert.

Tanglewood adviser, Leonard Bernstein, conducts an all-Brahms concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m., in a program which includes Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl will lead the Boston Symphony with Alicia DeLarrocha the piano soloist. The program will include Gluck's Overture to Iphigenie en Aulide, Vejvanovsky's Sonata A 7 and Sonata A 10. Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 will also be on the program.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225
JUL 14 1972
New England Newsclip

NEXT WEEK—Leonard Bernstein will appear with Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday, July 22. He will conduct an all Brahms program, beginning at 8.30 p.m. Mr. Bernstein is currently Advisor to Tanglewood and has been associated with the Boston Symphony for many years.

Leonard Bernstein

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 21 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

EARL WILD piano

FRÉDÉRIC CHOPIN 1810-1849

Nocturne in C minor op. 48 no. 1

Ballade in G minor op. 23

Ballade in F minor op. 52

Berceuse in D flat op. 57

Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25

Polonaise in A flat op. 53

Earl Wild plays the Baldwin piano

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS E
FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON AND RCA REC

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 21 1972

Weekend's Tanglewood Concerts Set

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens at 9 p.m. today in the Tanglewood Music Shed, with Bruno Maderna conducting.

The program will open with Gabrieli's La Battaglia, as arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra, with Earl Wild the piano soloist.

The weekend prelude will precede the main concert, beginning at 7 p.m., with Wild playing an all-Chopin recital. The weekend prelude concerts are free to those attending the 9 p.m. concert.

Tanglewood adviser, Leonard Bernstein, conducts an all-Brahms concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m., in a program which includes Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

On Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl will lead the Boston Symphony with Alicia DeLarrocha the piano soloist. The program will include Gluck's Overture to Iphigenie en Aulide, Vejvanovsky's Sonata A 7 and Sonata A 10. Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 will also be on the program.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656
JUL 20 1972

MAESTRO. Karel Ancerl, music director of the Toronto Symphony, conducts the Boston Symphony in works by Gluck, Vejanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE COURIER-NEWS
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
D. 53,566
JUL 15 1972

ALL-CHOPIN piano recital will open the weekend activities at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Pianist Earl Wild will perform in the weekend prelude concert Friday at 7 p.m., followed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Festival Concerts at 9 p.m. Works by Gabrieli, Stravinsky and Brahms will be played. The Boston Symphony will rehearse Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. in "open rehearsal," in preparation for its all-Brahms concert that evening at 8:30 p.m. conducted by Leonard Bernstein.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 16 1972
New England Newsclip

LEONARD BERNSTEIN conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all Brahms program Saturday at 8:30.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 20 1972
New Englar
Newsc

Bernstein to conduct at Saturday rehearsal

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, according to an announcement today. The rehearsal, which begins at 10:30 a.m., will probably consist of Mr. Bernstein's program for Saturday night, Brahms' 2nd and 4th symphonies.

JEWISH ADVOCATE
BOSTON, MASS.
24,500
JUL 13 1972
New Englanc
Newscli

Maderna and Bernstein at Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7 and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22, at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are on sale the morning of the Open Rehearsal. Proceeds benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22, at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23, at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000
JUL 20 1972
New Englar
Newsc

Berkshire Weekend Program

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2

Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

BEE
NEWTOWN, CONN.
W. 12,559

JUL 14 1972

New England Newsclip

At Tanglewood

Leonard Bernstein will appear with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Saturday, July 22, conducting an all-Brahms program beginning at 8:30 pm and featuring Symphonies No. 4 and No. 2. Mr Bernstein is advisor to Tanglewood and has been associated with the Boston Symphony for many years having once been a student at Tanglewood for two summers. During his career, Mr Bernstein has appeared with many of the world's leading orchestras including those of Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles, London, Prague, Vienna, Milan and Israel. Mr Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra most recently last summer when he directed a performance at Tanglewood of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." Other artists to perform during July are Jennie Crader, Alicia De Larricha, Earl Wild, Karel Ancerl, and Conductor William Steinberg.

Leonard Bernstein

Karl Ancerl

Tanglewood

Bernstein to conduct Brahms concert

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open at 9 p.m. July 21 in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert will open with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La Battaglia, arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra with piano soloist Wild. Following intermission, Maderna will conduct the orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, on July 21 will present Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in C Minor, Opus 48 No. 1; the Ballade in G Minor, Opus 23; the Ballade in F Minor, Opus 52; the Berceuse in D-Flat, Opus 57; six studies from Opus 10 and Opus 25; and the Polonaise in A-Flat, Opus 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held at 7 each Friday evening and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the Boston Symphony at 10:30 a.m. July 22. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the Festival ticket office, and proceeds from the sale benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert at 8:30 p.m., July 22. The concert includes the Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

Karl Ancerl will conduct the Boston Symphony at 2:30 p.m. July 23 with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Alicia DeLarrocha

Bernstein, others to lead BSO this weekend

Tomorrow, (Friday) the fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens ~~at 9 p.m. in the~~ Tanglewood Music Shed. Conducting will be Bruno Maderna, with Earl Wild as piano Solist.

Opening the program will be A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra. Piano soloist will Mr. Wild. After intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

Weekend prelude at 7 p.m. on Friday presents Mr. Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. Included will be Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no.1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. These preludes are presented each Friday and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning at 10:30 in an Open Rehearsal. These are presented each Saturday morning during the season, and tickets are on sale the morning of the rehearsal at the box office. Proceeds benefit the orchestra pension fund.

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Brahms concert on Saturday evening at 8:30. Included will be Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2. Mr. Ancerl conducts Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program consists of Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in A minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 15 1972

New England Newsclip

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 13 1972

Bernstein to Take a Year Off to Devote 'Undivided Attention to Writing Music'

NEW YORK (UPI)—Leonard Bernstein, the protean and peripatetic composer-conductor, announced Tuesday he will take a year off from public performance to devote his "undivided attention to writing music."

Bernstein gave up his post as music director of the New York Philharmonic in 1970 to devote more time to composition and produced the "Mass," which opened the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington last December and currently is being performed at the Metropolitan Opera House here.

But, he said, because "even occasional performances with fine orchestras and opera companies have taken more time than I had expected" he has decided to give no performances from September, 1973, through July, 1974.

Bernstein said he had canceled plans to conduct "Tristan and Isolde" at the Vienna State Opera, and "La Boheme" at the Royal Opera House in London and concerts of the New York Philharmonic in 1974.

"I hope to create new pieces for the theater and then to perform again in London and Vienna soon after this sabbatical," Bernstein said.

Before beginning his leave, he will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood July 22, Bizet's "Carmen" opening the Metropolitan Opera season Sept. 19 and five weeks of philharmonic concerts next February and March and keep some longstanding concert dates not yet announced.

Bernstein, announcing his decision in New York City, said during the period September, 1973 through July, 1974 he will devote "undivided attention to writing music." Before departing he will perform at Tanglewood July 22, the opening of the Metropolitan Opera season in September and five weeks of philharmonic concerts next February.

Leonard Bernstein

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUL 12 1972

New England Newsclip

Leonard Bernstein announced he has been granted leaves of absence from the Vienna State Opera, the Royal Opera House and the New York Philharmonic to devote more time to composing and writing. Before beginning his sabbatical, Bernstein plans to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood July 22.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 16 1972

New England Newsclip

Brahm s Symphony Featured

LENOX — The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La Battaglia, arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild.

Following intermission, Maderna conducts the orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital.

KARL ANCERL

EARL WILD

The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53.

Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7 and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season.

Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the Open Rehearsal at the Festival Ticket Office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 13 1972

Sabbatical

Conductor Leonard Bernstein, who composed the "Mass" for the opening of the Kennedy Center of the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., plans a year sabbatical with no public performances.

Maderna, Berstein Ancerl Will Conduct

The fourth week end of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday, July ~~21 at 9 p.m.~~ in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The week-end prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday at 7 p.m. and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 20 1972

New England Newsclip

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y.
PRESS-REPUBLICAN
D. 15,000

JUL 14 1972

Leave is granted to Bernstein

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Bernstein has announced that he hs been granted leave of absence from the Vienna State Opera, the Royal Opera House and the New York Philharmonic to devote more time to composing and writing.

Bernstein said he was grateful that the New York Philharmonic "understood and sympathized with my desire to give my undivided attention to writing music for a longer period than has been possible recently."

He said he hoped to conduct again in London and Vienna after his sabbatical.

Before beginning his sabbatical, Bernstein plans to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on July 22 and Bizet's "Carmen," which opens the Metropolitan Opera season on Sept. 19.

88

BEE
NEWTOWN, CONN.
W. 12,559

JUL 14 1972

New England Newsclip

At Tanglewood

Leonard Bernstein will appear with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Saturday, July 22, conducting an all-Brahms program beginning at 8:30 pm and featuring Symphonies No. 4 and No. 2. Mr Bernstein is advisor to Tanglewood and has been associated with the Boston Symphony for many years having once been a student at Tanglewood for two summers. During his career, Mr Bernstein has appeared with many of the world's leading orchestras including those of Philadelphia, Chicago, Los Angeles, London, Prague, Vienna, Milan and Israel. Mr Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra most recently last summer when he directed a performance at Tanglewood of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis." Other artists to perform during July are Jennie Crader, Alicia De Larricha, Earl Wild, Karel Ancerl, and Conductor William Steinberg.

Leonard Bernstein

Karl Ancerl

Tanglewood

Bernstein to conduct Brahms concert

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open at 9 p.m. July 21 in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert will open with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La Battaglia, arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra with piano soloist Wild. Following intermission, Maderna will conduct the orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, on July 21 will present Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in C Minor, Opus 48 No. 1; the Ballade in G Minor, Opus 23; the Ballade in F Minor, Opus 52; the Berceuse in D-Flat, Opus 57; six studies from Opus 10 and Opus 25; and the Polonaise in A-Flat, Opus 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held at 7 each Friday evening and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the Boston Symphony at 10:30 a.m. July 22. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the Festival ticket office, and proceeds from the sale benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert at 8:30 p.m., July 22. The concert includes the Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

Karl Ancerl will conduct the Boston Symphony at 2:30 p.m. July 23 with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Alicia DeLarrocha

Bernstein, others to lead BSO this weekend

Tomorrow, (Friday) the fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens ~~at 9 p.m. in the~~ Tanglewood Music Shed. Conducting will be Bruno Maderna, with Earl Wild as piano Solist.

Opening the program will be A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra. Piano soloist will Mr. Wild. After intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

Weekend prelude at 7 p.m. on Friday presents Mr. Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. Included will be Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no.1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. These preludes are presented each Friday and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning at 10:30 in an Open Rehearsal. These are presented each Saturday morning during the season, and tickets are on sale the morning of the rehearsal at the box office. Proceeds benefit the orchestra pension fund.

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Brahms concert on Saturday evening at 8:30. Included will be Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2. Mr. Ancerl conducts Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program consists of Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in A minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 15 1972

New England Newsclip

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,034

JUL 13 1972

Bernstein to Take a Year Off to Devote 'Undivided Attention to Writing Music'

NEW YORK (UPI)—Leonard Bernstein, the protean and peripatetic composer-conductor, announced Tuesday he will take a year off from public performance to devote his "undivided attention to writing music."

Bernstein gave up his post as music director of the New York Philharmonic in 1970 to devote more time to composition and produced the "Mass," which opened the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington last December and currently is being performed at the Metropolitan Opera House here.

But, he said, because "even occasional performances with fine orchestras and opera companies have taken more time than I had expected" he has decided to give no performances from September, 1973, through July, 1974.

Bernstein said he had canceled plans to conduct "Tristan and Isolde" at the Vienna State Opera, and "La Boheme" at the Royal Opera House in London and concerts of the New York Philharmonic in 1974.

"I hope to create new pieces for the theater and then to perform again in London and Vienna soon after this sabbatical," Bernstein said.

Before beginning his leave, he will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood July 22, Bizet's "Carmen" opening the Metropolitan Opera season Sept. 19 and five weeks of philharmonic concerts next February and March and keep some longstanding concert dates not yet announced.

Bernstein, announcing his decision in New York City, said during the period September, 1973 through July, 1974 he will devote "undivided attention to writing music." Before departing he will perform at Tanglewood July 22, the opening of the Metropolitan Opera season in September and five weeks of philharmonic concerts next February.

Leonard Bernstein

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 556,377

JUL 12 1972

New England Newsclip

Leonard Bernstein announced he has been granted leaves of absence from the Vienna State Opera, the Royal Opera House and the New York Philharmonic to devote more time to composing and writing. Before beginning his sabbatical, Bernstein plans to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood July 22.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 16 1972

New England Newsclip

Brahm s Symphony Featured

LENOX — The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony orchestra and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La Battaglia, arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild.

Following intermission, Maderna conducts the orchestra in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

KARL ANCERL

EARL WILD

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital.

The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53.

Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7 and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season.

Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the Open Rehearsal at the Festival Ticket Office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 13 1972

Sabbatical

Conductor Leonard Bernstein, who composed the "Mass" for the opening of the Kennedy Center of the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C., plans a year sabbatical with no public performances.

Maderna, Berstein Ancerl Will Conduct

The fourth week end of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday, July ~~21 at 9 p.m.~~ in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The week-end prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday at 7 p.m. and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 20 1972

New England Newsclip

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y.
PRESS-REPUBLICAN
D. 15,000

JUL 14 1972

Leave is granted to Bernstein

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Bernstein has announced that he hs been granted leave of absence from the Vienna State Opera, the Royal Opera House and the New York Philharmonic to devote more time to composing and writing.

Bernstein said he was grateful that the New York Philharmonic "understood and sympathized with my desire to give my undivided attention to writing music for a longer period than has been possible recently."

He said he hoped to conduct again in London and Vienna after his sabbatical.

Before beginning his sabbatical, Bernstein plans to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on July 22 and Bizet's "Carmen," which opens the Metropolitan Opera season on Sept. 19.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Classical Music — Maderna Opens Tanglewood's Fourth Weekend

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 15 1972 New England Newsclip

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9:00 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in C minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in G minor, op. 23; the Ballade in F minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in A minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

Bernstein takes sabbatical to concentrate on composing

Leonard Bernstein will take nearly a year off from public performing to give his undivided attention to writing music.

(Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in Brahams Symphony No. 1 and 2 next Saturday evening at Tanglewood.)

The composer and conductor, whose Mass is now at the Metropolitan Opera House, said recently that he had canceled engagements with the New York Philharmonic, the Vienna State Opera and London's Royal Opera House at Covent Garden during the period from September, 1973, through July, 1974.

"My intention in relinquishing the music directorship of the New York Philharmonic (in 1969) was to give more time to composition." Mr. Bernstein said in a statement announcing his plans.

"But even occasional performances with fine orchestras and opera companies have taken more time than I had expected. I hope to create new pieces for the theater and then to perform again in London and Vienna soon after this sabbatical."

Mr. Bernstein had been scheduled to conduct five weeks of the Philharmonic season in 1974.

In the year before his sabbatical begins Mr. Bernstein has a full schedule. He will conduct the Metropolitan Opera's new "Carmen" production, which will open the season on Sept. 19, and the Philharmonic for five weeks in February and March, 1973. In addition, he will be Charles Eliot Norton professor of poetry at Harvard during the coming academic year.

Mr. Bernstein and Jerome Robbins have been at work on a musical version of "The Dybbuk" for the last eight months, according to Harry J. Kraut, of Amberson Productions, the composer-conductor's company. Rumors of a Bernstein-Robbins version of "The Dybbuk" have circulated for many years, Mr. Kraut said yesterday. "Mr. Bernstein is writing on it now," he said.

© 1972 New York Times News Service

Stars To Shine At Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9:00 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

REVIEW
DARIEN, CONN.
W. 4,162

JUL 13 1972 New England Newsclip

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUL 20 1972 New England Newscli

4th Weekend At Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening July 21 at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital.

Tanglewood Advisor Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

Fourth weekend

KITE • July 20, 1972

Tanglewood schedule announced

LENOX

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open Friday evening, July 21, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert will open with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m., will present pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7 and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10.30 a.m. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the Festival ticket office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22, at 8.30 p.m. The concert will include the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2.30 p.m., Karl Ancerl will conduct the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

IN CONCERT

Tanglewood—Lenox, Mass.; fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts (July 21-23): tonight at 9, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony and pianist Earl Wild, concert opens with A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra, then by Brahms's Symphony No. 1; weekend prelude, tonight at 7, presents Wild in an all-Chopin recital, which includes the Nocturne in C minor, opus 48, No. 1; the Ballade in G minor, opus 23; the Ballade in F minor, opus 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, opus 57; six studies from opus 10 and opus 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, opus 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to those who hold tickets for the 9 p.m. concerts. Karl Ancerl rehearses the B.S.O., at 10:30 a.m., July 22; tickets $2.50. Leonard Bernstein conducts the B.S.O. in an all-Brahms Concert, at 8:30 p.m., July 22; the concert includes Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2. On July 23, at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the B.S.O., with pianist Alicia De Larrocha. Program consists of Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285

JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

All Brahms at Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens tomorrow at 9 p.m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass.

Bruno Maderna will conduct the orchestra in Gabrieli's "La Battaglia," Stavinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

At 7 p.m. Friday, the weekend prelude will present pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin recital.

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the Symphony Saturday morning at 10:30.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Brahms concert, which will include symphonies 4 and 2.

Karl Ancerl will conduct the orchestra Sunday afternoon which will include works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUL 15 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Maderna, Bernstein To Conduct

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens tomorrow evening, Friday, July 21, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53.

Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket holders of the concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUL 21 1972 E

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 19 1972

Maderna, Bernstein To Conduct

The fourth of this summer's weekends — July 21 through 23 — at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes Bruno Maderna, Leonard Bernstein and Karl Ancerl conducting the Boston Symphony and a piano recital of works by Chopin played by Earl Wild.

* * *

The weekend prelude, at 7 p.m. July 21, features Wild playing Chopin compositions including the C minor Nocturne; the G. minor Ballad and the F Minor ballad; the Berceuse in D flat; six studies from opus 10 and 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat.

The weekend prelude, at 7 to ticketholders of the 9 p.m. concert, which will feature Bruno Maderna conducting Gabrieli's "La Battaglia," Stravinsky's "Concerto for piano and wind orchestra" and Brahms' "Symphony no. 1."

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the symphony in an open rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. July 22 (works to be practiced are unspecified), while Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the symphony at 8:30 that night in an all-Brahms concert including symphonies no. 2 and 4.

* * *

The weekend ends at 2:30 p.m. July 23 with Karl Ancerl conducting Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's "Sonata a 7" and "Sonata a 10," Schumann's "Piano concerto in A minor' and Dvorak's "Symphony no. 8.".

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Earl Wild, piano music of Chopin; 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Bruno Maderna conducting a Stravinsky and Brahms program; Saturday at 10:30 a.m., Open Rehearsal; 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein conducting an all Brahms program; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Karel Ancerl conducting a Gluck Vejvanovsky, Schumann, Dvorak program. August 1, Arthur Fielder's Boston Pops program.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 19 1972

TIMES
BEVERLY, MASS.
D. 9,514

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

Bernstein and Maderna to conduct at Tanglewood

LENOX — The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9:00 p.m. in Tanglewood's music shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all - Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D - flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A - flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9.00 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the Festival Ticket Office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all - Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

July 21

7:00 p.m. in the shed

Weekend Prelude - Earl Wild, pianist in an all-Chopin Recital.

Nocturne in C minor, op. 48, no. 1.

Ballade in G minor, op. 23.

Ballade in F minor, op. 52.

Berceuse in D - flat, op. 57.

Six studies from op. 10, and op. 25.

Polonaise in A - flat, op. 53.

9:00 p.m. in the shed

Bruno Maderna, conductor.

Earl Wild, pianist.

A. Gabrieli-Maderna: 'La battaglia'

Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and wind orchestra

Brahms: Symphony no. 1

July 22

10:30 a.m. in the shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra open rehearsal.

8:30 p.m. in the shed.

Leonard Bernstein, conductor in an all-Brahms concert.

Symphony no. 4. Symphony no. 2.

July 23

2:30 p.m. in the shed. Karl Ancerl, conductor. Alicia De Larrocha, pianist.

Gluck: Overture to Iphigenie en Aulide

Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7

Sonata a 10

Schumann: Piano concerto in A minor

Dvorak: Symphony no. 8

Earl Wild, concert pianist, will appear at Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday, July 21, at 7 p.m. for the Weekend Prelude and again at 9 p.m. in Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and winds. — Photo from Tanglewood

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

Monsters, Miscreants, and Machinators: The Art of American Politics is the title of one of the new shows now on exhibit at Fenimore House, the art museum of the New York State Historical Association in Cooperstown, N.Y.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Classical Music — Maderna Opens Tanglewood's Fourth Weekend

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 15 1972 New England Newsclip

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9:00 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in C minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in G minor, op. 23; the Ballade in F minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in A minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

Bernstein takes sabbatical to concentrate on composing

Leonard Bernstein will take nearly a year off from public performing to give his undivided attention to writing music.

(Mr. Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in Brahams Symphony No. 1 and 2 next Saturday evening at Tanglewood.)

The composer and conductor, whose Mass is now at the Metropolitan Opera House, said recently that he had canceled engagements with the New York Philharmonic, the Vienna State Opera and London's Royal Opera House at Covent Garden during the period from September, 1973, through July, 1974.

"My intention in relinquishing the music directorship of the New York Philharmonic (in 1969) was to give more time to composition." Mr. Bernstein said in a statement announcing his plans.

"But even occasional performances with fine orchestras and opera companies have taken more time than I had expected. I hope to create new pieces for the theater and then to perform again in London and Vienna soon after this sabbatical."

Mr. Bernstein had been scheduled to conduct five weeks of the Philharmonic season in 1974.

In the year before his sabbatical begins Mr. Bernstein has a full schedule. He will conduct the Metropolitan Opera's new "Carmen" production, which will open the season on Sept. 19, and the Philharmonic for five weeks in February and March, 1973. In addition, he will be Charles Eliot Norton professor of poetry at Harvard during the coming academic year.

Mr. Bernstein and Jerome Robbins have been at work on a musical version of "The Dybbuk" for the last eight months, according to Harry J. Kraut, of Amberson Productions, the composer-conductor's company. Rumors of a Bernstein-Robbins version of "The Dybbuk" have circulated for many years, Mr. Kraut said yesterday. "Mr. Bernstein is writing on it now," he said.

© 1972 New York Times News Service

Stars To Shine At Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9:00 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9:00 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The Open Rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUL 20 1972 New England Newscli

4th Weekend At Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening July 21 at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital.

Tanglewood Advisor Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanowsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

REVIEW
DARIEN, CONN.
W. 4,162

JUL 13 1972 New England Newsclip

Fourth weekend

KITE • July 20, 1972

Tanglewood schedule announced

LENOX

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open Friday evening, July 21, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert will open with a performance of A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m., will present pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7 and are free to ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10.30 a.m. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the Festival ticket office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22, at 8.30 p.m. The concert will include the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2.30 p.m., Karl Ancerl will conduct the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

IN CONCERT

Tanglewood—Lenox, Mass.; fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts (July 21-23): tonight at 9, Bruno Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony and pianist Earl Wild; concert opens with A. Gabrieli's "La battaglia," arranged by Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra, then by Brahms's Symphony No. 1; weekend prelude, tonight at 7, presents Wild in an all-Chopin recital, which includes the Nocturne in C minor, opus 48, No. 1; the Ballade in G minor, opus 23; the Ballade in F minor, opus 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, opus 57; six studies from opus 10 and opus 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, opus 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to those who hold tickets for the 9 p.m. concerts. Karl Ancerl rehearses the B.S.O., at 10:30 a.m., July 22; tickets $2.50. Leonard Bernstein conducts the B.S.O. in an all-Brahms Concert, at 8:30 p.m., July 22; the concert includes Symphony No. 4 and Symphony No. 2. On July 23, at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the B.S.O., with pianist Alicia De Larrocha. Program consists of Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285

JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

All Brahms at Tanglewood

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens tomorrow at 9 p.m. in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass.

Bruno Maderna will conduct the orchestra in Gabrieli's "La Battaglia," Stavinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra and Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

At 7 p.m. Friday, the weekend prelude will present pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin recital.

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the Symphony Saturday morning at 10:30.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein will conduct an all-Brahms concert, which will include symphonies 4 and 2.

Karl Ancerl will conduct the orchestra Sunday afternoon which will include works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUL 15 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood

Maderna, Bernstein To Conduct

The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens tomorrow evening, Friday, July 21, at 9 p.m. in Tanglewood's Music Shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild.

The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony no. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7 p.m. on Friday, July 21, presents pianist Earl Wild in an all-Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D-flat, op. 57; six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat, op. 53.

Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket holders of the concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all-Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m. The concert includes the Symphony no. 4 and Symphony no. 2.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUL 21 1972

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 19 1972

Maderna, Bernstein To Conduct

The fourth of this summer's weekends — July 21 through 23 — at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., includes Bruno Maderna, Leonard Bernstein and Karl Ancerl conducting the Boston Symphony and a piano recital of works by Chopin played by Earl Wild.

* * *

The weekend prelude, at 7 p.m. July 21, features Wild playing Chopin compositions including the C minor Nocturne; the G. minor Ballad and the F Minor ballad; the Berceuse in D flat; six studies from opus 10 and 25; and the Polonaise in A-flat.

The weekend prelude, at 7 to ticketholders of the 9 p.m. concert, which will feature Bruno Maderna conducting Gabrieli's "La Battaglia," Stravinsky's "Concerto for piano and wind orchestra" and Brahms' "Symphony no. 1."

Karl Ancerl will rehearse the symphony in an open rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. July 22 (works to be practiced are unspecified), while Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the symphony at 8:30 that night in an all-Brahms concert including symphonies no. 2 and 4.

* * *

The weekend ends at 2:30 p.m. July 23 with Karl Ancerl conducting Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," Vejvanovsky's "Sonata a 7" and "Sonata a 10," Schumann's "Piano concerto in A minor' and Dvorak's "Symphony no. 8.".

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Earl Wild, piano music of Chopin; 9 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Bruno Maderna conducting a Stravinsky and Brahms program; Saturday at 10:30 a.m., Open Rehearsal; 8:30 p.m., Leonard Bernstein conducting an all Brahms program; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Karel Ancerl conducting a Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann, Dvorak program. August 1, Arthur Fielder's Boston Pops program.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 19 1972

TIMES
BEVERLY, MASS.
D. 9,514

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043

JUL 12 1972 New England Newsclip

Bernstein and Maderna to conduct at Tanglewood

LENOX — The fourth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens Friday evening, July 21 at 9:00 p.m. in Tanglewood's music shed with Bruno Maderna conducting the Boston Symphony and piano soloist Earl Wild. The concert opens with a performance of A. Gabrieli's La battaglia, arranged by Mr. Maderna, followed by Stravinsky's concerto for piano and wind orchestra with piano soloist Earl Wild. Following intermission, Mr. Maderna conducts the Boston Symphony in a performance of Brahms' Symphony No. 1.

The Weekend Prelude, at 7:00 p.m. on Friday, July 21 presents pianist Earl Wild in an all - Chopin piano recital. The recital includes the Nocturne in c minor, op. 48 no. 1; the Ballade in g minor, op. 23; the Ballade in f minor, op. 52; the Berceuse in D - flat, op. 57; Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25; and the Polonaise in A - flat, op. 53. Weekend Prelude concerts are held each Friday evening at 7:00 and are free to ticket holders of the 9.00 p.m. concert.

Karl Ancerl rehearses the Boston Symphony Saturday morning, July 22 at 10:30 a.m. The open rehearsals are held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival season. Tickets are $2.50 on sale the morning of the open rehearsal at the Festival Ticket Office, and proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Orchestra's pension fund.

Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein conducts the Boston Symphony in an all - Brahms concert Saturday evening, July 22 at 8:30 p.m.

Sunday afternoon, July 23 at 2:30 p.m., Karl Ancerl conducts the Boston Symphony with piano soloist Alicia De Larrocha. The program is Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide", Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and Sonata a 10, Schumann's Piano concerto in a minor, and Dvorak's Symphony no. 8.

July 21

7:00 p.m. in the shed

Weekend Prelude - Earl Wild, pianist in an all-Chopin Recital.

Nocturne in C minor, op. 48, no. 1.

Ballade in G minor, op. 23.

Ballade in F minor, op. 52.

Berceuse in D - flat, op. 57.

Six studies from op. 10, and op. 25.

Polonaise in A - flat, op. 53.

9:00 p.m. in the shed

Bruno Maderna, conductor.

Earl Wild, pianist.

A. Gabrieli-Maderna: 'La battaglia'

Stravinsky: Concerto for piano and wind orchestra

Brahms: Symphony no. 1

July 22

10:30 a.m. in the shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra open rehearsal.

8:30 p.m. in the shed.

Leonard Bernstein, conductor in an all-Brahms concert.

Symphony no. 4. Symphony no. 2.

July 23

2:30 p.m. in the shed. Karl Ancerl, conductor. Alicia De Larrocha, pianist.

Gluck: Overture to Iphigenie en Aulide

Vejvanovsky: Sonata a 7

Sonata a 10

Schumann: Piano concerto in A minor

Dvorak: Symphony no. 8

Earl Wild, concert pianist, will appear at Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday, July 21, at 7 p.m. for the Weekend Prelude and again at 9 p.m. in Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and winds. — Photo from Tanglewood

Monsters, Miscreants, and Machinators: The Art of American Politics is the title of one of the new shows now on exhibit at Fenimore House, the art museum of the New York State Historical Association in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Big Surprise Is Bernstein With Brahms' 2d and 4th

By R.C. HAMMERICH
Union Staff

Schumann's piano concerto at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon was nice, but the big surprise of the weekend happened Saturday night when Leonard Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Brahms' second and fourth symphonies.

Now, at first glance a regular concertgoer might offer a small yawn at such a prospect — two trite and true symphonies with the music world's most dancing conductor.

But 13,374 of Lennie's fans showed up for this unpromising program and were joyful. More important, many listeners who have been neither enchanted by Lennie's choreography nor profoundly impressed by his music were highly pleased.

They heard Brahms played with a very rare excitement — not with theatrical liveliness, mind you, which is a legitimate viewpoint but usually not a successful one with serious and knowledgeable Brahms lovers.

They heard it with the thoughtful, solid, almost palpable substance of Brahms' inner core intact, protected, safe. And they brilliantly — enlightened, you might say, and they, too, were joyful.

What makes the difference between a very good and a first - class performance often is very difficult to identify because it usually comes down simply to a matter of degree ... the first - class performance has a bit more of all the good things.

LEONARD BERNSTEIN

Under close scrutiny the good things often turn out to be a bit more insight into the essence and a bit better craftsmanship of reproduction.

This was true Saturday night. Lennie outplayed himself. Boston's orchestra, in my experience, always has been ready to turn in first - class performances because it is unusually responsive to the immediate mood and attitude of its conductor.

Saturday night the togetherness was wire sharp, the changes of speed and volume were as quick and expressive as a chamber group, the outer limits of speed and volume were wide enough for color and variety, and narrow enough to save Brahms' essential conservatism, the rhythms were crisp and infectious.

If Brahms always played like that, no one would ever again have reason to call his work stodgy.

Tomorrow Brahms, Boston and Lennie lovers will have opportunity to hear all three free (if they get there on time) for six hours. Bernstein and the orchestra will record the same symphonies in Tanglewood's shed for television casettes between 10.30 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. and between 3.30 p.m. and 6.30 p.m.

Sunday afternoon Alicia De Larrocha, a pianist from Barcelona, was the star of the day with her open, loving performance of the solo part of Schumann's Opus 54 piano concerto.

Conductor was Karel Ancerl, music director of the orchestra in Toronto, and he gave her plenty of secure support.

Miss De Larrocha has, on other occasions in my hearing, shown a tendency to pound the keyboard. There was no sign of that yesterday. She spread the famous concerto around the 7215 listeners with a mellow, enveloping warmth.

Also on the program were Gluck's overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide" and Dvorak's eighth symphony, both of which Ancerl conducted at Tanglewood in August, 1968.

Both were played with 65 strings, which probably is about 10 times as many as the composer planned for. The interesting parts were played on one by a pair of playful, overlapping trumpets (Armando Ghitalla and Andre Come) and on the other by the same trumpets plus a trio of trombones (William Gibson, Ronald Barron and Gordon Hallberg).

Weekend attendance: Friday night, 5071; Saturday morning open rehearsal, 5557; Saturday night, 13,374; Sunday afternoon, 7215; total, 31,217.

SPRINGFIELD UNION
JULY 24 1972

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398

JUL 22 1972

New England Newsclip

Bernstein at Tanglewood

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Rehearsing the slow movement of the Brahm's 2d Symphony at Tanglewood Wednesday afternoon, Leonard Bernstein pointed out to the Boston Symphony Orchestra that before the actual recapitulation, which Brahms "sneaks in very quietly" there are two false reprises, both in the wrong key and both promptly broken off. "But," he said, "you play each one as though it were the real reprise. Let's go back to letter D and we'll have the whole series," and he proceeded to work with the orchestra on getting the structural emphasis just right.

The passage was usefully managed at Saturday nights performance, but one of the things that made that concert, which began with the 4th Symphony, so impressive, was the way in which everything was so surely in proportion.

The evening was festive in that way Bernstein's concerts can be, especially with orchestras and audiences where an appearance of his is rare enough automatically to be an event, but it turned into a great occasion, surely unforgettable, because as well as the theater of his presence, Bernstein brought an uncommon blend of seriousness, control, and musical excitement.

He leaned fairly heavily into both symphonies and played them with a lively feeling for their rhetoric, but, though endless flexibility of detail was available, each movement was firmly magnetized to a central, controlling tempo. Even in the dangerous Chaconme of the 4th Symphony, where Bernstein's quickest and slowest speeds were some fair distance apart, the transitions were handled with so much of both sense and sensibility that each event proceeded organically from the one before.

About the direct, powerfully disciplined performances, I had a slight reservation only concerning the extreme and long slowing down that turned the end of the 2nd Symphony's third movement into an elegiac, though sweetly sentimental parting too much like the end of "Vonder Schoenheit" in Mahler's "Lied von der Erde."

Bernstein's one other great temporisk, the broad retard just before the coda of the finale in the same work, was an effective stroke which, moreover, paid off in gold because it enabled Bernstein to give the impression of a finish of incredible speed and energy without actually having to go into the usual vulgar whipping of the tempo at that point. The orchestra played superbly and with evident pleasure.

The night before, Bruno Maderna conlucted Brahm's 1st Symphony, about which he had discovered that passages of greater and of lesser intensity might be contrasted by playing the former very fast and the latter very slowly. He also sent up huge warning signals before transitions and breaks, most often by means of tremendous slowing down. An interpreter is meant to show what belongs together and what is distinct, and he must make clear where phrases, sentences, paragraphs, and chapters end. What Maderna produced Friday, though, was a telling of the story in which every character was grotesque, and printed with the punctuation marks bigger than the words.

Whether the interpretation actually began somewhere around unnecessary-but-interesting and degenerated to the absurd, or whether it stayed pretty much at the same level and I became less and less able to deal with Maderna's bizarre sort of didacticism, I cannot say. In the performance, where everything was either flogged or stretched, the orchestra played with rough tone, difficulty, and some disbelief. For sure, not since Munch last flailed the finale of the Berlioz "Fantastique" have I heard the Boston Symphony in a tempo faster even than this virtuoso group could manage.

There were those who defended it on the grounds of Brahm's Lib — "let it all hang out," and "oh, I'm so sick of all that squareness." There is a place between square and silly, and in fact Bernstein the next evening, with his fine combination of passion and taste, delivered the most eloquent and economical possible criticism of Maderna's giddy show of originality at any price.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 21 1972

New England Newsclip

Whitestone

It isn't the beat, it's the humidity

A somewhat wilted Leonard Bernstein gives his all, especially in the way of perspiration, as he rehearses the Boston Symphony for his all-Brahms program Saturday night at Tanglewood. The rehearsal took place in the Music Shed—and the humidity.

Pianist Wild's Stravinsky Exciting

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Ever since Earl Wild became a world-famous pianist because of his talent for the music of Gershwin, he has been trying to escape it.

Maderna Conducts

Certainly he is not ashamed of his affinity for Gershwin, but he knows he deserves a bigger fate. He is indeed a fine, versatile pianist whose fingers know no technical limits.

Last night at Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Bruno Maderna on the podium he played the solo part of Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra of 1924.

It is an exciting and difficult piece. The piano work is not difficult for Wild because of his incredible fingers, but it is difficult for any group to perform because of its passages of sudden silence rapidly alternating with thumping chords.

Dramatic Effect

The difficulty comes with the need for everyone to be thumping at the same time, a dramatic effect which, unfortunately, was marred a few times last night by off-center timing.

an effect of disorder and disarray," which indicates how far we have come with our adjustment to musical innovation.

The third movement, by contemporary standards, is a model of precise organization. . .dissonant and eccentric, yes, but with a mood of careful planning.

The program opened with a neatly portrayed Canzona from the early 18th century by Gabrieli.

After intermission Maderna conducted Brahms' First Symphony with the reliability that he usually shows the standard works of the symphonic library.

He is a short, chunky man with a burly manner that belies his personal graciousness. Both his sturdy stature and his smiling grace seem to show up in the way he conducts such music as Brahms.

Such was the case last night. The Brahms didn't have the excitement of the Stravinsky concerto, but it had more substance.

There were 5071 there to hear it, almost all of them inside the shed.

Earlier, for the 7 p.m. prelude program, Wild played a batch of Chopin. . .a nocturne, a berceuse, one of the most famous Polonaises (Op. 53), a couple of ballads and a half dozen etudes.

One of the good ways to play Chopin is to try to maintain a kind of classical clarity while infusing the music with an underlay of romantic rhapsody.

It is a neat trick, technically very difficult, but Wild managed it, apparently by a balanced application of incisive fingering for the clarity and careful use of the sustaining pedal for the rhapsody.

Certainly there was clarity, and also a generous use of the pedal, and although there seemed to be frequent lack of smooth transition between passages, there was no lack of the elegant gallantry and gentle fragility for which Chopin's music is loved.

Tonight at 8.30, Leonard Bernstein will conduct the orchestra through the Second and Fourth Symphonies of Brahms, and tomorrow at 2.30 Karel Ancerl, music director of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a program of Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak.

The Schumann will be the Piano Concerto (Op. 54) with Alician De Larrocha of Barcelona as soloist, and the Dvorak will be the Eighth Symphony.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

JUL 20 1972

New England Newsclip

Otherwise, the piece had many moments of musical interest and several of pure excitement. It is not meant to be beautiful.

The first movement was Bach-like with its relentless perpetual motion and rythmic insistence; the second was alternately rhapsodic and melancholy, and the third offered some fine moments of busy tension.

The program notes quoted from an old essay saying the third movement "produced

Bernstein at Tanglewood Saturday

By RUTHANNE DEVLIN
Times Staff Writer

During the past few seasons at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., none but Leonard Bernstein could charismatically draw listeners down the aisle in an applauding march to the foot of the stage.

This season, however, Seiji Ozawa is exerting that same magnetism. Still, this weekend, the old master crowd-pleaser Bernstein will be conducting, his only performance there this season and probably one of his last conducting dates this year (he has announced a one-year "retirement" to compose).

For the growing numbers of Greater Hartford patrons of the summertime festival, here are questions most frequently asked of this office.

How to get there. You have a choice: 91 north to Springfield to connect with the Mass. Turnpike west, getting off at exit 1 or 2; Rt. 44 west to Canaan, then Rt. 7 to Gt. Barrington, and follow signs; Rt. 44 west to Winsted, Rt. 8 north to Otis, Rt. 20 into Lee and follow signs. Overall maximum time is two hours.

How much does it cost: from $3.50 to $8 ($8.50 box seats) in the shed, lawn tickets for $3 on sale before the concert. Telephone (413) 637-1600 for details.

Dress: Anything from dinner jackets to out-off jeans, getting more casual for Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

To make visits more enjoyable, take the kids and picnic on the immense lawns which were once part of a gaint estatè.

There are changes at Tanglewood. Both beer (65 cents) and wine are available at a special trailer next to the refreshment stand.

Parking is no longer permitted in that large field directly opposite the main gate and cars Sunday were re-routed on a sinuous trail to the back of Tanglewood by the Hawthorne House.

Last weekend tallied more than 40,000 visitors to the music festival, the last minute rush was appalling. preferably more if you're bringing a picnic lunch, for the trip. You'll beat the parking rush, avoid long irritating lines, and get the shadiest spot on the grass.

performances are as follows:

FRIDAY — 7 p.m., weekend prelude; Earl Wild, piano; 9 p.m., Bruno Maderna conducts the Gabrielli/Maderna Motet, Stravinsky's concerto for piano and winds, featuring Earl Wild, and Brahms' Sym. 1.

SATURDAY — 10:30 a.m. open rehearsal, tickets $2.50; 8:30 p.m. Leonard Bernstein conducts Brahms' Syms. 4 and 2.

SUNDAY: 2:30 p.m., Karel Ancerl conducts Gluck's overtures to "Iphigenia in Aulis," Vejvanovsky's Sonata a 7, and a 10. Schumann's piano concerto featuring Alicia De Larrocha, nd Dvork's Sym. No. 8.

Dvorak Receives His Just Due From Tanglewood Concert

By RICHARD CONWAY

Bos Symphony

We have long felt that Antonin Dvorak, the 19th century Bohemian composer, has not always been given his just due. Too many times he is dismissed as being merely a good musical craftsman appealing primarily to the popular taste. What is wrong with writing music that abounds with folk - like melodies and exciting dance rhythms we have never figured out.

At any rate, the audience loved the performance of Dvorak's "Eighth Symphony," at Tanglewood Sunday. So did we. And it is evidently a favorite work of guest conductor Karel Ancerl.

Based on yesterday's observations—that was the first time we have seen him work—Ancerl brings an aristocratic bearing to the podium. There is a reserve about him, even an aloofness. This was so through the first half of the program.

After intermission though, it was a different Ancerl. He brought more physical movement and emotion to his conducting. He reached for more from his orchestra and got it. It was a colorful, exciting performance when it needed to be; tender and lyrical in contrast when that was called for.

Ancerl opened the concert with Gluck's "Overture to 'Iphigenie en Aulide.'" Ancerl, himself a native of Bohemia, then introduced the Tanglewood audience to two little known works by the 17th century Czech composer Pavel Vejlanovsky.

orchestra and plays accordingly. Schumann's lovely melodies fared well in her hands.

The only really jarring note to the performance was that there seemed to be some disagreement between conductor Ancerl and Miss De Larrocha on certain passages as to tempo and interpretation. This was particularly noticeable in the third movement where, for one lengthy passage, orchestra and piano were not precisely together.

Still, the Spanish pianist's performance was a joy to hear and, along with the Dvorak work, made for a fine concert at Tanglewood.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.,
D. 95,528

JUL 24 1972

New England Newsclip

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

JUL 24 1972

New England Newsclip

An Exuberant Karel Ancerl

By DOROTHY STOWE
Times Music Critic

LENOX, Mass. — Let us have Bohemians to interpret Bohemian music! There is no more felicitous sound than that created by the wedding of such true minds, as Karel Ancerl proved at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon when he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 in G, Op. 88.

Ancerl is presently Music Director of the Toronto Symphony, a post which he assumed in 1969 following his expatriation from Czechoslovakia where he was long conductor of the Czech Philharmonic. He has also been the distinguished guest conductor of many European and American orchestras.

Under his refined yet exuberant leadership, the Boston Symphony provided a Dvorak 8th of such verve, warmth, and singing earthy ecstacy as to set the pulses tingling. This symphony is a continuous son,g as one folk-oriented melody tumbles forth on the heels of another.

The veteran conductor showed perfect understanding of when to use restraint and when to "go for broke." There were passages of the most courtly dignity, displaying a wide range of dynamic expressiveness. Sometimes the violins or horns bounced along with the precise exactitude of sparkling water splashing over rocks.

Then there were broad open stretches where temperament took over. The final Allegro vivace was set forth with martial fervor, as Ancerl, waving his baton over his head like a gaucho roping a steer, urged on the irresistible climax. The orchestra played for him with great relish and deep involvement, and joined the audience of some 7200 in a standing ovation.

An artist of equal stature is Alicia De Laroccha, the Spanish pianist who made her Tanglewood debut yesterday as soloist in the Schuman Piano Concerto in A Minor, Op. 54. She and Ancerl proved most compatible, alternating strength and delicacy in a smooth collaboration, and the orchestra's expert support assured a memorable performance.

The Intermezzo, with its inspired interplay between soloist and cellos, swept over the audience like a gentle sigh; and the unremitting headlong dash through the stunning coda of the Allegro vivace could only evoke the deepest admiration.

Completing the program was a pair of 17th Century Orchestral Sonatas by Vejvanovsky, part of a growing literature of Czech compositions which are being ferreted out from archival sources and given well-deserved performances. These tuneful sonatas showed the dependably accurate and mellow-toned Boston brass soloists at their best against a string accompaniment.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 25 1972

Pianist De Larrocha Highlights Concert

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Well, if you re interested in the old numbers game, and many of us are, Tanglewood drew over 26,000 this last weekend for three concerts, and William Steinberg, last week's conductor beat Leonard Bernstein, 14,800 to 13,300.

But give Lenny his due; he drew several thousand to his open rehearsal Saturday morning so perhaps it is a draw.

THE POINT is the people are coming in great numbers to hear good music and fine performers and generally they are being well served

Sunday afternoon Karl Ancerl led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in works by Gluck, Vojvanovsky, Schumann and Dvorak.

The featured work, Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor was performed by that gracious and accomplished lady pianist, Alicia De Larrocha.

Women's Libbers and otherwise just fair-minded folks were properly disturbed to hear the comment more than once bruited about, "She plays like a man."

NONSENSE and dishwater She plays like a great pianist, without qualification. Many of the noted men pianists should play the way she does.

This work can and very often does come into the ho-hum category mostly as a result of over-exposure. It has been played fast and very fast, slowly and lugubriously, musically and without sensitivity and then it has been played the way De Larrocha played it this afternoon.

THE LADY is dimunitive which often connotates fragility but one is quickly disabused of any such notion when she comes to the allegros and fortes which were achieved with strength, sweep and precision.

But it is the depth of her musical ability, her realizations of the subtleties of this work which are so often brushed lightly if at all, that one realizes the extent of her musical sensibilities which are acute indeed.

ANCERL and the BSO provided a proper accompaniement, the mutuality was sound, but oddly, Ancerl never seemed to pay attention to the soloist which of course he must have considering the results. Perhaps this is the style of the European trained conductors who still have a strong residue in their make-up of the days when the leader was the absolute master and everyone else was entirely subordinate.

Nonetheless, the reading as a whole worked very well and although one might quite accurately suspect a bias in favor of Miss De Larrocha on my part, it does not color the fact that this was a fine performer doing a fine job

ALICIA DE LARROCHA

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 22 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Artists Offer Varied Works, Quality

By RICHARD CONWAY

Bos Symphony

What started out as a rather disappointing evening at Tanglewood last night was turned into a fascinating study in contrasts because of the imaginative and educational programming of conductor Bruno Maderna.

Earl Wild, pianist, was guest artist for the Weekend Prelude, and his program was all Chopin. That held out great promise. But Mr. Wild was in a pounding mood, playing pieces at breakneck tempos, and rarely getting below the surface of the music.

The hour - long program consisted of Chopin's "Nocturne in C minor, op. 48, no. 1," "Ballade in G minor, op. 23", "Ballade in F minor, op. 52", "Berceuse in D flat, op. 57", "Six studies from op. 10 and op. 25", and "Polonaise in A flat, op 53."

Only in the "Berceuse" was there a sense of relaxation, a depth of feeling; but even here Wild hurried the runs and ornaments. The familiar "Polonaise in A flat" was played at a frantic pace, with one idea hardly completed before slamming into the next. It was not our idea of Chopin.

Maderna's interesting programming though, made the evening. As he did a couple of weeks ago, he opened the regular concert with his own arrangement of a work by the 16th century composer Giovanni Gabrieli. The Gabrieli piece, "Canzona, a 12", was written for three choirs of instruments. Gabrieli did not specify what instruments. Maderna uses strings, including two harps, brasses, and woodwinds.

This work came off better than the "Ricercare" played two weeks ago. Each of the choirs had a stronger sense of ensemble. Entrances and tempo changes were clearer, and intonation problems were not as obvious. The archaic sounds were refreshing to an era accustomed to the rich sonorities of the Romantic era or the harsh dissonances of the modern works.

Stravinsky's "Concerto for piano and wind orchestra" was next, with Earl Wild as soloist. The opening bars of this work were quite reminiscent of the Gabrieli work that preceded it. Then Wild took over in a piano part that, except for its harmonic and rhythmic language, was very much like a Scarlatti toccata. The wind interjections and punctuations are percussive and dissonant.

By contrast, the second movement is rather lyrical — even Romantic — in nature, with the piano accompanied by thick chords in the orchestra. The third movement, though, is back to percussiveness, and has a rather grotesque atmosphere to it.

Although one woman walked up the aisle after the first movement, obviously annoyed and muttering "Nothing but noise," the audience was enthusiastic. Last night's performance of the Stravinsky piece was the first at the Berkshire Festival.

After intermission came an unusual interpretation of the Brahms "First Symphony". It was unusual because we don't recall it being given such a forceful, intense, dramatic reading before. And the tempos were pushed. Maderna's communication with his musicians here was very often uncertain. Several times he seemed to catch them by surprise, and there were several insecurities. It was particularly noticeable in the third movement.

Still, the performance has a certain dynamic excitement about it that was satisfying in its own way.

92

Podium at Lenox Shared By Bernstein, Ancerl

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977

JUL 24 1972

New England Newsclip

LENOX — One might have expected to witness vivid podium differences between Leonard Bernstein and Karel Ancerl conducting the Boston Symphony in concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival's fourth weekend.

Such was not the case.

Reason was not a change in Ancerl's scholarly, restrained style at yesterday afternoon's event.

A remarkably subdued, mellowed Bernstein conducted all-Brahms at Tanglewood Saturday night. Much of the previous fire was there, but little of the dramatic Bernstein.

Ancerl's program contained works from his native Czechoslovakia (he is now conductor of the Toronto Symphony) — Sonatas by 17th

The orchestra was in fine fettle, with a special note on behalf of strings and brasses — and woodwinds excelling in the slow movement of the Fourth Symphony and many areas of the Second.

Bernstein made much of the cynicism in the Fourth's finale, bringing about smooth transitions to tragedy, sorrow and the grandiose close.

In the Second Symphony, crisp phrasing didn't interfere with melodic flow, nor strong rhythmic pulses with interchanges of mood. Horn intonation was beautifully clear in exposed passages.

Bernstein's Brahms was sensitive, dramatic, and emotionally addressed without window-dressing.

The orchestra underwent a big change in adjustment for yesterday's concert, under Ancerl's direction.

Gluck's "Iphigenia" Overture was dictated and produced as a sensitive, tuneful, almost fragile example of 18th century finesse. Tricky ornamentation in strings sounded as if played by an individual rather than full section.

In opposite genre, but just as astutely discharged was Dvorak's Eighth Symphony, a panorama of folkish dance tunes and romantic speeches in Czech musical dialect.

As in Smetana's "Fatherland," a few Tanglewood seasons ago, one could have felt that before Ancerl, Dvorak's music had been anglicized or mispronounced.

Miss De Larrocha was temperamentally attuned to the Schumann Concerto but lacked other qualities to truly put it across in the best sense.

Her tone was so moderate in depth that much of the piano part was suffocated in orchestration. This was not accountable to orchestra or conductor who gave her a stunning background.

It was the kind of performance that has existed for years past at a standard level — respectful, respectable and adequate.

Concerto playing has certainly not descended to the level of the circus ring, but Miss De Larrocha's Schumann was prettier than eventful.

The first movement cadenza had some flair but not enough depth or accuracy. The second movement intermezzo received its full quota of sweetness and light.

Miss De Larrocha was rewarded with considerable applause and several curtain calls.

Much is owed Czech scholars for unearthing Vejvanovsky's gems during the past 20 years and to Ancerl for exhibiting the two sonatas at yesterday's concert.

Ancerl directed attention to the simple but sprightly activity between brass and strings in "Sonata a 7." The more complex "Sonata a 10" traveled a winding route of actions leading to a spirited celebration in brass, strings and organ.

If there's any connection between attendance figures and popularity of conductors — Bruno Maderna had 5,071 listeners on Friday night; 12,772 came to see Ancerl at the Saturday morning open rehearsal and yesterday; Bernstein's audience was 13,374, Saturday night. Total for the weekend 31,217.

Bernstein, Ancerl on Podium For Concerts at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Music Review

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977

JUL 24 1972

New England Newsclip

LENOX — One might have expected to witness vivid podium differences between Leonard Bernstein and Karel Ancerl conducting the Boston Symphony in concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival's fourth weekend.

Such was not the case.

The reason was not a change in Ancerl's scholarly, restrained style at yesterday afternoon's event.

A remarkably subdued, mellowed Bernstein conducted all Brahms at Tanglewood Saturday night. Much of the previous fire was there, but little of the dramatic Bernstein.

Ancerl's program contained works from his native Czechoslovakia (he is now conductor of the Toronto Symphony) — sonatas by 17th century Pavel Vejvanovsky and Dvorak. His soloist was the Spanish pianist Alicia De Larrocha in the Schumann Concerto. Opener was the Overture to Gluck's "Iphigenia in Aulis."

The symphony players must have been delighted with Bernstein. They rose to their feet when he came onstage. The conductor interrupted heavy applause to get down to business.

In both Brahms symphonies (Nos. 4 and 2, in that order), one still saw Bernstein's shoulder exercises and some expansive gestures.

But he gave only essential cues — all importance was on the music. In flutist Doriot Anthony Dwyer's solos in the Fourth's finale, she was given total freedom, and Bernstein placed himself and the orchestra in accompanying roles.

There were many similarities between the two symphonies. Generally, Bernstein did not translate them as great epics to be strong-armed and stormed.

Swaying rhythms dominated the opening movements of both symphonies, with unusual stress on secondary melodies.

The orchestra was in fine fettle, with a special note on behalf of strings and brasses — and woodwinds excelling in the slow movement of the Fourth Symphony and many areas of the Second.

Bernstein made much of the cynicism in the Fourth's finale, bringing about smooth transitions to tragedy, sorrow and the grandiose close.

In the Second Symphony, crisp phrasing didn't interfere with melodic flow, nor strong rhythmic pulses with interchanges of mood. Horn intonation was beautifully clear in exposed passages.

Bernstein's Brahms was sensitive, dramatic, and emotionally addressed without window-dressing.

The orchestra underwent a big change in adjustment for yesterday's concert, under Ancerl's direction.

Gluck's "Iphigenia" Overture was dictated and produced as a sensitive, tuneful, almost fragile example of 18th century finesse. Tricky ornamentation in strings sounded as if played by an individual rather than full section.

In opposite genre, but just as astutely discharged was Dvorak's Eighth Symphony, a panorama of folkish dance tunes and romantic speeches in Czech musical dialect.

As in Smetana's "Fatherland," a few Tanglewood seasons ago, one could have felt that before Ancerl, Dvorak's music had been anglicized or mispronounced.

Miss De Larrocha was temperamentally attuned to the

Her tone was so moderate in depth that much of the piano part was suffocated in orchestration. This was not accountable to orchestra or conductor who gave her a stunning background.

It was the kind of performance that has existed for years past at a standard level — respectful, respectable and adequate.

Concerto playing has certainly not descended to the level of the circus ring, but Miss De Larrocha's Schumann was prettier than eventful.

The first movement cadenza had some flair but not enough depth or accuracy. The second movement intermezzo received its full quota of sweetness and light.

Miss De Larrocha was rewarded with considerable applause and several curtain calls.

Much is owed Czech scholars for unearthing Vejvanovsky's gems during the past 20 years and to Ancerl for exhibiting the two sonatas at yesterday's concert.

Ancerl directed attention to the simple but sprightly activity between brass and strings in "Sonata a 7." The more complex "Sonata a 10" traveled a winding route of actions leading to a spirited celebration in brass, strings and organ.

If there's any connection between attendance figures and popularity of conductors — Bruno Maderna had 5,071 listeners on Friday night; 12,772 came to see Ancerl at the Saturday morning open rehearsal and yesterday; Bernstein's audience was 13,374, Saturday night. Total for the weekend, 31,217.

PROGRAMS
Saturday Night
Leonard Bernstein, conductor
All-Brahms
Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Opus 98
Symphony No. 2 in D major, Opus 73
Sunday Afternoon
Karel Ancerl, conductor
Overture to "Iphigenia in Aulis" . . Gluck
Sonata a 7
Sonata a 10 . . . . . Vejvanovsky
Piano Concerto in A minor, Opus 54 . . . . . Schumann

Tanglewood

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977

JUL 24 1972

New England Newsclip

Friday, July 21 BSO

Conductor-composer Bruno Maderna provided yet another stimulating evening Friday night with a varied program that featured pianist Earl Wild in Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra.

Despite the winds being out of tune and some serious coordination problems between piano and ensemble, the performance conveyed the drive, inventiveness, and controlled chaos of the piece. Mr. Maderna held a tight rein on the winds and demonstrated a strong, well thought-out conception of the work. Difficulties arose when his ideas clashed with the determination of Mr. Wild to forge ahead and it is a pity that this could not have been resolved in rehearsal. Mr. Wild was technically and musically equal to the concerto, his cold linear playing and somewhat hard tone being well suited to all but the lyrical passages of the Largo. He handled the devilish allegros with facility.

The program opener was Mr. Maderna's own scoring of "Canzona a 12" by Giovanni Gabrieli. Mr. Maderna assigned the three choral divisions of the work to the wind, string, and brass groups of the modern symphony orchestra. The resulting sound was a mish-mash of inappropriate sonorities, buried counterpoint, and out-of-place playing styles. The two harps and muted strings with throbbing vibrato dealt the final blows to any Gabrieli that remained.

The evening ended with a very satisfying rendering of Brahms' Symphony no 1 in C minor. The first movement was far less ponderous than is usual. This liveliness plus Mr. Madern's thorough understanding of Brahms' intricate motivic development and tight control of his players made for a most exciting listening experience. Throughout the symphony, Mr. Maderna took risks in order to be true to the spirit of the work and they paid off handsomely. John Hinners

Saturday, July 22
Sunday, July 23

Leonard Bernstein's program Saturday night was devoted to two works — the fourth and second symphonies of Brahms. Visually, Mr. Bernstein was as theatrical as ever and most of the audience loved it. Musically, he gave us a very, very romantic reading of the works, encouraging his strings to play with excessive vibrato and employing so much rubato in certain sections that the shape of certain phrases disappeared altogether. It was far too saccharine a Brahms performance for our taste, but, judging from the overwhelming response of the audience, ours is a minority view.

Only a few more than half that audience was present on Sunday for a far better concert — that of Czech conductor Karel Ancerl. There were excellent performances of the Gluck Overture to "Iphiginea in Aulis" and two delightful sonatas of the Baroque Czech composer, Pavel Vejvanovsky. However, the most gorgeous playing we have heard from the BSO this season came in Ancerl's reading of the Dvorak G major Symphony. In particular, we noticed the grace of the third movement, with its great folk song melodies.

Alicia De Larrocha is well known for her outstanding interpretations of Spanish piano literature, and so it was an exciting experience to hear her playing of the Schumann concerto. Her work was characterized by absolutely marvelous lyrical playing, with plenty of clean, bright forte sound where needed, and a complete, welcome absence of histrionics. Conductor Ancerl's accompaniment was perhaps less expressive than her playing; nevertheless, they worked extremely well together. This audience had every reason to be enthusiastic.

Franklin Coleman

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500

JUL 27 1972

review

Exhilarating Brahms at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Berkshire Eagle
July 24, 1972

THE PROGRAMS at the halfway mark of the Tanglewood season this past weekend were dominated by Brahms symphonies. Bruno Maderna conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday night in the First, Leonard Bernstein Saturday night in the Fourth and Second, in that order.

Some music cannot be disguised beyond recognition no matter how inept the reading; others cannot be truly realized unless thoroughly penetrated and so performed. Such is the music of Brahms. The Unknown Brahms is among the best known music on the concert stage. He is no Tchaikovsky or Mahler, nor is he a Rossini, but, according to my sights, he is the poet Bernstein conceived in his program.

* * *

IT MUST BE stated that the Boston Symphony responded to all three of the conductors placed in successive command with their equal and all-out tonal resources, and that alone made the weekend a glorious experience. But Bernstein brought to this specific task an authority and maturity, an affection and refinement which has placed him on the summit of the practitioners of his craft.

On the long view or the microscopic, Bernstein showed up true and genuine. One needed to listen no further than the opening two-note idiom of Symphony No. 4 to discern the value he gave to that initial note, so often hastily dispatched as of no consequence, but in reality a necessary support of his whole edifice. And the balance Bernstein maintained, still at that beginning, of the ascending graceful aspirations was the harbinger of a control and instinct which guided him in a definitive evening of Brahms.

Whitestone

The lawn became a crowded extension of the Shed Saturday when some 13,374 persons turned out to hear Leonard Bernstein conduct the BSO in an evening of Brahms.

NO ELEMENT in Brahms is more indicative of his character than choice of tempo. Bernstein's was youthfully graceful but, in comparison to memories of much other Brahms, happily slower and veridically so. There were innumerable instances of unforgettable felicities. Why have the poignant descending song of the cellos and the simultaneous ascending line of the bassoons in the second adagio never been so compatible? Why the tempo of the succeeding allegretto never more gemuthlich?

How simply, in retrospect, does the exposition of the first movement of the Second Symphony build up expectancy as it introduces the basic motive. Brahms in Bernstein's hands became the aristocrat he surely is, putting into sound the sensitivity he was too inhibited to utter in any other way.

* * *

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON guest conductor Karel Ancerl chose an especially ingratiating program. No Brahms but, in a sense, one of his successors, Anton Dvorak, whose Symphony No. 8 in G, Op. 88, is an unvarying pleasurable series of four movements, a gallery of musical contentment and bliss, one more alluring than the others. But the allegretto grazioso is of superabundant charm. The Bostonian cello section sang it with infectious appeal. Luckily the movement is played da capo so that it could be enjoyed a second time. But why, oh why, does Dvorak destroy the euphorically somnolent mood of the ending of his finale with a vulgar and boisterous coda? Must the public be appeased with a noisy terminus? We could have left the concert in such a mellow mood after the unforgettable ascending triad of the tripping Slavonic rhythm.

The cellos had another inning during the afternoon when Schumannn allotted them the second theme in the intermezzo of his piano concerto, in A Minor, Op. 54. It's enough to make a man take to the cello just for the chance to play that marvelous looping melody. But the real soloist was the Spanish pianist, Alicia de Larrocha, making her Tanglewood debut, although she is a long-established international artist. The performance had strange disagreements between the soloist and conductor. Madame de Larrocha in no way followed the pattern of the orchestral script but each time soliloquized poetically, lingering with tedious savoring of Schumann's tasty morsels. In the spirited sections, she was supremely capable.

* * *

ANCERL BEGAN his afternoon with the overture to Gluck's "Iphigenia in Aulis," a quaint and reposeful transparency in which decorative ornamentatons added an ingenious fillip. Two sonatas of a fellow Bohemian of Ancerl, 17th-century Pavel Vejvanovsky, were in the sonorous style of the Gabrieli excerpts which had been heard on earlier programs, agreeably refreshing examples of their epoch.

* * *

OVER-ALL, Maderna's Brahms was better than the details. Whether it was necessary for the timpani to whack the hell out of those ominous opening measures is an individual decision, and whether the acceleration in the coda justified what resulted in a frantic ratatattat again from the kettles need not dim the excitement of the whole movement.

The slow movement was impressively meaningful and tonally rich. Maderna's dynamics were on the excessive side, but the colors were radiant and he achieved a dramatic sense of contrasts. The allegretto tempo had a pinch of frivolity which was foreign to its potential whimsicality, but Maderna returned to a majestic grandeur in the finale.

Maderna had played a Gabrieli excerpt on his first program two week ago. Friday he played another, but this time, instead of a canzona only for brass, he chose one for a small but representative ensemble from the whole orchestra. Its sonority was gratifying. Gabrieli's four-century tonal mosaics fitted into a broad design reminiscent of the potent contrasts of light and shadow of his contemporary, Caravaggio.

* * *

EARL WILD was the exciting soloist in the Stravinsky concerto for piano and wind orchestra. His nimble articulation of what amounts in the first movement to a furious perpetual motion sparkled after the extended and full-throated wind introduction.

Stravinsky had unlimited musical vision and comprehension and went to all sources for contributing fragments. The largo might have been a continuation of the rich old 17th-century Italian masters from which Gabrieli emerges, and his sense of humor in the finale suggested our own Ives. The final movement has a percussive rhythm piquancy which found full realization in Wild's performance. (Did anyone else discern a youthful Charles Munch in Wild's appearance?)

INCORRECT PAGINATION

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977

JUL 10 1972

New England Newsclip

Classic and Modern Played at Lenox

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — A mixture of classic formality and provocative contemporary music was played by the Boston Symphony for 21,156 patrons at the Berkshire Music Festival's second Tanglewood weekend.

The biggest risks were taken by the Italian avant-garde composer-conductor Bruno Maderna at Saturday night's concert for which the audience numbered a low 4,635 — about the size that attends a rainy Friday night program.

Seiji Ozawa conducted Mozart Friday night and a more varied program yesterday afternoon with Garrick Ohlsson as soloist in Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto.

Ohlsson deserved a bigger reception than he received. But at that the impact of his performance was balanced only by a mixture of boos and bravos following the orchestra's tussle with shockers, promulgated by Maderna.

No Form or Purpose

Irritating to most and adored by a few was "Available Forms I" by Earle Brown, a native of Lunenburg.

The surprise package consisted of "six unbound pages with either four or five 'events' on each page." Maderna's role was merely to give cues.

Accordingly, there was dispensed a sound spectrum without form, melody, identifiable rhythm, direction or purpose. It abounded in ugly or disarmingly serene notions.

First aid was administered in the program notes which said, in part, that the performance "transforms the disparate independent entities into one particular integral identity."

Whatever that means.

Ives

A set of four ambiguities by Charles Ives continued this high adventure. The titles: "Tone Roads," "Unanswered Question" and "Over the Pavements."

This menu provided a jazzy fugue, hodgepodege superimposed over a motive in chimes, and a concertmaster who assisted with the conducting but didn't play. In addition was a jolly bit of pseudoragtime and a persistent trumpet solo over growling wind.

Maderna's own arrangement of a Ricercare by 17th century Giovanni Gabrieli was a palatable item for eight instruments, but hardly an arresting start for a Tanglewood concert. It smacked of courtly pomp. The playing was competent, if not impressive.

Music Review

PROGRAMS

Saturday Night
Bruno Maderna, conductor

Ricercare . . . . . Gabrieli-Maderna
Available Forms I for chamber ensemble . . . Earle Brown
Tone Roads No. 1
Tone Roads No. 3
The Unanswered Question
Scherzo, Over
the Pavements . . . . Charles Ives
Symphony No. 41 in C major,
K.551, "Jupiter" . . . . . Mozart

Sunday Afternoon
Seiji Ozawa, conductor

Symphony No. 60 in C major . . Haydn
Piano Concerto No. 3
in C minor, Opus 37 . . . . Beethoven

Garrick Ohlsson, pianist
Mother Goose Suite . . . . . Ravel

Soothing balm to all this was a superb account of Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony, the finale of which is still a marvel of engineering to the most bizarre modernist.

It served to identify Maderna as a skilled conductor, even though the raced-ahead slow movement.

Ozawa disclosed his facile talents in Haydn's facetious "Absent-Minded Symphony" and a lush performance of Ravel's "Mother Goose Suite" with the last-minute inclusion of the rarely heard Introduction and Dance of the Spinning Wheel.

The Haydn was purity itself, with humor as the keynote and Ozawa's baton to give it added vitality.

Ravel's "Mother Goose" was a mural of rich tonal colors and conjuring personalities.

No Slick Tricks

Ohlsson applied a solvent technique to Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto without resorting to virtuosity or deception. Musicianship took precedence. Note playing was meticulous; tempos were alive but contained; dynamics were far reaching, and the tone consistently sang.

In fact, Ohlsson is nearing the head of the keyboard parade for his sensitive musicality and respect for the truth. Even in the Beethoven, it was evident that he has reservoirs of strength and technique that would be tapped more fittingly in other works.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 10 1972

New England Newsclip

Tanglewood's Contemporary Concert Was Uneven but Very Interesting

By RICHARD CONWAY

It must have taken a good deal of soul - searching and no small amount of courage to program Saturday night's concert at Tanglewood. While the results were decidedly uneven, even disappointing, it was a very interesting concert.

Under guest conductor Bruno Maderna, the program opened with Maderna's own arrangement of a "Ricercare" by the Renaissance composer Giovanni Gabrieli. Scored for two trumpets, two trombones, two horns, and two bassoons, a certain spatial effect is achieved by having two quartets, each consisting of one each of the instruments, spaced quite apart from each other and playing now in concert, now antiphonally.

Gabrieli was an experimenter in sonorities and spatial effects. His music was thus an admirable choice to lead into the remainder of the first half of the concert, which was devoted to works by two other composers also interested in experimentation.

Unfortunately, the performance of the Gabrieli work was really rather ragged. Tempo changes did not come off clearly, and a couple of the trumpet entrances were rather tentative.

Maderna then conducted Earle Brown's "Available forms 1 for chamber ensemble." The Massachusetts - born composer's work, written in 1961, consists of six pages of several sound events. It is up to the conductor to choose the order in which these events will occur. Thus, no two performances will ever be the same.

There is then an immediacy about the work that is evidently appealing to those who respond to this kind of music. But we are dealing here with sound for sound's sake, and one can only approach it intellectually.

Maderna then turned to the works of Charles Ives for four pieces: "Tone Roads nos. 1 and 3"; "The unanswered question"; and "Over the pavements."

Ives' work is incredibly difficult to perform. Writing in the first quarter of this century, the Connecticut - born composer anticipated most of the major musical developments of contemporary styles. He experimented with atonality, polytonality, polyrhythmics, and spatial effects. His music is not easy to listen to, or to grasp in one or two hearings.

With the exception of "The unanswered question," the Boston Symphony was giving its first performances of the Ives' works. (The Brown piece was also a first performance for them.)

Obviously, a good deal of time had been spent on the Ives pieces. Maderna conducted with clarity and conciseness. Regardless of what one may think of the music, the performances themselves were well done.

Although the strings were not separated from the rest of the orchestra, as Ives' score indicates they should be, "The unanswered question" was especially effective and thought-provoking.

After intermission, the orchestra returned with Mozart's "Symphony no. 41 in C, K. 551, 'Jupiter.' " Although it was a welcome relief to hear melodic lines that one could comprehend and developments that one could follow, the performance itself was quite ordinary, even dull. Obviously, the orchestra had spent itself preparing the first half of the concert.

There were a few cat-calls and boos in the first part of the program, but the audience responded to the unfamiliar works surprisingly well, I think. At any rate, one has to applaud the adventurous programming.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUL 11 1972

New England Newsclip

BSO rebounds nicely on Haydn, Ravel

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Hard to believe that the orchestra which played with such refinement and finish, such brilliance and confidence for Seiji Ozawa at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon was the one that had played so murkily and tentatively at Bruno Maderna's concert 18 hours earlier. It was, though — the Boston Symphony, of course — and playing beautifully in Haydn's sometimes very crazy Symphony No. 60 and in Ravel's "Mother Goose."

Between the two came Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 in C minor with Garrick Ohlsson as soloist. It is a problem piece because it is hard to find the right weight and density for its performance, particularly that of the first movement. The very thought of Beethoven in C minor calls up such a mass of associations of tragic and intensely dramatic music from the Opus 1 Trio via the 5th Symphony to the last piano sonata. The concerto makes a striking beginning in that vein, but turns into a more slender piece than one somehow expects. It is easy therefore, to overload it in performance, and Ohlsson and Ozawa, working apparently in close agreement, found an interesting solution in a somewhat Mendelssohnian reading: swift, light, sharply accented, and with razor-edged articulations. It was the facsimile of tragedy turned out with great elegance, rather than the real thing. Moreover, it even left a more expansive, pathos - filled style available as a variant treatment of the material in the cadenza.

The second and third movements pose no such special difficulties, and Ohlsson, again with the most alert support, played them with the intelligence and vitality that make him — at 24 and still very much of a newcomer to bigtime — one of the most impressive and admirable of our pianists. The restraint that is so characteristic of his playing can sometimes run over into stiffness, and in some of the florid cadential passages of the eloquent, lusciously scored, beautifully decorated slow movement he went uncomfortably far in that direction.

Having been convinced and pleased by the performance, and particularly by the fine and taut first movement, I learned a few minutes later that all modern editions misrepresent Beethoven by changing the

SEIJI OZAWA
. . . an about-face

4-4 time signature which is unambiguously clear in the manuscript and the first edition to cut time. It does remain allegro con brio, a fiery allegro, and the tempo need not be much affected by the difference. In other respects, though, the four beats per bar (Beethoven) rather than two (Ohlsson-Ozawa et al.) makes a great difference to the character of the music, and the solution which, in my ignorance of what the original score says, seemed so satisfying, turns out to be in some ways alien to Beethoven's intention. I have not had time to absorb that or to reconsider the piece. For sure, though, the performance was full of life.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

GARRICK OHLSSON, Pianist at Tanglewood

Surprises, Disappointments Contend at Tanglewood

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Garrick Ohlsson, pianist, lost a few points to Haydn and Ravel Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

His performance of the solo part of Beethoven's third piano concerto with Seiji Ozawa conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra was outscored by an unfamiliar Haydn symphony (No. 60) which preceded it and Ravel's orchestration for ballet of his four-hand piano piece called "Mother Goose," which followed.

Beethoven's third concerto is a sunny one with a light-hearted, free-flying third movement, but somehow it didn't get airborne, although it moved along briskly enough.

Ohlsson got about the keyboard with great speed and cleanliness: his rapid runs and trills were neat and nimble, and all that, but something was missing: there was no warm blood flowing through the unseen arteries.

The Haydn symphony, on the other hand, had an electric current in it to give it a kind of pulsing aliveness, and its score has several oddities (such as sudden dissonances) to give it moments of whimsical surprise.

Its history is one of great popularity in Haydn's time. Not the least of its oddities is its unfamiliarity in the present.

The Ravel suite which closed the program was about 22 minutes of fairy-tale fantasy.

It was composed in five sections, each intended to illustrate a child's tale involving sleeping beauties and wicked witches and enchantments and magic beasts and prince charmings.

The music was charming too, as was the weather.

Saturday Night

The Saturday-night concert had a few surprises and more disappointments than one has learned to expect at Tanglewood. Bruno Maderna conducted a program that was about equally divided between 20th century experimental music and 18th century tradition.

One of the surprises was that Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony (1788) was dull and pedantic rather than a welcome relief following the polytonalities of Charles Ives and the discords of Earle Brown.

Maderna, an Italian avant-garde composer and conductor, is spending his second summer at the Berkshire Music Center as teacher and advisor in the composition department and as conductor at other American music festivals.

He is a compact, chunky figure on the podium, apparently finds no need for the unnecessary, but graceful motions more dramatic conductors like to use, and is regarded by some professionals as a better than average conductor.

He scheduled six short pieces before intermission, all of widely varying 20th Century styles: his own arrangement of a 16th Century ricercare by A. Gabrieli, Earle Brown's "Available Forms 1" (1961) and four pieces written by Ives between 1906 and 1915.

Most pleasing for orthodox ears were the ricercare, a fanfare-like piece full of overlapping melodies for two brass quartets (trombones, trumpets, horns and bassoons) separated by 30 or 40 feet and Ives' philosophical "Unanswered Question," whose few moments of difficult polyrhythms were neatly solved by having the concertmaster, Joseph Silverstein, conduct the strings' sweet, floating, drone tones ("eternity"), while Maderna led the conflicting wind ensemble's periodic, confused "replies" to the solo trumpet's repeated "question of existence."

Otherwise, without academic preparation, the pre-intermission music tended to sound like carefully organized noise.

Brown's "Available Forms" aroused catcalls and boos as well as bravos. A quote from the program may give a hint of its mixture: "No two performances can be identical. The score consists of six unbound pages with either four or five events on each page, and the conductor is at liberty to begin with any event on any page and go from there to any other event on that or any other page, making repetitions or omissions at will."

And Ives "Tone Roads No. 1," "Tones Roads No. 3" and "Scherzo (Over the Pavements)" were lumpy and odd, as he intended (the roads were rough in 1910) because of their purpose as experiments with keys and rhythms.

But the Mozart "Jupiter" symphony, which followed intermission was curiously uninspired. It sounded routine and ultimately trite, in spite of its wealth of invention, perhaps because Maderna so overemphasized the contrasts of the alternating power-response, loud-soft, forceful-gentle passages (a basic characteristic of the late 18th-Century style) that it became a cliche.

Sunday Morning

The Sunday morning chamber-music session at Tanglewood (10 a.m.) offered three student groups who played neatly and nicely, befitting advanced music students, and with an indefinable lack of security that kept their music from having that strength in the assertive passages that characterizes the experienced professionals.

But the alternative — the excesses of over-confidence and arrogance — would be intolerable in students' music ... in anybody's music.

They played string quartets by Mendelssohn (Op. 44, No. 2) and Schubert (Op. 29) and a piano-string quartet by Mozart (K. 493).

Total attendence for the weekend in the great shed was 21,156 as follows: 6009 Friday, 2542 Saturday morning, 4635 Saturday night; 7970 yesterday afternoon.

Next week the programs will be all-Beethoven conducted by William Steinberg and Seiji Ozawa; Symphonies 5 and 6 Friday, Symphonies 1 and 9 Saturday and Symphony 4 Sunday with the Triple Concerto and the Choral Fantasy.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 10 1972
New England Newsclip

Music Review

Varied rhythm at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND Tanglewood weekend came to an exquisite close yesterday afternoon when Seiji Ozawa led the Boston Symphony in Ravel's "Mother Goose," a set of a half-dozen purely delightful children's sketches, originally for piano four-hands, but orchestrated by the composer himself and thereby enriched with a magic spell, which Ozawa verified impressively.

The program began with a usually neglected Haydn symphony for whose resurrection all within hearing must have been extremely grateful. Haydn wrote it originally as incidental music for a comedy "Le Distrait" to which "The Absent-minded" comes closest to being the translation. Never was Haydn in a more carefree and abandoned spirit, full of fun and jokes, from mock seriousness to mimicking lamentation.

Both works happened to be illuminating examples to be placed in juxtaposition to the central works on the program of the previous evening which Bruno Maderna conducted with courage and expertise. The Saturday concert began with his own arrangement of a 16th century ricercare, an instrumental composition analogous to a motet in vocal music, by Giovanni Gabrieli, a contemporary of Shakespeare, in which two quartets of brass, (each temporarily conceding the apostasy of a bassoon) were seated far apart and producing a comforting sonority.

To close his evening, Maderna played the Mozart "Jupiter" symphony (K551) at about the most speedy clip heard hereabouts within memory. Yet, it was crisp and brittle and the Bostonians responded to the baton like old firehorses to the alarm bell.

* * *

HOWEVER, it was the filling of the evening's pie which was the meat of the weekend's menu. First of all Maderna deserves credit and recognition for programming a type of music which very rarely is heard on Tanglewood's or, for that matter, hardly any other major symphony platform. There may be at least two reasons for this. Very little is being written these days for symphony and, if so, the instruments are used in other than orthodox fashions.

For instance, Earle Brown's "Available forms 1" is for a chamber ensemble, enlisting a quintet of strings, an ennead of winds, harp, piano and percussion, but the strings are never called upon to produce the same nature of sounds they would normally produce in, let's say, the "Jupiter." They plucked, whistled harmonics and slid like Ty Cobb of old. It required thorough musicianship to follow the conductor but little skill as performers.

Brown's composition is to music what Jackson Pollock's pictures are to painting and Alexander Calder's mobiles to sculpture. Brown gives each musician a folio containing a number of options which the conductor indicates at will or at whim. There is no previous agreement in what sequence they will be played or in what ensemble. It is fair to assume that the exact relationship will not ever be repeated, just as the wind will not turn all Calder facets again to a previous disposition of the dependent decorations.

Bruno Maderna

* * *

CHARLES IVES is a sort of musical Thoreau, going his own way independently, convinced of the justice of his own goals. The pieces of Ives which Maderna selected date from pre-World War I but he was already abandoning many of the rules and precepts which up to then had been held inviolable. "The Unanswered Question" enlists the high registers of the strings in a delicately refined trampoline of security, which is interrupted and disquieted on occasion by more mundane utterrances dropping from the winds. But these are not on the same wavelength as the ethereal effects being produced in the strings. Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein from his seat waved his bow in regular four-four time while Maderna remained quiet and motionless until it was necessary to introduce the incompatible measures.

Ives often had components in his music playing in different rhythms. When Stokowski conducted his Third Symphony here several years ago, he had the assistance of two additional conductors. Ives's first use of this device occurred when he depicted musically the Fourth of July parade in his native Danbury when two bands approached the town center from different directions, each playing a different tune. Ives is the latest to join that long grist of Bs — Bach, Beethoven, Berlioz, Brahms, Bruckner, Bartok and 'ives.

Ives himself has asked "How far is anyone justified in trying to express in terms of music the value of anything material, moral, intellectual or spiritual?" He further asks, "Does the success of program music depend more on the program than upon the music?" Anyone who heard both the Brown and the Ives and then later the Haydn and the Ravel might wish to answer that question for himself.

* * *

YESTERDAY afternoon Garrick Ohlsson, one of the epidemic of excellent pianists with which the Tanglewood schedule is spiced this season, gave a straightforward performance of the Beethoven Concerto No. 3, in C minor, Opus 37. He has superlatively fleet fingers and constantly applies a sensitive grasp to his task.

* * *

IT HAS been determined by comparison of seismographic records and research by carbon 14 methods that at practically the same moment that Button Gwinnett was inscribing his name to the top of the first column of Declaration of Independence signers, a 20-year-old lad in Salzburg was feverishly hastening to write the opening allegro of a serenade to be used at the celebration of the wedding of Elisabeth Haffner, the daughter of the town's burgomaster. By the time Matthew Thornton was offered the historic document for his signature at the bottom of the list, young Mozart was completing the last of the nine movements of the piece, which ever since has been known as the Haffner Serenade.

At Tanglewood Friday night Seiji Ozawa conducted the Boston Symphony orchestra in the performance of all nine sections without an intermission. It is assumed that they were not all played without interruption on the occasion for which they were composed, since there were undoubtedly speeches and drinking and merry-making on that day. When played without pause they take more than an hour and, as meticulously as they were performed, they become repetitious and tend to be tedious.

The whole evening was of Mozart's music and served to give several of the first-chair incumbents of the orchestra a chance at stage-front center. Concertmaster Silverstein stepped up to do the first andante with his usual extremely warm and suave tone and also to insert a dazzling cadenza of his own. The rondeau, slightly later, became a display piece.

The concert had opened with the Concerto in C for flute and harp (K.299) played by Doriot Dwyer and Ann Hobson, respectively, Conductor Seiji Ozawa kept the reduced orchestra in admirable restraint and granted the soloists not only easy prominence but also glutinous support. He was equally considerate for the ensuing Concerto for bassoon, in B flat (K.191), in which Sherman Walt was the extraordinary soloist. The center movement, an andante ma adagio, was sung with the inflections and grace of a lieder singer. He, with the flutist, deserved a Medaglio d'oriot.

The weekend hour-long prelude, which precedes the Friday concert by two hours, was played by pianists Claude Frank and Lilian Kallir. Also solely of Mozart, they played with strong authority the C minor fugue (K.426) for two pianos, with infinite grace and charm the andante and five variations in G (K.501) for piano four hands, and, finally, with continuing mastery the D major sonata again for two pianos (K.448).

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 10 1972
New England Newsclip

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 10 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood draws 21,156 for weekend

The second weekend of Tanglewood concerts drew 21,156 patrons as compared to 18,074 for the same number of concerts last year.

Friday night's performance had 6,009 in attendance, the Saturday morning rehearsal had 2,542, while Saturday night drew 4,635 and Sunday 7,970.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 12 1972
New England Newsclip

Quodlibet / By Michael Steinberg

Ohlsson decides on a 'breather'

Bos Symphony

LENOX — Garrick Ohlsson's concert at Tanglewood last Sunday — he played Beethoven's C minor Piano Concerto with Seiji Ozawa and the Boston Symphony — was his 91st and last of the season. For 1972-73, he is down to 75 — "by my own choice, thank goodness." Before he won the Chopin International Competition in Warsaw at 22 in 1970, he was "scraping together maybe 20 dates in a year, and that's the reason I entered the competition."

His options that year were the Chopin and the even more prestigious Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow.

What had the sudden post-Warsaw jump in his fortunes been like. "Well, it was funny. I felt just the same, only all of a sudden everybody wanted me." For a time he was caught short on repertory, of which you need a lot more to sustain a season of 91 concerts than one of 20, and being famous and in demand does not provide the quiet in which to learn music. "It's hard to work on the road, but last season I had four different recital programs and enough concertos." The current spell of "time off" is mainly a study period, and the work now in process of acquisition is the Brahms B flat concerto.

Any idea of the program for his Celebrity Series recital in Symphony Hall in February "Not really. No Chopin" (his Spring '71 concert there was all Chopin). Maybe, he thought, Schumann's great and neglected F sharp minor Sonata: "That's a cause with me right now." It will also be his second recording for EMI-Angel, "with something like 'Papillons' that won't frighten the public away quite so much," the first being an album of all the Chopin Polonaises.

What direction is his repertory moving in these days? "Not enough Beethoven to suit me." Not enough contemporary music either, he added. "It's hard to find the time to give it the first-rate performances it must have. Playing it badly is destructive, and a lot of the modern music specialists play so much of it they can't play it all very well. Right now I'm really fascintated by the Copland Fantasy" And he hopes Elliott Carter will write him a piece. "I play some English and Italian virginal and harpsichord music. It's effective, but I'm not sure it's right. So many of the gestures that are natural on the harpsichord sound mannered on the piano."

"Yes, managers do ask for Chopin, or they say afterwards 'Frankly we were disappointed that you didn't...' It's good box-office anyway, and in my case particularly since it's supposed to be my thing. Yes that was a good program I played in Symphony Hall—no losers on that one." What draws Ohlsson to Chopin is the expansiveness and passion wrapped in a very classical package, "the strong bass line, the counterpoint, the background of Bach and Bellini." And he loves it as an instrumentalist: "It's fantastic for your coordination. If you can play Chopin, really play Chopin, you can play anything. At the end of the first movement of the E minor Concerto there's a passage where you have two different things going on in the right hand plus those offbeat trills in the left, and hell, you ought to be able to do that if you call yourself a professional pianist. And," he added, "I'm growing a natural rubato, which is nice."

"But I don't go to hear many pianists. I get depressed at those concerts, too." What or who depresses him? Ohlsson named X, "that X syndrome." Could he define the syndrome more specifically? Ohlsson looked carefully around the semi-greasy spoon where we sat after his BSO dress rehearsal and leaned across the table. "Deafness," he said.

Bernstein Spellbinds Tanglewood Sell-Out

ORLANDO, FLA.
SENTINEL
D. 113,000 S. 146,000

AUG 6 1972

Bernstein is magic at the Tanglewood Music Festival, where he conducted an open rehearsal and a single concert this year.

By MANLY DUCKWORTH
Music Writer

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a model for other American music festivals, has a prestige in this country comparable to the Salzburg Festival in Europe.

In 1938, Serge Koussevitzky and the BSO began their historic series of concerts in the just completed Music Shed. The Berkshire Music Center, the school which attracts young students from all over the world, was founded in 1940; one of the early students, Leonard Bernstein, studied two summers with Koussevitzky. Bernstein is now musical adviser and his name is magic here. "Lenny's" visits are rare and short and always an occasion.

WE WERE here when he conducted the fourth act of Bizet's "Carmen" in celebration of Tanglewood's 25th anniversary. (He will lead a new production of "Carmen" at the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera this fall.) Two years ago we heard him rehearse the BSO, chorus and soloists in Mahler's "Resurrection" Symphony, and he returned this year to conduct an open rehearsal and a single concert, which was sold out weeks in advance. The weather was fine and an unprecedented crowd sat on the lawn.

He remains a controversial figure but his eminence is unquestioned and his appeal phenomenal. Once the wonder boy of music, he is now the assured master. Essentially he hasn't changed much but his growth is unmistakable. No American conductor has had such universal recognition. Though he studied two years at the Curtis Institute with Fritz Reiner, whose authority was despotic, his way with an orchestra is altogether different. He is not, like Reiner and Szell, a disciplinarian.

He has been a center of controversy all his life and his career has thrived on it. He has spoken of his compulsive need to share and this is one source of his dynamic personality. True, his exuberance has a touch of flamboyance and his histrionics can be obvious and embarrassing, even balletic (crouching, lunging and leaping). He is conversant with every style but remains essentially a romanticist, both as a creator and interpreter. He is an extrovert with mystical leanings. There is nothing tempered about him; he inspires idolatry or the reverse. He works from a solid technical base but his approach is inspirational. The cult of personality is no better demonstrated anywhere than in Bernstein.

OF LATE years he has turned his attention more and more to opera, a "natural" for him. He was the first American to conduct at La Scala. A decade later, his debut at the old Met in a new production of Verdi's "Falstaff" was an unmitigated triumph (for us it was his greatest achievement). His unorthodox approach to Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier" was a sensation in Vienna, where traditions had crystalized and were considered sacrosanct.

His program this year was purely orchestral and devoted to Brahms' 4th and 2nd Symphonies. We heard him play the two symphonies twice in one day, rehearsal in the morning and concert at night. It was a once in a lifetime experience. Brahms and Bernstein made a potent combination, his innate romanticism, iconoclastic in our time, makes Brahms congenial to him. He likes violent contrasts, balancing the delicate lyricism of the first movement of the 2nd Symphony against the liveliness and thrust of the Finale, which becomes almost Dionysiac in his hands. The hero-worshipping crowd got what it wanted, a gymnastic display plus total involvement in the music.

The night before, Bruno Maderna, Italian conductor and avant-garde composer, who is head of the contemporary music activities at the Berkshire Music Center for 1972, gave us a very "Italianate" account of the monumental Symphony No. 1 of Brahms. Taken on its own terms, it was extraordinarily convincing. He was in his element in Stravinsky's 1924 Concerto for Piano and Winds (Earl Wild) was the scintillating piano soloist). He also specializes in old music and led Gabrieli's "Canzona a 12" in a first performance by the BSO.

The most unadulterated delight of all was the performance of the Schumann Piano Concerto by the tiny Spanish artist, Alicia De Larrocha. She uses her resources skillfully, never forcing or striving for bigness beyond her powers. The Intermezzo had a delicacy and patrician refinement that resulted in pure poetry. The Czech conductor, Karel Ancerl, led strong and idiomatic performances of Bohemian music. Dvorak's 8th Symphony spoke in its own plain and honest way. The Finale had an uninhibitedly outspoken and genuinely exciting close. New to the audience were the recently discovered and radiant Sonatas of Vejvanovsky (written in 1666).

An unexpected delight was finding Greg Mercer, tenor, here studying with Phyllis Curtin. He returns to Rollins College in the fall for his senior year and will be singing again in the Florida Symphony Opera Gala.

Berkshire Eagle July 24, 1972

An evening with Brahms and Bernstein

Whitestone

13,000 See Bernstein 'Happening' at Tanglewood

EARL WILD
Ultra-Romantic

By EDWARD FRENCH

The increasingly popular Prelude, offering a short all-Chopin recital by Earl Wild began Tanglewood's fourth weekend.

Mr. Wild's pianistic assets include a fluent technic, a natural caressing touch and a wide variety of tone color. For some listeners his excessive use of rubato prevented fully satisfactory renditions of the G minor and f minor Ballades. However the bulk of the audience revelled in his ultra romantic approach.

Bruno Maderna, at the helm for the second time this season Friday night, began a reading of Giovanni Garbeili's antiphonal Canzona No. 2 that emphasized its straight forwardness and innate vitality.

Brahms' First Symphony fared best in the two middle movements. Mr. Maderna's ideas of the outer movements while highly individual lacked the logic of his previous readings of Schubert and Haydn.

EARL WILD played the solo part of Stravinsky's Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra with the percussive brilliance and excitement this music requires. Bruno Maderna provided an orchestral accompaniment that dovetailed perfectly with the soloist.

Saturday night with Leonard Bernstein making his only appearance at these concerts this season, can best be described as a "happening". Over thirteen thousand admirers of the Bernstein mystique created monumental traffic and parking problems.

At the Concert

The miracle is that so many people wanted to hear him conduct two Brahms Symphonies. No soloist, no large chorus as required in Symphony or the Beethoven Missa Solemnis, his previous program selections here.

What they heard were superb readings of the monumental Fourth Symphony and the melodically appealing Symphony No. 2 in D.

Bernstein made clear the marvelous structure of No. 4, particularly the Finale, a Passacaglia with its imaginative variations building to a huge climax.

NEVER HAVE we heard a more eloquent projection of the melodic beauties of the D major Symphony. It sang from beginning to end and there was a gentle luminosity to its tonal texture that created an added warmth to Bernstein's inspired interpretation.

Needless to say the excution of the orchestra was nigh perfection.

Karel Ancerl made his Tanglewoid bow Sunday afternoon conducting works by Gluck, Vejvanovsky, Dvorak and Schumann.

Alicia De Larrocha, the current first lady of the piano, was soloist in Schumann's A minor Concerto.

FOR WARMTH, beauty of tone, perfect technical control and sheer poetry we must award the diminutive Spanish lady a four star rating. It was about as perfect a performance as one can ever hope to hear.

We were greatly impressed by Mr. Ancerl's persuasive reading of Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 in G. Undoubtedly the fact that Karel Ancerl is a Czech contributed to his instinctive understanding of the folkish melodies and dance rhythms abounding in this thoroughly delightful piece.

Each melody seemed lovelier than its predecessor and Dvorak's unobtrusive skilled craftsmanship has fashioned a tonal masterpiece was fully revealed in Mr. Ancerl's masterful reading.

At one point after sharing the applause during repeated recalls, the orchestra remained seated to applaud the conductor themselves, a rare accolade.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 24 1972

Bernstein at Tanglewood

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, Leonard Bernstein, conductor. At Tanglewood Music Shed, Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass. PROGRAM: All-Brahms: Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Op. 98; Symphony No. 2 in D, Op. 73.

By THEODORE PRICE

LENOX, Mass — At the same moment when his contoversial "Mass" was bringing new audiences into the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, Leonard Bernstein was conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra here Saturday night in a classically traditional all-Brahms program.

Bernstein has always managed to comfortably assume several roles at the same time in America's music panorama. However, Saturday night's program at Tanglewood set no new high-water marks in programming for Bernstein.

In a way it was a kind of prelude — exquisitely prepared, performed at a high standard — to a special filming here by Bernstein's Amberson Productions of these Brahms symphonies tomorrow.

A program insert invites anyone who wishes to come on a first-come, first-serve basis to hear these performances for free, while tapes record the concert for American and German TV networks. Symphony No. 4 will be taped beginning at 10:30 a.m.; No. 2, from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

Saturday night, the shed and lawns were filled with 13,374 people, when Bernstein conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in powerful, dynamic, electrifying performances of the two familiar symphonies.

Bernstein, now powdery maned, has withstood countless critical beatings for the eclectic "Mass," in which he has made some extraordinarily cheap musical compromises for theatrical effects.

But his single Tenglewood appearance this summer made no compromises artistically. The works were broadly stated, like classical oratory rechannelled though the romantic mind of a great 20th-century musical orator.

Bernstein the pianist, Bernstein the astoundingly articulate teacher of music appreciation (in the most legitimate sense of that much abused term), Bernstein the on-again-off-again composer, these roles fell aside for this concert, for Bernstein the conductor at his very best.

Whether in the resigned

In Review

Fourth or the sunny-heated Second, whether in the melodic felicities of the earlier or the bottomless harmonic cataracts of the later work, Bernstein deliberately and indelibly spotlighted central ideas, going after them relentlessly, underscoring, pointing to, elevating obvious meanings first.

Saturday's program set no programming record, such as the first BSO performance of 17th-century Bohemian composer Pavel Vejanovsky's Sonatas for 7 and 10 voices conducted by Karel Ancerl on Sunday afternoon.

However Bernstein's Brahms evening again signified his importance as a rare conductor. He had already announced that he will take the 1973-74 season as a sabbatical from all public performances, to channel his forces into writing music.

Im Saturday's and tomorrow's concerts at Tanglewood are any reference point whatsoever, his sabbatical season wil lbe one in which Bernstein is conspicuously absent from those podiums upon which he now stands, undisputed, as America's musical boy-wonder turned symphonic orator.

Democrat and Chronicle
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
D. 144,697 SUN. 221,661

JUL 24 1972

Symphony Gored, Critic Bored At Tanglewood

Although it would be perhaps melodramatic to consider the old and comfortable Shed at Tangletood as a Plaza and three conductors on a weekend akin to the matadors performing mano a mano, because then the Boston Symphony Orchestra would have to be (to complete the analogy), the bull.

Certainly no one wants the BSO to be dsagged out in a body by the heels minus an ear, or taill perhaps, but the orchestra must sometimes feel that it has been at the very least improperly used.

The first two conductors, Bruno Maderna and Leonard Bernstein, are both interesting to contemplate as both are brushed and encumbered with external associations that make them larger than life which is always fun for the pedestrian and envious spectator languishing reluctantly on the outside looking in.

Bernstein has been both appreciated and flofged in these pages often in the past so suffice it to say that on Saturday that remarkable amalgam of musicianship, charisma and pizzazz again drew a huge crowd, perhaps 15,000, to hear his readings of Brahms' Symphonies 2 and 4.

Maderna is very interesting in other ways.

He is now well accepted as a conductor. His career in certain respects parallels that of Pierre Boulez and perhaps this is not all to the good. Both men became prominent on the strength of their creative activities and with some reason. But it is a matter of historical fact that the uneasy coincidence of the creative artist abiding with a professional performer does not work, and, quite naturally it is the creative side of it that suffers. This is not good very simply because we have considerably more fine conductors than we have composers. And it is also a fact that the creative output of both men has been reduced sharply since they opted for the performer's call.

Friday night, Maderna's choice of a program was to toss together three widely disparate creative disciplines, namely Gabrieli, Brasms and Stravinsky.

Gabrieli, for whom Maderna has a kinl of psychic affinity, (he has transcribed and arranged several of his works for orchestra) should not be dismissed as one of these somewhat obscure composers that avant garde writer often exhume and exploit in what appears to be an expiation for their atonal sins. It is not uncommon, this seemingly odd relationship, indeed it occurs more often than not with modernists. So be it. It is a harmless aberration albeit odd.

Stravinsky is Maderna's soul brother and it would have been surprising if the reading of his Concerto for Piano and Winds had been any less impressive than it was.

Earl Wild was the soloist and the work, composed in 1925, was done wits emotion and excitement. The music is driving and purposeful, with a flavor that is strongly reminiscent of a great jazz pianist striding along on the wave of a strong up beat tempo. Wild played it well and Maderna had those fine players from the BSO right along with him.

Brahms' Symphony No. 1 was the final choice.

Maderna, it appears, attempts to overcome his real ennui for music of this stripe by jacking up the tempi. In the first movement he went at a rapid clip trying to make Brahms, that ponderous old romantic, something that he is not. Like Stravinsky, say. No way.

It is always interesting nonetheless, this brash tinkering with tempi, it is done all the time in jazz and in jazz it works. It has considerably less good luck in a Brahms symphony because of the nature of the idiom.

The third conductor for the weekend (on Sunday) was Karl Ancerl and you will hear about that temorrow.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 24 1972

Music Review

Bernstein And Brahms At Tanglewood

BY MARTHA deB. BEAVER

The mature director Leonard Bernstein and the mature composer Johannes Brahms came together Saturday evening at Tanglewood in a mutually introspective and seriously wrought statement of the composer's fourth symphony, that didn't quite evoke the deeply felt contemplation one associates with this grandiose culmination of Brahms' symphonic works.

It was a homecoming for the youthful protege of Serge Koussevitsky, the Boston Symphony players standing at his entrance, Bernstein shaking hands all around, and the orchestra stamping their approval at the concert's close, along with a wildly ecstatic audience.

Bernstein was surprisingly restrained in his uniquely personal histrionics, leaping for the first time only at the high point of the cumulative intensity that marks the impressive finish of the fourth's first movement.

We try not to let this still youthful (55) international favorite distract us from the music and musicians, but it is difficult to disassociate the two entities. We deplore the lack of empathy (perhaps not true) between Barnstein and his musicians (granted he has given them his personal interpretations during rehearsal) and their transmission of this mutual accord to the audience.

It seemed as if the players carried on alone a good bit of the time while Bernstein reveled in the sounds they were producing, coming to earth to grab the baton in both hands for an especially emotional or stressed section, occasionally passing the stick from one hand to another as if it were hot and cumbersome.

This is not to say that the performance was dull; it did lack that sensitive empathy that provokes an unusually effective reading. Brahms, however, in this noble culmination of his symphonic works, so ensnares the listener with his intricate web of melodies, orchestral color and development that attention is held securely as one subtle statement meshes with and supersedes another in beauty and grandeur.

Consider the slow movement, sheer loveliness, opening with a call from the horns that gives way almost immediately to the clarinets and a wonderfully tender wistful theme with pizzicato strings ... the first real scherzo Brahms ever wrote for a symphony, adding a triangle and piccolo for a brief bout of boisterousness ... and the fourth movement, another departure in form, realized in a masterful passacaglia, (variations on a ground bass.)

The short eight-bar theme was borrowed from Bach's Cantata No. 150, announced with full strength of woodwinds and brasses, (magnificently performed) then repeated in 30 different variations culminating in a long and elaborate coda. It includes one of the loveliest flute solos ever written, and beautifully played by Doriot Anthony Dwyer.

Smartly programmed, the second symphony seemed more suited to the Bernstein we continue to think of as "that young man." (But as Madame Koussevitsky remarked when we mentioned this, "music keeps everyone young.")

The pastoral setting of the first movement was established with graceful evocation, the underlying quarter noted by basses well marked for the listener's later recognition in variety throughout the symphony. It is a work of sunlight and mystery, delicacy and intensity, the second movement defying description in the beautiful weaving of its instrumental variety.

Bernstein couldn't resist a kiss of pleasure thrown to the first violins with their whispering interruption of the minuet-like wisp of a theme in the third movement.

And again he lost himself in a crouch while drawing a perfect pianissimo from the strings at the opening of the fourth movement, preluding a leap and the exciting entry of clarinsts, oboes and bassoons rising to great heights with the full orchestra, and as mysteriously subsiding, again building up to an exciting and brilliant finish.

He has a kind of brash dignity, an earthy stature and self-possession, this talented artist, that contrasts sharply with the elegant bearing and innate sense of humility so obvious in the Czech conductor Karel Ancerl at Sunday's concert.

Ancerel opened his program of varied composers with Gluck's Overture ot "Imphegenia in Aulis," depicting the stately and foreboding character with disarming simplicity.

Two works dating from 1666 by Pavel Vejsanovsky were heard in a premiere performance by the BSO. Czech scholars have unearthed these from the archepiscopal archives at Kromenz, a small Moravian town where the composer spent his working life.

Both quote from the folk melody "Sleep, my little angel." The first, Sonata a 7, simpler of the two, scored for two trumpets, strings and organ continuo is a sprightly and cheerful dance movement which evoked our own square dance figures. The second, Sonata a 10, more complex in instrumentation and design, sounded as if it needed more rehearsals, the antiphonal effect not always secured, and the changes from 4-4 to $^{3}/_{4}$ meters a bit shaky.

Alicia De Larrocha, Barcelona-born, was the petite soloist for Schumann's piano concerto in A minor, Op. 54. Full of the composer's happily replete state at the time of its writing in 1845, much of the concerto's romantic glow and youthful exuberance were effaced in an overly delicate exposition.

True, the pianist's nuances were often breathtaking (the beginning was exquisitely portrayed in their molding, but there was enormous contrast between orchestral sound and the small-voiced, often muffled, piano timbre.

Runs, often muddied, were nonetheless accurate, trills too, but inaccuracies stood out as childish lapses. Ancerl, seeming a trifle anxious at times, but graciously sympathetic, coordinated orchestra and soloist with admirable restraint.

Miss De Larrocha's performance little resembled the impetuous enthusiaam of Schumann's romantic felicity; her color palette contained few shadings that could evoke delicate yet ecstatic emotions. It had the more diffused quality of Debussy, and just barely intimating the slowly awakening passion of a lovelorn teenager.

But Dvorak's eighth symphony through Ancerl's dedicated interpretation turned the afternoon into a bewitchingly productive experience.

The most national of all his works, composed at the time when he was leaning toward the symphonic poem rather than traditional symphonic form, it is full of strong and delightful contrasts, secular and semi-religious. The second, most original of all Dvorak's slow movements is a delicious tone-poem of Czech village life, with a touch of pathos in the opening bars, and, as in the first, the loveliest bird sounds from the flute (and oboe) rising from blare of brass and tympani.

Ancerl coaxed and cajoled, knowing exactly what he wanted from his very responsive musicians, his directions never overreaching the bounds of decorum. He does recall deSabato in both his stature, direction and interpretation.

The sudience was overjoyed and displayed its approval with shouts and applause, loathe to leave the already dispersed joyous sounds.

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200

JUL 25 1972

New England Newsclip

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

JUL 25 1972

New England Newsclip

Proud, bouyant performance

Ancerl's Tanglewood Dvorak

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Sunday afternoon's Boston Symphony concert at Tanglewood brought the pleasure of the conducting of Karel Ancerl, the Toronto Symphony's Music Director (and when will we have that pleasure at one of the orchestra's concerts in Boston?). It is a pleasure because everything is clear, straight-forward, with the inner parts defined with lots of life, all that producing not only unobstructed views of the music but also secure, relaxed, and rich-sounding orchestral playing.

Ancerl's big opportunity Sunday was in Dvorak's lovely Symphony No. 8 in in G major, of which he delivered a proud and buoyant performance, beautifully played, but he gave an exceptionally grand and absorbing one also of the overture to Gluck's "Iphigenie en Aulide." He also provided a rhythmic and lively setting for Alicia De Larrocha's wooden and curiously constrained playing in the Schumann Piano Concerto.

Earl Wild, who was the soloist at Friday night's Boston Symphony concert, is also not a pianist I usually hear with much pleasure, but, because it needs his brilliance and drive but does not call for the grace and flexibility which he does not command, I thought Stravinsky's sternly amusing Piano Concerto a piece that uses him effectively.

It did not add up to a good performance because what was going on in the orchestra and between orchestra and soloist was so awful. The orchestra, which in this piece is winds and basses only, was badly out of tune and hardly ever was it together with the piano. Much of the solo part consists of unbroken streams of sixteenth-notes where the pianist really cannot do any thing but keep going: in such passages it is the responsibility of the conductor to stay with his soloist, and that Bruno Maderna failed to do. On the other hand, even in the more spacious moments where it is helpful for the soloist to coordinate his activities with those of the orchestra, Wild did not look up and just let the chords fall where they would. I cannot write the script for Mr. Wild's and Mr. Maderna's lives up to 9:15 last Friday evening to explain the background for that near-debacle.

Both Ancerl on Sunday and Maderna on Friday made unusual incursions into the 17th century. Ancerl conducted a couple of one-movement sonatas by the Bohemian composer, Pavel Vejvanovsky, the second more varied than the first in rhythm and texture, both with brilliant trumpet parts and altogether attractive in an open, uncomplicated sort of way. Maderna went into more interesting territory with his own scoring (getting close to Respighi with its divided violas and purling harps) of a 12-part canzona by Giovanni Gabrieli, a fascinating, rhythmically highly sophisticated piece. Neither performances made much of a move in the direction of Baroque authenticity; tach, however, was effective and very much alive on its own terms, and Maderna unraveled the complexities of his Gabrieli piece with great skill and intelligence.

PATRIOT LEDGER
QUINCY, MASS.
D. 70,525
JUL 25 1972
New England Newsclip

Brahms and Bernstein: A Magnetic Combination

By Peter M. Knapp

Attendance at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's programs at Tanglewood in Lenox this summer is up some 20 per cent. And so far, the big attractions have been three B's — Beethoven, Brahms and Bernstein.

Two weekends ago, an all-Beethoven festival which included the Ninth Symphony led by William Steinberg established a Tanglewood attendance record. This past weekend, it was Leonard Bernstein conducting a pair of Brahms symphonies which drew the patrons, 13,374 of them on a glowing Saturday evening. Though Tanglewood programming by and large is not adventurous this season, the staples are bringing in big audiences.

The magnetic Mr. Bernstein, looking tanned and trim, didn't disappoint his audience with his radiant and mature direction of the Brahms Symphonies No. 4 and No. 2. (This was a Brahms weekend, the First Symphony being presented Friday night — see below.) Today, Bernstein is filming performances of the two symphonies (through an American-German partnership of Amberson Video — Bernstein's firm—and Unitel Productions) and audiences were invited free to the taping in the Tanglewood Shed.

Those expecting flamboyant, supercharged Brahms Saturday night probably were startled by Bernstein's restraint and traditional approach. These were poised and songful perrformances, with superior orchestral craftsmanship, abounding with thoughtfully conceived detail. Above all, most of the music-making had a natural flow guided by sensible tempi, and the melodic lines were permitted to breathe easily.

Alicia De Larrocha

Leonard Bernstein

Balance And Clarity

Especially in the more rugged No. 4, I was impressed by Bernstein's balances and clarity of counterpoint. And there was the strong sense of rhythm which characterizes Bernstein's work — pizzicati, for example, that were clean and incisive, not simply hasty, limp plucking.

In the finale of No. 2, Bernstein pushed somewhat and there were some loose ends (one entrance mis-timed by one of the maestro's bounding leaps — he didn't come down in time!.) In all, a superb concert with abundance of fire and grace.

Sunday afternoon, the podium went to Karel Ancerl, former musical director of the Czech Philharmonic and the successor to Seiji Ozawa as music director of the Toronto Symphony.

Easily the highlight of this warm, languid summer afternoon was Ancerl's authoritative direction of Antonin Dvoraks' Symphony No. 8 in G, which the audience of 7,215 could hardly wait to cheer. Ancerl seems to understand the music of his countryman as completely as did George Szell, and the result was a brilliantly realized performance of this sunny, tuneful symphony — and another example of the BSO's adaptability to guest conductors.

Above The Crowd

From the mellow opening statement of the celli, one sensed that nothing much was going to go wrong and that much would be above routine. And so it was. An outpouring of song. The waltz in the allegretto that seemed to float, and the sparkle of the other lovely dances in this third movement. And especially an eloquent and dramatic slow movement, full of slavic mystery, set forth like some soliloquy of nature and legend.

There was other Czech music on the program, an engaging pair of sonatas by the 17th century Bohemian composer Pavel Vejvanovsky for strings, brass and organ continuo in antiphonal style. And there was a warm and sonorous opener in Gluck's Overture to "Iphigenie en Aulide," perhaps more 19th-century Central European than 18th-century in approach.

The other major work on the program was Schumann's piano concerto, with the Spanish pianist Alicia de Larrocha as soloist. It was a strange performance — mostly chamber-scaled, low-key, at times refined to the point of blandness.

Miss De Larrocha is a small woman, but she can put out the sound when she has to. Mostly she chose to underplay in neat, often subtle, delicate dimensions. Certainly an antidote to a lot of the uncouth blasting one can encounter in the Schumann, but rather too placid and uneventful for the piece.

In the first movement there were some moments of uncoordination between soloist and orchestra, and some oddly offbeat attacks from the pianist. In the Intermezzo, her phrasing often sounded overly cautious and mannered, and the finale seemed like an exercise in cool, genteel passagework. One missed the sweep and passion of the warhorse.

Several hours before Friday evening's concert, a king-sized thunderstorm swept over Lenox and environs, felling trees and sweeping leaves and twigs over the Tanglewood lawns. But it failed to completely clear the air, and a damp breeze fluttered through the shed for Bruno Maderna's program of Gabrieli, Stravinsky and Brahms. 5,071 attended.

The sticky weather is giving the musicians some problems, and the orchestral sound that evening at times showed the effects of that dampness. On a clearer evening, for example, Stravinsky's Concerto for piano and wind orchestra might have come through with more of its requisite bright, lean sound. As it was, the texture seemed a bit thick, though many of the delicious "Bachy" ideas and especially the irreverent banter of the last movement perked well.

Technical Security

Earl Wild was the soloist, scampering securely through the busy toccata-like figurations with their changing rhy[illegible] stresses. The finale had its flashes of [illegible] with Wild's quick, light touch counterpointing the orchestra's playful banter. One would have liked a more brittle attack and perhaps a dash of emphasis, but the soloist was well applauded by audience and colleagues. Earlier, he had played a mini-Chopin recital for the Weekend Prelude in a program that showed his prodigious technique yet also episodes of rhythmic and interpretive sloppiness.

The other major work on the program, Brahms' Symphony No. 1, received a curious and original reading by Maderna in which flexibility of tempo was carried to extremes. The opening, for example, seemed conventional enough until Maderna took the main allegro section at a furious pace, yet pausing often by the wayside to shape individual sections.

Look, he seemed to be saying, each theme-group ought to have its own characteristic tempo. But the result was a stop-go kind of performance predominantly too fast for comfort, and it was a tribute to the orchestra players that they could follow such an unorthodox, changing scheme.

In the second movement, Maderna sometimes made such flexibility a kind of virtue, giving each phrase its own breathing-time. Yet over-all the lack of a single coherent tempo scheme, the rubato, and the speed of some of the sections made the performance more unsettling than revelatory.

The program opened with Maderna's arrangement of a Canzona a 12 by Giovanni Gabrieli, a piece of rich Veneti scarlet-and-gold polyphony. Maderna, who specializes in the avant-garde and pre-classical works as composer and conductor, has arranged this music for choirs of strings, brass and winds respectively, and the whole is a rich tapestry of sound. The modern strings, however, seem pretty lush and overbearing for this music in contrast to the clearer-speaking brass and winds.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 22 1972
New England Newsclip

James Levine

Eugene Ormandy

Tanglewood

Eugene Ormandy and James Levine to conduct in Lenox next weekend

Eugene Ormandy, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will conduct two concerts by the Boston Symphony next Friday and Saturday nights at Tanglewood. James Levine principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct Sunday afternoon, July 30.

For the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday, the Boston Symphony String Trio — Joseph Silverstein, violin, Burton Fine, viola, Jules Eskin, cello, and Gilbert Kalish, piano — will present a chamber music recital. They will perform Beethoven's String Trio in G, Opus 9, No. 1, and Brahms' Piano Quartet in C-Minor, Opus 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are open to all general admission ticket holders of the 9 p.m. concert.

Ormandy will conduct the orchestra at 9, opening with Brahms' Tragic Overture, followed by Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. The concert will conclude with Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. The Tragic Overture is one of Brahm's best known orchestral works. Sibelius wrote and revised his fifth symphony during World War I. The work is thought to reaffirm the Finnish composer's love of life. The Bartok concerto was commissioned and first conducted by Serge Koussevitzky in 1943 and 1944, respectively.

Levine will lead the orchestra's 10:30 a.m. Saturday rehearsal of the Sunday afternoon concert. Tickets are $2.50 each.

Ormandy will conduct at 8:30 p.m. Saturday Beethoven's Lenore Overture No. 3 Hindemith's Mathis der Maler will follow, and, after intermission, Strauss' Ein Heldenleben with Silverstein, concertmaster, as violin soloist. The Lenore Overture No. 3 is a revision for Beethoven's only opera, Fidelio. The Hindemith work, written in the early 1930s, is considered a modern "classic."

Silverstein will again perform a violin solo in Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, July 30, with Levine conducting. After intermission, Levine will conduct the first Tanglewood performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6. The Mozart concerto is one of five the composer wrote at 19 years of age. Mahler's Sixth was introduced to America in 1947, 36 years after the composer's death. It is not often performed in the U.S. or Europe.

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264
JUL 25 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood: Bernstein, Ancerl as musicmakers

By Louis Snyder

Lenox, Mass.

For openers, it was Bach. Last week, in three attendance-record-breaking concerts, it was Beethoven. This past weekend at Tanglewood, who else but Brahms? That is, Brahms and a few others.

On Friday evening, Bruno Maderna conducted Brahms's First Symphony, prefaced by some Gabrieli and Stravinsky. Saturday's program was comprised of the Fourth and Second Symphonies in Leonard Bernstein's readings, and in August the Third Symphony and the Second Piano Concerto will be coming along. Karel Ancerl was Sunday afternoon's conductor, and Alicia De Larrocha made her Boston Symphony Tanglewood debut as soloist in the Schumann Piano Concerto. Gluck, Vejvanovsky, and Dvorak were the other composers but not a note of Brahms on that occasion.

Bernstein's rare appearances with the BSO have turned out to be rather special events, and his all-Brahms evening was another. 13,374 listeners were on hand. The orchestra seems at one with him, and for those with long enough memories, the sound they produced together conjured up memories of the tonal velvet available by the yard in the Koussevitzky days.

This was not one of the conductor's more actively demonstrative appearances. Rather he directed both symphonies with unusual restraint, and let smoldering sonorities reveal themselves with a minimum of display. The result was impressively moving. The emotion, airiness, and grandeur that are present in varying porportions in these two works welled up and poured forth in torrents of warm but controlled sound. It was a performance that evoked introspection rather than excitement, that is until the end of the concert when the crowd's enthusiasm was showered on Bernstein and his players.

Although it had not been announced in advance, the Brahms-Bernstein program was the first of two performances. It is being filmed for television today in two sessions in the Tanglewood Music Shed as an American-German collaborative effort by Amberson Video and Unitel Productions for eventual distribution here and abroad. The public is invited (gratis) to be present from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. (the Fourth), and from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. (the Second). The invitation extended on condition that the audience remain through each complete session.

Sunday afternoon's program had about it all the amenities that make outdoor listening on a sunny day so pleasurable. There was Karel Ancerl, Czech music director of the Toronto Symphony, approaching a varied program with a great deal of empathy, and receiving in return some glowing, friendly playing from BSO musicians. There was the Spanish pianist, Alicia De Larrocha, playing at Tanglewood for the first time after an overdue debut with the orchestra in Boston last winter. And there was the conductor's special affinity for music of two Bohemian composers, the obscure 17th-century Pavel Vejvanovsky, and Antonin Dvorak, in whom Americans have a proprietary interest.

The Vejvanovsky pieces — Sonata a 7 and Sonata a 10 — are charming works for two trumpets, strings, and organ, and two trumpets, three trombones, strings, and organ, respectively. Courtly, colorful, and joyous, they had brilliant performances by the trumpets of Armando Ghitalla and Andre Come, the trombones of William Gibson, Ronald Barron, and Gordon Hallberg, Berj Zamkochian at the organ, and some luscious sound from the string family.

Alicia De Larrocha

. . . was soloist with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood over the weekend in Schumann's Piano Concerto. On Aug. 8, she will play a Bach-Mozart recital in the "Mostly Mozart" series at New York's Philharmonic Hall.

Miss De Larrocha is an exquisite pianist, and her playing of the Schumann Concerto, if not scaled perhaps to the all-outdoors acoustics of the Music Shed, was nevertheless sensitive, disciplined, and crystalline. There were moments when the full orchestral power overwhelmed her, but there were more frequent moments when the strength and individuality of her artistry shone through.

The concert, which had begun with a stately, rather austere account of Gluck's "Iphigenia in Aulis" Overture, concluded with a rousing, singing, skyborne realization of Dvorak's Eighth Symphony, which at its end had the musicians onstage applauding their conductor with audience-type fervor.

96

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Free Concert Offered At Tanglewood Shed

LENOX — There will be a free concert of Brahms Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4 conducted by Leonard Bernstein at the Tanglewood music shed here Tuesday afternoon.

A German-American film partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions will film the concert, performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Since an audience is desired for the filming, Amberson Video has invited music lovers to attend the concert free of charge. Regular concert seating will be available on a 'first come, first served' basis.

The first filming sessions (of Symphony No. 4) will take place from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The second session (of Symphony No. 2) will take place from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The audience is urged to come before the starting time of each session and once there to stay to the end.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 23 1972 New England Newsclip

Bernstein to Conduct for Film

LENOX — Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct special performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' Symphonies No. 2 and No. 4 in a special filming session in the Music shed at Tanglewood Tuesday.

The performances will be taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first session at 10.30 a.m. will be a performance of Symphony No. 4 and the second, from 3.30 to 6.30 p.m., will be Symphony No. 2.

An audience is desired for the filming. Amberson Video has invited the public to the sessions without charge. Regular concert seating will be available on a first-come, first-served basis.

People are urged to arrive before starting time of the session and, once there, to remain until the end.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 28 1972 New England Newsclip

Whitestone

THE CAMERA EYE was on Leonard Bernstein Tuesday as the Tanglewood adviser conducted the Boston Symphony in special performances of Brahms works that were taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first two-hour session featured Symphony No. 4, and the second, Symphony No. 2. The Tanglewood Shed was approximately one-third full for both of the performances.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood draws 31,217 for weekend

A total of 31,217 persons attended Tanglewood over the weekend, almost 7,000 below the 38,186 for the comparable weekend last year. Total Tanglewood attendance, however, is several thousand ahead of last year.

Friday night's concert drew 5,071; Saturday's open rehearsal, 5,557; Saturday night, 13,374; and Sunday afternoon, 7,215.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Free BSO Concert At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct free performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' symphonies no. 2 and no. 4 in a special filming session in the Music Shed at Tanglweood tomorrow.

The performances will be taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first session takes place from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will be Brahms' Symphony No. 4. The second session (Brahms' Symphony no. 2) takes place from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

An audience in the Music Shed is desired for the filming, and Amberson Video is extending an invitation to the public to attend either or both sessions without charge.

Regular concert seating will be available on a first come, first served basis. Persons are requested to arrive before the starting time of the session, and once there, to stay to the end. It is understood that persons attending the filming sessions may be photographed and included in the final pictures.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

BSO invites the public to free Bernstein filming

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct special performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' Symphonies No. 2 and 4 in a special filming session in the Music Shed on Tuesday.

Taped session

The performances will be taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first session takes place from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will be Symphony No. 4. The second session, with Symphony No. 2, takes place from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

An audience in the Music Shed is desired for the filming, and Amberson Video is extending an invitation to the public to attend either or both sessions without charge. Regular concert seating will be available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Persons are requested to arrive before the starting time of the session, and once there, to stay to the end. It is understood that persons attending the filming sessions may be photographed and included in the final pictures.

The filming will give the public an opportunity to see some of the orchestra's work behind the scenes.

96

HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
D. 16,200

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Free Concert Offered At Tanglewood Shed

LENOX — There will be a free concert of Brahms Symphonies Nos. 2 and 4 conducted by Leonard Bernstein at the Tanglewood music shed here Tuesday afternoon.

A German-American film partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions will film the concert, performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Since an audience is desired for the filming, Amberson Video has invited music lovers to attend the concert free of charge. Regular concert seating will be available on a 'first come, first served' basis.

The first filming sessions (of Symphony No. 4) will take place from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The second session (of Symphony No. 2) will take place from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The audience is urged to come before the starting time of each session and once there to stay to the end.

TIMES
HARTFORD, CONN.
D. 130,857

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Free BSO Concert At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — Tanglewood Adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct free performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' symphonies no. 2 and no. 4 in a special filming session in the Music Shed at Tanglweood tomorrow.

The performances will be taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first session takes place from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will be Brahms' Symphony No. 4. The second session (Brahms' Symphony no. 2) takes place from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

An audience in the Music Shed is desired for the filming, and Amberson Video is extending an invitation to the public to attend either or both sessions without charge.

Regular concert seating will be available on a first come, first served basis. Persons are requested to arrive before the starting time of the session, and once there, to stay to the end. It is understood that persons attending the filming sessions may be photographed and included in the final pictures.

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 23 1972 New England Newsclip

Bernstein to Conduct for Film

LENOX — Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct special performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' Symphonies No. 2 and No. 4 in a special filming session in the Music shed at Tanglewood Tuesday.

The performances will be taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first session at 10.30 a.m. will be a performance of Symphony No. 4 and the second, from 3.30 to 6.30 p.m., will be Symphony No. 2.

An audience is desired for the filming. Amberson Video has invited the public to the sessions without charge. Regular concert seating will be available on a first-come, first-served basis.

People are urged to arrive before starting time of the session and, once there, to remain until the end.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 28 1972 New England Newsclip

Whitestone

THE CAMERA EYE was on Leonard Bernstein Tuesday as the Tanglewood adviser conducted the Boston Symphony in special performances of Brahms works that were taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first two-hour session featured Symphony No. 4, and the second, Symphony No. 2. The Tanglewood Shed was approximately one-third full for both of the performances.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood draws 31,217 for weekend

A total of 31,217 persons attended Tanglewood over the weekend, almost 7,000 below the 38,186 for the comparable weekend last year. Total Tanglewood attendance, however, is several thousand ahead of last year.

Friday night's concert drew 5,071; Saturday's open rehearsal, 5,557; Saturday night, 13,374; and Sunday afternoon, 7,215.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

BSO invites the public to free Bernstein filming

Tanglewood adviser Leonard Bernstein will conduct special performances of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahms' Symphonies No. 2 and 4 in a special filming session in the Music Shed on Tuesday.

Taped session

The performances will be taped by an American-German partnership of Amberson Video and Unitel Productions. The first session takes place from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will be Symphony No. 4. The second session, with Symphony No. 2, takes place from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.

An audience in the Music Shed is desired for the filming, and Amberson Video is extending an invitation to the public to attend either or both sessions without charge. Regular concert seating will be available on a first-come, first-served basis. Persons are requested to arrive before the starting time of the session, and once there, to stay to the end. It is understood that persons attending the filming sessions may be photographed and included in the final pictures.

The filming will give the public an opportunity to see some of the orchestra's work behind the scenes.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 28 1972

Ormandy To Conduct 2 Concerts

Eugene Ormandy will conduct two concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as part of the fifth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

The musical director of the Philadelphia orchestra will conduct today's concert at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The program with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by the Sibelius Symphony No. 5. The concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, James Levine leads the orchestra's fifth open rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will be from the Sunday afternoon concert.

Saturday evening, at 8:30 p.m., Ormandy conducts Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. 3, Heldenleben (A Hero's Life), der Maler, and Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life), with Boston Symphony concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin solist.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 and concludes with the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

The weekend opens today with a Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio—Joseph Silverstein, violin; Burton Fine, viola; Jules Eskin, cello, and Gilbert Kalish, piano—will present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahm's Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. symphony concert.

Tanglewood Concerts Announced

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — Philadephia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28 and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio will perform Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy will conduct the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Tragic overture, Sibelius' Symphony No. 5 and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning at 10:30, James Levine leads the orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season, offering a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Sunday afternoon concert. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Mr. Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler" and, following intermission, Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Shed, Mr. Levine will conduct the orchestra in Mozart's 4th Violin Concerto with Mr. Silverstein again the violin soloist. Following intermission, there will be the First Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

POST
WALLINGFORD, CONN.
W. 7,920
JUL 27 1972
New England Newsclip

Brahms and Bartok set for Tanglewood

Music by Brahms, Sibelius and Bartok will open the weekend's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, July 28, at 9 p.m.

Eugene Ormandy will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of music by Beethoven, Hindemith and Strauss on Saturday, July 29 at 8:30 p.m. The Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. will include selections by Mozart and Mahler.

REFORMER
BRATTLEBORO, VT.
D. 8,000
JUL 14 1972
New England Newsclip

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245
JUL 26 1972

FOR THE RECORD
For The Record

Theater Art Music

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony conducted by Eugene Ormandy; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy conducting a program of Beethoven, Hindemits, Strauss; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., James Levine conducts a program of Mozart, Mahler.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 28 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS

BEETHOVEN	String trio in G op. 9 no. 1	Adagio – allegro con brio Adagio ma non tanto e cantabile Scherzo: allegro Presto
		JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin BURTON FINE viola JULES ESKIN cello
*BRAHMS	Piano quartet in C minor op. 60	Allegro non troppo Scherzo: allegro Andante Finale: allegro comodo
		GILBERT KALISH piano JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin BURTON FINE viola JULES ESKIN cello

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS RECORD EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & *RCA RECORDS

19

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285
JUL 27 1972
New England Newsclip

Ormandy at Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy will conduct two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow and Saturday as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The weekend will open with a prelude at 7 p.m. Friday. The Symphony String Trio will present a chamber music recital. At 9 p.m., Ormandy will conduct Brahm's Tragic overture, Sibelius' Symphony No. 5 and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. Ormandy will again conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Music to be performed will include Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

James Levine will conduct Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with Mozart's fourth violin concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003
JUL 24 1972

Tanglewood To Present Boston Symphony Orchestra

LENOX, Mass. — Eugene Ormandy and James Levine will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood during its fifth weekend of concerts, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Ormandy will conduct the orchestra Friday and Saturday; Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct Sunday afternoon.

The weekend opens 7 p.m. on Friday, when the Boston Symphony String Trio will present a chamber music recital including Beethoven's "String Trio in G" and Brahms' "Piano Quartet in C Minor."

At 9 p.m. Friday Ormandy will conduct the orchestra through Brahms' "Tragic" overture; Sibelius' "Symphony No. Five" and Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra."

On Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal of the concert to be presented that night at 8:30 o'clock: Beethoven's "Leonore" overture; Hindesmith's "Mathis der Maler" and Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

Sunday's concert begins at 2:30 o'clock, and features Mozart's "Violin Concerto No. Four" (with Joseph Silverstein on violin) and Mahler's "Symphony No. Six."

The Herald-News
PASSAIC, N. J.
D. 80,569
JUL 28 1972

Eugene Ormandy Tanglewood guest

Eugene Ormandy, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra this evening and tomorrow as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct the Boston Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Joseph Silverstein violinist, will be soloist Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656
JUL 25 1972

LEVINE LEADS. James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in concert Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The program will be: Mahler's Symphony No. 5 and Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 in D Major, featuring Joseph Silverstein.

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000
JUL 26 1972
New England Newsc

Boston Symphony Trio Slated At Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9:00 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 28 1972

Ormandy To Conduct 2 Concerts

Eugene Ormandy will conduct two concerts with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as part of the fifth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

The musical director of the Philadelphia orchestra will conduct today's concert at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The program with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by the Sibelius Symphony No. 5. The concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, James Levine leads the orchestra's fifth open rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will be from the Sunday afternoon concert.

Saturday evening, at 8:30 p.m., Ormandy conducts Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. 3, Heldenleben (A Hero's Life), der Maler, and Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life), with Boston Symphony concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin solist.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p.m., James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 and concludes with the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

The weekend opens today with a Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio—Joseph Silverstein, violin; Burton Fine, viola; Jules Eskin, cello, and Gilbert Kalish, piano—will present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahm's Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. symphony concert.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 26 1972

FOR THE RECORD
For The Record

Theater Art Music

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony conducted by Eugene Ormandy; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy conducting a program of Beethoven, Hindemits, Strauss; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., James Levine conducts a program of Mozart, Mahler.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday July 28 1972 at 7 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

WEEKEND PRELUDE

BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS

BEETHOVEN String trio in G op. 9 no. 1

Adagio – allegro con brio
Adagio ma non tanto e cantabile
Scherzo: allegro
Presto

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin
BURTON FINE viola
JULES ESKIN cello

*BRAHMS Piano quartet in C minor op. 60

Allegro non troppo
Scherzo: allegro
Andante
Finale: allegro comodo

GILBERT KALISH piano
JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin
BURTON FINE viola
JULES ESKIN cello

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY CHAMBER PLAYERS RECORD EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON & *RCA RECORDS

19

Poughkeepsie Journal
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
D. 35,739 SUN. 41,003

JUL 24 1972

Tanglewood To Present Boston Symphony Orchestra

LENOX, Mass. — Eugene Ormandy and James Levine will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood during its fifth weekend of concerts, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Ormandy will conduct the orchestra Friday and Saturday; Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct Sunday afternoon.

The weekend opens 7 p.m. on Friday, when the Boston Symphony String Trio will present a chamber music recital including Beethoven's "String Trio in G" and Brahms' "Piano Quartet in C Minor."

At 9 p.m. Friday Ormandy will conduct the orchestra through Brahms' "Tragic" overture; Sibelius' "Symphony No. Five" and Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra."

On Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. there will be an open rehearsal of the concert to be presented that night at 8:30 o'clock: Beethoven's "Leonore" overture; Hindesmith's "Mathis der Maler" and Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

Sunday's concert begins at 2:30 o'clock, and features Mozart's "Violin Concerto No. Four" (with Joseph Silverstein on violin) and Mahler's "Symphony No. Six."

PRESS
BRISTOL, CONN.
D. 18,000

JUL 26 1972

New England Newsc

Boston Symphony Trio Slated At Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9:00 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

The Herald-News
PASSAIC, N. J.
D. 80,569

JUL 28 1972

Eugene Ormandy Tanglewood guest

Eugene Ormandy, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra this evening and tomorrow as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct the Boston Symphony on Sunday afternoon. Joseph Silverstein violinist, will be soloist Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656

JUL 25 1972

LEVINE LEADS. James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra in concert Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The program will be: Mahler's Symphony No. 5 and Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 in D Major, featuring Joseph Silverstein.

THE TROY RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 8,245

JUL 28 1972

Tanglewood Concerts Announced

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — Philadephia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28 and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio will perform Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy will conduct the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Tragic overture, Sibelius' Symphony No. 5 and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning at 10:30, James Levine leads the orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season, offering a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Sunday afternoon concert. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Mr. Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler" and, following intermission, Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Shed, Mr. Levine will conduct the orchestra in Mozart's 4th Violin Concerto with Mr. Silverstein again the violin soloist. Following intermission, there will be the First Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

ST
WALLINGFORD, CONN.
W. 7,920

JUL 27 1972

New England Newscli

Brahms and Bartok set for Tanglewood

Music by Brahms, Sibelius and Bartok will open the weekend's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, July 28, at 9 p.m.

Eugene Ormandy will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of music by Beethoven, Hindemith and Strauss on Saturday, July 29 at 8:30 p.m. The Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. will include selections by Mozart and Mahler.

NEWS-TIMES
DANBURY, CONN.
D. 31,285

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

Ormandy at Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy will conduct two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow and Saturday as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The weekend will open with a prelude at 7 p.m. Friday. The Symphony String Trio will present a chamber music recital. At 9 p.m., Ormandy will conduct Brahm's Tragic overture, Sibelius' Symphony No. 5 and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. Ormandy will again conduct Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Music to be performed will include Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

James Levine will conduct Sunday at 2:30 p.m., with Mozart's fourth violin concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

RE[illegible]RMER
BRATTLEBORO, VT.
D. 8,000

JUL 14 1972

New England Newsclip

INFORMATION OBSCURED

to wh... Western Mass.

A person can get tired of all this civilized stuff and hanker to let his hair down by way of a big steak dinner. With suitable libations, of course.
So when you're through with whatever it is you're doing, or before you start next time, you pay us a little call.
We'll make it worth your while.
We open up every day at 5 p.m.
(Sundays at 1 p.m.)
And go on till midnight.

BRANDING IRON

Berkshire Common, Pittsfield
(413) 499-1490.

YALE I...

ORCHESTRA CONCERTS

July 29 (Sat) 8:30 pm
MOZART — Symphony No. 41 ("Jupiter")
WEBERN — Symphony for Chamber Orchestra (Op. 21)
BEETHOVEN—Symphony No. 4

Aug. 4 (Fri) 8:30 pm
ROSSINI — Overture ... nerentola
DeFALLA—Three-Cornered Hat, Suite No. 1
MENDELSSOHN—Symph. No. 4

Aug. 6 (Sun) 3:30 pm
BRAHMS — Requiem

CHAMBER MUSIC/GUARNERI QUARTET

Aug. 12 (Sat) 8:30 pm
MOZART — Quartet in D Major, K. 499
SMETANA — From My Life
FRANCK — Piano Quintet
Ward Davenny, piano

Aug. 18 (Fri) 8:30 pm
To be announced.

Aug. 25 (Fri) 8:30 pm
MOZART — Flute Quartet in C Major, K. 285b
Thomas Nyfenger, flute
MENDELSSOHN — Quartet in E Minor, Op. 44 No. 2
RAVEL — String Quartet

ALL SEATS RESERVED
Tickets $5, $4, $3, $2
Box Office: (203) 542-5537
By mail: "Yale in Norfolk," Norfolk, Conn. 06058

YOU MUST VISIT

Tamarack Gallery

BRONZES BY CHIANELLI
Oils • Watercolors • Graphics

126 Division St.
Great Barrington, Mass.
Between Rts. 41 & 183
1½ Mi. North of Great Barrington

Fri-Sat-Sun — 10-5
Weekdays By Appointment
413-528-4583

trademark

LEISURE LEE

A FOUR-SEASON VACATION COMMUNITY
PRIVATE SKI SLOPE ... 3½ MILE
NATURAL LAKE ... SANDY BEACH ...
BOAT DOCKS ... WOODED HOMESITES ...
PRIVATE ROADS ... MOUNTAIN CLEAN AIR

on Route 20 — Lee, Mass. — 413-243-1972

Ormandy to conduct two weekend concerts

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10.30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8.30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2.30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUL 22 1972

New England Newsclip

JOURNAL
LAKEVILLE, CONN.
W. 4,405

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

You can combine a picnic with music at Tanglewood where ticket holders are invited to picnic on the spacious lawns, open two hours before each major concert. The cafeteria is also open if you choose not to pack your own lunch. — Photo from Tanglewood

Tanglewood

Ormandy Will Lead Orchestra

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood.

James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

At the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday evening, July 28, in the Music Shed The Boston Symphony String Trio (Joseph Silverstein, violin; Burton Fine, viola; Jules Eskin, cello; and Gilbert Kalish, piano) will present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Lenore" overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" ("A Hero's Life") with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

JUL 26 1972

Eugene Ormandy

. . . will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony for its two evening programs on Friday and Saturday this week at Tanglewood. On Wednesday, Aug. 2, he conducts the opening concert of the season at the Saratoga (N.Y.) Performing Arts Center by the Philadelphia Orchestra, of which he is music director.

Music-Dance

Saratoga Performing Arts Center, Saratoga Springs, today at 8:30 p.m., New York City Ballet, All- Stravinsky Program No. 6; Thursday Prodigal Son, Agon, at the 2:30 p.m. Student Matinee; at 8:30 p.m., Concerto Barocco, Prodigal Son, Stars and Stripes; Friday at 8:30 p.m., The Goldberg Variations, Bugaku; Saturday at 2:30 p.m., Swan Lake, Allegro Brilliante, Dances at a Gathering; at 8:30 p.m., Who Cares? Chopiniana, Phsde Deux, The Concert.

SPAC Special, Sunday at 8:30 p.m., Preservation Hall Jazz Band; Monday at 8:30 p.m., Mary Travers Show.

Casino Chamber Concert, Canfield Casino, Monday at 8:30 p.m., Philarte Quartet.

Jacob's Pillow, Becket, Mass., Minnesota Dance Theater directed by Loyce Houlton, through Saturday.

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 9 p.m., the Boston Symphony conducted by Eugene Ormandy; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy conducting a program of Beethoven, Hindemits, Strauss; Sunday at 2:30 p.m., James Levine conducts a program of Mozart, Mahler.

The Christian Science Monitor
BOSTON, MASS.
D. 217,264

JUL 26 1972

New England Newsclip

Ormandy & Phila. Orchestra At Tanglewood July 28 & 29

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital.

EugeneOrmandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert.

Saturday evening, July 29, at 8:30 p.m., Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Silverstein the violin soloist.

DALTON NEWS RECORD
DALTON, MASS.
W. 2,300

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

REPUBLICAN
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
S. 117,499

JUL 23 1972

New England Newsclip

TELEGRAPH
NASHUA, N. H.
D. 69,493

JUL 19 1972

New England Newsclip

Ormandy Set As Conductor At Festival

LENOX, Mass. — Philadelphia Orchestra music director Eugene Ormandy will conduct two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28-29 as part of the Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will be the conductor on July 30.

The festival's fifth weekend will open at 7 p.m. July 28 with the Weekend Prelude Concert. The Boston Symphony String Trio will present a chamber music recital. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Symphony concert.

Ormandy will conduct the 9 p.m. concert that opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture followed by a performance of Sibelius' "Symphony No. 5." Following intermission, the concert concludes with Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra."

Open Rehearsal

Levine will lead the orchestra's fifth open rehearsal of the season, July 29 at 10:30 a.m. The rehearsal will offer a relaxed look at the conductor, soloists and Symphony rehearsing music for the next day's concerts.

Ormandy again conducts at the 8:30 p.m. concert on July 29. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore Overture No. 3," Hindemith's "Symphony Mathis der Maler" and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

Levine returns July 30 at 2:30 p.m. to conduct Mozart's "Fourth Violin Concerto," with concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as soloist, and the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's "Symphony No. 6."

Ormandy Conductor

LENOX—Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy will conduct two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood.

James Levine, Principal Conductor - elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend will open with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, will present a chamber music recital.

Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

EUGENE ORMANDY

Eugene Ormandy will conduct the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert will open with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert will conclude with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine will lead the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert.

Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again will conduct the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist.

The concert will open with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Levine will conduct the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

MATTERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500

JUL 27 1972

Ormandy, Levine to Make Tanglewood Appearance

Eugene Ormandy, music director of the Philadelphia Orchesta, and James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will conduct the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood's fifth weekend from July 28 through 30.

* * *

The weekend begins at 7 p.m. July 28 with the Boston Symphony String Trio playing Beethoven's string trio in G and Brahms piano quartet in C minor.

At 9 p.m. Ormandy will conduct the symphony in Brahm's "Tragic Overture," Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra" and Sibelius' "Symphony No. 5."

After an open rehearsal at 10:30 a.m. July 29, Ormandy will again conduct the orchestra at 8:30 p.m. in a concert that includes Beethoven's "Leonore overture no. 3," Hindemith's "Synphony Mathis der Maler" and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

* * *

The weekend will end with Levine conducting the symphony in a 2:30 p.m. concert July 30. Works to be performed included Mozart's "Violin concerto no. 4" and Mahler's "Symphony No. 6."

Schenectady Gazette
SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
D. 55,934

JUL 18 1972

98

SOUTH MIDDLESEX DAILY NEWS
FRAMINGHAM, MA.
D. 24,000

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Eugene Ormandy Will Conduct At Tanglewood This Weekend

LENOX — Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood.

James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital.

Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performamce of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season in the morning. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts.

July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's Life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 23 1972

..... MUSIC

TANGLEWOOD — Lenox Arts Center, Lenox, Mass. Berkshire Festival featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Today at 2:30 p.m., Karel Ancerl will conduct; Friday at 9 p.m., Eugene Ormandy will conduct; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Ormandy will conduct and next Sunday at 2:30, James Levine will conduct.

Ormandy to conduct BSO at Tanglewood

LENOX — Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weedend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' TRAGIC overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's LEONORE overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony MATHIS DER MALER, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' EIN HELDENLEBEN (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500

JUL 27 1972

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. (413-637-2242).
July 28: Weekend Prelude, 7 p.m.; Boston Symphony, Brahms, Sibelius, Bartok; Eugene Ormandy, 9 p.m.
July 29: Boston Symphony Open Rehearsal, 10:30 a.m.; Beethoven ("Leonore Overture"), Hindemith, Strauss; Eugene Ormandy. 8:30 p.m.
July 30: Boston Symphony, Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4, Joseph Silverstein; Mahler Symphony No. 6; James Levine, 2:30 p.m.
Aug. 1: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler, 8:30 p.m.
Aug. 2, 3 & 6: Music Theatre Project, Brecht-Weill's The Yes Man and Robert Selig's Chocorua, West Barn, 8:30 p.m.

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000

JUL 15 1972 New England Newsclip

ORMANDY, LEVINE AT TANGLEWOOD

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 P.M. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 P..M Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 P.M. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 A.M. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Bston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 P.M., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 P.M. in the Shed, James Levin conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043

JUL 19 1972 New England Newsclip

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 23 1972

MUSIC
Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra takes the guest baton at Tanglewood to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday and Saturday.

Ormandy, Levine To Conduct BSO

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood.

James Levine, principal conductor - elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the weekend prelude at 7 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9 p. m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p. m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday at 10:30 a. m. July 29, Levine leads the orchestra's fifth open rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p. m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Lenore" overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A hero's life) with Boston Symphony concertmaster Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p. m. in the Shed, Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Silverstein again the violin solist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Silverstein the violin solist, and following intermission, Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 28 1972 New England Newsclip

Eugene Ormandy, now in his 36th year as Music Director of Philadelphia Orchestra, conducts Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this evening at 9 and tomorrow at 8.30 p.m.

Special programs at Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tonight and tomorrow as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. this evening in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Mr. Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Tomorrow evening, at 8.30 Mr. Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 in the Shed, Mr. Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Mr. Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

The Weekend Prelude Friday August 4 at 7 p.m. in the Shed is devoted to the music of Aaron Copland, Chairman Emeritus of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The Prelude opens with "Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" with soprano Phyllis Curtin, and the composer at the piano. Next is "Piano variations" with Michael Tilson Thomas, pianist. The Prelude closes with a performance of "Vitebsk, study on a Jewish Theme," with Boston Symphony Chamber Players members Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin, cello, with the composer at the piano.

The 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert in the Music Shed is conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas with violin soloist Paul Zukovsky. This opening orchestral concert of the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored in co-operation with the Fromm Music Foundation, opens with Ruggles' "Evocations for orchestra," and Copland's "Eight poems of Emily Dickinson" with soprano Phyllis Curtin. Both works are performed for the first time by the Boston Smnphony Orchestra. Next is the world premiere of Charles Wuorinen's Concerto for amplified violin, and orchestra with soloist Paul Zukofsky. The concerto was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation as part of its 20th Anniversary celebration. The concert concludes with a performance of Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring."

The season's sixth Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place at 10.30 a.m. August 5. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Aldo Ceccato, recently appointed Principal Conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, August 5 at 8.30 p.m. Soloist for this evening's concert is pianist John Browning. The concert opens with Mendelssohn's Symphony no. 1, followed by a performance of Prokofiev's Third piano concerto with soloist John Browning. The concert concludes with Dvorak's Symphony no. 9, the "New World".

Sunday afternoon, August 6 at 2.30 p.m. in the Shed, Michael Tilson Thomas again conducts the Boston Symphony with soloist Ralph Gomberg, Principal Oboeist of the Boston Symphony. The concert is Haydn's Oboe concerto, and Mahler's Symphony no. 5.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUL 28 1972 New England

Tanglewood Concert.

Philadelphia Orchestra music director Eugene Ormandy will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. James Levine, principal conductor - elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will also conduct the symphony July 30.

The weekend will open with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, will present a chamber music recital, performing Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. one and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9 p.m. Symphony concert.

ADVOCATE
STAMFORD, CONN.
D. 32,000

JUL 20 1972 New England Newsclip

SOUTH MIDDLESEX DAILY NEWS
FRAMINGHAM, MA.
D. 24,000

JUL 24 1972 New England Newsclip

Eugene Ormandy Will Conduct At Tanglewood This Weekend

LENOX — Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood.

James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital.

Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performamce of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season in the morning. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts.

July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's Life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 23 1972

..... MUSIC

TANGLEWOOD — Lenox Arts Center, Lenox, Mass. Berkshire Festival featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Today at 2:30 p.m., Karel Ancerl will conduct; Friday at 9 p.m., Eugene Ormandy will conduct; Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Ormandy will conduct and next Sunday at 2:30, James Levine will conduct.

Ormandy to conduct BSO at Tanglewood

LENOX — Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7:00 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9:00 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9:00 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' TRAGIC overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's LEONORE overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony MATHIS DER MALER, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' EIN HELDENLEBEN (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
W. 1,500

JUL 27 1972

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. (413-637-2242).
July 28: Weekend Prelude, 7 p.m.; Boston Symphony, Brahms, Sibelius, Bartok; Eugene Ormandy, 9 p.m.
July 29: Boston Symphony Open Rehearsal, 10:30 a.m.; Beethoven ("Leonore Overture"), Hindemith, Strauss; Eugene Ormandy. 8:30 p.m.
July 30: Boston Symphony, Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4, Joseph Silverstein; Mahler Symphony No. 6; James Levine, 2:30 p.m.
Aug. 1: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler, 8:30 p.m.
Aug. 2, 3 & 6: Music Theatre Project, Brecht-Weill's The Yes Man and Robert Selig's Chocorua, West Barn, 8:30 p.m.

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000

JUL 15 1972 New England Newsclip

ORMANDY, LEVINE AT TANGLEWOOD

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. —Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 P.M. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 P..M Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 P.M. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 A.M. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Bston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50 each, on sale at the Festival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 P.M., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternon, July 30 at 2:30 P.M. in the Shed, James Levin conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

TIMES
PEABODY, MASS.
W. 6,043

JUL 19 1972 New England Newsclip

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 23 1972

MUSIC
Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra takes the guest baton at Tanglewood to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday and Saturday.

Ormandy, Levine To Conduct BSO

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood.

James Levine, principal conductor - elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the weekend prelude at 7 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9 p. m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p. m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday at 10:30 a. m. July 29, Levine leads the orchestra's fifth open rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p. m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Lenore" overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A hero's life) with Boston Symphony concertmaster Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p. m. in the Shed, Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 28 1972 New England Newsclip

Eugene Ormandy, now in his 36th year as Music Director of Philadelphia Orchestra, conducts Boston Symphony at Tanglewood this evening at 9 and tomorrow at 8.30 p.m.

Special programs at Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tonight and tomorrow as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. this evening in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in c minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Mr. Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Tomorrow evening, at 8.30 Mr. Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, no. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 in the Shed, Mr. Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Mr. Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony no. 6.

The Weekend Prelude Friday August 4 at 7 p.m. in the Shed is devoted to the music of Aaron Copland, Chairman Emeritus of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The Prelude opens with "Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" with soprano Phyllis Curtin, and the composer at the piano. Next is "Piano variations" with Michael Tilson Thomas, pianist. The Prelude closes with a performance of "Vitebsk, study on a Jewish Theme," with Boston Symphony Chamber Players members Joseph Silverstein violin, and Jules Eskin, cello, with the composer at the piano.

The 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert in the Music Shed is conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas with violin soloist Paul Zukovsky. This opening orchestral concert of the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored in co-operation with the Fromm Music Foundation, opens with Ruggles' "Evocations for orchestra," and Copland's "Eight poems of Emily Dickinson" with soprano Phyllis Curtin. Both works are performed for the first time by the Boston Smnphony Orchestra. Next is the world premiere of Charles Wuorinen's Concerto for amplified violin, and orchestra with soloist Paul Zukofsky. The concerto was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation as part of its 20th Anniversary celebration. The concert concludes with a performance of Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring."

The season's sixth Saturday morning Open Rehearsal takes place at 10.30 a.m. August 5. Proceeds from the sale of tickets benefits the Boston Symphony Orchestra Pension Fund.

Aldo Ceccato, recently appointed Principal Conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, conducts the Boston Symphony Saturday evening, August 5 at 8.30 p.m. Soloist for this evening's concert is pianist John Browning. The concert opens with Mendelssohn's Symphony no. 1, followed by a performance of Prokofiev's Third piano concerto with soloist John Browning. The concert concludes with Dvorak's Symphony no. 9, the "New World".

Sunday afternoon, August 6 at 2.30 p.m. in the Shed, Michael Tilson Thomas again conducts the Boston Symphony with soloist Ralph Gomberg, Principal Oboeist of the Boston Symphony. The concert is Haydn's Oboe concerto, and Mahler's Symphony no. 5.

TRANSCRIPT
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
D. 13,225

JUL 28 1972 New England

ADVOCATE
STAMFORD, CONN.
D. 32,000

JUL 30 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood Concert.

Philadelphia Orchestra music director Eugene Ormandy will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28, and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. James Levine, principal conductor - elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will also conduct the symphony July 30.

The weekend will open with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, will present a chamber music recital, performing Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. one and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket - holders of the 9 p.m. Symphony concert.

INCORRECT PAGINATION

Eugene Ormandy at Tanglewood

Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, tomorrow and Saturday, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. James Levine Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. tomorrow evening in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital.

Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

On Saturday morning, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relaxed look at the conductors, soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts.

At 8:30 p.m., Saturday, Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony "Mathis der Maler," and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's Life) with Boston Symphony Concertmaster Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Programmed for Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 in the Shed is James Levine conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
(ALBANY MARKET AREA)
D. 4.000

JUL 22 1972

CONDUCTS BSO—James Levine, principal conductor elect of the Metropolitan Opera in New York will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at Tanglewood. A veteran of the Philadelphia Orchestra and the Los Angeles Philharmonic, among many orchestras and opera companies, he will be appearing shortly with the RAI Orchestra of Rome and the Liverpool Philharmonic.

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289

JUL 27 1972

New England Newsclip

PEEKSKILL, N. Y.
STAR
(NEW YORK CITY MARKET AREA)
D. 13,000

JUL 27 1972

Ormandy, Fiedler at Tanglewood

Eugene Ormandy, director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, conducts two concerts this weekend by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. First will be tomorrow (Friday) and the second Saturday. And on Sunday, James Levine, principal conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, will be conductor.

This is the season's fifth weekend, opening with the Weekend Prelude tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, and Jules Eskin cello, plus Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. These preludes are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Friday's Shed concert at 9 p.m. under Ormandy, opens with Brahms' "Tragic" overture, followed by Sibelius' Symphony no. 5. After intermission, the concert closes with Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Mr. Levine leads the orchestra's fifth open rehearsal of the season on Saturday at 10:30 a.m. in the Shed. Music rehearsed includes that of the following Sunday afternoon concert.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Ormandy conducts the BSO in Beethoven's "Leonore" overture no. 3; Hindemith's symphony "Mathis de Maler," and after intermission, Strauss's "Ein Heldenleben," with concertmaster Mr. Silverstein as violin soloist. Sunday at 2:30 p.m., in the Shed, Mr. Levine conducts the orchestra, with Mr. Silverstein again violin soloist.

On Aug. 1, Arthur Fiedler conducts the Boston Pops with soloists and chorus in a program featuring Lerner and Lowe music. Soloists in the annual Pops Pension Fund concert are soprano Nancy Stokes, mezzo-soprano Corinne Curry, tenor Vahan Khanzadian, and baritone Richard Fredericks, and the Tanglewood Chorus, John Oliver director.

Starting at 8:30 p.m. in the Shed, the concert features Lerner and Lowe Broadway show tunes from "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "Paint Your Wagon," "Brigadoon," and "Gigi." After intermission, Fiedler leads Pops in Lennon and McCartney's "Eleanor Rigby," a medley of Burt Bacharach tunes, and Melanie's "Look What They've Done to My Song." Also, there will be the famous Pops encores.

Eugene Ormandy and James Levine Conduct At Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood:, July 28, 29, 30

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS. - Philadelphia Orchestra Music Director Eugene Ormandy conducts two concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, July 28 and 29, as part of the fifth weekend of Berkshire Festival Concerts at Tanglewood. James Levine, Principal Conductor-elect of the Metropolitan Opera, also conducts the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon, July 30.

The fifth weekend opens with the Weekend Prelude at 7 p.m. Friday evening July 28 in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony String Trio, Joseph Silverstein violin, Burton Fine viola, Jules Eskin cello, and Gilbert Kalish piano, present a chamber music recital. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 and Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Weekend Prelude concerts are free to ticket-holders of the 9 p.m. Boston Symphony concert.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Boston Symphony at 9 p.m. in the Shed. The concert opens with Brahms' Tragic overture, followed by a performance of Sibelius' Symphony No. 5. Following intermission, the concert concludes with a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra.

Saturday morning, July 29, James Levine leads the Orchestra's fifth Open Rehearsal of the season. Music to be rehearsed will include music of the following Sunday afternoon concert. Open Rehearsals, held each Saturday morning during the Berkshire Festival at 10:30 a.m. offer a relazed look at the conductorsl soloists and Boston Symphony rehearsing music for the Berkshire Festival concerts. Tickets are $2.50each, on sale at the Fesival Ticket Office two hours before the beginning of the rehearsal.

Saturday evening, July 29 at 8:30 p.m., Eugene Ormandy again conducts the Boston Symphony. Music to be performed includes Beethoven's Leonore overture, No. 3, Hindemith's symphony Mathis der Maler, and, following intermission, a performance of Strauss' Ein Heldenleben (A Hero's Life) with Boston Symphony Concert master Joseph Silverstein as violin soloist.

Sunday afternoon, July 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Shed, James Levine conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Joseph Silverstein again the violin soloist. The concert opens with Mozart's Fourth violin concerto with Mr. Silverstein the violin soloist, and following intermission, Mr. Levine conducts the first Berkshire Festival performance of Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

Fifth Weeken Berkshire Festival Concerts
Friday, July 28, 1972
7 p.m.
Shed
Weekend Prelude
BOSTON SYMPHONY STRING TRIO
JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violin
BURTON FINE viola
JULES ESKIN cello
Beethoven: String trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1
Brahms: Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60
9 p.m.
Shed
EUGENE ORMANDY conductor
Brahms: Tragic overture
Sibelius: Symphony No. 5
Bartok: Concerto for Orchestra
Saturday, July 29, 1972
10:30 a.m.
Shed
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA OPEN REHEARSAL
8:30 p.m.
Shed
EUGENE ORMANDY conductor
JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN violinist
Beethoven: Leonore overture No. 3
Hindemith: Symphony Mathis der Maler
Strauss: Ein Heldenleben
Sunday, July 30, 1972
2:30 p.m.
Shed

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638

JUL 29 1972

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528

JUL 29 1972

New England

Ormandy Presides At Music Festival

By RICHARD CONWAY

The Berkshire Music Festival opened its fifth weekend of concerts at Tanglewood last night with guest conductor Eugene Ormandy leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Omandy, of course, is the well - known music director of the famed Philadelphia Orchestra, and, in something of a surprise, only around 6,000 were in the audience. Ormandy will also conduct tonight.

Although the program for tonight is quite inviting, the orchestra will have to go some to match its fine performance of the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" at Friday's concert.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Bartok "Concerto" have been together a long time. It was Koussevitzky who invited the dying Bartok to write a work for the Boston Orchestra. This was in 1943. Bartok rallied his strength for the monumental task. The "Concerto" was given its first performance by the BSO on 1 December 1944. The frail composer, finally hailed for the genius he was, lived for one more year.

"The "Concerto" is a work demanding virtuoso playing from all the instruments, each of which is given its turn at some formidable difficulties. This past season was the Springfield Symphony Orchestra do a remarkably fine performance of it. But the Springfield Orchestra, of course, is not the Boston. several additional stands of strings available to the BSO, for example, do make a tremendous difference. And this is but one observation.

Strong, Clear

At any rate, we found the performance last night to be particularly strong and clear. Ormandy played the virtuoso orchestra beautifully. The opening passages suggesting the awakening of the orchestra were well controlled and marred only by a rather insecure trumpet entrance. Individual lines and rhythms were allowed space to sound. The sonorous chorale section by the brass in the second movement and the rich viola passage in the fourth movement stand out. And it was as though we were hearing the harp part for the first time last night. In fact, it was almost too much, producing a rather jarring effect.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra did not confine its fine playing to the Bartok. There was a strong performance of the Sibelius "Symphony No. 5 in E flat, op. 82." Ormandy, who drew some wonderfully rich and resonant sounds from the musicians, did a stunning job on the last movement of this work. Sibelius' scoring gives him the opportunity to do so.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

JUL 31 1972

Ormandy Exhibits Usual Genius at Tanglewood

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

Eugene Ormandy's two appearances this weekend at Tanglewood with the Boston Symphony Orchestra were particularly interesting from the point of view of the programming.

If one excepts the two overtures, Brahms "Tragic" and Beethoven's "Leonore No. 3," what is left are four compositions that have a good deal in common. This is a position that will shake up the pedants and nattering exegetes whose idea of a triumph in the concert hall is one where he (the exegete) with score in hand, discovers a dropped stitch by the clarinet, or a fiddle player playing an augmented second instead of a diminished third. Important, yes indeed, but in the rehearsal. Once placed in front of the audience the overriding factors are those of symmetry, coherence and communication of the music.

And it is here where Ormandy and the BSO really did a job that was polished and achieved in all aspects including those dear to the hearts of the bloodless purists who cannot see the woods for the trees. Ormandy sent all of us home happy on Friday and Saturday evenings and if there were, (and there surely must have been) one who was untouched, then this poor soul is beyond redemption.

WHAT PROMPTS this excursion into the realm of enlightened listening was a conversation overheard Saturday night between two concert-goers (one of whom, as noted, with score in hand) was destroying the evening and the experience for this fellow who up to that point was of the belief that he had been greatly moved by the music. It was saddening and disturbing tableau and a great disservice to the cause of good music.

Ormandy would have laughed all the way to Valhalla had he overheard the same diatribe. He knows better. His is a finely developed genius for all the subtleties and dependent relationships that are found in such works as the Sebelius Symphony No. 5 in E Flat; Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra; Hindesmith's 'Mathis der Mahler" and Richand Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

EUGENE ORMANDY

There are many similarities to these works, many more similarities than differences. There are times when Strauss used the same chords and progressions that Sebelius used, not withstanding the apparent disparity in musical concept.

STRAUSS and Hindemith are bonded by several things many of them basic. They were both German born, but one fled Hitler while Strauss remained to be honored and used. They both loved striking choirs in brass. They were both subject to the same influences and reacted to the same influences.

The works that Ormandy chose this weekend are either explicitly concerned with a man and his life and philosophy or an expression by the composer of the summation of his own life and the meaning of it; to wit, the Bartok which was composed just before his death which he knew was imminent.

The philosophic implications of a work of art is what Ormandy concerned himself this weekend and although perhaps the idiom was individually used, this was the unifying thread.

So let us eschew for the nonce, high and forbidding talk on tempi, phrasing, the theory of harmony, the nature of the temperament of sound, all vital parts of the mechanics of musical composition to be sure; rather let us concern ourselves with the things that counts the most, the music itself.

Ormandy has well in hand all the building blocks of the art, what makes him a great conductor is his intuitive and impressive grasp of the musical experience as a whole.

Ormandy Masterful on Tanglewood Podium

By EDWARD FRENCH

The romantics had a field day at Tanglewood Friday and Saturday nights when Eugene Ormandy conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

This veteran of the podium, well steeped in the Viennese musical tradition and style, worked his tonal wonders in music by Brahms, Sibelius, Bartok, Hindemith and Beethoven.

MR. ORMANDY'S way of conducting is explicit and authoriative yet flexible enough to give an air of spontaneity to his interpretations. Apparently he is able to inspire an orchestra to literally play over its head.

When a conductor is able to work that kind of magic with a sophisticated major orchestra such as the Boston ensemble there is music making on an Olympian level.

A unique characteristic of the tone Mr. Ormandy draws from an orchestra is its warm velvety texture at most dynamic levels. This added much to the romantic flavor and appeal of the Sibelius Fifth Symphony.

As to the now classic Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, we can only say it was an astounding feat of virtuosity on the part of orchestra and conductor. Everything added up to a hair raising once in a lifetime performance.

SATURDAY'S program was tailormade for Mr. Ormandy. There was no unfamiliar music; we have all heard Beethoven's "Leonore No. 3" and Strauss' "Heldenleben" many times. Even Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" has a good many performances to its credit.

What we don't hear often was the pin point precision ensemble given the "Leonore" combined with a majestic breadth and a real "wow" coda.

Strauss is one of Mr. Ormandy's major accomplishments. Kaleidoscopic range of tone color, marvelously controlled dynamics and an intuitive feeling for the Strauss rehtoric made this "Heldenleben" glow with renewed life.

Joseph Silverste'n's playing of the extensive solo violin part gave further prof of his unusual technical facility and musicianship.

The performance given Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" was another miracle of orchestral tone painting.

In all our years of concert going we have never seen such whole—hearted admiration shown for a conductor by an orchestra as the Boston Orchestra accorded Mr. Ormandy at the end of both concerts.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON one of the fine young conductors, James Levine gave an authoriatative reading of Mahler's Sixth Symphony. As with most Mahler, the piece is extremely long and redundant. It utilizes a huge orchestra in the Wagner-Strauss manner with unusual percssive effects.

After hearing the youthful, Mr. Levine handle the complexities of this score we feel he is certain to one of our future greats.

The other work was the Mozart Violin Concerto No. 4 with Joseph Silverstein as soloist. Mr. Silverstein's command of the classic style was convincingly set forth here. The structure was clearly projected and there was an easy grace to his playing essential to good Mozart. Mr. Levine's accompaniment was a perfect match as style and expressivity.

This was a weekend of superlative orchestral playing.

The next weekend will have Michael Tilson Thomas directing the Friday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts and Aldo Ceccato holding forth Saturday evening.

The Knickerbocker News
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 56,638
JUL 31 1972

NEWS
WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.
W. 1,289
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Mostly Music

BY WILLIAM P. MERRILL

Tanglewood: Philadelphian leads BSO

Eugene Ormandy is a great conductor. This is a pretty hard statement to refute. However, a neighbor of ours at the Friday night concert remarked that Ormandy was a schmaltzy conductor. The synthesis of these two viewpoints would be that he is a great schmaltzy conductor. Which is not true: Ormandy is a great conductor with Romantic leanings. In any event, his style well suits the music of Jean Sibelius, whose Fifth symphony in E flat was performed Friday night.

The Fifth was first performed on December 8, 1915, the composer's fiftieth birthday. Yet the work underwent drastic revisions before it was finally completed in the autumn of 1919. The Fifth is characteristically Sibelian in its somber, pensive sonorities. At the same time it conveys a spirit of vitality which harks back to the second symphony. The music of Sibelius is supposed to conjure up visions of Finnish lakes and forests. As this writer has never been to Finland, a vision of Acadia will do. Think of the coast of Maine and the Maritimes next time you listen. Ormandy gave the piece an outstanding performance.

The other featured work of the evening was Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra, which while competently led, nevertheless was lacking in that rhythmic quality inherent in Bartok. The music soared, yet there was no drive. The notes flowed cleanly, the virtuoso writing giving the orchestra no trouble. The little parody on Shostakovich in the fourth movement was handled with great humor.

The program began with Brahms' Tragic Overture. While the performance was nothing to write home about, this is always a pleasant work to hear, and so it was on this occasion. In case you didn't get to hear Eugene Ormandy at Tanglewood, as a reminder, he will be in Saratoga with his own orchestra during the month of August.

The Weekend Prelude was an excellent appetizer to the evening's festivities. Joseph Silverstein, Burton Fine, and Jules Eskin, concertmaster, principal viola and principal cello respectively of the BSO performed Beethoven's String Trio in G Op. 9, No. 1 and joined by Gilbert Kalish, piano, Brahms' Piano quartet in C minor, Op. 60. Concert goers may not realize that seating for the Weekend Prelude is unreserved and the music can be enjoyed from the best seats in the house. Friday night's crowd was a little boisterous during the Prelude, which was unfortunate--for nothing is lovlier on a summer evening than to lie on one's back gazing at the sky as the music flows gently through the air.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 29 1972
New England Newsclip

EUGENE ORMANDY

Ormandy Returns To Tanglewood With a Flourish

By R. C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — Eugene Ormandy returned to Tanglewood last night, apparenly in the best of health, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra through a program of Brahms, Sibelius and Bartok.

He was scheduled to conduct here last summer but was canceled by the requirements of a recovery period from an operation for an old hip ailment.

The Brahms concert opener, "Tragic Overture," Opus 81, sounded anything but tragic. It wasn't even melancholy, which is okay because the consensus is that Brahms didn't intend it to be either.

Ormandy asked for and received an unusually lively performance of it, however. It had a wider range of volume than might be expected. But perhaps it didn't sound so noisy out on the lawn, where a few thousand music lovers like to listen.

The Sibelius Fifth Symphony received an equally lively performance, but there the brassiness sits better, especially because of the skill of Boston's wind players.

There is a great deal of wind sonority in Sibelius (some say windiness), and its success depends upon a good set of brasses and woodwinds. The strings didn't seem quite up to their usual crispy togetherness.

There is a sneaky suspicion that Ormandy likes to conduct this piece because of its giant ramrod chords that come at the very end like the blows of a sledgehammer.

He is a small man and he stands there in those tense silences like a diminutive Thor bringing down thundrebolts with violent arm thrusts.

It is very dramatic. I remember vividly seeing him do the same thing with the same piece on the same stage with the same orchestra in 1964.

After intermission he conducted Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," a piece composed in 1943 on commission for Boston's orchestra.

He led this one also with special emphasis on colorful dynamics, but this piece is designed for it ... and also for an orchestra of virtuosic talents, as the title implies.

It is an exciting crowd - pleaser for those who pay attention. There were 5968 there last night, and they were amply rewarded. The Bartok was played for its entertainment value.

At the 7 o'clock prelude program a few of the BSO chamber players played Beethoven and Brahms as if all they had to do is play chamber music.

That is, they displayed a unanimity of execution and expression worthy of the best of the chamber groups. It is a unanimity acquired during seven years of playing chamber music with each other founded, of course, on their years of experience as ensemble players.

They were Joseph Silverstein, violin; Burton Fine, viola and Jules Eskin, Cello, all first-chair members of their respective sections in the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

They played Beethoven's youthful "String Trio in G" (Opus 9, No. 1) and, joined by Gilbert Kalish, pianist, Brahms' "Piano Quartet in C Minor" (Opus 60). Kalis is a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, as are the BSO chamber players.

Tonight at 8.30, Ormandy will conduct the orchestra playing Beethoven's "Leonore Overture No. 3," Hindemith's "Mathis Der Maler" and Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

Tomorrow at 2.30, James Levine will conduct the orchestra playing Mozarts' "Violin Concerto No. 4" with Silverstein as soloist, and Mahler's Symphony No. 6.

James Levine has appeared extensively as a guest conductor and recently was appointed permanent conductor at the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

BOSTON HERALD TRAVELER AND RECORD AMERICAN AUGUST 2ND 1972

Ormandy Really Comes on Strong

By ELLEN PFEIFER
Music Critic

Eugene Ormandy has taken that fine old tradition of music-making, "play anything loud enough and the crowd will love you" and made it his own. He may even have started it for all anyone knows.

However, not even Zubin Mehta and the Los Angeles Philharmonic doing Strauss' gigantic Symphonia Domestica (which they did at Symphony Hall in 1971 and which remains the loudest concert in my memory) can make a bigger noise than Ormandy did with the BSO at Tanglewood Saturday night.

Nor are there any close contenders when it comes to vulgarity or tastelessness—the two qualities most in evidence from the selection of the program through the final ffffff-fortissimo.

● Concert Review

Ormandy chose a real "Philadelphia Sound" program including Beethoven, Leonore Overture No. 3; Hindemith, Symphonie Mathis der Maler"; and, for the cataclysmic second half, Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

The Beethoven was significant for being the occasion of some of the rare pianissimos produced at this concert or ever by the BSO. Ormandy demonstrated quite successfully that the most stunning crescendo is the one that starts very soft and builds up tremendously. We got a lot of that in Leonore #3/.

After the Hindemith began, however, there were almost no more really quiet moments although a crescendo at every opportunity (the trick, you see, is to begin mf and move to ffff) this carried to its ridiculous extremes in the two measures that open the St. Anthony section.

As for tempo, the principle of "keep things moving quickly lest you lose your audience" was operative here so that the opening section, meant to have a kind of celestial timelessness, seemed agitated and itchy.

"Heldenleben," which can support Ormandy's dynamic range and which you would assume to correspond most closely to his tastes, got just as weird a performance as the other pieces.

First of all there was a lot of trouble with articulation, the cellos and basses mushing through those triplets in the "hero's theme" and seemingly no consistent distinction in the 16th upbeat and downbeat which is so prevalent rhythmic pattern in the courtship section. Much of the sentiment was so over-wrought, too, as to be parodistic—the Hero's courtship sounding like someone's exaggerated imitation (Anna Russell?) of heroic love music.

Strangest of all was that with all of Ormandy's usual exploitation of big sound, there were several important moments where climaxes weren't big enough—notably the end of the first section.

There were a few beautiful moments, however. And I would happily sit through the whole concert again just to hear the violin-born duet near the end. At this point, Joseph Silverstein, who performed the extensive violin solo, discarded some of the very syrupy affectation which had marred the courtship section and Charles Kavaloski, the new principal horn player contributed some of the most beautifully expressive and accurately pitched playing to come from the horn section in a long time.

Ormandy Conducts Boston Symphony at Lenox

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Music Review

LENOX — The highlight of tonal splendor during the first five weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival came Saturday night when the Boston Symphony was guest-conducted by Eugene Ormandy, now in his 36th year as music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Attendance for the festival's fifth weekend was set at 26,071.

As a member of the Boston Symphony expressed it to us during Saturday night intermission:

"Ormandy makes us do it. There is absolutely no other conductor like him. No wonder the Philadelphia is such a great orchestra!"

Levine Conducts

Yesterday afternoon's concert was conducted by James Levine, principal conductor elect of the Metropolitan Opera. Joseph Silverstein was soloist yesterday in Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, K.218.

Now 72, Ormandy's style hasn't diminished in vitality since he conducted the Philadelphia at the Worcester Festival from 1944 to 1957.

It was clear from the short responsive phrases that begin Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 3, that the orchestra had joined him eagerly in making great music.

Broad passages were powerful but unforced. Cellos played superbly. The overture's lively portion was brilliant without the tinsel sound. Ormandy developed it as a compact structure.

Summation was a dazzling performance with added glitter in the full-speed parallel string passages toward the close.

Ormandy wielded his baton over a virtuoso orchestra for Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Richard Strauss' autobiographical tirade, "Ein Heldenleben," or "A Hero's Life."

Intonation

Intonation in the Hindemith was so pure that it lost all trace of the acidulous. Ormandy removed the plastic effect that this music sometimes engenders, giving individual voices their freedom. The orchestra responded in kind.

"Entombment" was reflective but not morbid. Opening recitatives of "Temptation of St. Anthony" rose from agitated murmurs to smashing climaxes.

Ormandy's epic concept of "Heldenleben" was carried through its rhapsodic material, the composer's snarls at his critics, to romantic interludes, tonal maelstroms and final resignation.

SATURDAY NIGHT
Eugene Ormandy, conductor
Leonore Overture No. 3, Opus 72B — Beethoven
Mathis der Maler — Hindemith
Ein Heldenleben, Opus 40 — Strauss
SUNDAY AFTERNOON
James Levine, conductor
Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, K.218 — Mozart
Joseph Silverstein, violinist
Symphony No. 6 in A minor — Mahler

Yesterday afternoon, Silverstein was as splendid as permitted in the coquettish Mozart violin concerto. The performance may hold a record for detachment between soloist and conductor.

Levine and the orchestra gave the concerto an appealing enough start. Thereafter, soloist and conductor governed themselves. Except in the slow movement, there was a lack of synchronization that even extended to tempos and style.

Technique

Silverstein's technique was dexterous, vital — if not always reliable. His own two cadenzas were tailored to the Mozart metier and adjusted well to the body of the work.

The lack of entente is to be attributed to the conductor — not the orchestra, which, by the way was of reduced size in keeping with the Mozart tradition.

Silverstein's brilliant playing of the extensive solo violin part in Saturday night's "Heldenleben" and yesterday's Mozart placed him again in the same league with his more prestigious colleagues, despite the polish and glamor in which some of them excel.

The 28-year-old Levine first conducted the Boston Symphony last April. He's short, rotund, long-haired and does not create a particularly compelling podium figure.

However, Mahler's Sixth Symphony was enough to firmly establish Levine's musical acumen.

Yesterday's concert also bolstered the fact that Mahler's music is being played to compatible ears in the 1970's. Yesterday's audience was 8,154.

In the main, Mahler's Sixth is a long soliloquy of despair. Its infrequent admissions of sunlight produce beauty. The music has typical Mahler sweep — carryovers of Wagner and Liszt, plus a kind of Dostoevsky philosophy.

Another moment of relief is the passional eulogy in the trio portion of the sardonic scherzo. However, quality of performance is not at stake whether the listener is enamoured or wearied by Mahler's grandiloquent filibusters.

Levine conducted the Sixth with a determination to give it eloquence, import, emotional stability and faithful representation.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977
JUL 31 1972
New England Newsclip

It Was Sleepy Time at Tanglewood

● Concert Review

When, at the beginning of the second half of Sunday's concert at Tanglewood, the BSO players and conducter James Levine came out sans sports jackets and with the latter in navy T-shirt, it appeared that they were really going to get down to work, to really dig into the Mahler 6th Symphony.

It was not be, though.

The program had opened with a most unfun, unplayful performance of the Mozart Violin Concorto No. 5 in which Joseph Silverstein played the solo part very cleanly and expressively, but alomst to himself.

People were falling asleep around me and it seemed even more unlogical if the Mozart were not going to be played well anyway and given the length of the Mahler that anything besides the symphony should have been programmed in the first place.

The Symphony, itself, is one of Mahler's most unfamiliar although one of the most classically constructed and easy to understand. It is also rather brief for Mahler. Yet, it's over-an-hour duration still makes it fairly tough going for some listeners.

There is also something very frightening about it too. All those instruments screaming at the tops of their registers, a typical Mahlerian sonority, seem unusually ominous in this symphony which Alma Mahler described as "coming more directly from the inmost heart" than any of the other works.

So perhaps it was because it didn't seem as if the work, the most autobiographical of all, were coming from the players' inmost hearts that the performance failed to come off. If, besides all the big obvious moments, the little things had happened when they should—all those thousands of minute nuances had been acknowledged, we really would have had something—a something like the great performance of Mahler's Fifth which Georg Solti conducted last spring.

Levine hasn't really got the feel of the work as yet, isn't convinced or convincing yet about some of the sonorities, the balances, most of all, the subtlties of dynamics. Sequences of fortissimo, piano, crescendo, sfortando, fortissimo that happen in one short measure of time go by without any real attempt at doing them. And those vague, faraway, nostalgic passages with the cowbells never really achieve the longing, dreamy expression wanted.

ELLEN PFEIFER

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 31 1972
New England Newsclip

Mahler, Mozart Lost At Berkshire Festival

By RICHARD CONWAY

Sunday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the ~~baton of guest~~ conductor James Levine, reminded me of the old gag about such and such a quartet playing Brahms —Brahms lost. It was something very much like that at the Berkshire Music Festival yesterday. At least for me.

The program was Mozart's "Violin Concerto No. 4 in D, K. 218", and Mahler's "Symphony No. 6 in A minor." Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Orchestra, was soloist for the Mozart.

Silverstein has proven his abilities as a fine violinist and musician time and again. But he was not at his best Sunday. He did not seem comfortable with the work. Agility in florid passages was not as clear or as clean as we have heard him play, and there were several moments of questionable intonation.

Levine used an appropriately small orchestra to accompany Silverstein, and kept a fine balance between soloist and orchestra. But one couldn't escape the feeling that Silverstein and Levine were not in agreement on certain tempos and points of interpretation. The result was therefore not really satisfying.

Levine, a young man of 28, who has had a rather meteoric rise in the music world, startled his audience by coming out after intermission in slacks and sport shirt to conduct the Mahler. He is a short, stocky man, and conducts with a minimum of theatrics.

His interpretation of the Sixth Symphony was certainly different, and, for me, again not satisfying. The Mahler work is supposed to be an expression of utter despair. Mahler seemed obsessed with the idea of death. Whereas in most of his works there is an affirmation of hope at the conclusion of his struggles, in the Sixth there is supposed to be none.

Levine does not interpret the work that way. There is an almost constant pushing of tempos, as he refuses to allow the piece to have any sense of weight. He draws some massive, stunning sounds from the orchestra, big and brassy, defiant. As a result, we are more aware of these passionate outbursts than of any sense of impending doom.

Levine does not allow us to hear any connection between sections within a movement. There is a sense of disjointedness. He does allow the third movement to breathe and sing. And we hear the beauty that is there. Although the ending of the fourth movement does convey a sense of futility, we are hardly overwhelmed.

Being a young man, Levine can be expected to bring a different point of view to the work. And fresh insights are useful. (Th e audience of slightly over 8,000 evidently impressed. There were those big sounds.) But was it Mahler? Not for me.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 29 1972

Ormandy Guest Conductor In Tanglewood Triumph

By BILL RICE

One of the disappointments of last summer's musical season was that a planned exchange concert involving the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which makes its summer home at Tanglewood, and the Philadelphia Orchestra, in residence at Saratoga, failed to materialize.

At least part of the exchange was realized Friday evening when Eugene Ormandy, musical director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, conducted the Boston Symphony in the opening concert of this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts in the Tanglewood shed.

Ormandy was received warmly and with great respect by the members of the orchestra, who rose as one as the diminutive figure topped with striking white hair stepped to the podium.

A year ago Ormandy was struggling to recover from a serious hip operation, and missed all but the very last of the concerts by the Philadelphia at Saratoga. At Tanglewood he displayed a vitality which indicated his operation has long been forgotten.

Memorable Reading

Highlighting the evening was a memorable reading of Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," performed first in 1944 and surely one of the masterworks for orchestra composed in this century.

As the orchestra was warming up prior to the concert, bits of pieces of the Bartok could be heard, even though the "Concerto" was last on the program, giving an idea of its place in the eyes of the musicians. It is not easy, by any stretch of the imagination.

Ormandy is one of Bartok's finest interperters and it came as no surprise that he gleaned a more than satisfactory performance from the fine orchestra in front of him.

He selected tempos in some sections that seemed a little quicker than we are used to, and his feel for the second section, subtitled by the composer "The Game of Couples," was a trifle more romantic than some, but Ormandy is Ormandy, and these differences came as mild surprises rather than disappointments.

Brilliant Woodwinds

The second section features wind instruments in pairs, with bassoons, oboes, clarinets, flutes and muted trumpets, following one another in that order.

Some very fine playing was heard, with brilliant woodwind work all through the work. The piccolo solo at the end of the third elegiac section was particularly beautiful, and very much in tune, which is not always the case.

The brass fuge in the first movement, Andante non tropo, was a show of sheer power and strength. Lower strings were a delight all through the concert.

The program opened with the "Tragic" Overture of Brahms, which, as the program notes aptly pointed out, is not of the mood indicated in its title. The overture is one of strength and virility rather than remorse, and under the unerring direction of the gentleman from Philadelphia, got the evening off to a rousing start.

Sibelius Fifth

The fifth symphony of Sibelius was also on the program, a work that was written and rewritten many times before the Finnish composer was satisfied with the result. The first version came in 1915 but the present one was not finalized until 1919.

The dates are important because, if anything is remarkable about the symphony, it is that such subdued writing was done by a major composer in these years. There is virtually no trace of the advanced harmonic, rhythmic or tonal techniques used by composers from other lands during this period. This is not meant as a criticism of the music, but Sibelius certainly belongs more the 19th than the 20th Century.

Perhaps the symphony has been overworked, as some of the harmonic progressions sound somewhat contrived in this day and age. But while the symphonies of Sibelius may not rank with the greatest of some other composers, they are too good to be put away forever on a musty shelf, which is why this one was on the program.

The final movement of the symphony was highlighted by a rapid "perpetual motion" section for first violins, which was well executed, helping the hymphony come to a dynamic, swirling finish.

Ormandy Conducts Boston Symphony at Lenox

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Music Review

LENOX — The highlight of tonal splendor during the first five weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival came Saturday night when the Boston Symphony was guest-conducted by Eugene Ormandy, now in his 36th year as music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Attendance for the festival's fifth weekend was set at 26,071.

As a member of the Boston Symphony expressed it to us during Saturday night intermission:

"Ormandy makes us do it. There is absolutely no other conductor like him. No wonder the Philadelphia is such a great orchestra!"

Levine Conducts

Yesterday afternoon's concert was conducted by James Levine, principal conductor elect of the Metropolitan Opera. Joseph Silverstein was soloist yesterday in Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, K.218.

Now 72, Ormandy's style hasn't diminished in vitality since he conducted the Philadelphia at the Worcester Festival from 1944 to 1957.

It was clear from the short responsive phrases that begin Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 3, that the orchestra had joined him eagerly in making great music.

Broad passages were powerful but unforced. Cellos played superbly. The overture's lively portion was brilliant without the tinsel sound. Ormandy developed it as a compact structure.

Summation was a dazzling performance with added glitter in the full-speed parallel string passages toward the close.

Ormandy wielded his baton over a virtuoso orchestra for Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler" and Richard Strauss' autobiographical tirade, "Ein Heldenleben," or "A Hero's Life."

Intonation

Intonation in the Hindemith was so pure that it lost all trace of the acidulous. Ormandy removed the plastic effect that this music sometimes engenders, giving individual voices their freedom. The orchestra responded in kind.

"Entombment" was reflective but not morbid. Opening recitatives of "Temptation of St. Anthony" rose from agitated murmurs to smashing climaxes.

Ormandy's epic concept of "Heldenleben" was carried through its rhapsodic material, the composer's snarls at his critics, to romantic interludes, tonal maelstroms and final resignation.

SATURDAY NIGHT
Eugene Ormandy, conductor
Leonore Overture No. 3, Opus 72B — Beethoven
Mathis der Maler — Hindemith
Ein Heldenleben, Opus 40 — Strauss
SUNDAY AFTERNOON
James Levine, conductor
Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, K.218 — Mozart
Joseph Silverstein, violinist
Symphony No. 6 in A minor — Mahler

Yesterday afternoon, Silverstein was as splendid as permitted in the coquettish Mozart violin concerto. The performance may hold a record for detachment between soloist and conductor.

Levine and the orchestra gave the concerto an appealing enough start. Thereafter, soloist and conductor governed themselves. Except in the slow movement, there was a lack of synchronization that even extended to tempos and style.

Technique

Silverstein's technique was dexterous, vital — if not always reliable. His own two cadenzas were tailored to the Mozart metier and adjusted well to the body of the work.

The lack of entente is to be attributed to the conductor — not the orchestra, which, by the way was of reduced size in keeping with the Mozart tradition.

Silverstein's brilliant playing of the extensive solo violin part in Saturday night's "Heldenleben" and yesterday's Mozart placed him again in the same league with his more prestigious colleagues, despite the polish and glamor in which some of them excel.

The 28-year-old Levine first conducted the Boston Symphony last April. He's short, rotund, long-haired and does not create a particularly compelling podium figure.

However, Mahler's Sixth Symphony was enough to firmly establish Levine's musical acumen.

Yesterday's concert also bolstered the fact that Mahler's music is being played to compatible ears in the 1970's. Yesterday's audience was 8,154.

In the main, Mahler's Sixth is a long soliloquy of despair. Its infrequent admissions of sunlight produce beauty. The music has typical Mahler sweep — carryovers of Wagner and Liszt, plus a kind of Dostoevsky philosophy.

Another moment of relief is the passional eulogy in the trio portion of the sardonic scherzo. However, quality of performance is not at stake whether the listener is enamoured or wearied by Mahler's grandiloquent filibusters.

Levine conducted the Sixth with a determination to give it eloquence, import, emotional stability and faithful representation.

TELEGRAM
WORCESTER, MASS.
D. 61,977
JUL 31 1972
New England Newsclip

It Was Sleepy Time at Tanglewood

● Concert Review

When, at the beginning of the second half of Sunday's concert at Tanglewood, the BSO players and conducter James Levine came out sans sports jackets and with the latter in navy T-shirt, it appeared that they were really going to get down to work, to really dig into the Mahler 6th Symphony.

It was not be, though.

The program had opened with a most unfun, unplayful performance of the Mozart Violin Concerto No. 5 in which Joseph Silverstein played the solo part very cleanly and expressively, but alomst to himself.

People were falling asleep around me and it seemed even more unlogical if the Mozart were not going to be played well anyway and given the length of the Mahler that anything besides the symphony should have been programmed in the first place.

The Symphony, itself, is one of Mahler's most unfamiliar although one of the most classically constructed and easy to understand. It is also rather brief for Mahler. Yet, it's over-an-hour duration still makes it fairly tough going for some listeners.

There is also something very frightening about it too. All those instruments screaming at the tops of their registers, a typical Mahlerian sonority, seem unusually ominous in this symphony which Alma Mahler described as "coming more directly from the inmost heart" than any of the other works.

So perhaps it was because it didn't seem as if the work, the most autobiographical of all, were coming from the players' inmost hearts that the performance failed to come off. If, besides all the big obvious moments, the little things had happened when they should—all those thousands of minute nuances had been acknowledged, we really would have had something—a something like the great performance of Mahler's Fifth which Georg Solti conducted last spring.

Levine hasn't really got the feel of the work as yet, isn't convinced or convincing yet about some of the sonorities, the balances, most of all, the subtlties of dynamics. Sequences of fortissimo, piano, crescendo, sfortando, fortissimo that happen in one short measure of time go by without any real attempt at doing them. And those vague, faraway, nostalgic passages with the cowbells never really achieve the longing, dreamy expression wanted.

ELLEN PFEIFER

NEWS
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 95,528
JUL 31 1972
New England Newsclip

Mahler, Mozart Lost At Berkshire Festival

By RICHARD CONWAY

Sunday afternoon's concert at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of guest conductor James Levine, reminded me of the old gag about such and such a quartet playing Brahms —Brahms lost. It was something very much like that at the Berkshire Music Festival yesterday. At least for me.

The program was Mozart's "Violin Concerto No. 4 in D, K. 218", and Mahler's "Symphony No. 6 in A minor." Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster of the Boston Orchestra, was soloist for the Mozart.

Silverstein has proven his abilities as a fine violinist and musician time and again. But he was not at his best Sunday. He did not seem comfortable with the work. Agility in florid passages was not as clear or as clean as we have heard him play, and there were several moments of questionable intonation.

Levine used an appropriately small orchestra to accompany Silverstein, and kept a fine balance between soloist and orchestra. But one couldn't escape the feeling that Silverstein and Levine were not in agreement on certain tempos and points of interpretation. The result was therefore not really satisfying.

Levine, a young man of 28, who has had a rather meteoric rise in the music world, startled his audience by coming out after intermission in slacks and sport shirt to conduct the Mahler. He is a short, stocky man, and conducts with a minimum of theatrics.

His interpretation of the Sixth Symphony was certainly different, and, for me, again not satisfying. The Mahler work is supposed to be an expression of utter despair. Mahler seemed obsessed with the idea of death. Whereas in most of his works there is an affirmation of hope at the conclusion of his struggles, in the Sixth there is supposed to be none.

Levine does not interpret the work that way. There is an almost constant pushing of tempos, as he refuses to allow the piece to have any sense of weight. He draws some massive, stunning sounds from the orchestra, big and brassy, defiant. As a result, we are more aware of these passionate outbursts than of any sense of impending doom.

Levine does not allow us to hear any connection between sections within a movement. There is a sense of disjointedness. He does allow the third movement to breathe and sing. And we hear the beauty that is there. Although the ending of the fourth movement does convey a sense of futility, we are hardly overwhelmed.

Being a young man, Levine can be expected to bring a different point of view to the work. And fresh insights are useful. (The audience of slightly over 8,000 evidently impressed. There were those big sounds.) But was it Mahler? Not for me.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
JUL 29 1972

Ormandy Guest Conductor In Tanglewood Triumph

By BILL RICE

One of the disappointments of last summer's musical season was that a planned exchange concert involving the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which makes its summer home at Tanglewood, and the Philadelphia Orchestra, in residence at Saratoga, failed to materialize.

At least part of the exchange was realized Friday evening when Eugene Ormandy, musical director of the Philadelphia Orchestra, conducted the Boston Symphony in the opening concert of this weekend's Berkshire Festival concerts in the Tanglewood shed.

Ormandy was received warmly and with great respect by the members of the orchestra, who rose as one as the diminutive figure topped with striking white hair stepped to the podium.

A year ago Ormandy was struggling to recover from a serious hip operation, and missed all but the very last of the concerts by the Philadelphia at Saratoga. At Tanglewood he displayed a vitality which indicated his operation has long been forgotten.

Memorable Reading

Highlighting the evening was a memorable reading of Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra," performed first in 1944 and surely one of the masterworks for orchestra composed in this century.

As the orchestra was warming up prior to the concert, bits of pieces of the Bartok could be heard, even though the "Concerto" was last on the program, giving an idea of its place in the eyes of the musicians. It is not easy, by any stretch of the imagination.

Ormandy is one of Bartok's finest interperters and it came as no surprise that he gleaned a more than satisfactory performance from the fine orchestra in front of him.

He selected tempos in some sections that seemed a little quicker than we are used to, and his feel for the second section, subtitled by the composer "The Game of Couples," was a trifle more romantic than some, but Ormandy is Ormandy, and these differences came as mild surprises rather than disappointments.

Brilliant Woodwinds

The second section features wind instruments in pairs, with bassoons, oboes, clarinets, flutes and muted trumpets, following one another in that order.

Some very fine playing was heard, with brilliant woodwind work all through the work. The piccolo solo at the end of the third elegiac section was particularly beautiful, and very much in tune, which is not always the case.

The brass fuge in the first movement, Andante non tropo, was a show of sheer power and strength. Lower strings were a delight all through the concert.

The program opened with the "Tragic" Overture of Brahms, which, as the program notes aptly pointed out, is not of the mood indicated in its title. The overture is one of strength and virility rather than remorse, and under the unerring direction of the gentleman from Philadelphia, got the evening off to a rousing start.

Sibelius Fifth

The fifth symphony of Sibelius was also on the program, a work that was written and rewritten many times before the Finnish composer was satisfied with the result. The first version came in 1915 but the present one was not finalized until 1919.

The dates are important because, if anything is remarkable about the symphony, it is that such subdued writing was done by a major composer in these years. There is virtually no trace of the advanced harmonic, rhythmic or tonal techniques used by composers from other lands during this period. This is not meant as a criticism of the music, but Sibelius certainly belongs more the 19th than the 20th Century.

Perhaps the symphony has been overworked, as some of the harmonic progressions sound somewhat contrived in this day and age. But while the symphonies of Sibelius may not rank with the greatest of some other composers, they are too good to be put away forever on a musty shelf, which is why this one was on the program.

The final movement of the symphony was highlighted by a rapid "perpetual motion" section for first violins, which was well executed, helping the symphony come to a dynamic, swirling finish.

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D 195 032
AUG 1 1972
New England Newsclip

/ Superbly organized performance

Levine's Mahler rich, clear

TANGLEWOOD /
By MICHAEL STEINBERG

LENOX — Having conducted Mozart in coat and tie Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, James Levine reappeared after intermission in a blue polo shirt to cope with Mahler's 75-minute Sixth Symphony. That statement of "there's work to be done" made, he thrust, like the good opera conductor he is, the start of Mahler's menacing march tread right into the noise of the still settling audience, and powerfully asserted his stupendous command over the music, the orchestra, and the audience.

I've often been troubled why most conductors make Mahler seem so hard, why, for example, they can't deal with his crucial distinction between sudden and gradual changes of speed, why an instruction not to hurry has to be translated into the retard, the request for an unnoticeable enlivening of the tempo to become the sudden jolt forward, why, in some, they have to make it all come out so awkward and confusing.

With Levine, no such problems arise at all. His performance was totally scrupulous, but better even than scrupulous, because the correctness was informed at all times by intelligence and insight.

He gave a powerfully concentrated, totally clear, superbly organized performance, one rich in vivid detail. Moreover, with an extraordinary economy and clarity of gesture, he elicited absolutely superb playing from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The two reservations I would note are that, apparently through some accident, the first of Mahler's two always problematic hammer-blows in the finale misfired, coming out as some sort of perfunctory rap, and that in the aftermath of the performance of the Ninth Symphony which Bernstein conducted recently with the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, I longed for pianissimos with more of a hushed and special quality to them. But, no doubt, Levine is one of the most impressive conductors, not only of his own young generation, but any, now before the American public.

The Mozart was the Violin Concerto in D Major, K. 218, with Joseph Silverstein as soloist. There was on Levine's part some over-pointing of the second subject in the first movement, which I read as a lingering influence of George Szell, under whose guidance Levine began his career; otherwise his conducting of the concerto was altogether natural and beautiful. Just, in fact, what Silverstein's exquisitely phrased, tasteful, delicately toned playing wanted.

Silverstein's own cadenzas, witty, violinistically brilliant extensions or reconsiderations of Joachim's, were added pleasure to a distinguished concert.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169
AUG 1 1972

Tanglewood Concert Contrasts Symphonies

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

James Levine, 28 years old and soon to be principal conductor at the Metroplitan Opera Company chose two widely disparate musical expressions for the Sunday Tanglewood Concert, the Mozart Concert 4 for Violin and Orchestra and Gustave Mahler's Symphony 6 in A Minor.

Of course, there was method in his choice, there always is. So let us assume that these choices were for the most obvious reason that of contrast.

AND THERE are very few composers who reside at such a distance from Mozart on the musical spectrum as Mahler does.

JAMES LEVINE

There is a strong movement afoot, led by Lenny baby, to somehow push Mahler into the pantheon of great composers using the device of over-exposure which has been, most effective for Richard Rodgers, for example. They might be successful finally, but there are some who are reluctant to concede Mahler a place in the top rank and are dragging their feet.

IF MAHLER had had a good editor his music would be considerably more effective, because he overwrote to a numbing degree. But it is essentially the nature of his musical concept that can disturb. The orchestral sound is always dark and portentious, unrelieved by flashes of humour orr even spirit. The music is heavy and viscous, too sweet, and therefore too much as a steady diet.

He was undeniably a master of harmony and therefore orchestration, but the final concoction is too thick and tortuously too long to abide for any length of time.

LEVINE, nonetheless, conducted very well indeed and I will carelessly and fearlessly predict an outstanding future for this young man.

The soloist in the Mozart was concertmaster Joseph Silverstein. This was not his day. He established his credentials most impressively earlier this summer when he played the Mozart "Haffner Serenade" as well as anybody could, but this Sunday he had his problems fron the start both technically and therefore quite logically, with his intonation. The Andante was much better, but he was quite aware of his earlier aberrations which seemed to haunt him for the rest of the Concerto.

Perhaps he is working too much. He has played a great deal of solo work this summer besides anchoring the BSO which is by itself a demanding job. But one unlucky day out of ten is a pretty good record, better in fact, than most players enjoy.

MUSIC AND ARTISTS
NEW YORK, N. Y.
6 TI. A YR. CIRC. N. AVAIL.
JUN JUL 1972

. . . . . James Levine, principal conductor designate of the Metropolitan Opera, made his debut with the Boston Symphony, replacing the ailing Rafael Kubelik who was forced to cancel his U.S. tour. . . .

KITE MAGAZINE

James Levine—A Precedent Has Been Established

By Milton Zapolski

When James Levine ascended the podium Sunday to conduct the Boston Symphony in Mahler's gargantuan Sixth Symphony he distinguished himself both in appearance and music-making. Eschewing the traditional sports jacket or tuxedo in favor of a light-weight tee shirt, he was better able to communicate his realization to the orchestra and generally succeeded in exposing Mahler's multi-faceted score to as many lights as possible. The unburdened apparal sensation was accompanied by a corresponding riddance of excess musical rhetoric and prevented the development of any eccentric over-interpretations that might get in the way of the music.

Even so, Levine's reading left much to be desired. His sense of rhythm was either very insecure or he engaged in little loosenings or tightenings here and there which did not unify the music nor make it more emotionally compelling but instead gave a stop-go impression. The orchestra was hardly outstanding either, for they sounded ragged much of the time and none of the harp (especially lower second harp), trumpet, nor E-flat clarinet contributions was ever in tune. The E-flat clarinet was ridiculously squeeky and even ugly at times, as was the trumpet sound. The percussion could not count properly and made several erroneous entrances, especially in the outer movements.

Andante Excellent

Part one of the symphony, the opening movement and scherzo, was conveyed in an acceptable manner that approached the music in an architectural way yet sought out emotional levels of a diverse nature. Certainly the little chorale between first and second subject-groups of the allegro, the cowbell interlude, and the coda were inspired moments, as was much of the scherzo, especially the round-dances that change rhythms so constantly. The andante was very pleasing and in certain ways was the highlight of the afternoon. The cellos' low C a moment before the E Major section was like a magic carpet ride, and the breathtaking climax near the end built up through a succession of musical abstractions that did not lose energy along the way. The French and English horn contributions in this movement were extremely fine, although the English horn blew it by not having enough breath for the vital octave-leap at the end of his first vaulting phrase.

Hammerblows of Fate

The finale, with its three collosal hammerblows of fate, began very nicely when the score's important musical symbols were delineated as if in a dream or an atmospheric mist. Certainly the best movements occurred in the premonition of the hammerblow scene about a quarter-through and in the startling octave descent in the horns that ushers in a thematic inversion. The hammerblows themselves were trite and insignificant, sounding more like a firecracker going off than lethal detonations. There were only two such sounds, for Levine foolishly ommitted the final hammerblow even though it is not in the best interest of the music to do this. In sum, I was disappointed even though there was much to admire at times.

Continued on Page 3

Tanglewood

Continued from Page 2

Mozart Features Silverstein

Levine's concert began with Mozart's Fourth Violin Concerto with concertmaster Silverstein soloing. Levine conducted a reduced orchestra (very smart idea) and turned in an outstanding accompaniment that was perfect in matters of phrasing, dynamics, and shading. Silverstein equalled his colleague's efforts by playing simply wonderfully and weaving a spell that captivated the ear and the mind. His cadenzas, composed by himself, were miracles of thematic continuity and relevance (unlike most others) that did not fail to be display pieces yet seemed organic, as if they grew from the score rather than just offered a chance to show off.

Ormandy Guest-Conducts

Friday and Saturday evening Eugene Ormandy conducted the orchestra for the first time in several years. Friday he played Brahms' Tragic Overture, Sibelius' Fifth, and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. The Brahms and the first two movements of the Sibelius were adaquate performances but hardly inspired. The finale of the Sibelius, though, was completely fabulous.

The Boston Globe
(EVENING)
D 495 032

AUG 1 1972

New England Newsclip

/ Superbly organized performance

Levine's Mahler rich, clear

TANGLEWOOD /
By MICHAEL STEINBERG

LENOX — Having conducted Mozart in coat and tie Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, James Levine reappeared after intermission in a blue polo shirt to cope with Mahler's 75-minute Sixth Symphony. That statement of "there's work to be done" made, he thrust, like the good opera conductor he is, the start of Mahler's menacing march tread right into the noise of the still settling audience, and powerfully asserted his stupendous command over the music, the orchestra, and the audience.

I've often been troubled why most conductors make Mahler seem so hard, why, for example, they can't deal with his crucial distinction between sudden and gradual changes of speed, why an instruction not to hurry has to be translated into the retard, the request for an unnoticeable enlivening of the tempo to become the sudden jolt forward, why, in some, they have to make it all come out so awkward and confusing.

With Levine, no such problems arise at all. His performance was totally scrupulous, but better even than scrupulous, because the correctness was informed at all times by intelligence and insight.

He gave a powerfully concentrated, totally clear, superbly organized performance, one rich in vivid detail. Moreover, with an extraordinary economy and clarity of gesture, he elicited absolutely superb playing from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The two reservations I would note are that, apparently through some accident, the first of Mahler's two always problematic hammer-blows in the finale misfired, coming out as some sort of perfunctory rap, and that in the aftermath of the performance of the Ninth Symphony which Bernstein conducted recently with the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, I longed for pianissimos with more of a hushed and special quality to them. But, no doubt, Levine is one of the most impressive conductors, not only of his own young generation, but any, now before the American public.

The Mozart was the Violin Concerto in D Major, K. 218, with Joseph Silverstein as soloist. There was on Levine's part some over-pointing of the second subject in the first movement, which I read as a lingering influence of George Szell, under whose guidance Levine began his career; otherwise his conducting of the concerto was altogether natural and beautiful. Just, in fact, what Silverstein's exquisitely phrased, tasteful, delicately toned playing wanted.

Silverstein's own cadenzas, witty, violinistically brilliant extensions or reconsiderations of Joachim's, were added pleasure to a distinguished concert.

TIMES UNION
ALBANY, N. Y.
D. 71,675 SUN. 145,169

AUG 1 1972

102

Tanglewood Concert Contrasts Symphonies

By RICHARD VINCENT
Music Critic

James Levine, 28 years old and soon to be principal conductor at the Metroplitan Opera Company chose two widely disparate musical expressions for the Sunday Tanglewood Concert, the Mozart Concert 4 for Violin and Orchestra and Gustave Mahler's Symphony 6 in A Minor.

Of course, there was method in his choice, there always is. So let us assume that these choices were for the most obvious reason that of contrast.

AND THERE are very few composers who reside at such a distance from Mozart on the musical spectrum as Mahler does.

JAMES LEVINE

There is a strong movement afoot, led by Lenny baby, to somehow push Mahler into the pantheon of great composers using the device of over-exposure which has been, most effective for Richard Rodgers, for example. They might be successful finally, but there are some who are reluctant to concede Mahler a place in the top rank and are dragging their feet.

IF MAHLER had had a good editor his music would be considerably more effective, because he overwrote to a numbing degree. But it is essentially the nature of his musical concept that can disturb. The orchestral sound is always dark and portentious, unrelieved by flashes of humour orr even spirit. The music is heavy and viscous, too sweet, and therefore too much as a steady diet.

He was undeniably a master of harmony and therefore orchestration, but the final concoction is too thick and tortuously too long to abide for any length of time.

LEVINE, nonetheless, conducted very well indeed and I will carelessly and fearlessly predict an outstanding future for this young man.

The soloist in the Mozart was concertmaster Joseph Silverstein. This was not his day. He established his credentials most impressively earlier this summer when he played the Mozart "Haffner Serenade" as well as anybody could, but this Sunday he had his problems fron the start both technically and therefore quite logically, with his intonation. The Andante was much better, but he was quite aware of his earlier aberrations which seemed to haunt him for the rest of the Concerto.

Perhaps he is working too much. He has played a great deal of solo work this summer besides anchoring the BSO which is by itself a demanding job. But one unlucky day out of ten is a pretty good record, better in fact, than most players enjoy.

MUSIC AND ARTISTS
NEW YORK, N. Y.
6 TI. A YR. CIRC. N. AVAIL.

JUN JUL 1972

. . . . . James Levine, principal conductor designate of the Metropolitan Opera, made his debut with the Boston Symphony, replacing the ailing Rafael Kubelik who was forced to cancel his U.S. tour. . . .

KITE MAGAZINE

James Levine—A Precedent Has Been Established

By Milton Zapolski

When James Levine ascended the podium Sunday to conduct the Boston Symphony in Mahler's gargantuan Sixth Symphony he distinguished himself both in appearance and music-making. Eschewing the traditional sports jacket or tuxedo in favor of a light-weight tee shirt, he was better able to communicate his realization to the orchestra and generally succeeded in exposing Mahler's multi-faceted score to as many lights as possible. The unburdened apparal sensation was accompanied by a corresponding riddance of excess musical rhetoric and prevented the development of any eccentric over-interpretations that might get in the way of the music.

Even so, Levine's reading left much to be desired. His sense of rhythm was either very insecure or he engaged in little loosenings or tightenings here and there which did not unify the music nor make it more emotionally compelling but instead gave a stop-go impression. The orchestra was hardly outstanding either, for they sounded ragged much of the time and none of the harp (especially lower second harp), trumpet, nor E-flat clarinet contributions was ever in tune. The E-flat clarinet was ridiculously squeeky and even ugly at times, as was the trumpet sound. The percussion could not count properly and made several erroneous entrances, especially in the outer movements.

Andante Excellent

Part one of the symphony, the opening movement and scherzo, was conveyed in an acceptable manner that approached the music in an architectural way yet sought out emotional levels of a diverse nature. Certainly the little chorale between first and second subject-groups of the allegro, the cowbell interlude, and the coda were inspired moments, as was much of the scherzo, especially the round-dances that change rhythms so constantly. The andante was very pleasing and in certain ways was the highlight of the afternoon. The cellos' low C a moment before the E Major section was like a magic carpet ride, and the breathtaking climax near the end built up through a succession of musical abstractions that did not lose energy along the way. The French and English horn contributions in this movement were extremely fine, although the English horn blew it by not having enough breath for the vital octave-leap at the end of his first vaulting phrase.

Hammerblows of Fate

The finale, with its three collosal hammerblows of fate, began very nicely when the score's important musical symbols were delineated as if in a dream or an atmospheric mist. Certainly the best movements occurred in the premonition of the hammerblow scene about a quarter-through and in the startling octave descent in the horns that ushers in a thematic inversion. The hammerblows themselves were trite and insignificant, sounding more like a firecracker going off than lethal detonations. There were only two such sounds, for Levine foolishly ommitted the final hammerblow even though it is not in the best interest of the music to do this. In sum, I was disappointed even though there was much to admire at times.

Continued on Page 3

Tanglewood

Continued from Page 2

Mozart Features Silverstein

Levine's concert began with Mozart's Fourth Violin Concerto with concertmaster Silverstein soloing. Levine conducted a reduced orchestra (very smart idea) and turned in an outstanding accompaniment that was perfect in matters of phrasing, dynamics, and shading. Silverstein equalled his colleague's efforts by playing simply wonderfully and weaving a spell that captivated the ear and the mind. His cadenzas, composed by himself, were miracles of thematic continuity and relevance (unlike most others) that did not fail to be display pieces yet seemed organic, as if they grew from the score rather than just offered a chance to show off.

Ormandy Guest-Conducts

Friday and Saturday evening Eugene Ormandy conducted the orchestra for the first time in several years. Friday he played Brahms' Tragic Overture, Sibelius' Fifth, and Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. The Brahms and the first two movements of the Sibelius were adaquate performances but hardly inspired. The finale of the Sibelius, though, was completely fabulous.

Music review

Mahler's Sixth debuts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIFTH Tanglewood weekend was shared by guest conductors Eugene Ormandy, on Friday and Saturday nights, and James Levine, yesterday afternoon. Ormandy has been welcomed back repeatedly. It was a Tanglewood debut for 28-year-old Levine, and he chose no easy, sure-fire vehicle to ride to popularity. The Mahler Sixth Symphony is a formidable work, extending well over an hour and a quarter, and it had never been played before at Tanglewood.

* * *

MAHLER'S admonition for the first movement is "energetic," and there is little relief from that spirit throughout all but the andante. A huge orchestra is required, with the brass section especially augmented, and their relentlessly powerful blasts became excessive in the unsubtle manner with which Levine chose to direct. There is little opportunity, it must be granted, to be less than gloomy in this symphony. It starts with four ominous strong taps in the cellos and basses, whereupon the drums take over and remain omnipresent almost without deviation. The opening bar is in no way suggestive of the Beethoven violin concerto introduction, but the printed notes are similar.

Levine took the repeat in the first movement, an angry, ruthless march. Mahler, in contradistinction to someone like Sibelius heard Friday, writes cohesively so that even in the second movement, a scherzo in a different rhythmic idiom, he retains the ingredients of his first subject so that the same tiles form a new pattern. The 30-minute finale would drive home its point by fiercely insistent reiteration if, possibly, it is played with some appreciation of flexibility and variety.

* * *

THE TREND in commerce is toward a four-day week, but Bostn Symphony concertmaster Joseph Silverstein would surprise no one if he advocated a 25-hour day. This past weekend has been a pattern to which, probably with variations, he has adhered in the current Berkshire Music Center schedule. Yesterday he was soloist in the Mozart Fourth Concerto in D, (K. 218); Saturday he executed the violin solos in the Strauss "Ein Heldenleben"; and on Friday he stepped back during the Weekend Prelude into the friendly circle of the Boston Symphony chamber players where, as primus inter pares, he took part in a Beethoven string trio and a Brahms piano quartet.

Whitestone

Conductor Levine engulfs soloist Joseph Silverstein.

Silverstein's Mozart was classic in the sense of Grecian statuary; his Strauss cadenzas were pure magnificence in ease and security of execution and grasp of style. In his chamber music playing, with violist Burton Fine, cellist Jules Eskin and pianist Gilbert Kalish, he was obviously as anxious to be one of the team as he was successful in the other tasks in being justifiably the prima donna.

A reduced orchestra was used for the Mozart concerto accompaniment. Levine kept it properly in the background, yet he asked but mild and insufficient bite to the three graphic barks Mozart inserts in the lovely introduction. Silverstein played his own cadenzas, all of challenging technical demands but stylistically not particularly convincing.

* * *

ORMANDY is one of the elder statesmen conducting masters of the orchestral world. His craftmanship is on a level with his comprehension of the literature, and his choice of programs is always a factor in getting him to first base even before he lifts a baton. Friday night after the opening Brahms "Tragic" overture, he divided the program between the Sibelius Fifth Symphony and the Bartok Concerto for Orchestra, the latter, in reality, a semantic quibble in terms.

If a program could be weighed or evaluated in terms of tragedy or comedy, in their Grecian definitions, the chances are the sad and melancholy mood would prevail. Sibelius and Bartok expressed themselves in lamentations more often than in gaiety, but no one was depressed during the performance nor left the Shed in tears. Indeed, Dr. Pangloss would have been justified in declaring Tanglewood that night as the best of all possible worlds.

The Sibelius is distinctly more tragic than the Brahms in spite of appellations. The final movement rises to exalted eloquence in its development. The Bartok sparkles with magnetic imagination, and both performances were heroic in dimensions and tonal wealth. Ormandy had chosen to play them both on previous guest appearances.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Ormandy began his evening with the Beethoven "Leonore" overture, No. 3, proceeded to the Hindemith symphony, "Mathis der Maler," and closed with Strauss's "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's Life). Again he either raised the musicians, or they rose by his stimulating incitement, to heights of orchestral glory. It was one of the most virtuosic performances in Tanglewood history.

Urbane Strauss was reputed not to be deficient in conceit. He never admitted nor attempted to convey that he considered himself the "hero," but the grandiloquent episode of the hero's adversaries, of a battlefield, of his courtship, works of peace and his retreat from the world and fulfillment are written with graphic emphasis. Ormandy inspired the Boston orchestra to a delirium of ectasy.

In the courtship, a solo played by Silverstein introduces the hero's beloved, a capricious trifler, an elaborate coquette, and his depiction of the fickle lady's whims was purely thrilling violin playing.

The directions for the violin in the score suggest "flippantly, playfully, insolently, sedately, soothingly," et cetera, suggesting the changing aspects of the emotional scene, but the orchestra soon breaks into a love song of sweep and passion.

* * *

STRAUSS TREATED a similar libretto in his "Don Quixote" in quite a different manner. With a sly sense of humor, he confided that he was going to attempt a tone poem in the same key as Beethoven's "Eroica" and with an analogous goal but without a funeral march.

Hindemith's symphony takes off from a series of deeply religious paintings by a 16th-century artist much as Moussorgsky based his "Pictures at an Exhibition" on those of a man whose work he admired. Ormandy realized the nobility of Hindemith sought to express of his conception of the artist's imagination. One may concede that Ormandy chose reliable warhorses for his programs, but no one can deny that he made sublime use of them.

Tanglewood draws 26,071 for weekend

A total of 26,071 persons attended Tanglewood over the weekend, approximately 4,600 more than attended the comparable weekend last year.

Friday night's concert drew 5,968; Saturday's open rehearsal, 3,376; Saturday night, 8,573; and Sunday afternoon 8,154.

Ormandy Sparkles

The other piece on the program was Mozart's violin concerto No. 4 (K. 218) with Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's concertmaster, as soloist. He was the soloist Saturday night, also, for Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben," and in both cases played with his usual nimble skill and sweetness of tone.

Eugene Ormandy was the conductor Saturday and repeated the success he had Friday, and for much the same reason, sparkling unity and glowing tones — and so did Boston's wind sections.

The program presented a couple of large works that are not among my favorites — Hindemith's symphony from "Mathis der Maler" (Mathias, the Painter) and Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" (A Hero's Life.)

Entertaining Treatment

The orchestra played them very impressively. They are pieces of grand gesture, fulsome sonics and grandiose rhetoric.

There is often so much pure orchestration that one wonders how deeply the music can be buried under it. The sound, as distinct from the music, is what demanded the attention.

I can't remember when the orchestra played this Strauss piece so entertainingly, but it is still mostly heroic bombast for me except, of course, for the beautiful solo violin passages.

Ormandy was at his best, knife sharp and zestful, and the orchestra responded with enthusiasm.

The attendance Friday was 5968; Saturday morning it was 3376, Saturday night 8573 and yesterday afternoon 8154; 26,071 for the weekend.

UNION
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
D. 79,398
JUL 31 1972
New England Newsclip

JAMES LEVINE

Conductor's Zest Blurs Mahler

By R.C. HAMMERICH

LENOX — James Levine is a young conductor who has caused quite a stir in recent months as a man with a big musical future. He was on view at Tanglewood yesterday leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra through Mahler's sixth symphony.

No Despair

Perhaps he shouldn't have chosen that symphony. Certainly at 28 he is a fellow of surprising talent, but Mahler's music has defeated many conductors. It is music of great depth and breadth.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has played it many times and it has members who have been acquainted with it for more than 20 years. Most listeners believe it to be a message of despair.

There was no despair in it Sunday. Levine (dressed in a sport shirt) seemed to be saying, okay, so they always play this sad. Well, I don't think it's sad, so I'll see if we can put a little life into it.

Unexpected Speeds

What happened was that the music didn't sound quite like Mahler. The speeds were often faster than is expected from him; it often sounded a bit pushed. . .hurried, uncomfortable.

And similar things happened to the volumes. They were a bit louder and a bit softer than was appropriate for what seemed to be the intention of the music.

There were, of course, great long stretches of this long (80 minutes) symphony which were highly satisfying. . .full and strong and affecting, but they merged into passages that had an air of indecision, somehow, as if they didn't quite know what to be.

In the meantime, Levine, a chunky, square man, stood on wide-spread, solid feet and with very busy arms gave the appearance of being on top of the music every second.

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

DIVERSITY MARKS CROWD YESTERDAY AT TANGLEWOOD (Globe photo by Jack Sheahan)

Tanglewood box office hits high note on weekend of Beethoven, good weather

By JOHN A. SCHWEIZER

The three B's — Beethoven, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the balmy Berkshires — combined over the weekend to give Tanglewood its largest three-day attendance since its box office began keeping records in 1963.

A total of 41,337 persons attended the three all-Beethoven concerts and the Saturday morning rehearsal. The breakdown was: Friday night, 9,539; Saturday rehearsal, 4,434; Saturday night, 14,851, and Sunday afternoon, 12,513.

The all-Beethoven weekend is traditionally a big one at Tanglewood, and conductor William Steinberg's long association with that master's music was considered an added drawing factor, according to a Tanglewood spokesman.

1971 record beaten

The old record, 38,186, was set on last year's all-Beethoven weekend, July 21 through 23, with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

The Ninth Symphony performed Saturday, is especially popular with a broad spectrum of music lovers, the spokesman said.

Pleasant weather is needed for attendance much beyond the 5,066 persons the roofed Shed can hold, he pointed out. The weather was warm but breezy.

The vigorous conducting style of Seiji Ozawa was seen as a factor in the sizable turnout for yesterday's program, which featured the Triple Concerto and other less widely known offerings than those on the Saturday bill.

The nearby Lenox Arts Center also enjoyed its largest, single-concert attendance of the season Saturday as roughly 3,800 persons attended the early evening performance by folksinger Pete Seeger.

Spokesman Lyn Austin said the center is trying not to over publicize its "name" attractions in an effort to keep attendance at a manageable level. Moving the concert time up to 6 p.m. so as to avoid conflicts with Tanglewood performances and a widening of the center's driveway has kept crowd-related problems at a minimum, she said.

Even so, there was considerable congestion in the Lenox-Stockbridge area Saturday and yesterday. Stockbridge Police Chief William J. Obanhein said there were large tie-ups in his village, and Lenox Chief Anthony W. Romeo said he had never seen as much on-street parking along West Street and Under Mountain and Richmond roads.

The line of cars along West Street extended beyond Morris Elementary School, Romeo said, and Hawthorne Street was lined on both sides.

Theatre Festival record

One local resident said it took him one hour to go from his home on Taconic Avenue in Lenox, near the Church-on-the-Hill, to Tanglewood. "We left at 8 and got there at 9," he said.

The Berkshire Theatre Festival at the Stockbridge Playhouse has also enjoyed a banner season so far. The 16 performances of "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little," which closed Saturday, attracted a record-breaking 5,895 persons, 85 per cent of capacity, according to company manager James L. O'Hearn.

Receipts exceeded those of last year's season's opener, "Promenade All," but O'Hearn did not have those attendance figures available.

On the other hand, the Williamstown Theatre reports that it is running financially about 14 per cent under last year, due primarily to a 5 per cent drop in attendance and a 12 per cent hike in costs.

"Mary Stuart" opened the season with a record high attendance, and "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" closed Saturday with a solid, $2,000 net profit. But executive director Nikos Psacharopoulos commented that "our over-all financial picture, compared to last year, is not as satisfactory."

Weather hasn't helped

He attributed the poor attendance to the weather, with the rainy opening weeks followed by the recent hot spell.

Even more critical, Psacharopoulos said, are skyrocketing production costs. These can be met if the theatre nearly doubles its list of patrons, which currently numbers about 105 persons.

"Clearly, we cannot maintain our standards if we depend entirely on ticket revenues," he said.

O'Hearn concurred, noting that "costs are horrendous, going beyond all bounds."

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

Whitesto

BIGGEST WEEKEND since Tanglewood began keeping records of such things fills the music Shed and lawn for Saturday night's concert, conducted by William Steinberg. By twilight, the crowd, totaling 14,851, is listening to Beethoven's First Symphony. Later, Steinberg conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood Festival Chorus and soloists in the Ninth Symphony, the top attraction for the all-Beethoven weekend.

Beethoven orgy at Tanglewood

Bos Symphony

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Friday evening, for the first time this season, all the motels I passed on my 20-mile trip to Tanglewood had their "no vacancy" signs on. Saturday in Lee, Colonel Sanders ran out of chicken and there haven't been such traffic jams since the fall of France. They were playing Beethoven at the Berkshire Festival, and the weather was unambiguously good.

Some of the Beethoven was the super-popular sort. Friday, William Steinberg conducted the 5th and 6th symphonies, and Saturday he did the 1st and the 9th, that program drawing an audience of just under 15,000. Yesterday afternoon, Seiji Ozawa conducted the 4th Symphony, and with it, two fairly rare works, the Triple Concerto and the Choral Fantasy. With a gate count of 12,513, you can hardly complain that it hurt the box office.

Those two pieces are problematic as well as rare. The Fantasy starts with what sounds like a gigantic improvisation of piano alone, which leads to a set of variations with orchestra on an earlier song of Beethoven, with a chorus joining in toward the end. The exceedingly simple manner of the theme, the variation procedure, the idea of a vocal ending to an instrumental work, even certain details of harmony and melody, all look forward to the 18-years-later 9th Symphony (too bad for those who were here all weekend that they couldn't hear the experimental sketch before the fully achieved work). And through all that, there runs a piano part that covers ground from patches far more aggressively independent than anything in the concertos to accompaniments so simple that a beginner could hit all their notes. The three-way texture always remains a puzzle, and so does the late and then extremely brief appearance of the voices.

In a committed performance with a pianist who has the fortunate personality to do a convincing job of imitating Beethoven's improvising, and who is also an interested accompanist, the Choral Fantasy comes off well and is a wonderful show of high spirits.

The pianist yesterday was good, because for the difficult combination role of provoker, listener, and virtuoso, the Boston Symphony had engaged 25-year-old Peter Serkin (who had spent Beethoven's bicentennial year playing only Bach, Messien and Schoenberg). Around his vigorous, sensitive, and very straight playing, Ozawa, the orchestra, and John Oliver's Tanglewood Festival Chorus did their stuff extremely well, too.

The problem with the Triple Concerto is a kind of textural craziness, too, particularly in balance between an almost impossibly demanding part for the solo cellist and indifferent-to-casual ones for the violinist and particularly the pianist. With respect to harmonic energy and the deployment of theme, the Triple Concerto is a brilliant work — even the themes themselves are stronger than they usually get credit for — but its weakness is in the absence of that inventiveness about instrumental figurations that is so rich in Beethoven's other concertos, most stunningly in the "Emperor."

More than anything, the Triple Concerto needs a cellist who can reliably be in tune in the high registers — and Jules Eskin is not.

Also, Joseph Silverstein was, for him, surprisingly off pitch in much of the violin part. That left, on the positive side, excellent playing by Serkin, as well as alert conducting and orchestral playing, but it did not add up to a wholly convincing performance.

Serkin also participated as guest in the Weekend Prelude on Friday evening. He, Eskin and Harold Wright gave a superb performance of the B flat trio with clarinet, opus 11. But the performance of the E flat trio with violin and cello opus 70, No. 2, with Silverstein and Eskin never quite jelled.

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000
JUL 20 1972
New England Newsclip

REVIEWER FINDS TANGLEWOOD BETTER THAN EVER

Bos Sym

With the third weekend of the Tanglewood Music Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass. already a period of recent history, summer is officially very much in. Surprising the Beethoven ad"hear"ants with favorable in spite of predicted inclement weather, the past weekend brought surpassing numbers, and provided the perfect weather setting for both the under-the-shed and the on-the-lawn audiences which taxed the grounds for the superb concerts, and brought forth thundering applause, at the conclusion of the Sunday afternoon concert, that resounded throughout the entire grounds for a long period following the early exiters to the parking areas.

Guest solo artists and conductors for the weekend included William Steinberg, who is music director, who conducted the Friday and Saturday evening all-Beethoven programs, and Seiji Ozawa, who is artistic director of the Berkshire Festival, who conducted on Sunday, and guest artists — Peter Serkin, piano, Harold Wright, clarinet, with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, assistant conductor of the Boston Symphony, and Jules Eskin, first chair cello, for the trios, and Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon, contralto, Dean Wilder tenor and Robert Hale, bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus in the 9th "Ode to Joy" symphony. John Oliver directed the chorus also for the Fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra in C. minor, which concluded the Sunday afternoon concert.

Following the pattern of recent years, an added weekend prelude at 7 P.M. precedes the stated Friday evening program, and is included in the admission. This weekend it was a feast of good fortune, in which Peter Serkin served in a menu long to be remembered. Opening with the trio for piano, clarinet and cello in B. flat, and including also the Piano trio in E. Flat op. 70, for piano, violin and cello, it was a sensitive exquisite opening into a weekend of greatness.

Throughout the weekend, the program encompassed the first, fourth, fifth, sixth and ninth symphonies in addition to the Concerto for piano, violin and cello in C. and the choral works already mentioned. Beethoven needs no explanation and Peter Serkin, no introduction. The triple concerto provides great opportunities for a top-flight pianist with accomplished supporting strings, and there is much exquisite sound from the symphonic body as a whole supporting this rapturous and ever beautiful composition, and it seemed to come off without flaw.

The Fantasy for piano and chorus, with orchestra, a foretaste of Beethoven's later 9th symphony theme and melody, though much shorter, and lighter in approach was exquisite beyond words.

Next week, Bruno Maderna, Leonard Bernstein and Karel Ancerl conduct, in that order, for the Friday, Saturday and Sunday concerts with Earl Wild and Alicia DeLarrocha as guest pianists in Stravinsky and Schumann concertos, which mark the halfway mark in the eight-week season.

—R. E. Houghton

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

DIVERSITY MARKS CROWD YESTERDAY AT TANGLEWOOD (Globe photo by Jack Sheahan)

Tanglewood box office hits high note on weekend of Beethoven, good weather

By JOHN A. SCHWEIZER

The three B's — Beethoven, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the balmy Berkshires — combined over the weekend to give Tanglewood its largest three-day attendance since its box office began keeping records in 1963.

A total of 41,337 persons attended the three all-Beethoven concerts and the Saturday morning rehearsal. The breakdown was: Friday night, 9,539; Saturday rehearsal, 4,434; Saturday night, 14,851, and Sunday afternoon, 12,513.

The all-Beethoven weekend is traditionally a big one at Tanglewood, and conductor William Steinberg's long association with that master's music was considered an added drawing factor, according to a Tanglewood spokesman.

1971 record beaten

The old record, 38,186, was set on last year's all-Beethoven weekend, July 21 through 23, with Leonard Bernstein conducting.

The Ninth Symphony performed Saturday, is especially popular with a broad spectrum of music lovers, the spokesman said.

Pleasant weather is needed for attendance much beyond the 5,066 persons the roofed Shed can hold, he pointed out. The weather was warm but breezy.

The vigorous conducting style of Seiji Ozawa was seen as a factor in the sizable turnout for yesterday's program, which featured the Triple Concerto and other less widely known offerings than those on the Saturday bill.

The nearby Lenox Arts Center also enjoyed its largest, single-concert attendance of the season Saturday as roughly 3,800 persons attended the early evening performance by folksinger Pete Seeger.

Spokesman Lyn Austin said the center is trying not to over publicize its "name" attractions in an effort to keep attendance at a manageable level. Moving the concert time up to 6 p.m. so as to avoid conflicts with Tanglewood performances and a widening of the center's driveway has kept crowd-related problems at a minimum, she said.

Even so, there was considerable congestion in the Lenox-Stockbridge area Saturday and yesterday. Stockbridge Police Chief William J. Obanhein said there were large tie-ups in his village, and Lenox Chief Anthony W. Romeo said he had never seen as much on-street parking along West Street and Under Mountain and Richmond roads.

The line of cars along West Street extended beyond Morris Elementary School, Romeo said, and Hawthorne Street was lined on both sides.

Theatre Festival record

One local resident said it took him one hour to go from his home on Taconic Avenue in Lenox, near the Church-on-the-Hill, to Tanglewood. "We left at 8 and got there at 9," he said.

The Berkshire Theatre Festival at the Stockbridge Playhouse has also enjoyed a banner season so far. The 16 performances of "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little," which closed Saturday, attracted a record-breaking 5,895 persons, 85 per cent of capacity, according to company manager James L. O'Hearn.

Receipts exceeded those of last year's season's opener, "Promenade All," but O'Hearn did not have those attendance figures available.

On the other hand, the Williamstown Theatre reports that it is running financially about 14 per cent under last year, due primarily to a 5 per cent drop in attendance and a 12 per cent hike in costs.

"Mary Stuart" opened the season with a record high attendance, and "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" closed Saturday with a solid, $2,600 net profit. But executive director Nikos Psacharopoulos commented that "our over-all financial picture, compared to last year, is not as satisfactory."

Weather hasn't helped

He attributed the poor attendance to the weather, with the rainy opening weeks followed by the recent hot spell.

Even more critical, Psacharopoulos said, are skyrocketing production costs. These can be met if the theatre nearly doubles its list of patrons, which currently numbers about 105 persons.

"Clearly, we cannot maintain our standards if we depend entirely on ticket revenues," he said.

O'Hearn concurred, noting that "costs are horrendous, going beyond all bounds."

BERKSHIRE EAGLE
PITTSFIELD, MASS.
D. 30,400
JUL 17 1972
New England Newsclip

Whitesto

BIGGEST WEEKEND since Tanglewood began keeping records of such things fills the music Shed and lawn for Saturday night's concert, conducted by William Steinberg. By twilight, the crowd, totaling 14,851, is listening to Beethoven's First Symphony. Later, Steinberg conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Tanglewood Festival Chorus and soloists in the Ninth Symphony, the top attraction for the all-Beethoven weekend

Beethoven orgy at Tanglewood

Boo Symphony

By Michael Steinberg
Globe Staff

LENOX — Friday evening, for the first time this season, all the motels I passed on my 20-mile trip to Tanglewood had their "no vacancy" signs on. Saturday in Lee, Colonel Sanders ran out of chicken and there haven't been such traffic jams since the fall of France. They were playing Beethoven at the Berkshire Festival, and the weather was unambiguously good.

Some of the Beethoven was the super-popular sort. Friday, William Steinberg conducted the 5th and 6th symphonies, and Saturday he did the 1st and the 9th, that program drawing an audience of just under 15,000. Yesterday afternoon, Seiji Ozawa conducted the 4th Symphony, and with it, two fairly rare works, the Triple Concerto and the Choral Fantasy. With a gate count of 12,513, you can hardly complain that it hurt the box office.

Those two pieces are problematic as well as rare. The Fantasy starts with what sounds like a gigantic improvisation of piano alone, which leads to a set of variations with orchestra on an earlier song of Beethoven, with a chorus joining in toward the end. The exceedingly simple manner of the theme, the variation procedure, the idea of a vocal ending to an instrumental work, even certain details of harmony and melody, all look forward to the 18-years-later 9th Symphony (too bad for those who were here all weekend that they couldn't hear the experimental sketch before the fully achieved work). And through all that, there runs a piano part that covers ground from patches far more aggressively independent than anything in the concertos to accompaniments so simple that a beginner could hit all their notes. The three-way texture always remains a puzzle, and so does the late and then extremely brief appearance of the voices.

In a committed performance with a pianist who has the fortunate personality to do a convincing job of imitating Beethoven's improvising, and who is also an interested accompanist, the Choral Fantasy comes off well and is a wonderful show of high spirits.

The pianist yesterday was good, because for the difficult combination role of provoker, listener, and virtuoso, the Boston Symphony had engaged 25-year-old Peter Serkin (who had spent Beethoven's bicentennial year playing only Bach, Messien and Schoenberg). Around his vigorous, sensitive, and very straight playing, Ozawa, the orchestra, and John Oliver's Tanglewood Festival Chorus did their stuff extremely well, too.

The problem with the Triple Concerto is a kind of textural craziness, too, particularly in balance between an almost impossibly demanding part for the solo cellist and indifferent-to-casual ones for the violinist and particularly the pianist. With respect to harmonic energy and the deployment of theme, the Triple Concerto is a brilliant work — even the themes themselves are stronger than they usually get credit for — but its weakness is in the absence of that inventiveness about instrumental figurations that is so rich in Beethoven's other concertos, most stunningly in the "Emperor."

More than anything, the Triple Concerto needs a cellist who can reliably be in tune in the high registers — and Jules Eskin is not.

Also, Joseph Silverstein was, for him, surprisingly off pitch in much of the violin part. That left, on the positive side, excellent playing by Serkin, as well as alert conducting and orchestral playing, but it did not add up to a wholly convincing performance.

Serkin also participated as guest in the Weekend Prelude on Friday evening. He, Eskin and Harold Wright gave a superb performance of the B flat trio with clarinet, opus 11. But the performance of the E flat trio with violin and cello opus 70, No. 2, with Silverstein and Eskin never quite jelled.

HOUR
NORWALK, CONN.
D. 23,000
JUL 20 1972
New England Newsclip

REVIEWER FINDS TANGLEWOOD BETTER THAN EVER

With the third weekend of the Tanglewood Music Festival concerts at Lenox, Mass. already a period of recent history, summer is officially very much in. Surprising the Beethoven ad"hear"ants with favorable in spite of predicted inclement weather, the past weekend brought surpassing numbers, and provided the perfect weather setting for both the under-the-shed and the on-the-lawn audiences which taxed the grounds for the superb concerts, and brought forth thundering applause, at the conclusion of the Sunday afternoon concert, that resounded throughout the entire grounds for a long period following the early exiters to the parking areas.

Guest solo artists and conductors for the weekend included William Steinberg, who is music director, who conducted the Friday and Saturday evening all-Beethoven programs, and Seiji Ozawa, who is artistic director of the Berkshire Festival, who conducted on Sunday, and guest artists — Peter Serkin, piano, Harold Wright, clarinet, with Joseph Silverstein, concertmaster, assistant conductor of the Boston Symphony, and Jules Eskin, first chair cello, for the trios, and Jeannine Crader soprano, Joanna Simon, contralto, Dean Wilder tenor and Robert Hale, bass, with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus in the 9th "Ode to Joy" symphony. John Oliver directed the chorus also for the Fantasy for piano, chorus and orchestra in C. minor, which concluded the Sunday afternoon concert.

Following the pattern of recent years, an added weekend prelude at 7 P.M. precedes the stated Friday evening program, and is included in the admission. This weekend it was a feast of good fortune, in which Peter Serkin served in a menu long to be remembered. Opening with the trio for piano, clarinet and cello in B. flat, and including also the Piano trio in E. Flat op. 70, for piano, violin and cello, it was a sensitive exquisite opening into a weekend of greatness.

Throughout the weekend, the program encompassed the first, fourth, fifth, sixth and ninth symphonies in addition to the Concerto for piano, violin and cello in C. and the choral works already mentioned. Beethoven needs no explanation and Peter Serkin, no introduction. The triple concerto provides great opportunities for a top-flight pianist with accomplished supporting strings, and there is much exquisite sound from the symphonic body as a whole supporting this rapturous and ever beautiful composition, and it seemed to come off without flaw.

The Fantasy for piano and chorus, with orchestra, a foretaste of Beethoven's later 9th symphony theme and melody, though much shorter, and lighter in approach was exquisite beyond words.

Next week, Bruno Maderna, Leonard Bernstein and Karel Ancerl conduct, in that order, for the Friday, Saturday and Sunday concerts with Earl Wild and Alicia DeLarrocha as guest pianists in Stravinsky and Schumann concertos, which mark the halfway mark in the eight-week season.

—R. E. Houghton

TOWN CRIER
WAYLAND, MASS.
W. 4,652
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Beethoven came to Tanglewood . . .

and almost everyone followed

Had Ludwig von Beethoven's ghost dropped by Tanglewood a couple of weekends ago, he might have had ambivalent feelings about what he'd seen, but chances are he would have approved. A remarkable array of leisure humanity was on hand for the exclusively Beethoven experience; if this was a good indication, he has seeped into the pores and souls of a broad cross-section of American society, and is here to stay for a while — a welcome addition to the Partridge Family, the Rolling Stones, and Lawrence Welk, whose fans he has surely touched.

One can only speculate on just how much Stanley Kubrick's "A Clockwork Orange" had to do with this largest turnout in Tanglewood's recent history (41,337), and what that might mean.

Tanglewood, at Lenox in the Berkshires, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1936, is the site of the Berkshire Music Center, which offers a myriad of musical instruction and programs for young artists under the aegis of the BSO. In the surrounding area are a wealth of museums, visual and performing art centers, theatres and other cultural enclaves, which over the years have become a summer retreat for all manner of artists and the privileged, cultural elite who could afford to follow.

Stories and photos

by Jerry Howard

Tanglewood itself is a fantasy place, a 200-acre estate where twisted pines tower above luscious lawns, soft breezes finger the leaves of chestnuts and beeches, and songbirds chortle incorrigibly. Music from a piccolo or violin waft from windows as one ambles (always) about the grounds.

At moments the place seems a chronological error, a curious vestige of a velvet world where on a Saturday evening in July, manicured ladies in white lace and pearls still take their places beside elegant husbands under the boughs of a Great Oak, to sip Rose d'Anjou with camembert and pate.

Changes

Yet this is changing. It now seems a strange blend of serenity, mannered decorum, and Victorian order, and of the utter baroque, the Baccanalian, the plebian. On Sunday of the festival, this textured phenomenon was most apparent. When the gates opened at noon, masses flooded the lawn to spread their feasts and blankets on the lawn and relax for two hours before the concert began.

It was a show, better than most movies. People of all varieties — almost all — were gorging or nibbling, reading, playing games, or just drowsing in the tacky sunshine. There were frisbee, monopoly, scrabble, even bocci ball, played by shirtless barefoot youths. New York Sunday Times were strewn everywhere, across faces and over food. Section 2 of the Times was most read, although the Boston Globe was in evidence, and one man scanned the Daily News. In a lawn chair under a tree, a woman read a weary, corpulent volume of Marcel Proust.

Chicken was exceedingly popular, fished from buckets beaming with the visage of the ubiquitous Kentucky Colonel or from aluminum foil. Thuringer sausage, gruyere cheese, cole slaw, peanut butter sandwiches, Hawaiian punch...

Eclectic variety

Most reassuring was the eclectic variety of people — city socialites, New Hampshire farmers, mechanics, tanned and hairy street children, Everyman — an old Dodger fan, a Playmate, nautical men in sailor's caps, even a possible underworld figure, lounging on the ground or parading under the massive 6,000-seat structure modestly called "the shed".

The effort people put (or don't put) into attiring themselves for these occasions is curious indeed. There were red shorts, knee socks and searsucker sportcoats; a Princeton University Marching Band boater; bikinis; a Yale teeshirt and ripped jeans; very bare midriffs no one asked to see; flowing gowns and old cotton print dresses; young ushers in coats, ties and pony tails; even a pair of mauve shoes, with avocado heels and salmon and orange toes.

During the concert, it could be said that interest waned as the distance grew from the great shed, where ticket holders sat rapt in their chairs. But the lawn people responded terrifically to the music even if it was hard to hear. One man in sunglasses, absolutely prone on the grass in sandals, conducted his own version of Beethoven's symphony no. 4 in B flat with gusto, and an earsplitting grin.

Yet Tanglewood, while changing fast, is not yet completely a peoples' place. Public transportation to and from the festival in one day is nigh impossible. Beneath the fantasy facade, the realities of economics and tradition hold firmly. Camping is not encouraged by the administration or the aggregation of prosperous Publicke Houses, Ye Innes, and quaint places of lodging and repast which dot the country roads of Lenox, Stockbridge or Lee. Some who have tried to camp in or near the Tangle woods have been rousted by officious men who beat through the woods in the wee hours.

After all, one should be discreet enough to have one friend, at least, with a cottage in the area...which is too bad, because many more people would like to hear the fine music than can afford lodging prices, or sensibly make the four-hour round trip from Boston or New York in a day. A supervised, undeveloped campsite for tents or sleeping bags in one of many surrounding fields would seem to be simple, and a nice alternative. Ludwig von would like that.

The music: immense cosmic energy.....

The major pieces played at the festival were Beethoven's 1st, 4th, 5th, 6th and 9th symphonies, and Fantasy in C minor. Conductors were William Steinberg and Seiji Ozawa, music director-to-be of the BSO. Soloists included the BSO's Joseph Silverstein, violin; Jules Eskin, cello; and guest Peter Serkin, piano.

Such rich and complex music...so forceful and magnificent, so delicate and melodic, so exquisite, so full of lust. A porcelain violin solo singing almost beyond the ear's range, and then the sudden barrumph of basses and cellos, bursting bullishly, melting into violas and flutes....Crescendoes which never seem to peak, surging, receding and surging until you're exhausted, on verge of tears....

Serkin 25, a quiet, gentle Peter Fonda in a barong, utter master of his piano. Fingers flutter like butterflies on the keys. A lick of Serkin, a lick of cello...sudden bursts of laughter and delight. A periodic bird wings through the enormous shed. Does one dare to eat a carrot during a Beethoven concert?

Seiji Ozawa: sylph onstage, aging face lost in little boy's haircut. Potting, sculpting his sound...at moments a dictator with baroque gestures, swinging his body like an axe, jabbing, plucking a mood from the oboe or flute. Or he dances, cradling a baby, placing perfect notes in a tiny box cupped in his hand; he is a swan.

The conductor is just that, conducting electricity through his face, his body, to his orchestra. The BSO in Tanglewood are heroes, playing the music of the gods in a wider world where we often murder our heroes and gods.

There is immense cosmic energy here...one should listen in darkness without visual distractions. Beethoven is 202, and still young.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
AUG 4 1972

Boston Symphony's Weekend Tanglewood Schedule Listed

Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct two concerts as part of the sixth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., today and Sunday.

Today's 9 p.m. concert, as well as the weekend prelude, which begins at 7 p.m., are both part of the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

Today's weekend prelude will be devoted to the music of Aaron Copland, chairman emeritus of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

The prelude opens with Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson, with soprano Phyllis Curtin, soloist. The composer will be at the piano.

Next is Piano Variations, with Michael Tilson Thomas the soloist. The Prelude will conclude with Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme, played by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players. The composer will again be heard at the piano with Joseph Silverstein on violin and Jules Eskin on cello.

The 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas with violin soloist Paul Zukovsky.

On the program are Ruggles' Evocations for Orchestra, Coplands Eight Poems of Emily Dickerson, Stravinsky's Rite of Spring and the world premiere of Charles Wuorinen's Concerto for Amplified Violin. Phyllis Curtin will again be soloist in the Copland work.

Aldo Ceccato, recently appointed principal conductor of the Detroit Symphony, will conduct the Boston Symphony Saturday at 8:30 p.m. On the program will be Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 1, Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto and Dvorak's New World Symphony.

John Browning will be the piano soloist.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas will again conduct the Boston Symphony with Haydn's Oboe Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 5 on the program.

Oboe soloist will be Ralph Gomberg, principal oboeist of the Boston Symphony.

CALDWELL, N. J.
PROGRESS
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 7,000
AUG 3 1972

Tanglewood Festival to Open With Aaron Copland Concert

An all Copland concert tomorrow evening at 7 will open the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. The weekend prelude performance in the "shed" will feature Aaron Copland compositions with the composer at the piano. The Boston Symphony Orchestra is scheduled to follow with a contemporary program at 9 p.m.

This year observing the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, the festival at Tanglewood is sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center. Afternoon and evening performances will run through Thursday.

The Festival will present a wide range of performances by Berkshire Music Center students, including vocal and chamber music programs, a Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert and performances by the Center's Music Theatre Project. There will also be a concert by Collage, the contemporary music ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

On Saturday the Festival has planned a Berkshire Music Center Vocal Music Recital at 2:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The program includes Druckman's "Dark Upon the Harp"; Kim's "Letters Found Near a Suicide" and Powell's "Haiku Settings".

The West Barn will be the setting for the Sunday evening world premiere performance of Robert Selig's "Chocorua". Also to be performed at the 8:30 p.m. Berkshire Music Center Music Theatre Project concert will be Brecht-Weill's "The Yes Man".

Collage, the contemporary music ensemble of the Boston Symphony, will present a concert Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Included will be Foss' "Time Cycle", Crumb's "Madrigals", Druckman's "Valentine", Pusztai's "Nocturnes" and Davidovsky's "Synchronisms no. 2".

The special Berkshire Music Center Chamber Ensemble concert, honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, will take place Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Conductors will be Bruno Maderna and Gunther Schuller. Works by Berio, Carter, Schuller, Maderna (the latter a world premiere performance of "Giardino Religioso") will be performed.

Wednesday evening at 8:30 the Music Center Chamber group will present a concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall that includes Imbrie's "To a Traveler", Kim's "rattling on...", Mather's "Cantata II" and Erb's "Brass Quintet".

The final event in the 1972 Festival is the Thursday performance in the concert hall of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. Bruno Maderna will conduct the group in Webern's "Variations for Orchestra", Shinohara's "Piece for Orchestra", Druckman's "Windows" and the world premiere of Fred Lerdahl's "Chromorythmos".

NEW YORK, N. Y.
PARK EAST
W. - CIRC. N. AVAIL.
AUG 3 1972

OUT OF TOWN

Massachusetts

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL (TANGLEWOOD), Near Lenox. Tel. 413-637-1600. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Aug. 4: Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Paul Zukofsky, violin, 9 pm. Aug. 5: Open Rehearsal, 10:30 am. Aldo Ceccato, cond.; John Browning, piano, 8:30 pm. Aug. 6: Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, 2:30 pm.
CAPE PLAYHOUSE, Dennis. 617—385-3911. Remember me! (thru Aug. 5).
LENOX ARTS CENTER, Lenox. 413—637-2242. Dr. Selavy's Magic Theater (thru Aug. 13).
PLAYHOUSE - ON - THE - WHARF, Provincetown. Anata (thru Aug. 13).

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377
AUG 4 1972
New England Newsclip

Tanglewood, Lenox — Weekend Prelude this evening at 7 in the Shed is devoted to the work of Aaron Copland. Opening with "Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" with soprano Phyllis Curtin and the composer at the piano, it continues with "Piano Variations" with Michael Tilson Thomas at the piano, and closes with the prelude "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme," with Boston Symphony Orchestra Chamber Players Joseph Silverstein, violin, Jules Eskin, cello, and the composer at the piano. The 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert, in the Shed, will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the B.S.O., with violin soloist Paul Zukovsky. It will include Ruggles's "Evocations for Orchestra" and Copland's "Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson," with soprano Phyllis Curtin. Both works are being preformed for the first times by the B.S.O. Next is the world premiere of Charles Wuorinen's "Concerto for Amplified Violin and Orchestra", with soloist Paul Zukovsky. The concert concludes with Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring." The Saturday morning Open Rehearsal is at 10:30 a.m. The evening concert will begin at 8:30, Aug. 5, with Aldo Ceccato conducting; he is the recently appointed principal conductor for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The concert opens with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 1, followed by Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto, with soloist John Browning. The concert ends with Dvorak's Symphony No. 9, the "New World." Sunday afternoon, Aug. 6, at 2:30, in the Shed, Michael Tilson Thomas again conducts the B.S.O., with soloist Ralph Gomberg, oboeist. The featured works are Haydn's Oboe Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 5.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday August 4 1972 at 9 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS conductor

RUGGLES — 'Evocations' for orchestra

Largo
Andante sempre poco rubato
Moderato appassionato
Adagio sostenuto

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

COPLAND — Eight poems of Emily Dickinson

Nature, the gentlest mother
There came a wind like a bugle
The world feels dusty
Heart, we will forget him
Dear March, come in!
Sleep is supposed to be
Going to heaven!
The chariot

PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

WUORINEN — Concerto for amplified violin and orchestra, in three continuous movements

PAUL ZUKOFSKY violin

world premiere

intermission

STRAVINSKY — Le sacre du printemps (The rite of spring)

Part one: The adoration of the earth

Introduction – Auguries of spring (Dances of the young girls) – Mock abduction – Spring Khorovod (Round dance) – Games of the rival clans – Procession of the wise elder – Adoration of the earth (wise elder) – Dance of the earth

Part two: The sacrifice

Introduction – Mystical circles of the young girls – Glorification of the chosen victim – The summoning of the ancients – Ritual of the ancients – Sacrificial dance (the chosen victim)

This is the opening orchestral concert of the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored in co-operation with the Fromm Music Foundation

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 27

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON AND RCA RECORDS

TANGLEWOOD TWOSOME. Michael Tilson Thomas, left, and John Browning, are the star attractions on this weekend's Berkshire Music Festival program at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will lead tomorrow night's weekend prelude program of the BSO at 7 p.m. Pianist Browning will play Prokoviev's Piano Concerto No. 3 at Saturday's 8:30 p.m. concert under the baton of Aldo Ceccato. Both will be in the Shed.

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181
AUG 2 1972

Music-Dance

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Boston Symphony Orchestra, from special concert; at 9 p.m., Michael Tilson Thomas. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO open rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Aldo Ceccato. Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Michael Tilson Thomas.

Eighth Step Coffee House, 14 Willett St., Albany. Today at 9 p.m., Tom McCreesh and friends —country folk fiddle music; Tuesday, Patsy Margolin, English and American traditional, labor and protest songs.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656
AUG 3 1972

POST
WALLINGFORD, CONN.
W. 7,920
AUG 3 1972
New England Newsclip

Symphony slated for Tanglewood

Music by Copland, Stravinsky and Ruggles will open the weekend's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., on Friday, Aug. 4. The Friday evening concert will begin at 9 p.m. with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

On Saturday, Aug. 5, the 8:30 p.m. concert will feature works by Mendelssohn, Prokofiev and Dvorak. Closing the weekend's activities will be the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m., featuring selections by Haydn and Mahler.

EAGLE
WESTFORD, MASS.
W. 2,500
JUL 27 1972
New England Newsclip

Music Festival At Tanglewood

All concerts are events of the Friends of Music at Tanglewood, requiring a $1.50 donation per concert or Friends membership card. The opening Festival concert on August 4 is a regular Berkshire Festival concert for which Berkshire Festival tickets are required.

August 4, 1972

Weekend Prelude - 7:00 p.m. Shed - All-Copland concert

Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson - PHYLLIS CURTIN, soprano; AARON COPLAND, piano.

Piano variations - MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS, pianist.

Vitebsk, study on a Jewish theme - JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN, violin; JULES ESKIN cello; AARON COPLAND piano.

Boston Symphony Orchestra Concert - 9:00 p.m. Shed MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS conductor. Ruggles Evocations for orchestra Copland: Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson; PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano; Wuorinen: Concert for amplified violin and orchestra*; PAUL ZUKOFSKY violin; Stravinsky: The Rite of Spring

August 5, 1972

2:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER VOCAL MUSIC RECITAL - Program to include: Druckman: Dark Upon the Harp; Kim: Letters Found Near a Suicide; Powell: Haiku settings; Carter: Robert Frost Songs

August 6, 1972

8:30 p.m. West Barn - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER MUSIC THEATRE PROJECT - Selig: Chocorua; Brecht-Weill: The Yes Man

August 7, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - COLLAGE, The Boston Symphony Orchestra Contemporary Music Ensemble - Program to include: Foss: Time Cycle (chamber version); Druckman: Valentine; Crumb: Madrigals, Books I and II; Pusztai: Nocturnes; Davidovsky: Synchronisms no. 2

August 8, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - CONCERT HONORING THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FROMM MUSIC FOUNDATION - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER CHAMBER ENSEMBLE - BRUNO MADERNA, conductor; GUNTHER SCHULLER, conductor; Berio: Circles; Carter: Double concerto; Schuller: Tre invenzione*; Maderna: Giardino Religioso*

August 9, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT - Program to include: Imbrie: To A Traveler; Kim: rattling on...; Mather: Cantata II; Erb: Brass Quintet

August 10, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER ORCHESTRA - BRUNO MADERNA, conductor; Webern: Variations for Orchestra, Op. 30; Shinohara: Piece for Orchestra; Lerdahl: Chromorhythmos; Druckman: Windows

*Commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation in honor of its 20th Anniversary

Commissioned by the Berkshire Music Center in co-operation with the Fromm Music Foundation

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

AUG 4 1972

Boston Symphony's Weekend Tanglewood Schedule Listed

Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct two concerts as part of the sixth weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., today and Sunday.

Today's 9 p.m. concert, as well as the weekend prelude, which begins at 7 p.m., are both part of the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center and the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

Today's weekend prelude will be devoted to the music of Aaron Copland, chairman emeritus of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

The prelude opens with Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson, with soprano Phyllis Curtin, soloist. The composer will be at the piano.

Next is Piano Variations, with Michael Tilson Thomas the soloist. The Prelude will conclude with Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme, played by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players. The composer will again be heard at the piano with Joseph Silverstein on violin and Jules Eskin on cello.

The 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas with violin soloist Paul Zukovsky.

On the program are Ruggles' Evocations for Orchestra, Coplands Eight Poems of Emily Dickerson, Stravinsky's Rite of Spring and the world premiere of Charles Wuorinen's Concerto for Amplified Violin. Phyllis Curtin will again be soloist in the Copland work.

Aldo Ceccato, recently appointed principal conductor of the Detroit Symphony, will conduct the Boston Symphony Saturday at 8:30 p.m. On the program will be Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 1, Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto and Dvorak's New World Symphony.

John Browning will be the piano soloist.

Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Michael Tilson Thomas will again conduct the Boston Symphony with Haydn's Oboe Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 5 on the program.

Oboe soloist will be Ralph Gomberg, principal oboeist of the Boston Symphony.

CALDWELL, N. J.
PROGRESS
(NEWARK-NYC MARKET AREA)
W. 7,000

AUG 3 1972

Tanglewood Festival to Open With Aaron Copland Concert

An all Copland concert tomorrow evening at 7 will open the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. The weekend prelude performance in the "shed" will feature Aaron Copland compositions with the composer at the piano. The Boston Symphony Orchestra is scheduled to follow with a contemporary program at 9 p.m.

This year observing the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, the festival at Tanglewood is sponsored by the Berkshire Music Center. Afternoon and evening performances will run through Thursday.

The Festival will present a wide range of performances by Berkshire Music Center students, including vocal and chamber music programs, a Berkshire Music Center Orchestra concert and performances by the Center's Music Theatre Project. There will also be a concert by Collage, the contemporary music ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

On Saturday the Festival has planned a Berkshire Music Center Vocal Music Recital at 2:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The program includes Druckman's "Dark Upon the Harp", Kim's "Letters Found Near a Suicide" and Powell's "Haiku Settings".

The West Barn will be the setting for the Sunday evening world premiere performance of Robert Selig's "Chocorua". Also to be performed at the 8:30 p.m. Berkshire Music Center Music Theatre Project concert will be Brecht-Weill's "The Yes Man".

Collage, the contemporary music ensemble of the Boston Symphony, will present a concert Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Included will be Foss' "Time Cycle", Crumb's "Madrigals", Druckman's "Valentine", Pusztai's "Nocturnes" and Davidovsky's "Synchronisms no. 2".

The special Berkshire Music Center Chamber Ensemble concert, honoring the 20th anniversary of the Fromm Music Foundation, will take place Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Conductors will be Bruno Maderna and Gunther Schuller. Works by Berio, Carter, Schuller, Maderna (the latter a world premiere performance of "Giardino Religioso") will be performed.

Wednesday evening at 8:30 the Music Center Chamber group will present a concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall that includes Imbrie's "To a Traveler", Kim's "rattling on...", Mather's "Cantata II" and Erb's "Brass Quintet".

The final event in the 1972 Festival is the Thursday performance in the concert hall of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. Bruno Maderna will conduct the group in Webern's "Variations for Orchestra", Shinohara's "Piece for Orchestra", Druckman's "Windows" and the world premiere of Fred Lerdahl's "Chromorythmos".

NEW YORK, N. Y.
PARK EAST
W.-CIRC. N. AVAIL.

AUG 3 1972

OUT OF TOWN

Massachusetts

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL (TANGLEWOOD), Near Lenox. Tel. 413—637-1600. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Aug. 4: Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Phyllis Curtin, soprano; Paul Zukofsky, violin, 9 pm. Aug. 5: Open Rehearsal, 10:30 am. Aldo Ceccato, cond.; John Browning, piano, 8:30 pm. Aug. 6: Michael Tilson Thomas, cond.; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, 2:30 pm.
CAPE PLAYHOUSE, Dennis. 617—385-3911. Remember me! (thru Aug. 5).
LENOX ARTS CENTER, Lenox. 413—637-2242. Dr. Selavy's Magic Theater (thru Aug. 13).
PLAYHOUSE - ON - THE - WHARF, Provincetown. Anatol (thru Aug. 13).

The Boston Globe
(MORNING)
D. 261,042 SUN. 566,377

AUG 4 1972 New England Newsclip

Tanglewood, Lenox — Weekend Prelude this evening at 7 in the Shed is devoted to the work of Aaron Copland. Opening with "Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson" with soprano Phyllis Curtin and the composer at the piano, it continues with "Piano Variations" with Michael Tilson Thomas at the piano, and closes with the prelude "Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme," with Boston Symphony Orchestra Chamber Players Joseph Silverstein, violin, Jules Eskin, cello, and the composer at the piano. The 9 p.m. Boston Symphony Orchestra concert, in the Shed, will be conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas, associate conductor of the B.S.O., with violin soloist Paul Zukovsky. It will include Ruggles's "Evocations for Orchestra" and Copland's "Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson," with soprano Phyllis Curtin. Both works are being preformed for the first times by the B.S.O. Next is the world premiere of Charles Wuorinen's "Concerto for Amplified Violin and Orchestra", with soloist Paul Zukovsky. The concert concludes with Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring." The Saturday morning Open Rehearsal is at 10:30 a.m. The evening concert will begin at 8:30, Aug. 5, with Aldo Ceccato conducting; he is the recently appointed principal conductor for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The concert opens with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 1, followed by Prokofiev's Third Piano Concerto, with soloist John Browning. The concert ends with Dvorak's Symphony No. 9, the "New World." Sunday afternoon, Aug. 6, at 2:30, in the Shed, Michael Tilson Thomas again conducts the B.S.O., with soloist Ralph Gomberg, oboeist. The featured works are Haydn's Oboe Concerto and Mahler's Symphony No. 5.

TANGLEWOOD 1972

SEIJI OZAWA Artistic Director, Berkshire Festival
GUNTHER SCHULLER Artistic Director, Berkshire Music Center
LEONARD BERNSTEIN Adviser

Friday August 4 1972 at 9 o'clock

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILLIAM STEINBERG Music Director

MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS conductor

RUGGLES — 'Evocations' for orchestra

Largo
Andante sempre poco rubato
Moderato appassionato
Adagio sostenuto

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

COPLAND — Eight poems of Emily Dickinson

Nature, the gentlest mother
There came a wind like a bugle
The world feels dusty
Heart, we will forget him
Dear March, come in!
Sleep is supposed to be
Going to heaven!
The chariot

PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano

first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra

WUORINEN — Concerto for amplified violin and orchestra, in three continuous movements

PAUL ZUKOFSKY violin

world premiere

intermission

STRAVINSKY — Le sacre du printemps (The rite of spring)

Part one: The adoration of the earth

Introduction – Auguries of spring (Dances of the young girls) – Mock abduction – Spring Khorovod (Round dance) – Games of the rival clans – Procession of the wise elder – Adoration of the earth (wise elder) – Dance of the earth

Part two: The sacrifice

Introduction – Mystical circles of the young girls – Glorification of the chosen victim – The summoning of the ancients – Ritual of the ancients – Sacrificial dance (the chosen victim)

This is the opening orchestral concert of the 1972 Festival of Contemporary Music, sponsored in co-operation with the Fromm Music Foundation

The program notes for this evening's concert begin on page 27

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA RECORDS EXCLUSIVELY FOR DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON

BALDWIN PIANO
DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON AND RCA RECORDS

THE TIMES RECORD
TROY, N. Y.
D. 42,181

AUG 2 1972

Music-Dance

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday at 7 p.m., Weekend Prelude, Boston Symphony Orchestra, from special concert; at 9 p.m., Michael Tilson Thomas. Saturday at 10:30 a.m., BSO open rehearsal; at 8:30 p.m., Aldo Ceccato. Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Michael Tilson Thomas.

Eighth Step Coffee House, 14 Willett St., Albany. Today at 9 p.m., Tom McCreesh and friends —country folk fiddle music; Tuesday, Patsy Margolin, English and American traditional, labor and protest songs.

TANGLEWOOD TWOSOME. Michael Tilson Thomas, left, and John Browning, are the star attractions on this weekend's Berkshire Music Festival program at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Thomas, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony, will lead tomorrow night's weekend prelude program of the BSO at 7 p.m. Pianist Browning will play Prokoviev's Piano Concerto No. 3 at Saturday's 8:30 p.m. concert under the baton of Aldo Ceccato. Both will be in the Shed.

SYRACUSE
Herald Journal
D. 129,656

AUG 3 1972

POST
WALLINGFORD, CONN.
W. 7,920

AUG 3 1972 New England Newsclip

Symphony slated for Tanglewood

Music by Copland, Stravinsky and Ruggles will open the weekend's program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., on Friday, Aug. 4. The Friday evening concert will begin at 9 p.m. with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

On Saturday, Aug. 5, the 8:30 p.m. concert will feature works by Mendelssohn, Prokofiev and Dvorak. Closing the weekend's activities will be the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m., featuring selections by Haydn and Mahler.

EAGLE
WESTFORD, MASS.
W. 2,500

JUL 27 1972 New England Newsclip

Music Festival At Tanglewood

All concerts are events of the Friends of Music at Tanglewood, requiring a $1.50 donation per concert or Friends membership card. The opening Festival concert on August 4 is a regular Berkshire Festival concert for which Berkshire Festival tickets are required.

August 4, 1972

Weekend Prelude - 7:00 p.m. Shed - All-Copland concert

Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson - PHYLLIS CURTIN, soprano; AARON COPLAND, piano.

Piano variations - MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS, pianist.

Vitebsk, study on a Jewish theme - JOSEPH SILVER-

STEIN, violin; JULES ESKIN cello; AARON COPLAND piano.

Boston Symphony Orchestr Concert - 9:00 p.m. Shed MICHAEL TILSON THOMAS conductor. Ruggles Evocations for orchestra Copland: Eight Poems of Emil Dickinson; PHYLLIS CURTIN soprano; Wuorinen: Concert for amplified violin and or chestra; PAUL ZUKOFSKY violin; Stravinsky: The Rite o Spring

August 5, 1972

2:30 p.m. Theatre-Concer Hall - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER VOCAL MUSIC RECITAL - Program to include: Druckman: Dark Upon the Harp; Kim: Letters Found Near a Suicide; Powell: Haiku settings; Carter: Robert Frost Songs

August 6, 1972

8:30 p.m. West Barn - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER MUSIC THEATRE PROJECT - Selig: Chocorua*; Brecht-Weill: The Yes Man

August 7, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - COLLAGE, The Boston Symphony Orchestra Contemporary Music Ensemble - Program to include: Foss: Time Cycle (chamber version); Druckman: Valentine; Crumb: Madrigals, Books I and II; Pusztai: Nocturnes; Davidovsky: Synchronisms no. 2

August 8, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - CONCERT HONORING THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FROMM MUSIC FOUNDATION - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER CHAMBER ENSEMBLE - BRUNO MADERNA, conductor; GUNTHER SCHULLER, conductor; Berio: Circles; Carter: Double concerto; Schuller: Tre Invenzione; Maderna: Giardino Religioso

August 9, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT - Program to include: Imbrie: To A Traveler; Kim: rattling on...; Mather: Cantata II; Erb: Brass Quintet

August 10, 1972

8:30 p.m. Theatre-Concert Hall - BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER ORCHESTRA - BRUNO MADERNA, conductor; Webern: Variations for Orchestra, Op. 30; Shinohara: Piece for Orchestra; Lerdahl: Chromorhythmos*; Druckman: Windows

*Commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation in honor of its 20th Anniversary

Commissioned by the Berkshire Music Center in co-operation with the Fromm Music Foundation

Thomas to Take Podium for Tanglewood Concert

By THOMAS PUTNAM

OH TO BE in the Berkshires . . . now that the contemporary music festival is taking place at Tanglewood.

The festival opens Friday with a special weekend prelude of music by Aaron Copland and an evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas.

Sponsor for the festival is the Berkshire Music Center, summer music academy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in cooperation with the Fromm Music Foundation.

COPLAND, chairman emeritus of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will perform on the program of his music. He and soprano Phyllis Curtin will perform "Twelve Poems of Emily Dickinson." Also, he will be joined by violinist Joseph Silverstein and cellist Jules Eskin in a performance of Vitebsk, Study on a Jewish Theme."

Thomas, in addition to conducting the orchestra in the 9 p.m. program, will perform Copland's Piano Variations on the 7 p.m. prelude.

The Boston Symphony concert will include the premiere of Charles Wuorinen's Concerto for amplified violin and orchestra, with Paul Zukofsky as soloist. Other works are Carl Ruggles's "Evocations" for orchestra, "Copland's "Eight Poems of Emily Dickinson" (with Miss Curtin and Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring."

THE FESTIVAL continues through Aug. 10 and includes vocal and chamber music programs, a theater program, and a program by Collage, the contemporary music ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Here is the schedule:

Friday: Copland program at 7 p.m. in the Shed . . . Boston Symphony Orchestra program, conducted by Thomas, at 9 p.m. in the Shed.

Saturday: Vocal recital at 2:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. Music by Druckman, Kim, Powell and Carter.

